THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

PREMIER'S VIEWS.

RAILWAY AND MINING TROUBLE IN EUROPE

BOLSHEVIST DEFEAT IN RUSSIA

INTERNATIONAL LABOUR CONFERENCE ADVICE TO THE BIG FOUR

League of Nations.

The Manchester Guardian on Saturday published a special League of Nations number, in which Mr. Lloyd George, in a special message says. "Nothing is more important than that public opinion shall inform itself on this subject (League of Nations). All our hopes of saving the world from a repetition of the unfathomable cataclysm of 1914, centre upon our working out special means whereby the nations of the earth can conduct the common affairs of the world by friendly co-operation, instead of by jealous rivalry. The League of Nations represents the greatest attempt which has ever been made to substitute reason and justice for force and intrigue, as governing principles on international relations. The principle of the League of Nations has been accepted, but the League of Nations will prove fruitless of it is to be no more than a new piece of international organisation. What matters, is that units which make up this organisation shall be inspired by real determination to work in close harmony together, for the betterment and liberty of mankind. Nations must not let themselves believe that having drawn up a paper, the peace of the world has been made secure. If they allow themselves to be bemused by this police, they will only be awakened by a new war. They have to see that the League of Nations is made an effective instrument for the solution of every international problem by their own readiness to make sacrifices on its behalf. America and Great Britain, who have taken such leading and honourable parts in promoting this beneficial scheme to give a practical demonstration of their belief in it.

"Disarmament is an essential condition of success. We cannot expect nations, ravaged by war, to trust their desolate lands to the protection of the League, if its advocates hesitate to show any confidence themselves in its guardianship. To set up a society of nations to ensure fraternity among the peoples of the earth, while at the same time increasing armies and navies to ensure effective fratricide, is to make a mockery of a great ideal".

Articles by distinguished Statesmen, on various aspects of the League of Nations, also appear in the same issue of the "Manchester Guardian".

Viscount Bryce says, "To leave things now where they were before the outbreak of war would be a most deplorable confession of human weakness, a most dismal surrender of human hopes that has ever yet been seen. We must therefore earnestly desire that the American people, who have now begun to realise that they cannot stand aloof from dangers and trials of the old world, will support President Wilson by giving their adhesion — perhaps subject to certain amendments in detail — to the scheme which has been framed in the interest of all mankind, and which can hardly succeed without co-operation of their own great, free and powerful Republic".

Lord Buckmaster, in his article, comments upon the speed with which the idea of the League has been generally accepted. He says, "Ten of those who took part in this movement in its earliest stages could ever have believed that in so short a space of time so great a transformation of opinion would have been obtained. The stern logic of events is going to drive those who are reluctantly along the road. Humanity is faced, not merely with the prospect of physical annihilation, of militarism is to continue to be the guiding principle of life, but even in the nearer future with the spectacle of impending bankruptcy. And on the heels of bankruptcy, revolution always presses with hot and impatient feet".

Dr. Nanson, who is the President of the Norwegian League of Nations Society, points out, 'Without a League of Nations, the outlook for small nations is very dark and doubtful. Preparations for the next war, owing to the elaboration of destructive inventions, would be so costly, that an impossible burden would be placed on small nations, whose whole energies would be absorbed in preparatory armament".

Troubles in Egypt.

The Commander-in-Chief of the British Army in Egypt last Friday summoned a meeting of the leading Egyptian notables, at which he stated that hitherto he had employed only defensive measures. He emphasised the fact that it was his duty to preserve and restore order, and as so far it had been found impossible to achieve the object merely by defensive measures, he was now faced with the necessity of employing measures of active repression.

This must bring tremendous suffering upon the people, and would result in great loss of public and private property wherein many innocent persons must be involved.

He further went on to explain that it was the duty of every patriotic Egyptian to devise the means whereby the measures which he was compelled to make would achieve the desired result as speedily as possible with the minimum suffering for Egypt.

The Commander-in-Chief concluded with the solemn warning, "I intend to do my duty: it is for you to do yours."

Attempted Demonstrations.

In defiance of military orders some Egyptian women have attempted to make a demonstration. They were hemmed in by soldiers, who afterwards remained standing at ease. Eventually the ladies became tired and quietly returned to their homes. Other attempted demonstrations by students were easily disposed of.

The Status of Labour.

SUGGESTION FOR PEACE TREATY.

The Commission on International Labour legislation has concluded it's report, and has drafted clauses for insertion in the Peace Treaty. In it there is shown constant care to remake economic disabilities of female labour, This new charter of International Labour lays down as the first principle that the Labour of human beings should not be treated as merchandise or as articles of commerce.

According to the Times Paris correspondent, the nine clauses of the Charter provide as follows:

Employees and workers should not be permitted to be employed in industry or commerce before the age of 14 years in order that every child may be ensured reasonable opportunities for mental and physical education.

Between 14 and 18 years of age, persons of either sex may only be employed on work which is not harmful to their physical development and on condition that the continuation of their practical or general education is ensured.

Every worker has the right to a wage adequate to maintain a reasonable standard of life, having regard to the civilization of his time and country.

Equal pay should be given to women and to men for work of equal value in quantity and quality.

Weekly rest, including Sunday, or its equivalent, for all workers.

Limitation of hours of work in industry should be on a basis of eight hours a day or 48 hours a week, subject to exceptions for countries in which climatic conditions effect the industrial developments or industrial organization, or other special circumstances which may render industrial efficiency of workers substantially different.

The International Labour Conference will recommend the basis approximately equivalent to the above, for adoption in other countries.

In all matters concerning the status of workers and social conditions, foreign workmen lawfully admitted to any county, and their families, should be ensured the same treatment as nationals of that country.

All States should institute a system of inspection in which women should take part in order to ensure enforcement of laws and regulations for the protection of workers.

It is certain that care will be taken to see that the machinery set up shall not in any way reduce existing standards already secured by workers.

An additional clause will probably be inserted in the Convention in order to maintain protection now afforded to workers in various countries.

The important questions of seamen's conditions is likely to be dealt with at a special meeting of the International Conference.

German-Austrian Advances.

It is reported in American circles that reports have been received by the Peace Conference to the effect that German-Austria has made advances to Switzerland proposing annexation by Switzerland, not only of Voraulberg, but of all German Austria, including Vienna. The Government of Switzerland refused to entertain such an idea, but expressed willingness to adhere to the proposed annexat'on of the small Principality of Lichtenstein, the population of which place has already taken steps in that direction.

Bolshevist Defeats.

In a telegram from Omsk, Reuter's learns that Koltchek's army, after a brilliant attack and much hard fighting, recaptured the town of Ufa which the Bolshevists recently occupied. The Red Army is now threatened with complete envelopment and a considerable amount of material has been captured from it.

A telegram from Berne states that the Bolshevist troops which occupied the towns of Parcveyys, Krakinava, Bruskava, Ramygala, Pagyrini and Vyducklini were encircled by the Lithuanian troops which fought them between two fires. The Bolshevists were three times as numerous as the Lithuanian troops but threw down their arms and attempted flight in the greatest disorder. Their losses amount to about 1000 dead, a large number of wounded, and 1000 prisoners.

(Ufa is a town on a river of the same name, in the north of the Astrakan province of south-eastern Russia.)

Progress of Demobilisation.

Since the Armistice, 62,000 Officers and 2,145,000 other ranks have been demobilised. Apparently the machinery for the quick and efficient disposal of the demobilised soldiers is more nearly reaching a state of perfection every day.

Labour trouble on the continent intensifies. In Austria the Northern railway workers are on strike, and communication with the outside world is almost impossible. If the food trains continue to be held up, next week will see the bread ration reduced by one half.

The German miners strike continues to spread. Eleven pits are idle at Dortmund, twelve at Witter and seven at Bochum. At a meeting of the strikers the following demands were made by resolution: — The formation of a Revolutionary Workmen's Guard; establishment of relations with the Russian Soviet Government and the disarmament of the German police. Strikers and police came into contact at Witten. A pitched battle ensued in which eleven were killed and thirty seven wounded.

The Landing of Polish Troops at Danzig.

A Berlin message states that a note was presented by General Nudant, leader of the Inter-Allied Mission at Spa, to the Chairman of the German Armistice Commission, demanding that the German Government should permit General Haller's Polish force to land at Danzig and to proceed further into Poland for the purpose of maintaining order. The note further stated that any refusal to grant this request would be regarded as a breach of the Armistice agreement by Germany. In their reply to this note, the German Government states:

1) The German Government has pledged itself to grant free passage of an Allied army, not of a Polish Army, through Danzig. General Haller's is a Polish army.

(2) The right of free passage has been granted to the former Russian territory, not to Poland.

(3) Everything points to the certainty of a serious upheaval in West Prussia if a Polish army is allowed to land at Danzig, and this would increase the Bolshevist danger, against which small German forces would be powerless.

(4) The Entente must first give guarantees that the Poles in West Prussia will keep the peace.

(5) Germany is willing to allow General Hallen's Army to land at any of the following places: — Stettin, Konigsberg, Memel or Libau, and pledges itself to give all facilities for a free passage, and to support the Allies in their intention of restoring order in Poland.

(6) But she must previously have the following information: —

(a) The composition and strength of General Haller's Army.
(b) The date of its proposed landing.
(c) The likely duration of its stay in German territory.
(d) What guarantees the Entente can give that Haller's Army will not meddle with politics.

Paragraph 16 of the conditions of the armistice, which is the one dealing with this matter states, "The Allies shall have free access to the territories evacuated by the Germans on their Eastern Frontier, either via Danzig or by the Vistula in order to revictual the populations of those two territories or to maintain order."

In a leading article, The Times says: "The reasons why Germany makes this fuss about Danzig are not as military as they pretend, but political. They are afraid that if Polish divisions pass that way, they will prejudice the decision of the Conference in favour of giving new Poland a territorial corridor to Danzig. And so to cover their own attempts to make diplomatic trouble at Paris, they accuse Polish divisions of a desire to rouse Poles in Germany. It is all very naive. But the right reply of the Allies canot be in doubt. The Poles must go through Danzig. The Allies will engage that this right shall not be abused. And lastly, they will intimate that whoever abuses the privileges given by the conference, whether Germans, by diplomatic intrigue, or Poles, by provoking civil war during transit, will only prejudice their territorial case."

NEWS IN BRIEF.

A recent entertainment organized by Lt. J. H. Heygarth, Amusements Officer, 2nd Army, resulted in the sum of 3,829 marks being obtained for the Lord Roberts Memorial Fund.

At the inquest on the death of five men in the Kinmel Camp riot the jury returned an open verdict as there was no evidence that would lead them to find who was responsible for the deaths. Capt. Scott, who gave evidence, said that he believed the riot was largely due to the influence of the foreign element.

The London Gazette announces that the King has directed that persons who adhered to His Majesty's enemies during the war shall be deprived of their Titles. Those involved are the Duke of Albany and the Duke of Cumberland.

England, at the present time, is experiencing weather just as vagarious as we, in Germany, have been accorded during the past week or two. During the week-end, one of the heaviest snowstorms of recent years prevailed in London and other parts of England. In many parts, drifts as much as five and six feet deep are reported.

New Army Appointments.

TWO GENERALS DECLINE.

Two distinguished Generals have declined High Commands in England offered to them by the Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, Secretary of State for War, giving as the reason for their refusal their conviction that younger men should be given their chance.

The two Generals are the Hon. Sir Julian Byng, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., etc. who was offered the Southern Command, and Sir Ian Hamilton, G.C.B., D.S.O., etc. the Northern Command.

In conveying the offer to Gen. Hamilton, Mr. Winston Churchill intimated to him that Sir Henry Wilson concurred with Sir William Robertson that there was nothing in connection with the Gallipoli expedition which precluded him from re-employment.

General Sir Henry S. Rawlinson, K.C.M.G., etc. has been apponited to the Aldershot Command, and General Sir. H. S. Horne K.C.B., etc., to the Eastern Command.

No More Jam Tarts.

The Food Ministry has decided that owing to the shortage of jam, there must be no more jam tarts for the time being. This item of news will surely be a sad blow to the "flapper", who loves to indulge in this little confection with her afternoon tea, and to the devotees of the "tuck shop".

Recent Air Developments.

Every day brings fresh developments in aeronautics. From the success of recent experiments, there seems to be no limit to future possibilities in air travel. The latest telegram to hand on this subject announces that a series of important tests are being conducted in Glasgow with airship R. 34 which, so far, are so promising that it is expected a trip across the Atlantic may be made in May or June next.

Welcoming Home the Troops.

Presumably inspired by the wonderful enthusiasm displayed in the recent march through London of the Guards Division, the War Office has decided that as much notice as possible shall be given in future of the expected arrival in England of units from the various fields of war, with a view to enabling local authorities to arrange for their reception.

Enemy Peers.

DEPRIVATION OF TITLES.

The Committee of the Privy Council appointed to inquire into and report the name of any Peer or British Prince who has adhered to his Majesty's enemies during the war laid its report to the King in Council last Friday. The following names appear in the list.

His Royal Highness Leopold Charles, Duke of Albany, Earl of Clarence and Baron Arklow.

His Royal Highness Ernest Augustus, Duke of Cumberland and Teviotdale, Earl of Armagh.

His Royal Highness Ernest Augustus, Duke of Brunswick, Prince of Great Britain and Ireland.

Henry, Viscount Taaffe of Corren and Baron of Bellymote, who owns two castles, much land and two breweries in Bohemia.

THE LATE CAPT. F. S. WHINNEY, M.C.

The news of the death — following a riding accident — of Capt. F. S. Whinney, M. C., which was received with the deepest sense of regret by his very large circle of friends in the sports world. Capt. Whinney's instincts and activities were "sporting" as the word is understood by Englishmen in its broadest sense. Although his extensive and diversified military experience brought him into close touch with all ranks in many departments, by whom his death will be greatly deplored, his untimely end will be particularly acutely felt by the members of the 88th. Infantry Brigade, of which he was Brigade Major at the time of his death.

Resignation of the Bishop of Oxford.

The Rt. Rev. Charles Gore, M. A., D. D., who has occupied the See of Oxford since 1911 has sent his resignation to the Archbishop of Canterbury. Born in 1853, Bishop Gore has ever been noted for the fearless expression of his views expounded in the pulpit, in the press, and in a remarkable series of printed works, such as "Lux Mundi" which have given rise to much discussion and to no small amount of criticism.

Always known as a profound student, Bishop Gore explains, in his letter to the Archbishop of Canterbury, that, while recognising that he is leaving the church at a critical juncture in its history, he believes he can do more useful work for the church, if not encumbered by the multifarious administrative duties which fall to the lot of an English bishop.

It has been decided by the Army council not to disband Queen Mary's Army Auxiliary Corps.

Mr. Asquith has returned to London from Spain.

The Lord Chancellor has acceded to the request of the Secretary of State for war, the Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, that Mr Justice Darling be appointed president of the Committee to enquire into Court martial procedure.

The Commander-in-Chief Visits Cologne.

FAREWELL VISIT.

Field-Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, K.T., G.C.B., G.C.V.O., has been very busy during the past few days visiting the formations of the 2nd Army in the occupied territory.

As is generally well known, the Commander-in-Chief is shortly to relinquish the command which led to such a brilliant termination of the war.

With the Allies astride the Rhine and the Central Powers hopelessly beaten, it is a fitting moment for Sir Douglas to take a well-earned rest, although there still remains for him and his staff an enormous amount of work in collating and classifying documents, records, reports, etc.

The Commander-in-Chief arrived on Friday and left by special train yesterday afternoon.

Killed by low-flying Aeroplane.

At the resumed inquest on Capt. Robin G. Dunn, of the 5th Bn. Lincoln Regt. and 2 Lt. W. J. Pegg, 10th Bn. The Warwicks, the evidence showed that while driving along the high road to a meet of the Duke of Rutland's hounds at Ranceley, they were struck by a low-flying aeroplane and instantly killed. A groom who was also in their trap escaped with slight injuries. Further evidence as to the identity of the pilot of the aeroplane and the cause of the low-flying led the jury, after some consideration, to return a verdict that the two officers were accidentaly killed.

Agricultural Labourers' Dispute.

The arbitrator called in to settle the dispute between agricultural employers and employed at Charteris (Cambs.) has now made his award.

General labour men and yardmen over eighteen years of age are to receive forty-two shillings and fifty shillings respectively per week of forty-eight hours, with special rate for overtime. Rootmen are to have eleven shillings per day and threshing-men twelve shillings, with special over time pay. Sunday labour to count as overtime. The eight hour day is awarded.

Family Fighting Record.

"DAILY NEWS" OFFER.

The Daily News offer of £250 to be used in educating or starting in life a young member of the family which has contributed the largest number of soldiers in the war, is producing remarkable records.

At present the family of Mrs. James Loasby, of Kettering, heads the list, 24 grandsons of Mrs. Loasby having seen active service.

An old "Queen's Own" man, Mr. William Waters, of Bromley, Kent, had eight sons and five grandsons serving, while Mrs. Taylor, of Cheshunt. Herts, had eight grandsons in the Army and four in the navy.

Royal Heirlooms Burgled.

The residence of the Ex-Queen Amelie of Portugal, Abercorn House, Richmond, was broken into by burglars on Friday evening. Much valuable jewellery, including royal heirlooms, was stolen. The Ex-Queen was dining downstairs, while the burglars were rifling the bedrooms and dressing rooms.

Business Relations with Germany

The Allies intend to take up business relations with Germany at an early date. Only the question of payment and custom duties remain to be settled. Germany is already transacting business with France through Alsace-Lorraine.

These relations will be controlled to a certain extent.

Escape of Sinn Feiners.

Twenty Sinn Feiners escaped from Mountjoy Prison, Dublin, on Saturday afternoon. Amongst them were Commoner Walsh, who was recently tried by court-martial, and Commoner Beasley, who is awaiting trial by court-martial.

The warders were held down by a gang of Sinn Feiners whilst others climbed a thirty-foot wall by means of a rope ladder.

126th Army Brigade R. F. A.

This Brigade has now completed two months service on the Rhine and the lead driver of "A" sub. of one of the batteries is reported to have stated that having obtained a workable knowledge of the "Dutch" language, he is now studying English, but finds the word "demobilization" somewhat of a stumbling block. Realising his difficulties, we offer him our sympathy, and trust that soon they may be overcome.

A curious case is reported from Eil. A civilian was passing along the street the other morning, when he was siezed with total blindness. Herr Ernst, the well known specialist, was hurriedly called from breakfast, but was wholly unable to account for the siezure. Later, it was discovered that, at the moment, the man was passing the 2/1st Warwick R. H. A., who had just turned out in drill order.

We congratulate the 411 on their laudable endeavour to revive the good old coaching days. The turn-out appeared on the Hohenzollern Bridge recently, the ribbons being handled as only a "rum 'un can handle 'em" — oats and trotters being both between the traces and on the box, whilst the horn pooped off in most approved style. We are in entire sympathy with the sentry who remarked, "Gor' blimey", and presented arms.

Doubtless many of our readers are familiar with Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler's "Ships that pass in the night." It is good — very good — but ships that sojourn awhile with us and then pass on, to return again in each case with a priceless offering to St. Cecelia, are better still. We are well aware tha a unit in this Brigade possesses a boat and a lake, but we heartily congratulate them on possessing a ship without a sea.

Why we are here.

He would have been a reckless prophet who, twelve months ago to-day, would have dared to assert that twelve months more would see the allied armies firmly established in any part of Germany. One year and ten days ago there was just a shadow of misgiving; the German hordes had accumulated momentum and no one could say exactly how far it would carry them. Of the final result we as a nation never doubted, but it was not an easy task to put a term to the ding-dong struggles that were then proceeding. Yet to-day, in Germany, on both sides of the Rhine, one sees the British and other armies comfortably settled down as though they had been here for years. The British soldier, with his surprising quality of adaptability, yet apparently so reserved, has a great capacity for making himself at home.

How did it happen? Why are we here?

Many "explanations" have undoubtedly been given but there is only one reason. We may have heard — we certainly have heard — in our billets, different forms of these "explanations" and there is just a bare possibility that, hearing them constantly reiterated by people who are apparently speaking in good faith and with good will, we, especially the new arrivals who were unable to share in the glory, ferocity and sufferings of the fray, may begin to believe them. Consequently, we say most emphatically to all who may begin to believe, there is only one reason. Never let the veil of affability dim your view of that fact.

We are here because the allied armies fought the Germano-Austrian combination to its knees, and in that fighting the British Army took a big share.

We are not here by the kindly invitation of the Prussian Power that was, to enjoy the amenities of the beautiful Rhine valley. We are not here merely because the German nation became discontented and wanted a rest. It undoubtedly did, and that badly, but its discontent arose largely from the failures in FRANCE, BELGIUM, and other theatres of war. No nation ever wished to carry on a war of hopeless retirements, the German nation least of all.

We are here under an Armistice dictated to an ememy outfought and broken. Let us not forget that the demand for that Armistice travelled from the front line to BERLIN, not from the German populace to the army. Nay, the enemy military Headquarters insisted that an Armistice must be concluded at once. Hindenburg and Ludendorf both concurred in that. On the 10th November 1918, the former urged acceptance of any terms, saying, "knowledge of defeat has meanwhile completed the disintegration of the army". Look at the map reproduced on another page of this journal, and there you will see the reason why we are here. Lest we may forget, even momentarily, let us post this map up in our billets and houses where it will ever remind us of that reason. The incentive to forgetfulness lies all around us out here. Let us remember that a war forced on nations peaceful and unprepared — won, but won only through tremendous sacrifices — has brought us to COLOGNE, to live among a population which furnished without protest so long as victory seemed possible the troops and armament of aggression, and to enforce upon the aggressors the terms which justice demands. To wish to live on good terms with our surroundings is a natural human feeling and there is no need for discourtesy, far less for truculence, but there is need to remember.

During August of last year the British alone, took nearly 60,000 prisoners, 650 guns, 5 750 machine guns and 1000 trench mortars; our glorious allies were doing likewise, and from all other seats of war came the same tale. During the last few days of October the Austrians lost to our Italian armies 50,000 prisoners and hundreds of guns, and General Allenby reported that between September 18th and the end of the first week in October 79,000 prisoners had been taken. All these told heavily against the moral of the Central Powers, but it was on the Western front that the final collapse was to come. In the fighting last year the following were the approximate losses sustained by the enemy, in captured alone, to the Armies named: — British 200,000; French 140,000; U.S. 50,000; Belgians 15,000 and the losses in guns, wounded and dead were at least proportionately heavy, probably much higher that the average ratio in modern battles.

That is why we are here. Let us never forget it, let our country never forget it, nor our Allies, and never let us allow the populace of the late Central Empires to forget it. Many of our bravest fell by the way; perhaps they are sharing our "Watch on the Rhine."

Let us never dishonour their memories, of their presence, by forgetting even for a moment, the glorious things they accomplished or the fact that their achievements enabled us to see Peace.

The Question of Tongues

by Lieut. W. R. Patterson, F. R. G. S., M. R. A. S., M. C. P., etc.

It is a very poignant question — the question of foreign languages — one that, at this period in history, should be considered seriously by every loyal British subject. A man-made international language is, without doubt, of great interest to a few, but to a few only in comparison with populations.

Man is of such mettle, and so complex, both physiologically and psychologically, that any international tongue would soon follow the ways of the natural ones, and dialects would arise. I know of such a case where some, who spoke a well-known tongue, intended to be international, severed their connection with the main body, and revised the rules to suit themselves.

Now, what benefit is derived from a knowledge of some speech other than one's own?

(1) One enhance one's worth. Members of all professions and trades benefit in some way. Hitherto many foreigners who worked for a small salary were employed as correspondents by British firms. Why should not the Briton do this, and supplement his former salary? It is surely worth consideration! The remarkably rapid increase to German trade was largely due to the fact that modern languages were exceedingly well-taught in the schools. The German youth, on leaving school, could actually hold an intelligent conversation with the foreigner.

During the war, the comparatively small number of officers and men, who have known one or two foreign languages well, have proved most helpful to the authorities; many securing interesting and lucrative posts. Now, such knowledge was of great service to a man before the war, and it has shown itself in a new light during the war; but it is of its possibilities after the war that we must think.

Previously, we employed the native himself for purposes of translation, interpreting and foreign correspondence. In the future, let these be done by our own countrymen. Trade must go on, greater trade than before Doctors, chemists and other scientists must read the results of foreign research. Bacteriologists everywhere are working upon the cause and effect of Spanish "flu". Why should they wait for translations to be made? The tinker, tailor, soldier and sailor—indeed, everyone—should spend as much time as possible on the study of some other tongue; the reward demonstrates itself later, inevitably!

(2) One's country benefits. Surely if the individuals composing a nation succeed over the foreigner, the country must gain. This is the fruit of patriotism, and for this reason alone, the point is well worthy of our attention.

(3) A new sphere of reading is presented to us —books in great variety, newspaper-articles, plays and other literary matter.

Our second tongue enables us to understand the mentality of another people and this becomes of great service to those who travel and to those who discuss foreign questions. By careful reading one may form a really excellent idea of a country and of the turn of mind of its inhabitants, without ever having set foot therein. Whether one reads for the sake of pleasure or instruction, one cannot but profit in the end.

And so, for these reasons that I have suggested, if not for any other, let the British folk, from the highest to the humblest, settle down seriously, to this most necessary study, for the sake of advancement, self-improvement, and patriotism!!

The Artistic Status of Cologne Cathedral.

MAJOR BLES, TOWN MAJOR.

In the early days of the war, when the Germans began their abominable bombardment of that masterpiece of French Gothic, Rheims Cathedral, and later, after fire had destroyed all the beautiful woodwork of the interior, and charred the ornamentation of the capitals, it was quite a common thing to hear men exclaim: "Wouldn't it be grand to be able to pay them back by destroying Cologne Cathedral!"

I used to combat that idea on the ground that one crime does not excuse another; that art has no fatherland; that because the world has lost one of its rarest jewels, there was no justifiable reason for robbing it of another; and so on, all the old sophistries which make up the arsenal of every writer on art.

I still think so, but for a totally different reason. Nor can Cologne be called a rare jewel! It is a jewel perhaps, but as one of those large cameo brooches, heavily-set in solid gold, which our grandmothers used to wear, not as the more graceful diamond or emerald, in a claw setting, of the modern élégante.

Cologne Cathedral is famous. Rheims was beautiful.

And Rheims is still more beautiful as it stands to-day, its bruised and torn, but still sturdy, form, a living expression of the eternal genius of France.

But the Dom of Cologne, untouched by the rude hand of war, has lost its halo, for the mist of greatness which hung before the world's eyes, when it looked upon anything German, has fallen from it, and left it simply a huge monument of the Teutonic desire to be thought a truly great nation. Which is a very different thing from being one! The self-inflated frog never actually attained to the status of the ox.

As we look at the great pile, our first impression is certainly one of grandeur, but as we continue to look, and our brain loses for a time the instinctive effect of comparison with its environment, Conrad von Hochstaden's Cathedral appears to diminish even in size, for we see, then, the extent of its ill-proportion and lack of cohesion.

Here, we are an incalculable distance behind such gems of tracery in stone as Rouen Cathedral, such exquisite lines as Amiens, or Chartres, or Beauvais, such perfect proportions as Rheims or Notre Dame.

But above all, the "spirit" is missing.

The Gothic period in art reposed on a profound love of nature, a sincere and spontaneous effort to reproduce its most beautiful manifestations.

Now Cologne Cathedral gives no sign of such spontaneity. Its towers are heavy, its spires stocky, and overladen with clumsily-fashioned ornaments, its pointed arches have not the true constructional line, and many of its windows and roses are little less than crimes against good taste.

And why? Because the whole structure was built to no unique plan. It is imitation. eighteenth and nineteenth-century, Gothic, and so is out of proportion. Its half-windows, looked upon by many as a feature of German Gothic, are really the result of lack of space — in other words, disproportion. It is as though a skilful violin maker of to-day were to copy a long fiddle from the hand of Stradivarius. He might get a resemblance close enough to deceive most amateurs; he might even obtain a tone of surpassing beauty; but he would never attain the master's perfection of curve and plane in the scroll, or the slender grace of the S's, for the inspiration would be lacking. There would be no spontaneity.

All this is perfectly comprehensible when we examine the history of Cologne Cathedral, and learn how it was "put together" — for that is the only expression which applies — over a number of centuries, not starting from a centre and working out, but in two isolated portions, the towers and the apsis, with a considerable space between the two, which was only bridged over in the middle of the nineteenth-century.

The towers, and the steeples crowning them, were finished in 1881 only, 632 years after the laying of the first stone!

These few facts — all technical details of dates and construction may be found in the guide-books — will not only demonstrate the falsity of Cologne Cathedral's claim to rank among the great Gothic structures, but also explain the absence of perfect proportion which is perhaps the chief, if not the best-known, characteristic of the Pointed Style.

I can never look at the double canopies over the side doors, and over the great central window above the main door, or at the totally-disproportionate window also crowned by a double canopy on the South side, without feeling that the lower one is there to fill a gap, resulting from faulty calculation.

Again, what can be more irritating than the intense monotony of the decoration, and worst of all, the curve-sided square ornament filling the gap between the summits of the lancet windows and that of the whole constructional arch of the two great windows I mentioned before. The juxtaposition of the almost flat curve of the square, and the rounder segment of the window lancet-head, gives one's teeth the same unpleasant sensation as the grating of a file over the edge of a tin plate, or a brilliant passage of consecutive fifths in the work of an amateur composer. This is amateur Gothic pushed to extremes!

Then last, but not by any means least, the artistic heresy of ornamenting to a fault the upper structure of the towers and steeples, while the lower portion retains its purer Gothic simplicity. It is like painting detail into the background of a picture, while the foreground is put in masses. It upsets all values.

As a monument of German patience and determination to achieve something larger, more "kolossal", than is to be found elsewhere, the Dom of Cologne is undoubtedly great. It is also the impersonation of the esprit du parvenu in its attempt to surpass in the nineteenth-century, the inimitable stonework of the twelfth and thirteenth.

But between this and such gems of true Gothic as the French Cathedrals mentioned above, or our own stately Winchester, the slender, graceful, Salisbury, the solitary, dignified Ely, is as wide a gulf, from an artistic point of view, as between the martyred Cloth-Hall of Ypres and that much-maligned, but serviceable structure of pit props and corrugated iron, the Nissen Hut.

Education

Unfortunately the Sergeant Major took a dislike to me from the first. The Sergeants vied with each other in vigorous and public description of my attempts to "slope" and "present arms". In the matter of fixing and unfixing bayonets I was a danger to life and limb, at least that was what the corporals told me.

On Officers' Mess fatigues I smashed more crockery than could be paid for out of twice my pay, and I seemed always to chop wood the wrong size for the fireplace. Hence I was a problem in the company. What was to be done with me?

An indelicate suggestion on the part of an N.C.O. as to the curious juxtaposition of my boots and brains gave the solution. Why should I not attend the educational classes?

The corporals were of opinion that it would be useless in my case; the sergeants extended their sympathy to the Education Officer; the Sergeant Major pointed out the danger of brain fever. Thus was I launched on my army educational career.

My desire for an all round education led me to enter my name for every subject. Other students came and went, but like somebody or other's stream, I go on for ever. I simply haunted the class-rooms. Officers dreaded to postpone their lectures or shut down classes, such was my persistency in attending everything of an educational nature. The shorthand teacher regarded me as his especial bête noir. He, poor fellow, knew little of his subject and apparently studied hard to keep one lesson ahead of his class. Consequently my constant attendance forced him continually to study the curious little dots and dashes each of us found so uninteresting. One day he will appreciate the driving power I gave to his studies. Owing to his sudden demobilization (blessed word!) my knowledge of phonography is as incomplete as his.

In my thirst for knowledge I have wrestled with ledger and sales accounts; committed publicly to memory (and privately to perdition) the dates of the chief battles of English history, — as read out of an antiquated book by a Scots Officer; dabbled in wireless telegraphy and building construction; and taken a feverish interest in economics. Owing to military exigencies, courses in these subjects rarely survived more than two lessons. I am a master of the French tongue up to and including the verb avoir; and I have a thorough knowledge of German mathematics as far as zwanzig. My morals have been attended to by various "talks" on matters I blush to name, and I am convinced of the evils of smoking and drinking—not however by the actions of my superiors so much as by what they told me and the dreadful ends of some their friends who had not heeded their warnings. Lectures on Bolshevism have been a favourite topic, and should a crowd of anarchists foregather with malice prepense, I feel I could convince them inside of twenty minutes of the error of their ways and the sticky end to which they were making.

The advantages of education are obvious. Besides giving one a broader outlook on life, an intelligent interest in the facts of nature, etc., etc. (I quote from the official pamphlet), an intensive course such I have indicated brings me exemption from the distressing round of parades, inspections, and fatigues, which is the chief amusement of the military. Sad to say, these have little attraction for me. My life has risen to a higher plane. I devour Charles Garvice and William Le Queux in the library. In my spare time I carry out some interesting chemical experiments. The bore of my rifle is an excellent example of metallic deposits; while the calculation of the rate of growth of human hair over extended periods has unconsciously become a hobby of mine. Unfortunately for my comfort, my section N.C.O. has a strong objection to both these studies.

A regular attendant at special lectures, my attention has been directed to a diversity of subjects ranging from the League of Nations to the Sardine industry, and from the Modern Poets to Convict life on Dartmoor. I found the last very striking, particularly as the lecturer seemed to take special interest in me, (he had been a Chaplain in the prison), and seemed to think we might meet again.

My endeavours for intellectual improvement are looked upon with suspicion, I regret to say, by some of my less enlightened comrades. They complained in a body that I was going scot free of all parades and fatigues. Vainly did I point out to them the mental labour involved in grappling with phonetics and bootmaking, with gardening and astronomy. It was found impossible officially to withdraw me from attendance at the excellent classes (vide their own report) doing such valuable work, especially as my presence was their raison d'être in most cases.

A deep-laid plot was hatched to pass me out by means of an examination. Owing, probably, to the incompleteness of my studies I am afraid I "failed to satisfy the examiners", as I gave what I afterwards found to be ridiculous answers to the sums set, and the essay I wrote on "The Advantages of Education" would, I fear, have disgraced a boy of ten. However, the Second in Command saw it, and in his innocence stormed at the Education Officer and incontinently ordered my attendance at every and any class going.

The Sergeant Major passed me yesterday in full marching order ready for a ten-mile route march, while I was on my way to school. He spoke scathingly of education and alluded disparagingly to my forebears. Whereupon I respectfully remarked that one had never really finished learning.

There is a battery of Howitzers on the Rhine Bank.

The Howitzers.

Major Carey W. R. Molyneux.

What are you thinking of? — silent Gun.
I think of the work that is nearly done,
I think of a France that was turned to Hell,
I think of the gunners who served me well:
Up to my axles in slime and mud,
With my breach block smothered in brave men's [blood;
Re-set and painted, tested and true,
I am ready to start on my work anew.

What do you see? — you painted thing.
I see the throne of a fugitive king:
Freedom's troops on a country-side,
Where once were the castles of crime and pride.
A river, the boast of a race accursed,
Who tried their best to do their worst.
Proudly I look at my mates in line,
The real indisputable "Wacht am Rhein".

What do you hear? — you great dumb beast.
I hear a rumour from west to east,
Of an army to hold what we dearly bought;
To keep the position for which we fought.
The south wind whispers from far Mayence,
The river is held in the name of France;
And the ripples sing from the racing tide
America stands at your right hand side.

Why do you laugh? — you great, grim Gun.
I laugh to think of the frolic and fun,
When back in old England, around my wheels,
Children will gambol with joyful squeals;
Lovers in couples will sit on my trail,
And my ears will be cheered with the old, old tale.
Be sure there'll be plenty of laughter and fun,
When the war is past and my work is done.

Army Commander's Cup.

Final Tie.

There was a sensational finish to this match at Blucher Park, Cologne, on Friday, the winning goal being scored with the last kick of the match. Considering the strong wind and treacherous turf, fast and clever football characterised the play.

The 1st Bn. (Queen's Own) Cameron Highlanders won by two goals to one. Playing cleverer football in the first half, Mackay scored after ten minutes. Shortly afterwards, Cowie missed a fine chance of equalising, after a brilliant individual run. Subsequently, both goals underwent narrow escapes, but nothing further was scored up to the interval.

Playing with the wind the Black Watch showed great improvement, and the Camerons' defence was hard pressed. Shortly before the end the Black Watch forced a corner, and after Wilson had fisted away a shot from the outside left MacDougal equalised. With only a few seconds to go, Dingwall fumbled a shot from Gillies, and before he could recover, Warburton had banged the ball into the net.

The winners were splendidly served at half, and their wing men were both speedy and clever. Macdougal worked hard on the losing left wing, and sent across a number of accurate centres. Mc. Gregor also did well at centre half, while Cowie had many a hard tussle with Anderson.

There were over 2000 spectators, including General Sir Herbert Plumer, commanding the 2nd Army, who presented the cup and medals.

TEAMS: — 1st Bn. (Queen's Own) Cameron Highlanders: Lt. A. Wilson; C.Q.M.S. M. Gibson, Pte. A. Amos; C.S.M.G. Campbell, Sgt. A. Anderson, Pte. D. Boyd; Cpl. D. Ellis, Pte. A. Gillies, Cpl. E. Warburton, Pte. A. Kerr and Pte. W. Mackie.

8th Bn. Royal Highlanders (Black Watch): 2nd Lt. Dingwall; Pte. MacGaskill, Pte. Patterson; Lce. Cpl. Bisset, Sgt. Mc.Gregor, Lt. Miller; Pte. Kirke, Pte. Samson, Sgt. Cowie, Pte. Robertson and Sgt. MacDougal.

WITH THE RATIONS.

Doubtless you will wonder why we have adopted this title for our daily chat. There are two reasons: firstly, it is original (that is, so far as any of the staff are concerned, and if by any chance some other person has raced ahead and combined these three words in similar fashion and for similar use, then I offer my humble apologies); secondly, it is appropriate, for all must admit — all who have done any real "soldiering", as we understand the word — that many yarns come up with the rations. How these stories get into the heads of the ration parties, no one can say. After four years of war, after all the rumours of thrilling episodes and charming realities which "might have been", we are still at a loss to account for these yarns.

Fighting has finished — so we believe — but still the Rations come up, and with them just as many yarns as were wont to find their way up with the ration parties which worked along the Communication trenches in the old days. So that, instead of letting them slowly sift along the rank and file of the front line, we are going to collect them day by day, and publish them outright, for all to read.

* * *

Is it really more than few years since w last tasted the real town-life.? I was walking along the Hohe Strasse — that popular rendezvous of all classes — the other day when this question occurred to me, prompted by the easy going, affable manners adopted by the "tommies". It certainly has'nt taken us long to adopt the old style.

I think the one great lesson we have learnt during the last four years is the value of sport. Some people call it esprit-de-corps, esprit-d'armée, and other foreign words which we do not altogether understand. I simply call it sport, because it is the sporting instinct which binds us all together, though we do kick each other on the shins at times, in the attempt to follow out the precepts and intricacies as detailed in our sporting manuals. It is pleasing to note that in our army curriculum there is so much time devoted to sport, and that this time is being used to the best advantage.

* * *

I heard some little time ago that we are to have some Waacs up here with us. Let us hope this is true, for we need something or somebody to enliven matters a little. But what will the Germans think, I wonder. The few English ladies we have here already seem to have caused much perplexity. The other day I was walking along the main thoroughfare and passed about eight groups of females all gazing in the same direction. Their attention was focussed on two English nurses!

* * *

The Southern Division has reason to be proud of its sporting propensities. It has a first rate football team; a potential cricket eleven that will no doubt want a good deal of beating; quite a number of expert horsemen, and a galaxy of boxers who successfully represented the Division in the recent tournament. Four years ago, the Division sailed from England for Gallipoli, landing at Cape Helles on April 25th.

No. 9 Field Ambulance defeated No. 7 Field Ambulance at football recently by four goals to two, this being the first occasion since 1914 on which these teams have met.

There was keen competition for a cup presented by the Eastern Divisional Commander, Major-General C. L. Nicholson, C. B., C. M. G. for the best performance by battalion (or equivalent) in Association football, relay race and lug of war. The A. and S. H. won all events, and the achievement was deserved and popular.

* * *

The thought which prompted the 2nd Army Boxing Tournament Committee to award a second prize to the "next best" team was undoubtedly a happy one. Little considerations of this kind go a very long way towards encouraging good sport, and the 1st Cavalry Division team must have felt "bucked" by the fact that their excellent show found some tangible recognition.

* * *

Judging by the very high standard of excellence of the boxing witnessed in the 2nd Army Boxing Tournament at Cologne, the Rhine Army should be able to send some thoroughly good teams to England in April to represent it in the big military tournament. The Physical and Recreational Training staff are sparing no effort to ferret out the strongest representatives for every phase of sport and, when they have found them, arrangements are to be made for an excellent training scheme at a healthy sea-side resort in France.

* * *

The Jocks, I should fancy, feel slightly embarrassed when walking through the streets. Their tartans still cause much consternation amongst the German populace — at any rate, it is either consternation or fascination, but from their visual expressions I cannot discern which of the two it is.

POETHLYN CANTERS HOME.

A gigantic crowd assembled at Aintree for the first post-war Grand National. Soldiers and sailors were predominant in the cosmopolitan assembly, including a large contigent of Dominion troops and hundreds of blue jackets. RUGBY FOOTBALL.

INTER-SERVICE TOURNAMENT.

Wintry weather doubtless curtailed the attendance at the fixture between the Mother country and Canada at Inverleith, only 6000 spectators braving the elements. Canada was outclassed behind, and was beaten by 22 pts. to nil. In the first half Cullen, Pym (twice) and Sloan registered tries and although Canada improved with the breeze, Pickles and Pillman scored, both tries being converted by Lewis.

The R.A.F. beat the Australians at Gloucester by 7 pts. to 3. Although the ground was in good condition, the play was exceptionally keen but rather disappointing to the 3000 spectators. Generally speaking the Australians had the better of the play but their backs repeatedly fumbled the ball. They led at the interval by a try to nil. Afterwards the game was scrambling but more even. For the R.A.F. Seddon dropped a lovely goal and Wrentmore scored from a penalty.

At Twickenham, despite heavy snow overnight, 10.000 visitors enjoyed bright weather and a stubborn match which South Africa deserved to win. Htowever, the New Zealanders won by 14 pts. to 5.

The Hurlingham Club proposes to suspend their rule relating to the height of polo ponies, the only proviso made being that horses and ponies played at Hurlingham must be certified by local polo committees as sufficiently trained for the game.

SECOND ARMY BOXING TOURNAMENT

The Y.M.C.A. Central Hall was the scene of many pitched battles on March 21st, 22nd and 24th when the Second Army Boxing Tournament (by kind permission of the Army Commander) was decided. In the process of eliminating the "impossibles" there was plenty of wholesome, exciting sport, and the large audience present at each session enthused in consequence.

Lack of space prevents our giving descriptions of all the fights; suffice it, therefore, to comment briefly on the final bouts.

The bantam weight final between L.Cp. Young and Bom. Mason provided some good sport. Mason executed a good deal of clever side-stepping in the early stages, which for a time completely bewildered Young. Then the latter "got wise to it" as the Yank would say, and made the necessary allowances. He was unable in the second round, however, to avoid many of his opponents lightening blows, and those he managed occasionally to get in himself were not, as a rule, very serious Young made a good fight of it nevertheless, and held out for the three rounds, despite his obvious exhaustion towards the end.

Driver Travis and Lce. Corpl. Perry in battling for the final feather-weight competition gave a whirlwind exhibition. Perry started the bout by charging full tilt at his opponent, who dodged, and the impetus well-nigh carried him through the ropes. The fighting which followed was fast and furious and Travis frequently found a slight advantage in reach of great value although he certainly did not have byony meaos the first round. When the second round opened, it was fairly obvious that Perry hoped to gain the verdict by the quickness and unexpectedness of his attacks, and although in this way he scored many good points, his punishment was severe. Later, Travis tried a little tackling on his own account, with such successful results that the judge stopped the fight when it became clear that he had his man well beaten. The spectators applauded the vanquished for his plucky fight against a superior boxer.

In the Light weight final, Driver Cotton and Pte. Fox were the contestants. Fox, who, physically, was the superior man, right away administered some telling body and face punches which more than once caused Cotton to stagger. This state of things was reversed, however, towards the end of the opening round when Cotton got home a vigorous hit over the heart. When the second round had been in progress only a few seconds, Cotton, who was extremely nimble, followed a pretty feint by crashing in with two blows to the other's right, but he was immediately brought to his knees by a swinging blow behind the left ear. The third round was vigorous and keen, points being scored by each man in turn, but Cotton proved to be slightly superior.

Semi-final: Goddard beat Allardyce. Lister beat Duff. Final: Lister beat Goddard.

During the whole of the fight, Lister proved himself to be much more scientific than his opponent, who fought listlessly and with almost a total lack of the idea of recovery. He suffered a good deal in consequence but gamely kept up to the end.

Capt. Slim, 2nd. Army Troops, found all his efforts were required to dispose of Lt. White. Twice in the first round he was warned for hitting in clinches but otherwise the boxing was bright and exciting. In the second round, Slim landed a left and right to the neck and face, White countering with three vigorous punches to the ribs. In the last round Slim showed signs of inadequate training, but he was the cleverer boxer, and when he knocked White to his knees with a stunning swinging blow on the right side of the head, there was no doubt as to the winner. He completed his job, just on time, by flooring White while that officer was staggering, dazed, about the ring.

WELTER WEIGHTS, OTHER RANKS. First Round. Pte. Griffiths, 1st. Cav. Div., and Cpl. Pearce, 9th. Div., byes. L.-Cpl. Ritchie, 32nd. Div., beat Pte. Preedy, 3rd. Div.; Gnr. White, 34th. Div., beat Pte. Ronan beat Condon. Final. Ronan beat White.

Grr. White was knocked out by Pte. Ronan at the end of the second round as the result of a perfect shower of blows which he tried hard, but in vain, to escape.

STEEPLECHASES AT SPA AND SAND.

Those who were fortunate enough to be present at the recently held race meetings of the Cavalry and the 29th. Divisions at Spa and Sand respectively must have been impressed by the striking contrasts in the prevailing elements at these places. At Spa, the weather was ideal. Throughout the day, bright sunshine warmed the air, emphasised the natural charm and beauty of the race-course and its environs, and made everyone feel that it was good to be alive.

At Sand, on the other hand, rain, snow, hail and an icy cold wind all combined in an effort to make things thoroughly uncomfortable, and it speaks well for the admirable organization of the meeting that, despite these conditions, a generous attendance of spectators enjoyed some really excellent sport. There were certainly a few female spectators, but they were merely casual onlookers and naturally had no social interest in the event. In normal weather, the Sand course would not be very far behind that at Spa, in point of scenic beauty. Both enjoy a good position of high altitude, commanding extensive views of charming silvan country; but this was not evident at Sand on the day of the races, on account of the thick mist that hung about the ground. There was, however, at least one point of similarity in the two meetings; at each, the sport was exciting and excellent in every way.

MIDDLE WEIGHTS — OTHER RANKS. First round: Cpl. Matthews, 3rd Div., and Pte. Buckler, 1st. Div., byes. Pte. Pettitt, 6th Div., beat Pte. Thurston, Army Troops. Pte. Davies, 1st Cavalry Div., beat Dvr. Carroll, 29th Div.; R.S.M. Richardson, 9th Div., beat Cpl. Stokes, 2nd Bde. R.A.F.; Pte. Scroggins, 32nd Div., beat Dvr. Haywood, 6th Corps Troops; Spr. Keegan, 2nd Div., beat L.-Cpl. Pilcher, 34th Div.; Gnr. Hurst, 41st Div. beat Pte. Holdworth, 62nd Div.

Second round: Buckler beat Matthews. Davies beat Pettitt. Scroggins beat Richardson. Keegan beat Hurst. Semi-final: Davies beat Buckler. Scroggins beat Keegan. Final: Scroggins beat Davies.

At the outset Scroggins was cautioned for Kidney punching. There was very little power left in Davis after hehad received a terrific punch on the neck in the second round but he made some useful points. From an exhibition point of view there was very little to choose between the two men.

HEAVIES. (CATCH WEIGHTS.) First round: Gnr. Ormond, 32nd Div., and Cpl. Killerhar, byes. Cpl. Mc. Donald, 9th Div., beat Cpl. Friend, 6th Div.; Pte. Robson, 29th Div., beat Bdr. Giles, 6th Corps Troops. Cpl. Neal, 34th Div., beat Pte. Bradley, 1st Div.; A.-M. Williams, 2nd Bde. R.A.F., beat Cpl. Gibbings, 3rd Div.; Cpl. Barton 1st Div., beat Gnr. Kerslake, 62nd Div.; S-S. Gess, 41st Div., beat Pte. Conliffe, Army Troops.

Second round: Ormond beat Killerhar; Robson beat Mc. Donald; Neal beat Williams; Gess beat Barton. Semi-final: Robson beat Ormond. Gess beat Neal. Final; Robson beat Gess.

Some excellent boxing was witnessed before Pte. Robson ultimately beat Sergt Gess. Robson cleverly dodged aswing and took quick advantage of the opening to score a sound body blow. Later, Gess broke through Robson's guard time after time but failed to follow up his opportunities, otherwise the result might have been reversed. As it was, Robson executed many smart manœuvres and was ultimately awarded the verdict.

TEAM RESULTS: 29th Division 37 points: 1st Cavalry Div. 33; 34th Division 30; 9th Division 28; 41st Division 25; 32nd Division 24; 1st Division 23; 3rd Division 22; 2nd Division 20; 2nd Army Troops 20; 2nd Bde. R.F.A. 20; 6th Division 15; VI. Corps Troops 13; 62nd Division 8.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PELMAN INSTITUTE

My dear "Pelman",

I venture upon a letter. The last of a correspondence si intime. Perhaps Lord Chesterfield's son felt as I do, when his famous epistles ceased and he crossed swords with the world — armed with paternal wisdom.

You ask me — who have bared my naked soul to you — what have been your most helpful features? I don't hesitate: — Your cheery optimism: the danger-signal you hoist at the word "Drift". May I bore you to tears with a little human document?

The downs and ups of the Boer War made supsequent peace-time parades and military routine seem futile. I changed the saddle for a secretaryship. For seven strenuous years I worked and pushed and wedged. I ate, drank, slept, lived for that big business. I became a director. I became Managing Director. For five years I declared dividends. My Rolls-Royce took me to office and factory. Two days a week I hunted or played golf. All was for the best in that best of worlds where money was to be spent, not hoarded. But—it was drifting. I saw no writing on the wall. Why row hard when the race had been won?

One August morning in 1914 "Boot and Saddle" sounded. I gave up everything and was soon across the Channel. Mid-1915 saw me back in England in hospital for six months. From then on — Home Service!

Do you know what "H. S." means to keen soldiers? It means breaking their spirits. Depression, insomnia and all the salt of life damped. In good time self-worry and pessimism opened the door to the old trouble and the hospital ward. "Drift" again.

Then you came, my friend, when there seemed little hope and less desire to begin life afresh at 50. Lesson 1, I bucked up, for there was a bright little message in grey. Lesson 2, self analysis and the meaning of "drift". Lesson 3, I was an optimist. The clock began going backwards. I wrote cheery letters to old business friends I had neglected. I was no longer, it would seem, a dull dog. People called and dicussed future possibilities. So the Course ran through.

Behold me full of courage, sincerity, enthusiasm, and with a definite purpose. Others perceive it. I know that by their faces. You have demonstrated rare qualities and pointed out the way to add a pretty conceit to personality. I thank you. As to "Drift" — the very word has been hounded forth, as R.L.S. would say, with all the circumstance of contumely. It is "napoo", as my batman has it.

Unlike the Spaniard who asks himself — "Shall I be as brave to-morrow as I am to-day?" I say: — "My friend Pelman says — 'You can be'. I shall be."

Good-bye and Good Luck.

Believe me, Yours devotedly, but never drifting

"Student D 11279."

The above is typical of many letters received from Pelmanists. Until you have investigated Pelmanism — until you come to a realisation of what it means to you personally — you can possess no conception of the advantages and pleasures you are missing by neglecting to take it up.

In the Army and Navy 100,000 Officers and Men have adopted Pelmanism, including 150 Generals and Admirals.

Many military students have frankly and decidedly stated that they owe their promotion to the direct aid of Pelmanism.

Full particulars of the Pelman Course are given in "Mind and Memory," which also contains a complete descriptive Synopsis of the 12 lessons. A copy of this interesting booklet, together with a full reprint of "Truth's" famous Report on the work of the Pelman Institute, and particulars showing how you can secure the complete Course at a reduced fee, may be obtained gratis and post free by any reader of the "Cologne Post" who applies to the Pelman Institute, 496, Pelman House, Bloomsbury Street, London, W.C.1.

The future of the Rhineland.

An inhabitant of Cologne the other day asked a British Tommy on the platform of an electric car: "What do you think will become of the Rhineland? Are we to be French. or do you think we shall become English?"

"No, decidedly not! You shall remain German for your punishment", was his answer.

Cologne University.

A NEW VENTURE.

More than 120 years ago the University of Cologne was closed, owing to French obligations at that time, and to a certain extent, political disturbances. To-morrow, the 1st April, it is to re-open.

The inauguration will be presided over by Prof. Dr. Eckert, Oberbürgermeister Adenauer in the building of the High School of Commerce.

This venture has been the subject of much comment amongst the German people, and from this we gather that the two chief reasons against the reopening are: firstly, an unwarranted expense at the present time; and secondly, its close proximity to the Bonn University. It is evident that many of the people fear rivalry.

Bonn is, or rather was, the old aristocratic seat of learning, where princes used to study, and where the "Korpsstudents" were wont to fight their duels. The Kaiser and the Crown Prince studied at Bonn.

The spirit of the new university will be entirely different, and we are told that the aim is to make it, not a fortress of German "Kultur", as Strassburg University used to be, but a bridge between east and west built upon the democratic spirit.

In the beginning there will be two faculties, medical and economical; but it is hoped to add philosophical and legal faculties at a later time, when the financial situation is better. In addition there will also be attached an institute for sociological research directed by three directors. Prof. von Wirse, Prof. Max Scheler, and a Socialist who was lately a Minister in Wurtemberg.

Owing to rough weather the battle cruisers Tiger and Princess Royal were compelled to put to sea on Friday. The Queen Elizabeth stayed in the Mersey and the crew went to Aintree for the Grand National.

SEVEN BRITISH OFFICERS MURDERED

EX-KAISER HOPES TO RETURN

ARREST OF EX-ARCHDUKE JOSEF FRANZ

DANZIG TROUBLE SUBSIDING

SEVEN BRITISH OFFICERS MURDERED.

SOUTHERN EGYPTIAN OUTBREAK.

The official communique recording the events which occurred in Southern Egypt in the middle of the month has just been issued in Cairo.

Referring to the outbreak in the Southern provinces it states that on the 15th March the train from Luxor was attacked by the rebels at Minieh and partially sacked. Subsequently the bodies of seven British officers were discovered in the guards van. They had been brutally murdered.

On the same day, at Benisoel, a crowd attacked and invaded the law courts. The Court was sitting, but everyone, including the officials, was driven out by the mob. Failing in a desperate attempt to capture the British judge who was presiding, the demonstraters paraded the town and wrecked various Government offices and other public buildings. They then attacked Mudiria, where they were in turn attacked and driven back by a small body of Indian troops. Four days later at Medinet, in the Fayoum province, a large force of Bedouins persistently attacked the garrison but were eventually driven off, suffering four hundred casualties.

"WULLIE, YE WILL NO COME BACK AGAIN."

EX-KAISER'S HOPES.

What the ex-Kaiser anticipates is one thing, and what he will receive is quite another. Numerous attempts have been made to interview him in his "Cache" at Amerongen and numerous descriptions, mostly imaginative have been written concerning his daily routine, his hopes and fears.

Mr. Harold Begbie dispels some of the popular ideas on the subject. Writing to the Daily Chronicle from Amerongen, he claims to have been admitted to the ex-Kaisers intimacy. He says that the exile who was received by Count Bentinck not as a friend, but to oblige the Dutch Government, is in no wise a broken man, but retains his full energy and vigour, although he has abandoned his strenuous pastime of wood-chopping. His sole open-air exercise consists of a walk round the moat of about thirty minutes duration. Most of his time he spends in his room, either in writing his autobiography or in reading to the ex-Empress while she is sewing or doing fancy needlework. The ex-Kaiser, whose hair is quite white, frequently expresses his appreciation of the religious atmosphere of the castle. He does not fear a public trial and anticipates that eventually he will be allowed to live out his days in peaceful retirement, in Germany. Scotsmen at least will not fail to notice the slight paraphrase of a National Air.

BIG BERTHA.

To a special representative of Excelsior the manager of Krupps explained that there was nothing new in principle about Big Bertha, the long range gun which fired on Paris. The gun was longer and more resisting than the earlier pieces, and had a calibre of eight inches. It was seventy-feet long and the muzzle velocity was about four thousand feet per second. Herr Wittfield further explained that the gun was never intended for serious warfare; its aim was to produce a bad moral effect. But few pieces were made and after firing a few shots the barrel of each gun had to be returned to Essen.

The idea of this gun sprang from a desire to fire on London if the Germans succeded in reaching Calais. But they did not!

BIG RUMANIAN VICTORY OVER BOLSHEVISTS IN UKRAINE.

The Rumanian Press Bureau at Berne has published the following official communique from the Rumanian General Staff:

"The Rumanian troops, in liason with French troops on the left bank of the Dneister in Ukraine have annihilated important Bolshevik forces in the region of Maja Vilaska. The Rumanians are advacing towards Tiraspol an Rasdelnaja".

COMMUNICATIONS RESTONED BETWEEN OMSK AND ARCHANGEL.

The Provisional Government of North Russia publishes the following communique:

"The Armies of North Russia joined hands with the Siberian troops on the River Kovja on the 21st. March. The road to Liapino is cleared of Bolshevista. Communications are restored between Omsk and Archangel."

WINE STOCK OF COLOGNE.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE REPORT.

According to the Kölner Tagleblatt the Chamber of Commerce has inquired into the wine stock of Cologne. Seventy-three firms in this district have in their possession 1,261,000 bottles of Mosel wine, 21,15,000 bottles of Rhine wine, and 539,000 bottles of red wine.

The Franco—Italian League gave a dinner today to the honour of Orlando and the Italian delegates at the Peace Conference. There were speeches by Marshall Joffre, M. Viviani, Ribot, Orlando and Salandra.

CONVERTED AUSTRIAN EX-ARCHDUKE.

PLAUSIBLE BUT UNCONVINCING.

From Budapest comes the interesting news, via Reuter's correspondent at Copenhagen, that the Socialists at Keszthely have arrested the ex-Archduke Josef Frantz and Count Julius Somsich.

The Archduke repeatedly protested that far from being apprehensive, he felt extraordinarily comfortable under the Soviet Republican regime, and perfectly contented with a proletarian dictatorship. He had long been partisan towards Lenin's ideas. Above all, he would not dream of fleeing from Hungary.

As the ex-Archduke was dishevelled, minus a collar, in a muddy and travel stained condition, and was suspiciously near the border of German Austria, the Socialists doubted his asseverations and sent him to Budapest for save custody.

Many women and girls are enrolling in the Red Army.

THE RED ARMY.

Detachments of the Red Guards searched the mansion at Budapest occupied by the Ukrainian Mission. They forcibly arrested all the members of the Mission, their allegation being the flimsy pretext that they were intriguing with representatives of the Allies in Hungary.

The real explanation of the outrage probably lies in the fact that two million crowns were seized and distributed among the Red Guards.

GERMANY AND THE FRONTIER.

It is announced that the question of the German frontier has been settled, and that President Wilson, Lloyd George and Orlando understood that the Rhine must be a military frontier, not a political one. The statesmen are now considering the possibilities of the payment by Germany. The annual indemnity that Germany will have to pay is not yet fixed, but the claims of France and Belgium will be privileged.

GEN. MANGIN TO LEAD OPERATIONS IN ROUMANIA AND HUNGARY.

At the Council of Four, assisted by Gen. Pershing, Gen. Foch, and Gen. Wilson, it was decided the General Mangin should lead the operations in Roumania and in Hungary.

ITALIAN GOVERNMENT AND THE VATICAN.

The Epoca has heard from a well-informed personality that an exchange of views with reference to the relations of the Italian Government and the Vatican has taken place.

No decision will be made before the termination of the Peace conference.

RIGA POPULACE STARVING.

BOLSHEVIST PLANS FOR RETREAT.

The Bureau of the Lettish Press communicates the news that oculary witnesses coming from Riga say that the popuplation of that town is starving. There is also raging an epidemic of typhus and the hospitals are full. There are a great number of deaths. The Bolshevists have made already a list of the persons whom they intend to take with them if they are compelled to retreat.

POLISH FRONT SITUATION.

The Poles have begun attacks on the valley of the Netz. Also on the Balim-Bromberg railway. They have been shelling the Netz bridge since Thursday. The shelling of the neighbouring villages of Friedrichshorst and Birkenbuch is so evident that the inhabitants dare not go out of doors. An intense feeling of indignation prevails amongst the population and the German troops who are not allowed to fight according to the terms of the Armistice.

FRANCE AND FOOD QUESTION.

In the Chamber of Deputies, Pichon, the Foreign Minister, on Saturday said that France was not going to abandon any small nation. Food and munitions will be sent to Poland, to the Czecho-Slovacs and specially to the Rumanians.

DANZIG QUESTION:

SETTLEMENT IN SIGHT.

According to the latest information to hand, it appears that the Entente has rejected the counter-proposal with regard to the place of disembarkation of General Haller's army. On the other hand evidence is accumulating that a certain feeling of understanding and mutual support is paving its way between Germany and the Entente in face of the menacing danger from Bolshevism. It is considered that there is good reason to hope that the negotiations will not be broken off. This hope, however, presupposes the safeguarding of German national interests in the event of General Haller's army passing through German territory.

The number of striker in Essen, according to a telegram to the Kolner Tageblatt, amounts now to 37,000.

BOUNTIES TO SOLDIERS.

NEW SCALE FOR ENLISTMENT OF VOLUNTARY ARMY.

All soldiers between the ages of 18 and 35, who are serving in the Army on normal service and whose periods of service expire before Sept. 1, are to be given an opportunity of re-enlisting for home and foreign service for periods of 27, 39, and 51 months if in the medical categories A or B1. Men now in the Army who are not serving voluntarily will become volunteers if they re-enlist under this scheme.

A man re-enlisting for 27 months will receive a bounty of £20, payable in three equal instalments. He will be entitled to two months' furlough at once, on full pay.

Those re-enlisting for 39 months will receive a bounty of £40 (in four instalments) and be given three months' furlough on full pay.

A man re-enlisting for 51 months will receive a £50 bounty (in five instalments) and three months' furlough at home on full pay.

The first bounty instalment will be given at the same time as the men receive their furlough, and each man accepted for re-enlistment will also receive the bonus now payable to the Armies of Occupation. Separation allowances to families and dependents will also be paid.

Every man re-enlisting will, as far as possible, be posted to the unit with which he is now serving, and he will receive the benefits of the new Army scheme of training and education.

The offer is not open to men who have been discharged, demobilised, or transferred to the Reserve.

SOCK AND BUSKIN THIS TIME.

PROBABLE STRIKE OF ACTORS.

"Off with the motley" is the theatrical equivalent of "down tools" and it looks as though most theatres and music halls in London and the provinces will have to close down.

For a long time past the profession has been agitating for better conditions, one of the chief points being payment during rehearsals. The present position is the outcome of an announcement by Mr. C. B. Cockran, who controls numerous theatres, that in future he is determined not to employ in any of his companies any actor or actress who is a member of the Association.

On the other hand, the various Association in the different branches of the profession go to the other extreme and wish to exclude non-Unionists all together.

The executive of the Actors, Association acting in close co-operation with the organisations of the Theatrical employees, Musicians, and the several Variety Artists and employees combinations, decided yesterday to recommend to a specially-convened General Meeting that no member of any Association shall appear in any caste not entirely composed of members of an Association.

LORD MILNERS EMPIRATION

Lord Milner has given an interview on the British Empire's future to the Sunday Express, in which he emphasises the problem of unity as a human problem and declares his faith that the sense of brotherhood will never be destroyed. Of dominions he says we are all free and equal members of one community, and while we have no hostility to foreign and friendly nations we will give preference in all things to our own family, a welcome decision at once to relax destruction upon trade within the Empire. Preference to other parts of the Empire has now been adopted as policy of government in fiscal matters and it is a much wider thing than any mere matter of tariffs. If there were no tariffs at all the principles of preference would still hold good. It was concentration of interest upon comparatively small questions of Customs which led to so much mischief. Every nation in Europe ought to settle its fiscal system on its own merits and then give preference to the others. There are many other ways of achieving objects. Take Empiration, and particularly Empiration at the present day. We are trustees for lives which have been offered to death on the battle-fields of Europe on behalf of the Empire. When it comes to Empiration ought not Empires to have preference? Our policies should aim at directing Empiratiou into right channels.

The large steamer Pretoria, making the sixth of the surrendered German merchant ships, arrived at Cowes yesterday from Hamburg. Two more are expected within the next few days.

The National Egg Collection for the wounded closed yesterday. During its operations, which have extended over more than four years, close on 42 millions of eggs have been collected as gifts and distributed to wounded soldiers and sailors.

MORE BERLIN BLUSTER.

PLEASE, MARSHAL FOCH: THANK YOU, MARSHAL FOCH.

A message from Reuters Correspondent at Amsterdam states that in reply to the German note with reference to the landing of Polish troops at Dantzig, Marshal Foch has intimated that on the 3rd of April at Spa, he will personally give all information as to the required guarantees to the German Plenipotentiary, who must be empowered to decide within forty-eight hours. The German Government has decided to send Erzberger to Spa with plenipotentiary powers.

From Copenhagen comes the news that resolutions passed at a meeting held in Rhenish Westphalia protesting against alleged French plans concerning the Saar region, elicited a telegram from Brockdorffrantzin to the effect that the German Ministry would reject absolutely any demands going beyond President Wilson's principles.

At Stoessel the Socialist Majority declared that the workers would rather have no peace at all than one which would compel them to work for forty years for the victors' pleasure. As a further expression of opinion the resolution added "Our Executive Committee is resolved, if necessary, to pursue the same policy as Hungary".

Reports circulated in Berlin to the effect that the Hungarian and Russian Soviet Governments have offered to make an alliance with Germany have evoked the semi-official statement that nothing is known, officially, of any such offers.

LABOUR PARTY AIMS.

NEW LONDON DAILY.

Born on the same day as The Cologne Post, and doubtless with somewhat less travail, The Daily Herald, the daily newspaper issued in the interests of organised Labour announces that it "will work unceasingly for a revolution, peaceful but complete, which will destroy the present system of competition and force, and replace it by the rule of co-operation".

The Editor, Mr. George Lansbury, who was defeated at the last election in Bow and Bromley, declares that another tremendous war is imminent unless British labour awakes to the seriousness of the situation, because only French Imperialists like Pichon have a clear cut policy, while other statesmen are merely drift ng.

He asserts that two Americans were recently allowed to go to Russia and challenges the Government to produce their report, which, he says, makes for an honourable understanding with Russia, whose Bolshevik Government Mr. Lansbury warmly defends. He regards seriously the coquetting of Germany with Bolshevism, saying that it is the last desperate venture of the Militarists, who are hoping that if Germany goes Bolshevik it will involve the whole world in its own downfall. Many of the disorders attributed to the Sparticists really originated with the Militarists, whose power, says Mr. Lansbury, can only be broken by a change in the Government.

Many happy returns — of the day, to you, Daily Herald.

PEACE BELLS FOR WESTMINSTER ABBEY

An anonymous donor has arranged for a restoration of the bells of Westminster Abbey. Their Majesties the King and Queen and H.R.H. Pricess Mary visited the works of Messrs Mears and Stainbank, Whitechapel Road, to witness the casting of the first of the bells. The Royal party displayed keen interest in the process.

The new bell is to be known as "Pax" and is the King's Peace Bell. It will bear the inscription, "The Lord of Hosts is with us".

Another of the four bells is to be named "Ruth" and will be inscribed, "There is none other that fighteth for us".

The treble will be called "Faith" and its inscription is to be "Thanks" be to God which giveth us the victory".

The Queen und Princess Mary having expressed a wish to take part in the actual work of casting, the firm had prepared two small moulds into which the Queen and Princess Mary poured molten metal: an operation which greatly interested them as well as affording amusement to the employees who crowded round to watch the process.

The King interested the workmen by his knowledge of their craft, and engaged in conversation with Mr. Dunwell, the foreman, who has had a long connection with the firm.

Later, Mr. Bert Oliver entertained the Royal visitors to a display of campanology on a set of miniature bells, and at the Queen's request he played "Queen of the Earth" and "Eileen Alannah."

The East-enders gave the Royal Party a most enthusiastic send-off as they left the works of Messrs. Mears and Stainbank.

52nd BEDFORDS' AT SIEGBURG.

On Saturday night hundreds were unable to obtain admission to the theatre at Siegburg, when "A Frightful Frost" was presented by the 52nd Bedfords' Concert Party. The comedy deals with the adventures, amatory and otherwise, of a henpecked husband who proposes to secure a respite from his shrewish partner by administering a preparation which suspends animation.

The great success of the performance was largely due to Lt. W. Healey-Hamlyn as Ferdinand Swift, an adventurer, and C.Q.M.S. Veasey as the ill-used husband, Mr. Watmuff.

Lt. C. G. Noke was a perfect vixen as Mrs. Watmuff, and with the Rev. Kemp, C.F., playing the part of a young lover and hero to the ingenue of R.Q.M.S. Capon, the comedy was very happily cast. Add to the acting the best of dresses and scenery and excellent production; the sum total gives the reason for a very great success which will improve still more with every succeeding performance during this week for which the production is booked.

It is reported that Paderewski left Warsaw for Paris on Sunday.

Owing to the strike of miners in the Nottinghamshire field, London finds itself nearly coalless; only day-to-day supplies being available for consumers and the general stock being reduced to about three days supply. A report from Cambridge shows that the coal question there is also one of anxiety and difficulty.

STATE REGISTRATION OF NURSES.

Captain Barnett (St. Pancras, S.W., C.U.) in moving the second reading of the Nurses Registration Bill, said that in the matter of State Registration of Nurses England lagged far behind many of our Colonies and many other countries. In England there was nothing more vague or undefined in the whole realm of medicine and surgery than the term nurse. There was a statutory definition of a medical practitioner, a dentist, a midwife, but a nurse might be the modern counterpart of a Florence Nightingale or of a Sarah Gamp. The Bill, which had been prepared at the instance of the Central Committee for the State Registration of Nurses, representing by delegation not less than 30,000 medical practitioners and nurses, accordingly proposed to establish a General Nursing Council for the training and registration of Nurses in the United Kingdom. The Council would be composed of persons appointed by the Privy Council, the Local Government Board, associations of registered medical practitioners, the nurse-training schools, and direct representatives of the nursing profession.

One important provision of the Bill was that when rules had been drawn up by the General Nursing Council for the regulation and discipline of the profession they would be subject to the approval of the Privy Council. Divisional boards were to be set up in England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland, and they would recommend times and places for local examinations. There would be an appeal from these divisional boards to the council. There would be a period of three years, during which any person who was bona fide carrying on the profession of a nurse would be entitled to claim registration. Persons who had been trained as nurses under regulations authorized by the Admiralty for the sick-berth staff of the Royal Navy or under regulations authorized by the Army Council for soldiers of the Royal Army Medical Corps would be entitled to be put upon the register. Registration was not compulsory, but once the standard had been established for qualification and training no man or woman would be able to designate himself or herself as a registered nurse unless he or she was registered. Under the Bill there would be standardization, which would be for the benefit of hospitals, the smaller ones especially. At the expiration of three years any person who claimed to be registered would be entitled to be registered provided that such person was a British subject and 21 years of age, and had had not less than three years' training under a definite curriculum prescribed by the council.

The Bill passed the second reading.

GERMANY'S GUARANTEE.

The Echo de Paris says that Germany will have to destroy the fortresses on the right bank of the Rhine for the guarantee of our security. The Allies will occupy the left bank of the Rhine until fall payment of the war indemnity is made. The experts have realised that Germany will not be not able to pay important sums during the first two years, but there will be an ascending quantity fixed in the annuities of payment, for instance, twenty years.

HAPPENINGS AT WAHN.

Sports and amusements have not been neglected by the 51st Bn. Royal Sussex Regt. stationed at Wahn. A meeting to organise the social side of our activities in this direction has been held and the following officers appointed: Major F. Cassels, D.S.O. (President), Capt. H. Horst (Bn. football), Capt. Collingbourn, M C. (Coy. football), Capt. Baylis (boxing), Capt. Gourlay (cross-country running), Capt. Thatcher (hockey), Capt. Story, M.C. (entertainments and athletic sports), Lieut. Hale (cricket.)

Soon after the Battalion arrived, an excellent string orchestra was organised which, under the able supervision of R.S.M. Blake, has provided us with some capital musical evenings.

The Wahn Follies, a talented concert party, have given successful concerts at Wahn and Siegburg.

Villain Acquitted.

The trial of Villain recommemced at 12—15 on Saturday, before a crowded audience. The public Prosecutor began his accusation by saying that since the death of Jaurès the face of the world had changed. Jaurès's ideas which yesterday seemed utopian are becoming realities. He further portrayed how the accused was influenced by the impulse of solitary meditations.

Me. Alexandre Zevaes, the barrister defending Villain protested against the fifty-six months of detention which the accused had to wait for the beginning of his trial.

Me. Henry Geraud examined the case from the point of view of psychology, and argued in favour of the irresponsibility of his client.

The President of the Tribunal asked the prisoner if he had anything to say. Villain answered, "I beg for mercy in the names of both the victim and my father. The grief of a widow and an orphan will not leave any happiness in my life."

The jury withdrew to deliberate at 6—35 p.m. They had two questions to answer. First, was Villain culpable of the voluntary manslaughter of Jaurès? Secondly, was this manslaughter committed with premeditation? At 7 p.m. the jury returned and the verdict was is the negative. Raoul Villain was acquitted.

R.A. BAND AT BONN.

That the Gunners filled the largest hall in Bonn on a Saturday afternoon, almost sacred to sport, shows how highly they regard their band. The Beethoven hall was twice packed to overflowing and the audience of nearly 4,000 soldiers, mostly Gunners, followed with the closest attention and appreciation two splendid programmes of music. The band was in rare form. Perhaps the outstanding item was the tone-poem "Finlandia," included in the programme by special request. The fact that such a classical composition received the reception which it did shows that a "popular" audience of soldiers prefer high class music when it is so exquisitely rendered as by the Royal Artillery Band.

To the great disappointment of Bonn the Band is unable to pay a second visit. The last opportunity of hearing the famous band is to-day at Cologne, where the last two concerts of the tour will be given.

"THE OLD ORDER CHANGETH GIVING PLACE TO NEW."

We in Germany, have now reached the conclusion of an epoch. Demobilisation is proceeding apace, so the authorities inform us, and new faces are springing up among us, in the shape of reinforcements from fabulous places, only connected in our minds with the time-table of the famous and much maligned Cologne-Boulogne express! We marched into Germany with mingled feelings of triumph, relief, and curiosity, and all who crossed the Rhine, under the eyes of the great ones, felt that here surely was the summit of their ambition. Now that peace is in sight at last, and we are settling down as the new army of occupation, the thoughts of many of was, who have soldiered from the beginning, turn to the past, and we review the tide of events which has led up to this final dénouement.

The spring of each year of the war has been fraught with many possibilities: we wonder now how we contrived to hold the Germans on our little corner of the western front. Those were the times of Festubert, Givenchy, Neuve Chapelle and Ypres. The war was very far away to us at home in those days, for the majority of us were still at home, eagerly waiting to take our turn in the game — our only fear was that the end might come before we had had our fling. We know better now!

Again in the spring of 1916, after a weary winter of watching and waiting, the fate of Europe trembled in the balance, while the name of Verdun was on every man's lips. Even then the final issue never appeared in doubt to the majority, and so we maintained our watch confident of ultimate success. Another year passed, and with it came the turn of the tide. We saw at last a tangible result of the Somme battle, in the retirement of the enemy to the Hindenburg line, while critics and enthusiasts at home once more hunted out their war maps and followed the changing front from day to day.

And so the tide of success flowed on throughout the year until the ebb set in once more, but now for the last time. Both sides tightened their belts for a struggle which must surely be final, and on the 21st March, 1918, the storm broke. Those of us who could not participate in this battle of battles watched the fight, and feared, and hoped, and rejoiced, with each reversal of the fortunes of war. We found the Germans invading the sanctity of our favourite places of amusement and rest billets of the preceding years; we saw our gains on Paschaendaele ridge voluntarily evacuated, and we sorrowed for the multitude of lives sacrificed apparently to no purpose; we saw the skeleton of Ypres, city of a thousand memories, almost lost to us; and then like a thunderbolt, came the counterstroke and our unbroken record of successes, culminating in that never-to-be-forgotten march into Germany — our journey's end at last.

And so in the evenings, we sit in our comfortable armchairs in our new surroundings and review the past and ponder over the Future. Those of as who are now returning to a civilian régime have nothing but regrets for the life we are leaving. Had we missed the past four years, our feelings might have been akin to those of the laggards to whom King Henry V. referred before Agincourt, who "shall count their manhood cheap, that fought not with us on St. Crispin's day".

It only remains now for the final army of occupation to get into its stride and settle down to keep the "watch." We "occupants" have a thousand and one problems to confront as — the black bogey of Bolshevism is flaunted before our eyes, — we are warned of propaganda and "impropaganda" galore by which our feet are to be turned from the paths of order and discipline. We have to establish our comfort under new conditions: not a very difficult matter, since we may demand what we desire. We have to consider the possibilities of sport and recreation for the summer — such trivial matters as the turfing of a cricket pitch for the coming season, will occupy the minds of our experts; we discuss the possibilities of grass tennis-courts on ground which at present resembles the allotments on Wandsworth Common; we hail with enthusiasm the prospect of a day's golf at Cologne, although the versions we hear concerning the condition of the course are lurid in the extreme.

Thus the metamorphosis of the 2nd Army into the Army of occupation takes place. Where we shall be in a year's time, no man may say; but we face the future with the confidence that all will be well with us. We are here as a guarantee of good faith, and we mean to keep the watch on the Rhine until another war is made impossible, for some time, and until all accounts are paid in full.

And so, as we stand here, at the parting of the ways, perhaps we may be forgiven for indulging, in company with those who are now leaving us, in a soliloquy on the many vicissitudes we have passed through together. We only look forward to the occasions on which we shall meet in the future and fight our battles over again, and finally we hope, or at any rate the more peaceable among us hope that the next war will be sufficiently far distant to see the majority of us installed as armchair critics, rather than once more active participators in the delights of war as fought in the present day!

THE RED TRIANGLE ON THE RHINE.

WALTER ASHLEY.

It was a great privilege for the Y.M.C.A. to be invited to come up to Germany with the Army of Occupation last December, and the Association is hoping under these new conditions to be of very real service to the troops who will be stationed here for the coming months.

It may be of interest to the readers of The Cologne Post to be given an outline of the work of the Y.M.C.A. as it is already established with the Rhine Army, and some general idea of its plans for the future.

When the Association was first asked to organise work in the Army Areas in France, it seemed best to establish Centres of Recreation at the most central points, and to put into each of them a more or less permanent staff.

Centres of this kind catered for the needs of all units passing backwards and forwards to the trenches, and might one week have the men of quite a different division about it than it had the week before. As the work developed, however, it was found necessary to organise the work on a Divisional basis rather than by localities and some time before the Second Army moved to Germany, the Association had a secretary attached to each Division with a small staff, which moved about with the Division very much in the same way as a regular Army unit.

When the Army moved to the Rhine, therefore, a small group of Y.M.C.A. workers moved with each Division, and were able to open up Centres immediately on their arrival. In this way, by the end of February some forty Y.M.C.A. Centres had been started in Germany throughout the Divisions, as well as one or two big Centres in towns like Cologne and Bonn.

Throughout this time, however, the Y.M.C.A. was obliged to continue practically the whole of its existing work in France and Belgium, and was able to afford very little, either in the way of personnel or equipment for this new work on the Rhine. By the middle of March, the situation in both these respects became much easier in France. Some of the most experienced workers were able to be spared for Germany, and it was possible to move practically the whole of the Central Equipment Store from Havre to Cologne.

With more and more of the resources of the Y.M.C.A. in France becoming available each week for Germany, it hopes to be able to develop work for the troops on a much bigger scale than was ever possible while the war was on, and it was faced with all sorts of difficulties with regard to supplies, transport, and personnel.

The work which the Y.M.C.A. hopes to carry out during the next few months may be said to fall under five main heads viz.: —

1.—CANTEEN WORK. It has been proved by experience that a Y.M.C.A. Centre without a canteen is of little use to the troops, and therefore, through no volition of its own, but through the sheer necessity of the demands made upon it, the Association has had to organise a very important business side to its activities, and get out from England thousands of cases of the kind of supplies for which the men ask.

Every Recreation Centre with the Rhine Army will, therefore, have a canteen which it is hoped to keep supplied with all the more important requirements of the troops. To look after these canteens, the Association is fortunate in having at its disposal a large number of English ladies who have been doing the same sort of work for several years in France, and who are delighted to have the opportunity of serving the men in any way they can.

2.-ENTERTAINMENTS AND RECREATION. Almost all Y.M.C.A. Centres in this area will be large halls which are already equipped with a platform. These halls will be fitted out with tables, chairs, magazines, newspapers, and writing materials. Note paper and envelopes will be given free to any men who ask for it, as has been done in the past. Games such as draughts and chess will be available.

Every Centre will have a piano, and, in most cases, also a gramophone.

Every Centre will have at least one billiard table; some, two or three.

Every Centre, however small, will be furnished with a small library from which books may be taken out on payment of a small deposit; and the larger Centres, such as Cologne, Bonn, Duren etc., will be supplied with a large library with all kinds of books, in the charge of an experienced lady librarian.

It is hoped to be able to organise some form of entertainment in all the larger halls every night of the week, an average programme consisting of two concerts, two cinema shows, one popular lecture, and one whist drive or games competition, with a service each Sunday evening.

Besides the portable cinemas, with which each Division is being supplied, and which will tour round the Brigades and give shows in the Y.M.C.A. Halls, the Association has already taken over a large number of civilian cinemas, and will be taking over more still, so that at the larger Centres men will be able to see pictures every night of the week, if they do not wish to go elsewhere, or there is not sufficient room for them in the main hall.

A small permanent Lena Ashwell Concert Party will be established in Cologne, also a small permanent Dramatic Party, and both will tour round from place to place giving entertainments to the troops. There will also be a certain number of first-class entertainers, who will tour round the centres in the same way.

3.—EDUCATIONAL WORK. The Y. M. C. A. hopes to be able to supplement what the Army is doing along the lines of education and to co-operate with the education officers. With this end in view, all the larger libraries will be furnished with a certain number of educational books, which may be freely taken out by men anxious to study any particular subject.

Lectures organised by the Y.M.C.A. will be popular rather than academic, but it is hoped that they will interest men in education and lead them on to make a fuller use of the facilities put at their disposal by the Army.

4.—ATHLETIC WORK The American Y.M.C.A. has most generously lent the British Y.M.C.A. half a dozen of its most experienced athletic directors, and these men are now with the Rhine Army helping to organise all kinds of sports and athletics.

The Association has at its disposal large quantities of athletic material, such as footballs, cricket sets, boxing gloves, etc., and this will all be distributed among the various Centres so that it can be of the greatest possible use to the largest number of troops.

In time, it is hoped to organise tournaments and competitions throughout the Divisions in co-operation with the Officers who are responsible for the athletic work in the Army. In this connection, it was a great privilege to be able to help in the organisation of the Army Boxing Tournament, and to put the Central Y.M.C.A. in Cologne at the disposal of the Army for the purpose.

5.—RELIGIOUS WORK. The Y.M.C.A. is a Christian organisation, and its aim is that all its work should be actuated by a religious motive, and that all its Centres should have a strong healthy atmosphere in which men of all temperaments may feel at home. It does not wish to force any particular religious views on men who do not wish to have them, but it is its purpose that any man desiring to live straight and keep away from the temptations which he will come up against in Germany, may find in the Y.M.C.A. Centres the help that he needs, and plenty of healthy activities with which to fill his time.

As has been the custom in France, a united service will be held in all the huts on Sunday evenings, to which men of all denominations are welcome and at which men of all schools of thought may find it possible to worship God in their own way.

It will be the aim of the Y.M.C.A. in Germany to co-operate with chaplains of all denominations in every way possible and to put its huts, whenever practicable, at the disposal of the chaplains on Sunday mornings.

This short sketch will give any reader interested some idea of what the Y.M.C.A. has in mind for the coming months in Germany, and in what sort of ways it hopes to be of service to the men. In future articles, various sides of the work will be from time to time treated with more detail, and by these and by the regular publication of the programme of events in the Y.M.C.A. Central, Cologne, and in other Huts round and about the town, readers will be kept in touch with the developments of the work.

2nd ARMY AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, BONN.

FROM A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

This college was established in Bonn on December 31st. 1918, and the first course for forty officers and eighty other ranks commenced on January 11th, 1919.

The college was thus the first educational institution, under the auspices of the Army, to open on the Rhine. The first course was intended largely as an experiment, and, while it was hoped to give the best agricultural education possible in a month, one of the main objects was to keep officers and men occupied and interested during the anxious and tedious period before demobilization.

At first it was not certain just what kind of teaching could be given, and there was a tendency to confine the work to chemistry and botany as applied to agriculture, and to insist upon the purely theoretical as well as on the elementary character of the course.

An office was started in an empty room in one of the buildings of the Agricultural Academy of the University of Bonn, and a lecture-room and a chemical laboratory were arranged for.

After about a week, during which time the botanical department, the institute for the study of soils, and one or two other facilities were discovered, the whole syllabus, time-table and scheme of studies were altered, and classes were commenced in field crops, live stock, farm management and other practical subjects. Arrangements were also made for students to visit the academical farms at Dikopshof and Marhof periodically, to study the live stock and to see the various farm operations carried out.

The second course was, therefore, taken much more seriously, and this was further justified by the fact that a large number of applications, including some from students who had attended the first course, were received for places in the second course, and many of these applicants were men who had already spent many years as practical farmers, as gardeners, or as farm labourers. It is, then, clear that there is room for a college which can give an elementary training in agriculture, and that classes in more advanced work, if started, are likely to be well attended.

For the past six or eight weeks the Second Army Agricultural College has been in a position to give this serious and useful training. Of course, it is not pretended that anyone can learn to be a farmer in six weeks, but a farmer can learn a great deal about the scientific principles underlying his work in this time, and a beginner can get such grounding in the theoretical and practical branches of farming as will make him a better farmer than he would have been had he not taken the course. Arrangements are being made by the home authorities to accept a course at this college as excusing students from a part of their agricultural education in colleges in the United Kingdom.

During the first course the work was complicated by the frequent loss by demobilization of not only students but even of the lecturers and demonstrators; in the latter cases too, usually on very short notice. Even now, telegrams are being received almost daily demanding the instant return of officers, N.C.O.s and men for either demobilization or repatriation, and we live in daily fear that our adjutant or some important lecturer or demonstrator will be torn from us to get along as best he may among the patriots who are just now making England interesting with their strikes and rumours of strikes, leaving us to bemoan his loss and to carry out his duties as best we may. Fortunately, we have been able to avail ourselves of the services of excellent lecturers in most agricultural subjects, and have been successful up to the present in finding substitutes for the demobilized ones.

The buildings of the Landwirtschaftliche Akademie of the University of Bonn, one of the most modern and best equipped of German institutions of its kind, are at the disposal of the college, and most of the departments are already in use by the students. Thus students who are farmers in civilian life have the unique opportunity of comparing English with German practice, and all have the advantages which accrue from an equipment on a much more lavish scale than is known in our country. It has been said that the German goes in for the theoretical rather than for the practical aspect of agriculture, but we do not hesitate to say that, had we the funds available in England to build and equip such colleges as the one in Bonn, we also should devote more time and study to the theoretical side of the science. In any case our students have now the chance to try both methods. Mainly theoretical work while here in the Army, and the more practical courses when they get home.

English and German students use the same lecture rooms and laboratories, but the time-tables are so arranged that neither college clashes with the other.

Besides fine, airy, and well-lighted lecture rooms, and well equipped laboratories, we have the use of museums filled with specimens, apparatus, models, and other exhibits illustrating all branches of agriculture and agricultural research.

At the farm at Dikopshof students have the opportunity of seeing the results of experiments in the feeding of animals and in the use of different kinds of fertilizers. All the machinery at the farm is electrically driven, and there is a workshop at the college for the repair of agricultural implements and machinery of which there is a good selection of examples and models.

Besides the regular work, it is usual to get occasional lectures on special subjects from outside sources, and once a week papers are read by students who have had agricultural experience in various parts of the world. The discussions which follow these papers are often of great value.

The first course extended over a month, but as this was found to be inadequate to give more than a very meagre account of the various subjects, it was decided to make all subsequent courses of six weeks duration. The current course ends on the 2nd of April and the third begins on April 12.

The Army Commander has twice honoured the college with a visit, and many other distinguished visitors have called either at the college or at the farm or at both. The college will shortly become the "Agricultural Wing" of the new Army Science College at Bonn, but it is hoped that the change will add to rather than diminish its usefulness. One advantage will accrue, that the lecturers will be less liable to sudden demobilisation.

Officers and others who wish to visit the college can usually obtain permission to do so, but they are requested to arrange, if possible, to come on Wednesday or Saturday afternoons, as it interferes less with the college work at these times than at others.

The Australian Commonwealth Minister for Defence states that under the Defence Act any employer who refuses to re-instate a returned soldier is liable to a fine one thundred pounds sterling. The courts are empowered to order any such fine which might be imposed to be paid to the employé refused re-instatement.

Knutsford Prison, recently coverted into a Theological University, has been secured for one year for the purpose of training exsoldiers and sailors for the Anglican Ministry. Last week 170 officers and other ranks began training.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

Another C. O. "Demob'd."

The 6th Bn. London Regiment has lost an excellent sportsman by the departure of Lieut.-Col. C. B. Benson, D.S.O., who commanded the Battalion in the field since the latter part of 1917. He previously had a distinguished career dating back to the Boer War, his D.S.O. being won in South Africa. Just before the great war, Colonel Benson was King's Messenger in Germany, and had the experience of taking the last despatches in peace time out of Berlin.

Colonel Benson's Popularity.

Writing on the subject of Colonel Benson's departure, a correspondent says, "He was a born soldier, and it fell to his lot to lead this (6th London) Battalion in many a hard fought fight. In August, 1918, he commanded the battalion during that wonderful time when Marlard Wood and Chipilly Heights (on the Somme) fell into our hands, causing the enemy to commence the retreat which ended on 11th November last in complete victory for the Allies. For this, Colonel Benson was awarded a bar to his D.S.O. Officers and men gave the Colonel a great send-off, and we all feel that a good and true friend has left us. We shall always look back with pleasure to the days of hard service spent with a noble comrade in a great cause." To be deserving of such eulogy, I imagine the Colonel must indeed be one of the "he's a jolly good fellow, and so say all of us" type.

Water Polo at Bonn.

I hear that "A" Company, 10th Corps Signals are making great strides with their water polo team, and fresh talent is coming to light almost every day. Swimming enthusiasts stationed in or near Bonn are undoubtedly in luck's way, for it would be difficult to find more luxurious accommodation than that at Bonn baths. There are facilities there for both summer and winter swimming.

D.A.C. COMPETITION AT LULSDORF.

No. 1 Section of the D.A.C. held on attractive boxing competition at Lulsdorf. Results:

Dvr. Birtwhistle, beat Dvr. Kirk on points, with height and experience in his favour.

Bdr. Grenville beat Dvr. Sterne after a fast and furious bout.

Dvr. Hales and Dvr. Jackson had to box an extra round, Hales just gaining the verdict.

Dvr. Taylor, who conceded much weight, beat Dvr. Glower.

The best contest of the evening was the outcome of a challenge issued by S. S. Cpl. Bailey, taken up by Dvr. Quinn, who is new to the Section. He showed considerable ability and won on his merits. Captain G. H. MacEwen, D.C.M., refereed, Gnr. Jackson acting as timekeeper, and Cpl. G. Bailey as M. C.

HIGHLAND DIVISIONAL COMPETITION.

OPLADEN ECHOES.

Under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A., a highly interesting and instructive lecture on the "Blocking of Zeebrugge Harbour" illustrated by lime-light views, was delivered in the Opladen Cinema. The lecturer, Prof. Sandford Terry, D.C.L., Aberdeen, dealt with his subject in a comprehensive, lucid, and masterly fashion, outlining in detail the chief features of that hazardous enterprise.

As was anticipated, the arrival of reinforcements has resulted in the desired augmentation of the Cinema House Orchestra in Opladen. The members now total five. The services of a 'cellist would be highly esteemed.

The "Triards," a deservedly successful company of amusement, favoured Opladen with a visit, and submitted a programme that could not fail to please the most fastidious taste in the realm of soldiers' amusements. Choruses, solos, trios, recitations were contributed by the pierrôts in the most accomplished style, and provoked the highest admiration from a crowded house. Outstanding numbers were the ventriloquial entertainment and the recitation "Lasca." A sketch which may be termed "Domestic Strife" created much merriment.

The 131 Heavy Battery R.G.A. Opladen, has the honour of possessing the champion football team in the 4th Brigade. At the "Triards" concert on Wednesday the 26th inst., the members of the team were presented with silver medals, Colonel Lyon making the presentation. The successful team comprises the following: Lieut. Kairns, Driver Ross, Gunner Davis, Bdr. Ward, Bdr. Marshall, Gunner Spencer, Gunner Baird, Bdr. Stevens, Signaller Bowness, Gunner Thomson, and Bdr. Horne. The 131st team lost only one match in the competition, being beaten by the Midlands in the last game. The Midlands were the runners up.

By the way, the interesting news was given at the "Triards" concert at Opladen on Wednesday, that Colonel Lyon was giving up command of the 4th Brigade, and at the same time they were losing the name of the 4th Brigade. Important changes were impending. A brother officer paid a high compliment to the popular Colonel who received three hearty cheers from the soldiers.

Demobilization was on Sunday 29th inst. set going in Opladen area, but from all accounts the process was to be somewhat prolonged. One man Any day, however, a a human may get their tickets. "Hope springs eternal". The threatened strikes at home are understood to be largely responsible for the delay.

M. Raemaekers has returned to his home in Bath and is rapidly recuperating from the severe attack of pneumonia which he contracted while visiting in Holland.

"GRAND NATIONAL" CORRECTION.

Owing to faulty transcription of a telegraphic message the runner-up in the Grand National was given in yesterday's issue as Ballinearroona. This should have been Ballyboggan, the correct placings being

SERGEANTS V. OFFICERS, AT KERPEN.

Elated by the success of their inter-company Sergeant's whist league, in which "C" Company carried off the honours, the Sergeants of the 5th Bn. Gordon Highlanders challenged the Officers of the battalion. The match was played at Kerpen in the Sergeants ness, and resulted in the defeat of the Officers by 42 points, the scores being 334 against 292. Hospitality was a feature of the enjoyable function.

186th TRENCH MORTAR BATTERY.

One of those spontaneous little functions which constitute a link between old comrades took place at Hochkirchen, when Capt. F.H. Threappleton, who is about to be demobilised was presented with a gold hunter watch.

Capt. Threappleton has commanded the battery since its formation, and it was the foundation members who wished to express their appreciation of him.

S.-M. H. Hirst, D.C.M., in asking the Captain's acceptance of the gift, made a happy little speech, and in acknowledgment Capt. Threappleton recalled the many happy and strenuous times they had spent together.

Capt. Watt, of the Gordons, the new O.C., also spoke.

14th INFANTRY BRIGADE.

52nd KING'S (LIVERPOOL) RGT. 13th KING'S (L'POOL) REGT.

This match was played at Ober Cassel on 28th March, and despite the bad condition of the ground some good football was witnessed. The 52nd King's won the toss and elected to play with the wind. Good forward play by the visitors resulted in their scoring in the first few minutes of the game. The home team were kept on the defensive, and the goal-keeper made some brilliant saves. Captain Carson headed a beautiful goal, and a few minutes afterwards added a third. Half time arrived with the visitors leading by three goals to nil. In the second half, the home team were outplayed although they strove very hard to score. The 13th found the net on three more occasions bringing the final score to: 13th King's, 6 goals; 52nd King's nil.

BRITISH AND FRENCH AT FOOTBALL.

The result of the football match between the British Army and the French Army was a win for the Britishers by two goals to one. Douglas scored both the British goals.

SPORT IN A NUTSHELL.

Sapper Hallsworth and Driver Attack will represent the 460th Field Coy., R.E. in the Cologne tournament.

An interesting football match between the Officers and Sergeants of the 5th Bn. Gordon Highlanders resulted in a draw, each team scoring two goals.

The 51st Bn. Royal Sussex Regt. commenced an inter-company football competition with an exciting match between "W" and "X" Companies. The final score was 2-2. In the same competition, "Y" Company defeated "Z" Company by three goals to nil.

A mounted paper chase for Officers of the 5th Bn. Gordon Highlanders proved most successful a day or two ago, despite the very heavy state of the naturally unsuitable riding ground at Kerpen.

"Three all" was the final score in a "soccer" match between 50th Bde. R.F.A. and 4th Bde. R.G.A.

After a strenuous game, the Cadre of the 1st West Yorks defeated 186th T.M. Battery by the odd goal in three, in a hockey match at Hochkirchen.

24th BRIGADE R.F.A. HUNT.

The meet was at Schloss, Liblar, where a large field assembled. Gipsy's Spinney produced a lively customer, who only faced the open after difficulty.

A long run ensued over a good line of country with several obstacles. The hounds were at fault on several occasions but, the scent holding, the line was carried beyond the Shrine on the Weilerswist-Bruhl road, where nothing more was to be done. A good hunting run of an hour and eight minutes on a cold, spring afternoon, put all in the best of spirits. J.A.C.M.

1st M.G.C. Inter-Company Football "D" beat "A" in Final Tie.

The first half of this match at Flertzheim, on Sunday, was fast and interesting. "D" Company had slightly the better of the game, and Scott scored their first goal with a fast drive. Prior to the interval, "D" Company had the misfortune to lose one of their players who took no further part in the game. Nevertheless, in the second half they maintained the upper hand, and Molloy eventually rushed through another goal. Result: "D" Coy., 2; "A" Coy., 0.

SÉANCE AT SOLINGEN.

Prof. Alfred Capper gave one of his fascinating séances at Solingen, and, as usual, the crowded audience was completely mystified. Rumour hath it in the 50th Bde. R.F.A., that Prof. Capper is not in the running when it comes to the location of Venus pencils and new magazines.

YOUR PAPER.

In these days the appearance of a new daily newspaper calls for some explanation, involving the why and the wherefore of its birth. At Home surrounded by the best and "straightest" Press in the world, the public reasonably exclaim "but why another?", and at Home the answer is not easy. With us the matter is different. The Cologne Post has been an obvious necessity from the moment we first set foot on enemy ground. Those who were in the vanguard found themselves amid utterly foreign surroundings not merely "foreign" in the sense that they were not British — for we had become accustomed to France, Belgium and other "furrin parts" — but foreign in atmosphere and psychology. Our aim, then, is to make those who are here, and those who are yet to come, feel more at home. What better way than by having a newspaper printed in English and giving British news, an institution characteristic of practically every home in the British Isles.

We fully recognise that our great dailies have done their best to supply the want; but, despite the marvellous organization of the Army Postal Service, the bringing of material to a country so far from Home, by a transport that is not yet ideal, has proved a great handicap. The Cologne Post, by getting its news over the wires and through the ether hopes to evade this handicap.

The existence of the invincible "esprit de corps" — esprit d'armée — which has meant, and means, so much to our army life, provides another reason for the birth of our Newspaper. We must have news from Home. As Britishers, we need to know, exactly and speedily, what the world is doing; but beyond these, we want to know what is going on in the other parts of the Army of the Rhine. From St. Vith to Opladen, from the frontline to Aachen, news travels very slowly; yet pals who were with us in the Salient, who fought alongside us at Dammery, are playing games, doing stunts and all that makes up our present-day army life, and we want to know something about it. This is to be a special feature of The Cologne Post, a feature which can be provided by no other paper. One saw "The Chequers" at Roubaix, and wishes, naturally, to see them again; yet one might be at some outlying village and easily remain ignorant of the fact that they were giving their most excellent show at the "Deutsches Theatre". Your morning paper will tell you all this kind of thing. Being in a more serious frame of mind, you want to know what lectures are on in Bonn or Cologne, or what is being done at the Army College. Look in The Cologne Post — its function is to tell you. And so on with the thousand and one other things — sports, amusements, acquisition of knowledge, what to see, where and when to see it and what it will cost you, what is to-day's value of "eine mark". These will be published daily, "straight from the horse's mouth", in The Cologne Post.

If the paper fails to publish what you want to know, write and demand an answer; for it is your paper, and its duty is to give you what you want — except perhaps such things as, say, demobilization.

One great disappointment we sustained when it became palpable that we could not fulfil our original intention of reproducing photographs daily. We had hoped to illustrate each day all the local races, footer matches, boxing shows, army stunts etc., but the German printing machinery available, working at fast, newspaper rate, is not yet up to it This was a great blow, but if we receive sufficient support and encouragement in the matter, we hope soon to be publishing a supplement, at least once a week, in wich pictures will be the news-bearers. This idea is altogether en l'air at present and would cost money, although it is suggested that such a supplement should be sold separately at its own price. For the present, we can only do line drawings, but with many excellent artists in the Rhine Army we hope that the supply of cartoons, etc., will not be stinted. If you see a funny incident, or imagine one, draw it and let the other fellows enjoy it as much as you have done. In cases where difficulty may occur in obtaining suitabte ink, etc., we will always do our best to supply such materials.

As regards our other features, we hope in the "magazine" page (p. 2) to have much that will interest and amuse, the lighter matter acting as an antidote to the Editorials. In our "Letter-Box" column we are always quite ready, within the limits of our space to insert any comment, any "grouse", any opinion, so long as it is understood we take no responsibility for it, or that it does not blatantly transgress the soldier's multilogue, K. R.

For local news we have organized an enthusiastic corps of experts and amateurs such as should keep us all in touch with every tittle of news of general interest throughout the entire Army. If you should happen to find that there is a gap, fill it!

To summarise. The sole aim of The Cologne Post is to prove to every reader that it is his paper, to prove itself a necessity in his life. The latest news from Home and elsewhere; local news gleaned from every corner of the occupied area; good reliable sporting news; the facts about education and other amusements; occasional notes on matters of general interest which appear in the several Army publications; correspondence, intercommunication between persons, units and formations; articles on the arts and sciences; etc., etc., are all receiving special attention, and if The Cologne Post fails to deliver the goods — help it. Only by the co-operation of all can such a journal, a daily newspaper, hope to thrive. The address of the paper is imprinted above, and if you have any suggestions to make, any assistance to give, any complaints to air, write to the Editor — or come and see him, he is unarmed. Constructive criticism is frequently almost as useful as actual labour, and only by receiving such criticism, in addition to the labour, can we hope fully to maintain our right to call The Cologne Post Your paper.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE PELMAN INSTITUTE

My dear "Pelman",

I venture upon a letter. The last of a correspondence si intime. Perhaps Lord Chesterfield's son felt as I do, when his famous epistles ceased and he crossed swords with the world — armed with paternal wisdom.

You ask me — who have bared my naked soul to you — what have been your most helpful features? I don't hesitate: — Your cheery optimism: the danger-signal you hoist at the word "Drift". May I bore you to tears with a little human document?

The downs and ups of the Boer War made supsequent peace-time parades and military routine seem futile. I changed the saddle for a secretaryship. For seven strenuous years I worked and pushed and wedged. I ate, drank, slept, lived for that big business. I became a director. I became Managing Director. For five years I declared dividends. My Rolls-Royce took me to office and factory. Two days a week I hunted or played golf. All was for the best in that best of worlds where money was to be spent, not hoarded. But—it was drifting. I saw no writing on the wall. Why row hard when the race had been won?

One August morning in 1914 "Boot and Saddle" sounded. I gave up everything and was soon across the Channel. Mid-1915 saw me back in England in hospital for six months. From then on — Home Service!

Do you know what "H. S." means to keen soldiers? It means breaking their spirits. Depression, insomnia and all the salt of life damped. In good time self-worry and pessimism opened the door to the old trouble and the hospital ward. "Drift" again.

Then you came, my friend, when there seemed little hope and less desire to begin life afresh at 50. Lesson 1, I bucked up, for there was a bright little message in grey. Lesson 2, self analysis and the meaning of "drift". Lesson 3, I was an optimist. The clock began going backwards. I wrote cheery letters to old business friends I had neglected. I was no longer, it would seem, a dull dog. People called and dicussed future possibilities. So the Course ran through.

Behold me full of courage, sincerity, enthusiasm, and with a definite purpose. Others perceive it. I know that by their faces. You have demonstrated rare qualities and pointed out the way to add a pretty conceit to personality. I thank you. As to "Drift" — the very word has been hounded forth, as R.L.S. would say, with all the circumstance of contumely. It is "napoo", as my batman has it.

Unlike the Spaniard who asks himself — "Shall I be as brave to-morrow as I am to-day?" I say: — "My friend Pelman says — 'You can be'. I shall be."

Good-bye and Good Luck.

Believe me, Yours devotedly, but never drifting

"Student D 11279."

The above is typical of many letters received from Pelmanists. Until you have investigated Pelmanism — until you come to a realisation of what it means to you personally — you can possess no conception of the advantages and pleasures you are missing by neglecting to take it up.

In the Army and Navy 100,000 Officers and Men have adopted Pelmanism, including 150 Generals and Admirals.

Many military students have frankly and decidedly stated that they owe their promotion to the direct aid of Pelmanism.

Full particulars of the Pelman Course are given in "Mind and Memory," which also contains a complete descriptive Synopsis of the 12 lessons. A copy of this interesting booklet, together with a full reprint of "Truth's" famous Report on the work of the Pelman Institute, and particulars showing how you can secure the complete Course at a reduced fee, may be obtained gratis and post free by any reader of the "Cologne Post" who applies to the Pelman Institute, 496, Pelman House, Bloomsbury Street, London, W.C.1.

AN UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIAL.

NEWS IN BRIEF.

The Queen of Roumania, who has been spending a busy fortnight in England returned to Paris on Saturday. Among other English institutions visited by the popular Queen, were the Red Triangle Huts of the Y. M. C. A., for the work of which she proffered the highest praise.

In the Belgian Chamber, on Friday last, the question of reparation for Hun barbarities was debated. Among other things, the Official Reporter said that about 125,000 men had been deported by the German military authorities, 6,000 civilians had died from the effects of German barbarities, while the number of war orphans amounted to nearly 7,000. He estimated the claimable indemnity at about 900,000,000 francs.

Louis Raemaeker's daughter has evidently inherited her talented father's gift for drawing. At the Bath High School speech day on Friday last she was presented with a diploma for passing, with distinction, the drawing examination of the Art Advising Board.

A Daily Graphic correspondent at Berne reports that news from an authoritative source shows the malign methods followed by the Bolshevist leaders to maintain national conflicts. At a conference of the Inner Council of the Central Russian Soviet, which met at Moscow at the end of 1918 and included Lenin, Trotzky, Radek, Tchitcherin, Jonkovsky and Rokovsky, certain elaborate programmes were drawn up for the use and guidance of Bolshevist agents in other European countries.

DEGREES OF MERIT.

It is merely a platitude to say that there are many officers and men in the Army who are deserving of rewards but have received none. Orders and crosses and mentions and things of that sort cannot be tossed broadcast to the crowd, though that, apparently, has been tried once or twice; still, that is no reason why good work should go unrecognised. Why not, therefore, award honorary degrees? I for one should be delighted to read in "The Times", —

Pte. T. R. Smith was yesterday made a Fellow of the Royal Geographical Society for topographical research in the Hell Fire Corner and Polygon Wood sectors. Mr. Smith read a remarkable paper on the numerous waterholes to be found in this area. Their persistency and uniform shape led him to the conclusion that they belonged to the Second Iron Age, and that the Ancients played a game known as "barrage" or "strafe", in which they flung pieces of metal at each other. This was confirmed by the constant discovery of small empty metal boxes, inscribed "fray bentos" (meaning, well-fought), from which arises the more modern term, "bully".

2nd Lt. B. R. Asshat received at Oxford, yesterday, the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. He is acknowledged to be an expert in the bumphile side of military procedure, and achieved a cause célèbre in the famous "Amendments to Trench Stores, (Eighty Minutes)", which caused the retirement of more than one Corps Commander. He is the author of that well-known jeu d'esprit, "For information and necessary action, please".

Cpl. L. E. D. Swinger was the happy recipient at Sheffield, yesterday, of the honorary degree of Doctor of Medicine. His knowledge of the symptoms of every disease in the Army is unique. In his indefatigable research work he, throughout the fighting, subjected himself to every military ailment from silent indigestion to shell shock, and his name became a byword in the medical services. He never spared himself, whether in the humble task of testing the quality of the rum ration of his less fortunate comrades, or in leading the way into the depths of the deepest dugout.

C. S. M. F. Allin was made a Fellow of the Literary Society at Belfast on the 21st. Mr. F. Allin's unique additions to the vocabulary of our mother tongue have come to stay, and in the art of personal description he has no equal. His latest book, "The Carry On", will command the attention of all and sundry.

Col. Binan Jittars, D. S. O., M. C., has just been made a member of the Royal Academy. His famous design of "The Leave Warrant", is well known and very popular throughout the Forces. While it is perhaps a little too rigid in some particulars, the wealth of detail is marvellous. There is an increasing demand for copies with which the publishers seem unable to cope. It is the one souvenir that every soldier, be he officer or other rank, invariably takes home.

S. R. D.

Two Germans who were prominent London society men in pre-war days, Count Metternich and Count Nettlebladt, and Baron Von Plessen, formerly an undergraduate at Oxford, have been repatriated. All three were interned in England and last year figured in a sensational attempt to escape.

The Paris Chamber of Deputies, at the and of an all-night sitting, rejected by 362 votes to 131 the motion of the Socialist Deputy Renaudel for a reduction of the military credits, which called for 350 million francs for the second quarter of this year. Rejection of the motion is equivalent to a vote of confidence in the Government.

Herr Erzberger has been specially sent by the German Government to negotiate at Spa with Marshall Foch about the question of landing Polish troops at Danzig.

OPERA HOUSE TROUBLES.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir, — Will you please allow me a little of your space to draw attention to a matter which in my opinion is important. I refer to the behaviour of our troops, particularly the officers, at the Cologne Opera House.

I do not know whether the majority go because they like the Opera, or because it is the thing to do, but a large number seem to have very little idea of how to behave in such a place.

I have been to the Opera three times, and each time the performance has been greatly disturbed by officers coming in late. This necessitates a large amount of talking, striking matches, etc., before the seats are found, and they invariably have to pass in front of other people which spoils their enjoyment of the music. Surely it is not too much to ask that officers should be punctual in such a case.

Again at the end of the Opera, during the finale, which is often one of the most enjoyable parts of the performance, a number of officers always get up and make for the door so as to get out before the rush. Apparently, the reason for this is the difficulty of getting a meal at the E. F. C. if one is late, but even that does not excuse anyone for disturbing the enjoyment of a large number of people. Anyone who really enjoys the Opera for its own sake will put up with a good deal of inconvenience in the way of hurried meals, etc., rather than miss any part of the performance. In my battalion we have arranged to leave a cold supper for any who go to the Opera, and we have to fast till we get back here to Bonn, usually at 10 p. m. But it is worth it, and we don't mind. For anyone who does not appreciate the Opera, and is unwilling to inconvenience himself a little, the remedy is obvious. Tickets are not forced on anyone, and there is seldom any difficulty in finding applicants.

Another view of the matter is that it lets us down very badly in the eyes of the Germans, who whatever else they may or may not be, are a musical people, and know how to behave at the Opera, which is more, apparently, than a large number of Englishmen know.

I hope this letter may draw their attention to the matter. It is in many cases only thoughtlessness, and once they realize that they are spoiling other people's pleasure, as well as giving the whole army, and Englishmen in general, a bad name, they will act more reasonably.

G. L. S., Major.

DON'TS FOR OPERA-GOERS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir, — As you no doubt intend that your paper should be of educational value as well as of interest, I forward to you the attached „Donts for Opera-Goers" for the benefit of all concerned.

1. Don't, if you're late, think you're unlucky to miss the Overture. It's the people you disturb who are unlucky.
2. Don't, if you're late, argue about seats.
3. Don't be late.
4. Don't go to the Opera if you want to talk. There are plenty of cafes in the town, not to mention the Officers' Club.
5. Don't go to the Opera if you have a bad cough. Go to H--ospital.
6. Don't pretend to be polite when you offer the other fellow the front seat in the box. The back seats are much more comfortable, and most people know it.
7. Don't applaud until the Orchestra has quite finished.
8. Don't wait until the Opera has commenced, before you read "Comic Cuts." Match-striking during the performance annoys the rest of the audience.
9. Don't accompany the Orchestra.
10. Don't forget that the performance is given for the enjoyment of everyone, not for your especial benefit.

MAGISTRATE MURDERED IN IRELAND

"A CORRIDOR OF FLAME AND LITTLE WATER"

COST OF THE ARMY OF OCCUPATION

COAL COMMISSIONERS CEASE AND MINERS START WORK

ARMY OF OCCUPATION COST

WINSTON CHURCHILL'S FINE SPEECH.

Speaking in support of the final reading of the Military (Service) Bill in the House of Commons yesterday, the Secretary of State for War, the Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, said that the cost of the Army of Occupation for 1919 was estimated at £ 133,000,000 (one hundred and thirty three million pounds) after deducting twenty millions recoverable from Germany.

The amount recoverable by the salvage of material etc. was expected to be two or three times as much as the cost of the Army of Occupation for the current year.

"From the White Sea to the Caspian," said the Minister there is a smouldering corridor of flame and little water." We are in direct peril and immediately we brought back our Armies we should be powerless to influence the course of events in Europe.

The presence of our troops in regions adjacent to Italy was due to the request of both parties in the lamentable differences between the Italians and Jugo-Slavs. They were there to prevent troubles between the population in places where troops of no other nation would be welcome. No troops anywhere engaged in a more merciful, beneficent task.

Referring to the criticism that the situation in Egypt was due to military government, Mr. Churchill remarked that whatever might be said of British soldiers and Generals, they were more in demand in every country of the world as law-givers and pacifiers than were the soldiers of any other country (Cheers).

As a matter of fact British rule in Egypt, under which that country has prospered so enormously, has never been military, but civilian. During time of war exceptional steps have been taken, but the country has been administered through the civilian authorities.

The Bill passed the third reading.

ONE-MAN BUSINESSES.

LIVING IN HOPE.

The one-man business disabilities of men ineligible for demobilisation was the subject of questions in the House of Commons yesterday.

Lt.-Col. Fred Hall (Dulwich) asked whether the Prime Minister is aware that a large number of men still held for service who are proprietors of one-man businesses have found it very diff.cult to retain their customers since the armistice. He asked if the Prime Minister would agree to such men being demobilised provided they are able to obtain from the Clerk to the local Tribunal Advisory Committee certificates to the effect that their release is advisable. Otherwise many such concerns will have to be closed in consequence of the increasing competition of large firms.

Mr. Guest regretted that the Regulations at present in force governing eligibility for demobilisation cannot be altered.

There may be instances of hardships but it is not desirable to make individual distinctions. Men who are eligible are being demobilised as rapidly as circumstances permit. As time passes, however, it may be possible to place a more liberal construction upon applications made on compassionate grounds.

COAL. COMMISSIONERS & MINERS.

It is understood that the Coal Commission will not meet again until after Whitsuntide or until the result of the miners ballot is made known. If the ballot is in favour of accepting the Sankey Report the Government will proceed with a Bill putting the recommendation of the Report into effect.

Immediately on re-assembling, the Commission will take evidence on the subject of Nationalisation of mines, pooling of wagons and improved methods of production.

The unauthorised strike of Derbyshire miners has been settled and the fifteen thousand men returned to work yesterday morning. All pits are now in full swing after five days, stoppage.

Five thousand miners in the Ashton-under-Lyne district resumed work, after expressing their disapproval of the Sankey Report by striking.

In the Rhondda Valley the eighteen thousand strikers returned to the pits and will continue work pending the result of the ballot.

The South Wales Miners Conference has rejected the Sankey award and by a majority of 66 has advised the miners to vote ajainst its acceptance by the Miners lederation.

"STARS AND STRIPES".

"Stars and Stripes" is the weekly official newspaper of the American Expeditionary Force — "by and for the Soldiers of the A.E.F." It is of the lively nature one would naturally expect and the greater part of it con be read without a special dictionary. The Journal is printed and published in Paris, at the price of 50 centimes, and while the news is primarily intended for the consumption of the A.E.F., members of other Expeditionary Forces will find that it is well worth perusal

IRISH MAGISTRATE MURDERED.

The Resident Magistrate for County Sligo died yesterday from wounds received on Saturday, when six shots were fired at him through the window of his residence.

EGYPTIAN DISCONTENT.

INQUIRY DEMANDED.

In the House of Commons yesterday the outbreaks in Egypt caused pressing demands to be put forward for an inquiry into the causes of the unrest.

Col. Wedgewood, D.S.O., (Newcastle-under-Lyne) asked what steps are being taken to send out a Commission to Egypt to inquire into the causes of recent rioting, and would such Commission be authorised to inquire into the treatment of Egyptian fellaheen, who enlisted for service, as well as into the causes of Moslem unrest.

Mr. Cecil Harmsworth in reply, said that the attention of the Government must for the present be concentrated on the restoration of law and order in Egypt. He was unable to state as yet whether the Commission of Inquiry would or would not be despatched to Egypt. At the same time he wished members clearly to understand that the Government intends to institute at the earliest possible moment an inquiry unto the causes of recent outbreaks.

Col. Wedgewood pressed for an inquiry within the next month.

Mr. Harmsworth said that it must be obvious to Col. Wedgewood that law and order must be restored before proceeding with anything else.

INDEMNITY INQUIRIES.

Major Claude Lowther (N. Cumberland) asked whether the Prime Minister could afford the House any information on the question of the indemnities and the capacity of enemy countries to pay them.

Mr. Bonar Law replied that he could not say when it would be possible to make any new statement on the matter.

Sir Kennedy Jones asked whether Mr. Bonar Law was aware that a statement had been published in Paris that the Allies have arrived at the amount of indemnity to be demanded.

Mr. Bonar Law said that even if the indemnity had been fixed it would be impossible to discuss these matters in advance. The Treaty could never be made if every part of it were first of all to be discussed in the House of Commons.

BOLSHEVISTS' BRITISH PRISONERS.

Replying to a question by Col. Sir Fred Hal the Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs (Mr. Cecil Harmsworth) said that, some British subjects are understood to be at present imprisoned by the Russian Bolshevist Government.

The exact number is uncertain but is believed to be not very large.

The Bolshevist Government has been warned that the Bolshevist leaders will be held personally responsible for the maltreatment of any British prisoners in their hands.

Mr. Tchicherin denies that prisoners are being in any way ill-treated by the Bolshevist Government.

AUSTRIAN "HELP YOURSELF" SOCIETY.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN PAYMASTER.

Wages are soaring in Buda Pesth. The daily pay of labourers has been fixed at thirty crowns (about twenty-five shillings); women workers get twenty-five crowns and children twenty.

Thousands of lawyers, merchants and officials are applying for work as labourers.

Memorial tablets to the officers and men who gave their lives in the attack on Zeebrugge were unveiled yesterday on the Wallasey ferry steamers Royal Iris and Royal Daffodil by Admiral Sir David Beatty.

Postal packets of all kinds, except parcels and insured letters, can now be accepted for transmission from England to all parts of occupied territory. They are, of course, subject to censorship.

Admiral Sims had a great send-off at Waterloo station yesterday. In a little speech of farewell he said he was both sorry and glad to go, but of course he hoped to come back to England and bring his family along. A large number of Americans wanted to come to Europe to look at some of the results of the great war.

As examples of the insidious methods advocated by Bolshevists we quote the following. Cabinet Ministers and political leaders are to be compromised, by any means whatever, and to be assassinated. International conflicts are to be fomented, one method suggested being that of assassinating their mutual representatives; strikes are to be organised; machinery and factories are to be broken up or set on fire; steps are to be taken to destroy communications by blowing up railway bridges and tunnels; food is to be prevented from reaching large communities in order that economical and political panic may be started; and so on ad nauseam. No more diabolical or complete programme for the promotion of world disaster could have been planned and the world will heave a sigh of relief to learn of Bolshevist defeats in several theatres of war.

COURT MARTIAL PROCEDURE.

COMMITTEE OF INQUIRY.

The Rules and Regulations governing the procedure of Courts Martial, both in peace and wartime, are to be inquired into by a Special Committee, which will make recommendations thereon.

In the House of Commons yesterday the composition of the Committee was announced.

Mr. Justice Darling is the Clairman and the following, among others, will be members: — General Earl Cavan, Mr. Horatio Bottomley, Lord Hugh Cecil, Col. Christopher Lowther, Mr. Stephen Walsh (Labourite), Major-Gen. Childs, (Deputy Adjutant General), Sir Felix Cassel (Judge Advocate General), Major-Gen. Mellor (Deputy Judge Advocate General.)

AMERICA CUP CHALLENGE.

Being interviewed immediately on his arrival at New York on Saturday, Sir T. J. Lipton, Bt., who had crossed to America to inspect Shamrock IV, said he was not disappointed that his challenge had been refused. The delay was not to his disadvantage owing to the present scarcity of good crews in England.

EASTER EGGS ARE SAFE.

Restrictions at present in force affecting the sale of chocolate and other ingredients for the manufacture of Easter Eggs., etc, will be temporarily suspended from the 8th to the 23rd April. No hoarding, please.

LIVERPOOL WAREHOUSE COLLAPSES.

A large warehouse near the Liverpool landing stage, used for war purposes, collapsed suddenly yesterday. Without the slightest warning the seven floors fell in consecutively, leaving only the outer walls standing. The warehouse was stocked with oilseed. It is feared that ten or a dozen men are buried in the ruins.

WHAT WILL YOU DO IN THE NEXT WAR?

Admiral Sir David Beatty was asked by a representative of the Liverpool Echo what he considered were the odds against Jutland proving to be the last naval battle in history.

"1000 to 1 against" replied Beatty, speaking of course as a Sportsman and not in an official capacity.

STRIKE AT STUTTGART.

A telegram to the Kölnische Volkszeitung announces that a General strike at Stuttgart took effect today. The strikers are demanding the liberation of political prisoners; suspension of martial law; re-instatement of the January strikers and immediate new elections for the Workmen & Soldiers Councils on a revolutionary basis.

The tram service is stopped and telephonic communication ceased this morning over a radius of fifty miles.

AMERICA AND JAPAN.

Answering an interpellation in the House of Representatives, Tokio, General Tanaka, War Minister, said that the alleged American refusal to co-operate in the fighling near Blagovestehens was untrue.

Askea if such refusal was not tantamount to insubordination to Gen. Oti, the Commander in Chief of the Allied troops, Gen. Tanaka replied that Oti's Command was only effective when consonant with the principles of American National Policy.

Most likely the difference was due to the fact that Japanese and American conceptions of the Bolsheviks were not identical.

TO UNIT REPRESENTATIVES OF THE COLOGNE POST.

POSTAL SERVICES.

Owing to the intricacies of the German post-office and railway arrangements there seems to have occurred in one or two cases a slight hitch in the delivery of the paper by railway. The German Post-office apparently looks upon the delivery of newspapers as its own particular function, and papers may only be sent by rail by permission of the Post-office authorities, who also make a special charge on the railway for each packet sent. We would suggest to those units who have found the railway delivery system at fault that they should ask us either to send the papers through the A.P.O. or, in cases where they are near our office, arrange to collect them from here (37 Marzellen-Strasse) at 7.30 each morning. If sent by A.P.O. the papers arrive with the unit's mail each day.

It appears that unless the bundle of papers is enquired for immediately at the station it is treated as Post-office property and is forthwith handed over to the local Postamt. In cases where the station-master produces no bundle, enquiries should be made at the local Post-office.

Strikes in Spain are nearly over. The workmen at Valencia, Corunna, Alicante, Huelva and Barcelona have resumed work.

The Admiralty Prize Court yesterday condemned cargoes of copper, nickel and grain valued at two hundred thousand pounds sterling. These cargoes were consigned from America to prominent people in Sweden, including a Swedish ex-Minister and the Rumanian Consul-General, but were really intended for naturalised Germans, who were buying on behalf of Austria.

"DOMINION DAY".

OVERSEAS HOSPITALITY FUND INTENTIONS.

When the great procession of fighting men from all parts of the Empire beyond the seas passes through London the Overseas Hospitality Fund intends to give a 'high' tea, concert and dance to one thousand men selected from overseas troops. The Fund also hopes, with the concurrence of the authorities, to find a good place from which to view the procession for every man not actually taking part.

In addition to this programme the officials wish to entertain every overseas soldier, who is anxious to spend his leave in London but is not otherwise provided for.

MEMORIAL AT BRUGES.

On the initiative of the City of Bruges and under the auspices of the Anglo-Belgian union it is proposed to erect at Zeebrugge a memorial to the Dover Patrol. Bruges is providing the site; within thirty yards of the actual spot where the intrepid Iphigenia was sunk. Its elevation will render it visible from far out at sea. Competition for the design of the memorial is open to all Architects and Sculptors, British and Belgian.

TO "BEER" OR NOT TO "BEER".

The High Commissioner of New Zealand is making arrangements for men of the New Zealand Expeditionary Force in all camps and depots in Great Britain to record their votes in the Licensing Poll which will be taken on the 10th April on the question of immediate prohibition. A bare majority will decide the issue.

St. Albans, which subscribed over half a million sterling to the War Funds, has been offered a tank in recognition of its patriotic services.

M.P's TO VISIT GERMANY.

The Government is arranging for a party of Members of Parliament to visit Germany in order to study the conditions. After consideration of the terms and objects of the projected tour the Parliamentary Labour Party declined the invitation.

GOOD FOR THE R.A.S.C., M.T

The Government of the Women's Legion at Head Quarters to discuss the question of replacing R.A.S.C. motor drivers on Lines of Communications by women. This will release men motor drivers for civilian occupation.

FLYING THE ATLANTIC.

DATE OF FIRST ATTEMPT FIXED.

Major Hawkes and Mr. Grieve have arrived at St. Johns, Newfoundland with the Sopwith aeroplane which they will attempt to fly to England.

Weather permitting, they propose to start on their transatlantic journey on the 16th April, when the full moon will reduce the number of hours of darkness to seven. They estimate that the distance can be covered in nineteen hours.

The New-York Navy Department's attempt has been fixed for the first clear day in May. Their 'planes will probably carry a crew of five.

A SOLDIER-SPORTSMAN'S WILL.

The will of Captain Percy Richard Oliver Trench, of Clonodfoy, Kilmallock, co. Limerick (killed in Mesopotamia), son of the Hon. William Crosby Trench and nephew of Lord Ashtown, took the form of a letter to his mother and father.

It contained the following passage: "A small cross be erected in a place chosen by you in the Young Wood above the house, and wired in, and flowers, daffodils and snowdrops, planted around. This not to stop the hounds entering wood. Also, at the first cub hunt, yearly, they should be collected around the site. I also bequeath £50 to the funds of the Black and Tans, and the rest I wish formed into a fund to help the villages round.

These are my wishes, and I know they will be carried out."

General Sir Julian Byng intends retiring from the Active List.

Last year the London County Council tramways yielded a profit of £803,454 sterling.

The Directors of the International Horse Show announce that it will be impossible to hold the Show this summer.

IMPERIAL WAR MUSEUM.

CRYSTAL PALACE SUGGESTED.

Relics of absorbing interest are being continually received for the Imperial War Museum but very great difficulty is being experienced in the search for a large enough building in London suitable for housing the collection, which is assuming enormous proportions.

The size of the building necessitated can be imagined from some of the relics which will find a place therein, such as tanks and aircraft, and models of all our historic battleships. Already five tanks have been conserved, including "Mother" and "Little Willie", the first tanks constructed. Models of airships, are being made to a scale of 1-10 th., so that a model Zepplin will be sixty feet long. Battleships will be constructed on the scale of one eighth of an inch to a foot but smaller vessels at one fourth of an inch.

The White City and Earl's Court have both been suggested as suitable sites but opinion is more in favour of the Crystal Palace.

There is a strong feeling throughout the country, however, in favour of building a worthy museum on a suitable site in order to house the collection, which exceeds in human interest any collection ever brought together in the history of the world.

SOUTH AFRICAN STRIKERS BESIEGE TOWN HALL.

Johannesburg Town hall was on Saturday the scene of a violent demonstration by Socialists and strikers. An announcement was made that an open session would be held in the Council Chamber and an enormous crowd besieged the hall and forced their way into the building.

Great disorder prevailed. Red flags were waved and Socialist hymns lustily sung.

The Council hastily withdrew, subsequently receiving a deputation of the strike committee and trade federations.

RIOTING IN FRANKFORT.

Savage rioting and very extensive looting took place in Frankfort on the Main yesterday when the mob, gaining the upperhand, indulged in an orgy of unbridled licence.

The damage done cannot yet be estimated, but it certainly amounts to many millions of marks. The establishment of Schepeler's, provision dealers, was completely looted. Dozens of jeweller's shops were wrecked, typewriters and telephones stolen. The wine — cellars are in chaotic disorder. From Büschel and Baumgarten's stores ten tons of butter, five tons of edible fat and seventy thousand eggs, which should have been distributed as rations next week, were stolen.

During the day seven looters were shot and twenty others severely wounded, while the

Today is Women's Day in London. It is organised by Lady William Cecil and Lady Barran, to raise funds for the Y.W.C.A. Blue Triangle work. For each of the thirty Y.W.C.A. hostels in London there is a waiting list of from thirty to forty girls.

The Allied Mission to Buda-Pesth, under Col. Vix., reached Belgrade on the 29th March. They were interned at Buda-Pesth until the moment of their departure. TO UNITS SUBSCRIBING TO "THE COLOGNE POST."

Owing to the difficulties of banking in a foreign country, with three different currencies in use, some modification of our previous request is necessary.

IMPORTANT.

If cheques are drawn on British Banks, please make them out in STERLING: if on French banks in FRANCS.

The simplest method to all concerned, however, is to send GERMAN NOTES, but it must be understood that local notes, e.g. Stadt Cöln, cannot be accepted.

Will officers forwarding subscription please give RANK, NAME, UNIT and DIVISION in BLOCK LETTERS. If sent through the post, letters containing money must be registered and addressed to the Managing Editor, The Cologne Post A.P.O. S. 40.

It will greatly facilitate smooth working if the payment for the ensuing week's papers is made in advance.

On our first day's issue a very small proportion of the papers went astray or were late in delivery. This was caused by the fact that one distribution has to be worked through a German department which is quite unused to such a job. By the time this appears, we hope and believe that all minor difficulties will have been eliminated.

Gen. Sir. Ian Hamilton's refusal of the Northern Command does not indicate his unwillingness to accept any command. He felt that the Northern Command offered no interesting prospects and should be left to a younger man. He is open to accept a more tempting post.

MARCH 1918—19.

Twelve months ago Tommy was in the midst of it. To-day, well the extent of transformation that has been enacted would be difficult to express in words, only those of us who have actually experienced the worst with the better can to any certainty realise the change that has taken place. From the uninviting barbed wire of "No Man's Land," from the God forsaken waterlogged trenches, from the scream of shells and hiss of bullets, and from that dreaded fear that there might be no to-morrow, to the circumstances of to-day when one is even able to indulge in frolics, to view cities of the Rhine, at times to repose between actual sheets covered with the popular German eiderdown; but above all the thoughts of hostilities, so conspicuous by their absence, such differences to the utmost of possibility, justifies one in saying that words would fail to express the far-reaching replenishment of Tommy's mind nerves and body. Cologne is surged with khaki, from field rank to private, some on duty, some for the benefit of their education, whilst others intent on having a "high time," but there's not one of them, who at one time or other doesn't ask himself "Can only twelve months have passed since that fateful March of 1918 when the cause of right and justice reached it's climax?" Incredible though it seems, this change was wrought in a period barely exceeding four and a half months, from July 18th, when the English, French and American troops under the command of General Mangin commenced their forcing of the salient Soissons-Chateau Thierry-Rheims up till the entry of the British cavalry into Cologne at the beginning of December, and thus came about the renovation of Tommy's atmosphere from one of grim determination to the present victorious smile, and hardly a man, although he says he would not experience the same again, is wishing he had missed the noble part that he was called upon to play. Thousands of us are expecting to be demobilised, whilst thousands must remain to ensure that Tommy who gave his life and blood shall not have given it in vain. To those who are remaining, we would wish the best of luck and a speedy winding up of affairs, and to those about to be demobilised, a welcome home such as their noble services have so highly merited, and that their enterprises in the future so successfully develope that they contrast even as March 1918—19.

"THE CALL OF SPRING".

Come, let us sing!
Awake! Awake! the lark is on the wing,
Heralding the swift advance of Spring.
The flood-gates of the East are open wide
Where Sol, in his majesty doth ride.
Down in the verdant valley far below,
Zephyrs of the Spring-tide start to blow;
And where the pool doth languish in the sun,
Narcissus' resurrection has begun;
For it is Spring.

Have you heard it? Have you noted it? It is in every tree, every field and hedge. The bird of the air re-echoes it, and the reverberant hill takes up the cry and sends its message over miles of insurgent wood and wold. The softness of the air denotes it, the transient tints bespeak it, and the kaleidoscopic sky reflects it — the magic call of Spring.

Down in the valley, where the first flowers of Spring-time open their eyes to the call of Nature, Spring, with her busy fingers is interlacing green foliage, and gracing the waving branches with gems of scarlet and gold.

Alas! March is a treacherous month, and we must judge it as we know it, and not as it seems to be. Once again the blast of Winter, with its icy fang and scudding clouds of rain, will make one last and futile endeavour to blight the ripening land.

These precocious days of Spring are merely the forerunners — the emissaries of the South and West. And, whilst the Winter is fighting its last battle, crying at the doors and rattling the window-panes, let us make plans for the season still unborn.

Many of us will not be here to enjoy the Valley of the Rhine when it throws off its garb of Winter, and assumes a native jacket of scarlet and gold. But those of us who will be here, [illegible] to the fullest advantage, the sunny days to come.

Now Narcissus is showing his sun kissed head, and the football season is ending, the more active amongst us will be turning their thoughts to cricket and tennis. Yet, beyond these glorious pastimes, there opens out a big vista of hobbies and occupations which can be appropriately adopted during the warm months. Off-hand, I can name such time-honoured recreation as boating, swimming, fishing, cycling, picnicking, rambling, and numbers of more infinitesimal outdoor attractions.

Those who desire to participate in any of the aforementioned pursuits should take advantage of the few fine days in March, and search the countryside for walks, rivers, and suitable cycling roads.

In the vicinity of Siegburg there are many attractions for lovers of landscape and scenery. Here we have a good resemblance to Surrey's leafy lanes, Malvern's verdant hills, and Cornwall's ruggedness. Further on, and in close proximity, we find Troisdorf, Lohmar, Spich, and Siegtar. These might be termed large villages, and give a rural appearance to the vicinity. Between these places there are many delightful spots, little more than straggling streets, on a par with those delightful English hamlets to be seen in glorius Devon.

Between Siegburg and Troisdorf flows the river Agger, with many native beauties on either side. It is the natural division which separates Siegsburg from the smaller town. Here, it is possible to obtain good boating, fishing, and swimming. At this juncture, ramblers should leave the dusty road and follow the river's winding and twisting course towards Donrath.

No more alluring walk can be found in this neighbourhood, for one must perforce pass many brooklets as, gurgling over their stony beds, they bring music to the ear, adding brightness to the sky and lightness to the heart. W. N. R.

THE MAN WHO DID — AND WHAT BECAME OF IT.

Chapter I.

Montague Bilson, late Captain and Adjutant of the 51st (grad) Westmoreland Light Infantry, sat in his private room at the offices of Berry & Bilson Ltd., the big jam manufacturers. He had now been demobilized from the army a month, and the time had come for him to enter upon his new duties as junior director of the jam concern. He had left the university three years before to join the army, and had little knowledge of business in civil life; much less did he know about the intricacies and subtleties of jam making. His father, however, proud of his son's rapid promotion in the Army, had given him the position of junior director of the business.

Bilson was then at the conceited age of twenty-four and like many another who has held temporarily the King's commission, he was, in Disraeli's memorable phrase, inclined to be "inebriated with the exuberance of his own verbosity". Six months as adjutant of a battalion had left its impression of army "red tape" upon him, and although, to his intense disappointment, he had never become a "Brass Hat", he was a devoted worshipper at the shrine of officialdom.

His impressions at the conclusion of his first day at business had not been exactly favourable. The daily routine, both in the office and in the works, struck him as most monotonous, after the ever-changing and fascinating life of the orderly room. He missed the form and ceremony to which he had been accustomed and no one clicked to a salute on his approach. He was no longer treated as a demigod by all who met him, and, like others of his rank, he preferred the deified life on the lofty heights of Olympus, enshrined with mystic glory, to a less assuming mortal existence on the plains below. This life at jam production, he was certain, would drive him mad with ennui and boredom within a month. He must alter it at all costs.

His proud father, ignorant of army clerical methods and their wonderful efficiency, thought that his son, having been successful as an Army clerical overseer, would be, in the natural order of things, just as successful as a business man in the commercial world. Somehow, unfortunately, civilians do not recognize the intrinsic value of Army methods, as is proved by the fact, for example, that considerable opposition would be raised by the shareholders of any bank, if one of the regimental paymasters should be nominated for the Managing Directorship. In spite of this unfortunate antipathy, shown by the world in general to War Office methods, young Bilson's father had such confidence in his son's powers, that he gave him from the first, absolute carte-blanche in the working of the business.

Suddenly a brilliant idea struck Bilson. He would make the business conform to the customs of his beloved army. With true military foresight, he failed to see the dangers of such an experiment, and, not realising the truth of the old adage that "fools step in where angels fear to tread", he marshalled his mental forces for an attack, with true British Spion Kop stupidity.

Having been adjutant of a graduated battalion of budding A IV youngsters, he was accustomed to making up his mind speedily to momentous decisions, such as whether boots should be dubbined or blacked; so Bilson rang the bell and asked for Mr. Jones, the Secretary "to report himself at the double". That gentleman entered, though not in the manner prescribed. Mr. Jones had been in the employ of the firm for over twenty years, and certainly had no intention of exercising the muscles of his legs with such agility as would detract from his habitual dignity. Mr. Bilson opened the conversation thus:

"Er — er — Mr. Jones — (pause) — er — I have decided that some radical change — ahem — must be made in the — er — working of this — er — business".

At this juncture, Mr. Jones showed distinct signs of apprehension, and indications were apparent of an approaching apoplectic fit. Rebellion was futile to such a man as Bilson, who could look back to the days when he had quelled a mutiny among the sanitary squad of his battalion, with great severity; so he continued inexorably.

"You will parade the entire — er — staff at twelve noon in the large work room; I will then — er — address them on my new scheme."

Mr. Jones was greatly abashed at this order, but the expression on the director's face showed him that no protest would be of avail. He therefore retired, with as much injured dignity as he could assume, to discuss this new extraordinary event with the lady typists.

Midday came, and Mr. Bilson, closely followed by Mr. Jones, entered the large workroom where the two hundred and fifty employees were assembled. A buzz of excitement prevailed in the room, and on the entrance of Mr. Bilson and his secretary, one audacious office boy, just demobilised, yelled out, "Orderly Officer, any complaints". Such humour seemed strangely out of place to Mr. Bilson, and he vaguely thought of putting the boy on an A. F. B252, and cursed the absence of such a wholesome remedy. Mr. Bilson, forgetting his was a civilian audience, blew his army whistle vigourously, only to hear shouts of, "Off side," instead of the solemn hush he had expected. Having, with much vocal energy, obtained a degree of quietness in the room, he told the employees of his new scheme, but, true to the best army traditions, so vaguely that few were much wiser at its conclusion.

After lunch, Mr. Bilson revealed more of his scheme to the sceptical secretary. He was just detailing an elaborate idea he had for issuing "orders" nightly when a tap came at the door. The head of the mixing dept. entered to report that two girls merited disciplinary action. That was Mr. Bilson's chance. As adjutant, he had never had the inestimable pleasure of doling out C. B. generously to miserable offenders, but now, in his own business he would conduct an imitation "Orderly Room" himself. There were, of course, difficulties to be faced; a burly R. S. M. with a raucous voice certainly impresses the culprits with the awe due to the occasion. Who could supply the vacancy made by the absence of that worthy official? Necessity is the mother of invention, and Mr. Bilson quickly came to the conclusion that the cheeky office-boy with the military knowledge could easily supply all the duties of the master of ceremonies, good-tempered "Reggie." That worthy having been found, another boy who boasted of many decorations in the Boy Scout's was detailed to act as escort. Meanwhile Mr. Bilson had written out a charge sheet on army lines, and had thrust it into the hands of the astonished Mr. Jones, at the same time prompting him as to the duties of an adjutant on such an occasion.

THE REMINISCENCES OF RIFLEMAN RIX.

Pleasant as I find the walk from Hausendorf to Dorfenhaus by day, there is no inducement to journey up the lanes and across the fields from post to post by night. Thatched farms lie close under the wooded hills, sheltering their decaying framework from the chill winds; a dreary network of swollen streams and stagnant channels mark man's efforts to convert sodden marshes into green meadows.

Night falls, and saturates the countryside in damp blackness. A bleak wind flows along the valleys and pours over the hilltops. The wet mud freezes into miniature upland and ravine once more.

A natural dislike to going round the scattered posts in my sector of the Zone by myself led me to accept the offer of Rifleman Rix's company, especially as I had to take a rum jar. So we set out together, he carrying the rum, and I a small cup for convient measurement of same. It being a particularly inky night, we made several unnecessary excursions in the wrong direction, involving the difficult passage of streams and fences.

"I thought you knew the way, Rix," I said.

"My eyes ain't what they used to be, Sir," he replied, clutching at his jar as he disappeared into a ditch for the sixth time. He extricated himself from the quagmire amid a brilliant caruscation of oaths.

"Hurt yourself?"

"No, Sir. And I ain't spilled the rum."

"You'd better have your tot now," I said.

"That's better, Sir," he said, after an appreciative pause. "Reminds me of the night I got into the enemy lines at Magny Vichy in '16."

"Were you captured?" I asked.

"No, Sir, I wasn't; but a very important general was."

"I should like to hear the story," I said. We were trudging up the long lane that leads to Hausendorf.

"I'll tell you, Sir. You'll have to excuse me a bit, my teeth are chattering with the cold. Thank you, Sir. It does warm you up a bit, don't it. Here's the cup, Sir."

"We was in the line at Magny — Magny Vichy this was — in September '16. One night, about eleven, I'd been to post a sentry, — I was a Corporal at that time but owing to a difference of veracity between me and the Sergeant over a matter of rations, — however, that's nothing much to do with this story. Coming back, I got on top of the trench to take a short cut round a bit of a bend. Somehow I must have lost my way, for presently I found myself right up against the wall of a farm house. There was a chink of light showing through a blanket hung across the entrance to a cellar. I was making my way through the bricks and rubble when my heart seemed to stop beating. Bosch voices!

"I doubled round the back into an old shed. Feeling round in the dark I touched something cold and clammy. I could tell from his equipment it was not one of our lads. But alive or dead? Carefully I struck a match. . . . Dead!

"I've a natural revulsion to touching a dead man, Sir, but inside five minutes I'd got his clothes on, equipment and all, and my own buried under a heap of rubbidge. I began to breathe easier.

"It is on occasions such as these, Sir, that your Sexton Blake is more useful than your Shakespeare. I smeared blood from a cut I had restrained on my face, and tied my jaw round with a field dressing. I had barely depleted my toilet when I heard the reproaching hum of a motor car."

"In the front line?" I queried.

"I didn't know what part of the enemy line I was in. Natural queeriosity prompted me to see what was happening. And in the light of a flash lamp held by someone on the cellar steps, I saw two Staff Officers in grey uniform salute another ascending from the car. And there, not five yards from me, was the greatest general of the enemy forces."

"General von L . . . ?"

"For disciplinary reasons I defrain from mentioning his name, but you have intimicated to me, Sir, that you recognise my meaning. During the next half hour I rebated in my mind whether I should seize the importunity to shoot him and excape in the confusion, — but where? I did not know my way. The spirit of the bayonet was strong within me, but that devolved certain capture, and there was no need to risk my liberty as yet.

"Presently the party remerged from the cellar and called for a guide. I knew that this was my chance. I stepped up beside the shofer and off we drove. A couple of our whizbangs dropping near quickened things up a bit."

The rifleman's story was interrupted for several minutes, while I gave out rum to a sentry group.

"All the men had their rum, now, Sergeant?" I peered into the darkness.

"Yes, Sir, all ten."

"I gave out eleven tots, Sergeant."

"Only ten, Sir," Rix assured me. It was his word against mine, and I had my suspicions.

"As the car bumped down the lane," he continued, picking up the thread of his tale, "an idea came into my head. I had learnt a little astrology at school, and so was able to keep my eye on the North Star. We came to a fork road, and the driver hesitated. I pointed to the right. The bandages on my face luckily prevented me from speaking. Due south for a couple of kilos, then right again and we were going due east. Your knowledge of locography will doubtless tell you, Sir, what was in my mind."

"You meant to drive General von L . . . . right into our lines?"

"Sherlin Homes couldn't have grasped the plot quicker, Sir. I was wondering how I could circumaviate our own line without being fired on, when the driver pulls up, with a curse. There, right in front of us, was — — —"

"A British post!" I gasped in my excitement.

When Rix took up his tale again, his voice was sad.

"No, Sir. It was the very same fram we had started from. Then followed one of the worst out rages of the war. An intelligent N. C. O. of the British Army was, I regret to say, the recivient of an incubus in his netheral regions of the boot of a crimson Prussian, thereby conducing to my mind that my services as a guide were no longer acquired. When I recovered my 'state as quo' the car had gone.

"I need not explain to an officer of your debility the feelings of a morse, which arose in my breast when I realised that I had missed making a 'cup data', which would have ended the war three years ago. And I will not dwell on the details of my following an enemy ration party to the front line, and my surrender in the morning to our own gallant forces."

"But your Commanding Officer was glad to get the valuable information you were able to give him concerning the enemy's movements?"

"I think I mentioned before, an outstanding grievance between me and a certain Sergeant. Rather than produce my evidence before a Court Marshal, such as he pointedly intimidated, I decided to keep the account of what happened that night to myself."

* * * *

We had reached my billet. Rix handed me the jar.

"Good night, Rifleman." I said.

"Excuse me, Sir, you haven't forgotten—?

Thank you, Sir. Your cup, Sir. Good-night, Sir."

THE ZEEBRUGGE EXPLOIT.

VIVID ACCOUNT BY PROF. SANDFORD TERRY, D.C.L., ABERDEEN.

The interesting lecture of which we print a summary below was delivered by Prof. Sandford Terry at the "Wasser Sports Club," now the Headquarters of the Rhine Fleet, on Sunday last.

This account of the remarkable Zeebrugge exploit is rendered especially noteworthy from the fact that it was delivered in German territory, on the Rhine.

Towards the end of December 1917 a plan for the blocking of the Belgian ports Ostend and Zeebrugge was presented by Admiral Keyes and the newly formed Plans Division, of which he was the first Director, and received the approval of the Board of Admiralty. To block the Zeebrugge section of the Bruges Ship Canal was its chief object. The concurrent closure of Ostend Harbour seemed necessary to complete the sealing up of the waterways radiating from Bruges. A subordinate, but important purpose was to inflict as much damage as possible on the harbour works of both ports. If successful, the operation promised to set back the enemy's submarine bases three hundred miles, which roughly is the distance from Zeebrugge to Emden, to seal up his torpedo craft at Bruges, to free the Dover Patrol for service in the wider anti-submarine campaign, and to relieve our military and economic communications of an intolerable menace.

Early in January 1918, Admiral Keyes proceeded to Dover, took over the command of the Patrol, and began to organise the forces required for a stupendous undertaking. To permit the blockships to approach their objectives a fog or smoke curtain needed to be discovered and, thanks to the inventive genius of Wing' Commander Frank Brock, the required material was found and provided a most effective curtain, without which the heavy batteries guarding the Belgian ports could not have been faced by the small craft which it was necessary to employ. Volunteers were invited from the Home Depots and the Grand Fleet, but the bulk of the force, which numbered over 17,000, was provided by the Dover Patrol. The ships engaged numbered about 150.

While it was requisite that the operation should be nicely timed to take advantage of high tide at the ports, and yet avoid being caught by morning light, it was equally imperative that the sea should be calm for the small craft. An on-shore wind was needed to carry the fog-screen in advance of the blockships. Absence of fog was essential. A fog would be beneficial. These desiderata postulated a concurrence of favourable conditions and on April 23, at a third attempt to execute the plan, they were not all present.

After detailing the preliminary moment of the expedition, the lecturer pointed out that the operations at Zeebrugge were complicated by the problem of the Mole, a huge structure 1½ miles long by 100 yards broad, used by the Germans as an air, supply, and destroyer base, and also extremely strongly fortified, especially at the seaward end, by a battery of three 5.9's and six guns of slightly less calibre on the lighthouse extension. A fortified zone some 150 yards distant from the Mole end added to the strength of a defensive system on which the Germans relied to make the entrance to the canal impregnable. Moreover, on land also, to a considerable distance on either side of the canal piers, heavy artillery and machine guns were in position. So far as art could make it so, the Zeebrugge system was as strongly protected against naval attack as the Dardanelles forts themselves.

Professor Terry pointed out that the prominence given to "Vindictive's" part in the operations at Zeebrugge on St. George's Day completely confused the real purpose and method of operations, whose preparative Staff work was as considerable and minute as that which the major land operations of the war demanded. The one purpose of the action was to close Zeebrugge Canal entrance by sinking between the piers three obsolete cruisers, "Thetis", "Intrepid", and "Iphigenia." Before they could approach their assigned positions it was necessary to put the batteries on the Mole out of action, and simultaneously to prevent their reinforcements from the shore across the Mole viaduct. The former task was assigned to the "Vindictive" and two attendant Liverpool ferry-boats "Iris II" and "Daffodil." Owing to the confusion and darkness the "Vindictive" berthed alongside the Mole at a point 400 yards distant from her assigned objective. Consequently she failed to fulfil completely the task entrusted to her. Otherwise, the fight on the Mole was strictly localised and not the roving engagement which the early press accounts represented it to be.

The submarine attack on the viaduct connecting the Mole with the shore was made with the completest success by C 3, commanded by Lt. R. D. Sandford. By means of slides the lecturer demonstrated this fine achievement, and the rescue of the submarine's crew by a frail picket-boat specially charged with the duty and commanded by the Lt. Sandford's brother.

The lecturer remarked that extraordinary faithfulness to a time programme was a feature of the operation. "Vindictive" berthed at 12.1 only one minute after her programme time. At 12.20 the viaduct went up, just 5 minutes before the moment fixed for the arrival of the blockships, which, now that the Mole defences were more or less silenced, could approach securely. In fact, while the 5.9's were silent during this critical stage of the operations, the Mole extension guns were still active and impeded, though they could not prevent, the passage of the blockships to the canal mouth. "Thetis," rounding the lighthouse at 12.25, came under their fire, but penetrated the net defences guarding the harbour. Her propellers were fouled and she began to settle down, but was manoeuvred into the dredged Caannel, where she sank. She had, however, cleared a way for her consorts and signalled to them a direct line into the canal mouth. "Intrepid" was taken in successfully and sank on the Western bank, but did not wholly block the passage. "Iphigenia" who followed, was handled with conspicuous cleverness and daring, sank herself at the named point of the canal, closed it, and sealed the success of the operations.

In conclusion, the lecturer referred to the rescue work acheived by the motor launches that followed the block ships into the canal. He asked his audience, when next they looked at the motor launches by the Hohenzollern Bridge, to reflect that a vessel of the same kind rescued and carried off no fewer than 101 men from under the jaws of the German Batteries on St. George's Day.

A French Admiral had described the operations directed by Sir Roger Keyes as, "The finest feat of arms in the naval history of all times and all countries." He (Prof. Terry) hoped that he had given them some foundation to support that appreciation.

Major-General Feilding, commanding the London District, speaking at a meeting in support of the 10th County of London Cadets, declared that the cadet movement and military training was something which tended to prevent militarism, as in the same way a strong police force was calculated to prevent crime.

WILDE DEFEATS LYNCH.

GREAT ENTHUSIASM AT THE N. S. C.

PRINCE OF WALES CONGRATULATES CONTESTANTS.

Unparalleled scenes were witnessed at the National Sporting Club on Monday night, when Jimmy Wilde, fly-weight champion, defeated Joe Lynch, the American Bantam-weight, in a fifteen round contest, on points.

The bout, which was for stakes and a purse totalling 2,400 was thrilling and hotly contested throughout.

Accommodation was at a premium, and although fabulous prices were offered for seats, many prominent people were among the large number of would-be patrons who failed to gain admission.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, in the uniform of the Grenadier Guards, accompanied by H.R.H. Prince Albert, who wore a Royal Air Force suit, arrived at 9.30 p.m. and were greeted with enthusiastic outbursts of applause.

THE FIGHT.

The contestants presented an admirable picture of fitness when they entered the ring for the first round at 9.45.

Throughout the contest, the fighting was keen, sportsmanlike and absolutely clean. Generous approbation—wherein—in the two young Princes were by no means the least enthusiastic — was forthcoming when Wilde slipped and dropped to his knees to be promptly assisted to the perpendicular by his opponent.

The first three rounds went in favour of Wilde, but thence, to the ninth round, Lynch, scored frequently. From time to time, the fortunes of the fight seemed to be at the feet of the gods, although it was generally apparent that Wilde was boxing well within — in his powers notwithstanding Lynch's advantage in height and reach and the skill readily to profit from any advantage offered.

The fourtheenth round showed the men to be some — what tired but still game, and the tension of the spectators was sufficient to restrain the applause.

Wilde managed to hold a bit in reserve for the final round, which was a fast and furious affair. In it Wilde crowned a splendid performance with a superb display.

PRINCE OF WALES VAULTS ROPES.

The announcement of the result provoked tremendous enthusiasm in the course of which the Prince of Wales vaulted through the ropes and shook hands with the boxers. He congratulated Wilde on his splendid performance and Lynch on the spirited way he fought. The Prince concluded with a tribute to the traditional Anglo-American friendship.

INTER THEATRE OF WAR CHAMPIONSHIPS.

The selection of the Association football eleven to represent the B.E.F. in the Inter-Theatre of war Championships, to be held in England this month, has been left to Brigadier-General R. J. Kentish, the hon. secretary of the Army Football Association, Captain V. J. Woodward, the Chelsea International, and Lieutenant G. N. Foster, of Oxford University and Corinthians.

Among those who are taking part in the trials are Lance-Corporal Dorsett, of Manchester City, and Lance-Corporal Hodgkinson, of Blackburn Rovers (Internationals).

The following first-class footballers Lieut. A. Murdock, of Glasgow Rangers, Lieut. G. Higgins, of Queen's Park, Private G. Martin, of Fulham, Lance-Corporal D. W. McKenzie, of Barking, Gunner J. Woolley, of Notts County, Captain C. Bresnume, of Fulham, Private M. C. Woods, of West Bromwich Albion, Bombardier H. Bentley, of Sheffield Wednesday, H. S. Vickers, of Preston North End, Gunner A. W. Brookes, of Wolverhampton Wanderers, Gunner G. H. Douglas, of Leicester Fosse, Private Bradshaw, of Burnley, Sergeant Nichols, of Aston Villa, Gunner Botty, of Swindon, and Gunner Gillespie, of Sheffield United.

DEARER TENNIS.

ASSOCIATION FEES TO BE HIGHER.

After four years of practical inactivity, tennis enthusiasts in England are now beginning to make preparations for the coming summer, when there is likely to be just as big a boom in this as is apparent in respect of all other phases of sport.

An extraordinary general meeting of the Lawn Tennis Association, held at the Cannon Street Hotel, London, yesterday afternoon, discussed the question of raising additional funds.

Lord Desborough, who presided, moved a resolution to the effect that the Association's fee for competitors in open meetings should be raised to a flat rate of two shillings. This was carried. The fee formerly was, for gentlemen, one shilling; and for ladies sixpence.

On the motion of Mr. Monckton, it was decided to raise from half a guinea to two guineas, the fee for permission to hold open meetings in the case of club and association meetings, and to five guineas for tournaments. Half of this will be returned if the application is refused.

In supporting the resolution, Lord Desborough stated that the high fee for tournament committees was to stop silly applications which he added, prevailed in horse-racing too.

FANCY DRESS BALL AT OLEF.

A successful fancy dress ball was held at the Dancing Hall, Olef, near Schlieden, by 20th. Co. Highland Divisional Train R.A.S.C. Female impersonations were requested, and the response was quite up to expectations. There were some very artistically attired "young ladies" and they added a pleasing blend of colour to the assembly.

After the dance had been in progress about an hour, and all entrants were present, those in fancy dress asked to take their respective partners and make a circular promenade to the accompaniment of the band, in order that the judges might make their awards for the best costumes.

Driver S. S. Smith, who was wearing a pink gauze dancing costume, with hat to match, was an easy first, while L Cpl. V. S. Wood and Driver H. R. Briggs secured the prize for the best couple. L.Cpl. Wood was immaculately attired in a morning suit and silk hat, and his partner was arranged wholly in white, the couple making a splendid representation of a wedding pair.

The prizes having been presented, the dancing was resumed, and the evening proved most enjoyable and successful in every way.

The Gloucestershire Football Association has passed the following resolution:—

"It having come to the notice of the Gloucestershire Football Association that organised efforts are being made to regularise the playing of football on Sundays, the council appeal to the Football Association to adhere rigidly to its former attitude to refuse to recognise Sunday football."

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

The Approach of Summer.

Announcements in the sporting newspapers remind us that summer is approaching, and that the football season is rapidly running its course. The advertising space allotted to such notices as "Nevergreen Park C.C. (weak medium) wants matches . . ." etc., is daily growing in length; many people apparently desire to buy or sell tennis raquets and croquet sets, and the offer for sale or hire of a house boat on the Thames is made known in the columns of a London newspaper. All these things are an indication that it is very nearly time we began to think of putting our football boots in our old — or new, if you happen to be on very friendly terms with the "quarter blokes" — kitbags for a few months for a well earned rest.

Snow as a Forerunner.

Those meteorological people, who so cheerfully undertake to forecast our climatic conditions, tell us that we are in for a warm time of it when we plunge well into the summer season.

The particular individual who is my informant supplies the added information that spring is but a very brief period in Germany and that the hot season comes along with extraordinary suddenness.

Consequently, I would warn you, patent readers, to waste no time in sending home "S.O.S." messages for the immediate dispatch of summer sporting gear. Unfortunately, as I write, snow is beginning to fall which ought to cause my weather prophet to keep well out of sight for a little while.

Difficulties of Summer Sport.

The lack of suitable grounds will undoubtedly cause Sports Officers of units a deal of anxiety in organising summer recreation here, in "Hunland". Certain spots in the occupied area are certainly fortunately situated in this respect — Cologne, Bonn and Euskirchen, for instance — but in the neighbourhood of the majority of stations, the problem of how to convert an undulating plowed field into a cricket pitch or tennis court will require prodigious brain efforts for its solution. However, tolerably good football grounds have been produced from what, at first sight, appeared to be impossible material since our arrival here in December (after our never-to-be-forgetten trek from France) and I have little doubt that with the aid of matting and (for tennis) properly treated sand, summer sports will not be neglected on the score of lack of accommodation.

Our Parting Friends.

It is a peculiar trait of human nature that we value things most after they are gone. This applies to friendship just as surely as it does to more tangible comodities. We are all realising this daily as the number of our "demob'd" comrades to whom we have become dearly attached during (in many cases) over four years of close companionship, grows more and more lengthy. Sad tales reach me at many odd moments during the day of seriously depleted football teams, but it should be remembered that there is some consolation in the knowledge that all teams are suffering similarly.

2nd Lt. J. R. Richards. — Maj. R. St. J. Richards.

The two 7th K. S. L. I. Officers caricatured above (now attached to the 1/7th. Bn. Cheshire Regt.) rendered great assistance to their original battalion in the course of a very successful "rugger" season, now concluded.

In pre-war days "J. R." played for Glamorgan County and was given a place in Welsh International trials, while the Major frequently assisted Marlborough to victory.

London Divisional Football.

Congratulations to the D.A.C. (S.A.A. Section) upon winning the C.R.A.'s medals in connection with the London Divisional Artillery competition. Their defeat of C/126 Brigade was well achieved and decisive, and as these two clubs were leading in the competition, the result of the match determined the winner. The S.A.A. Section will therefore receive the medals.

Prosperous "Bookies".

I ran across a very well known London bookmaker at one of the Divisional Race meetings recently. He had just returnd from leave in England and had many unkind things to say on the matter of his protracted demobilisation chiefly, I think, because he was prevented from "doing" the Lincoln and National. Speaking on the subject of racing, my "Bookie" friend said that the turf commission agents in England are transacting a tremendous amount of business — much more extensive, in the majority of cases than ever before the war. He prophesied that the coming flat racing season at home will attract a record amount of interest, both on and off the course.

R.G.A. C/51 Bde.

The fifth billiard tournament held amongst the billiard enthusiasts of the C/51 Bde. R.G.A. has reached its semi-final stage, the draw for which took place the other evening. The contests, which are held at "Waldschlosser" avoke great interest in the battery and the semi-finals and finals usually attract a good crowd.

THE RAMBLER.

AMATEUR BILLIARDS.

In the amateur billiards championship at Thurston's yesterday, Lieut. Crowneen, amateur champion for Scotland, beat New, by 1000 to 812.

Peall closed with his score at 1686 against Elphien whose score is 834. Among several clever threefigure breaks, Peall scored 113 and 180 with two visits to the table, while his opponent ran up a good break of 101.

FOOTBALL.

LONDON DIVISION ARTILLERY, C.R.A'S MEDALS.

D.A.C. (S.A.A. Section) C/126 Brigade.

The above teams, who were equal in points in the League Competition for the above medals, met at Porz.

The ground was in a bad condition and the climatic conditions were far from being conducive of good football.

The S.A.A. were without Buttleman and Garlick, whilst the Battery team were fully representative.

After a few minutes, play, the Battery centre forward sent in a long ground shot which completely beat the goalkeeper.

A strong attack on the Battery goal resulted in a melée in the goal-mouth from which the S.A.A. team equalized. There was now a spell of midfield play, the defence on both sides proving stronger than the attack.

A few minutes before the interval Mamby received the ball near the half — way line, and after a brilliant dash, sent in a ground shot which the goalkeeper saved. Not to be denied Mamby shot again from the rebound, and by a hard drive completely beat the goalkeeper, giving the D.A.C. the lead.

On crossing over, the S.A.A. teams, who were now playing downhill with the wind behind them, were constantly on the attack, and nearly scored on several occasions, and eventually added another goal to their score, from a magnificent long drive by Mamby which the goalkeeper reached but could not stop.

Result: D.A.C. 3. C. Battery 1.

RACING AT WARWICKSHIRE.

SUNSHINE SAVES THE SPRING MEETING.

It seemed almost a certainty, practically up to the time of racing, that on account of the snow-bound state of the course at Warwickshire, the Spring meeting, which commenced on Monday, would have to be abandoned. Shortly before the advertised time of starting, however, bright sunshine prevailed and made short work of "King Frost". Consequently, an exciting afternoon's sport was enjoyed by a large number of spectators. The first day's results were:

1st Race, All Clear, 9 to 4.
2nd Race, Navaho, filly, 4 to 1.
3rd Race, All Alone, 13 to 8 on.
4th Race, Path, 5 to 2 on.
5th Race, Cashmire, evens.
6th Race, Galciian, 5 to 2.

MORE OPLADEN ECHOES.

Apart from the question of demobilization, which is still the leading topic amongst the "demobilizibles," a matter that crops up frequently is the suggested granting of medals to all members of the Occupation Army in Germany. The hope is expressed that the Government, at present so harassed by the all-important Peace Conference and the threatened strikes, will not lose sight of this question which, it may be confidently assumed, meets with the warm approval of the people at home and abroad.

Last week the "Occupants" Concert Party gave their farewell entertainment at Schlebusch in the presence of a large and enthusiastic audience. The performers were in tip-top form, and a delightful concert was provided. What does the breaking up of this popular company of entertainers of the 6th. Brigdae portend?

It was announced last week that the "Prongs" Concert Party (4th Brigade) is to be resuscitated. It is hoped to bring together another strong combination of artistes.

MOUNTED PAPER CHASE.

The officers, N.C.O.s and men of "C". Battery, 51st. Brigade R.G.A. took part in a mounted paper chase on Saturday last. A good meet assembled and a selected course was taken. The hares represented by 2/Lt. Prescott and Sgt. Freeston started off at 2 pm. and led the hounds into several false tracks which, although keeping most of them at bay, did not prove sufficiently intricate for Bdr. Blenkinsop who came within sight of the hares a quarter of a mile from home, when an exciting chase took place, the hares eventually reaching their home only to seconds before the foremost hare.

AT THE DEUTSCHE THEATRE.

A HAPPY BAND OF "PILGRIMS".

On Monday a crowded audience at the Deutsche Theatre was delighted with the feast of good things laid before it by "The Pilgrims", the concert party of the 26th Royal Fusiliers. Throughout the evening, on all sides, could be heard ripples of laughter, caused by the humour of that trio of joyous pilgrims, G. Gass, 'Monty' Rose and S. Horace Shutt. Long ago, in his native land, the writer has on several occasions enjoyed the finished work of G. Gass, and it was a real pleasure to come once again under the spell of his wit and vivacity.

'Monty' Rose is capable of producing roars of laughter from the saddest audience, though there were few sad faces at the Deutsche Theatre. Dressed as a dear old maiden lady, he was "Longing for Someone to Love Him".

The leading lady "Pilgrim" (as presented by F. M. Mc. Coy) possesses coyness and daintiness which fairly charm one. No wonder G. Gass was eager to praise her charms in the Telephone duet. With the able aid of the merry "Monty", this young lady acquainted the audience with some important things which might happen "Some Sunday Morning". Very agreeable was the pleasant voice of Horace Shutt, and he sang "The Last Watch" extremely well. J. H. Smith and F. Pyke gave excellent help, and the spirited manner in which the happy party presented "Tally Ho" and the "Belle of the Bobbies" deserves nothing but praise. The show ended with a sketch entitled "Rum 'uns from Rome". 'Monty' Rose as Sam (otherwise Hercules) and Horace Shutt as Joe (otherwise Ajax) both succeded in tickling the fancy of the audience while the remainder of the Members performed their parts so everyone's satisfaction. In the earlier part of the evening, the popular band of the 26th Royal fusiliers gave some well known selections and Fgt. Leddington scored a hit with his concertina Solo.

A big double £1.000 programme will be provided at the Holborn Stadium, on Thursday, April 10, when Eugene Criqui and Tommy Noble, France and England's bantam-champions respectively, and Raymond Vittet v. Bob Murriott will be the chief attractions.

General Sir William Peyton, D. S. O., now commanding the cavalry of the Army of Occupation on the Rhine, will preside at the annual dinner of the 15th Hussars Old Comrades' Association, which will be held at Anderton's Hotel on May 10.

GOOD-BYE TO MAJOR DYDE, M C.

A/51 BRIGADE'S FITTING SEND-OFF.

The grim realities of war are past, but the hardships and privations experienced during the fighting period only tend to create, in most units, a closer sense of fellowship and good feeling among all ranks. At least such is the case in A 51 Brigade R.F.A. as evidenced by the large attendance at a concert held in the Kaisergarten, Merscheid, — a spacious hall converted into what is now a commodious billet — organised as a farewell gathering at which the popular O.C. of the Battery, Major W. F. Dyde, M.C., was made the recipient of a present voluntarily subscribed for by all ranks.

The duties of organising the event had been capably undertaken by 2 Lt. W. W. Brown, M.C., who, as entertainment officer of the Brigade, spares no pains to ensure the "boys" having a good time. He was well backed up by the officers, N.C.O.'s and men, for every one who possessed musical talent came to the fore, with the result that Friday evening's venture was one of the most successful in the annals of the Battery. Songs were contributed by Major Rickeard, the new O.C., Lt. E. Guy, 2 Lt. W. W. Brown, 2 Lt. W. T. Jenkins, Sgts. Ashton and Littler; while Spr. Cass, who has gained a sound reputation in the Brigade as a humorist, distinguished himself. Assistance was also given by four members of the "Ripples" concert party (Ptes. Bullinger, Wright, White and Lord).

During an interval in the musical programme, the presentation was made by Lt. Brown who, in a brief but fitting speech, referred to the remarkable fact that the casualties sustained by the Battery had been fewer than any in the division — a tribute to the sound judgment of the Battery Commander in selecting positions etc. The presentation was made amid enthusiastic cheering.

The presents consisted of a realistic pen-and ink drawing of the Battery going into action on the Ypres-Potinge road, by Sergt. White, M. M.; a handsome set of carvers; pair of ornamental candlesticks and an enlarged photograph of the Battery football team.

Major Dyde, who showed signs of emotion on rising to receive the gift, briefly reviewed the history of the Battery from the time of its landing in France in the early days of the war. Speaking in a reminiscent vein he alluded to numerous incidents, some humorous, some tragic, connected with the battles in which the division had taken part and spoke in warm terms of the gallantry of the gunners of the division and also the South African Brigade which distinguished itself when the enemy made its memorable attack of March 21st. The Major, in his resume, mentioned the stay at Mont-des-Cats and admitted that the harassing fire from that position gave the enemy a bad time. Then off they went to Ypres and after that kept going in the right direction. Upon the men who had recently joined the unit he wished to impress the fact that they had come to a Battery which possessed a history to be proud of. It had been said by an individual of high standing that the feature of the last advance was the manner in which the 9th Div. Artillery had acquitted itself; and he (Major Dyde) took that opportunity of thanking the men for their gallantry and the manner in which they had stood by him through hard times. He had to say "Good Bye" but did so with a heavy heart, as the past 12 months with "A" Battery had been the happiest time during the whole of his military career (applause).

The singing of "For he's a Jolly Good Fellow" and three lusty cheers for Major Dyde, who left on the following day for demobilisation, brought a pleasant evening to a close.

52nd RIFLE BDE.

One day last week a game of Rugby took place at Worringen between teams representing the 2nd. M. G. Battn. and a scratch team from the 52nd Batt. Rifle Brigade. As was to be expected, the Gunners won by 15 points to three, after a really good game, notwithstanding that the R.B.'s had never attempted Rugby before.

The 52nd R.B. are as "sporty" a Battalion as one could wish, when they get going. They are now settling down to solid training, and already have commenced work on a sports programme, which it is hoped to bring to fruition in the near future. Colonel Riddell, C.M.G., D.S.O., Major Stoppord, M.C., Second in Command, and Captain Hawkins, MC., Adjt. encourage their men by taking part in the game themselves, whilst Colonel Tyte and Lieut. Clayton (Sport Officer) lend the most valuable aid. R. S. M. Good could not have been born with a name more suited to his sporting proclivities. As a W.O. he has always taken an active part in anything pertaining to sport and games, so that with the greatest encouragement from the top of the tree, the striplings are bound to go in the right direction.

The whole organisation is well kept together by Sergt. Frank Howell, as an energetic Secretary.

WESTERN DIV. HOCKEY CHAMPIONSHIP.

2nd R. Sussex Regt. v 141st. Field Ambulance.

FINAL TIE.

Played at Witterschlick on Monday afternoon. A few minutes after the Bully off, the Ambulance scored through Sergt. Wilson. Play was very fast, and midway through the first half, the Sussex equalised. The Ambulance team did most of the pressing in this half, but the Sussex scored again just on the call of the whistle.

Half time: Sussex 2 goals; Field Ambce 1 goal.

Shortly after the resumption the Sussex scored. Play continued fast, but although the Ambulance combined nicely they had no luck, whereas every raid of the Sussex was dangerous. Near the end of the game the Sussex secured another goal and ran out worthy winners by 4 goals to 1.

Goal scorers: Sussex — Capt. T. Chad 2, Sgt. Pearce 1, Sgt. Harris 1.

At the close of the game, the Divisional Commander, Major General E. P. Strickland C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., in a happy little speech, complimented the teams, and presented a handsome cup to the winners, and medals to the players of both teams.

SPORT IN A NUTSHELL.

On Monday, Harrow School defeated Highgate School, at football 4—0, after a splendid game at Harrow.

Taking advantage of "summer time" which came into force in England on Saturday night, the kick-off of many football matches across the Channel on Monday was not until six o'clock in the evening.

Teams representing Italy have arrived at Aldershot to train for the Inter-Theatre of War Championships which commence on April 19.

Lt. Grennan, 51th Bn. Manchester Regt., won his place in the B.E.F. team by beating Lt. Lawson, who conceded him at least 21lbs.

The 20th Bn. K.R.R.C. has started a dancing class.

At a whist drive held by the 20th Bn. K.R.R.C., the prizes were won by Rfm. G. Bevan, Rfm. Cooper and Rfm. Penny.

The Editor's Letter Box.

FOR ALL OFFICERS TO NOTE.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post:

Sir, — Allow me to congratulate you upon the wisdom you have shown in placing letter-boxes in the Officers' Club at Cologne for the reception of paragraphs etc., for insertion in "The Cologne Post". It frequently happens, with the influence of "My Lady Nicotine," a comfortable chair, and congenial companionship, that recollections of interesting happenings are brought to mind with the accompanying thought "that that ought to go in the paper". But, from my own experience, these thoughts are soon lost and consequently are never recorded.

I therefore say that it is an excellent idea of yours to provide facilities that will enable one to jot down news items or ideas and dispose of them at once without having to go to the trouble of discovering your exact whereabouts and addressing an envelope.

"LANGUID"
Officers' Club, Cologne.

P.S. I am placing this in the said receptacle.

SOME GUARDS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post:

Sir, — In the ordinary course of events, I am not a "nervy" type of individual, but on two successive nights recently I have been subjected to severe shocks to my nervous system which, if repeated, might have disastrous results. On the two dark, still and chilly nights referred to, my homeward journey has been via the Neumarket where the fleet of motor-cars (more impressive than ornamental) appear to be guarded by sentries at the rate of one for every square yard of frontage. Ambling along on the first of these nights, in black darkness, I was suddenly challenged by a fog-horn voice within, it seemed, three inches of my right ear, and I stopped in my course just in time to avoid my nose being grazed by a bayonet. A second sentry ordered me to halt, almost directly afterwards, without my having the slightest indication of his whereabouts and therefore being unable to accept his invitation to "advance and be recognised". Presumabely, this man was unable to see me, because presently I walked away unmolested. On the second night, I had quite a chapter of similar experiences.

Enthusiasm and zeal are commendable qualities when they are directed in useful and proper channels and are not exceded at the dictates of ambition. The Battallions of young soldiers who have arrived in Cologne to carry on the duties previously performed by their elder and more experienced brothers display a praiseworthy anxiety to maintain a general bearing of smartness; but in the matter of sentry duty, I think they are apt to be just a little too zealous. Their chief function when on guard it should be remembered, is not to "put the wind up" weary pedestrians returning to slumber late at night.

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Questions on any subject whatever are invited and will be answered as promptly and as authentically as is possible. — Ed.]

O. A. — The Government reply to the strikes of the munition workers last July was to the following effect. Any men "wilfully absent from their work after July 29 will be deemed to have voluntarily placed themselves outside the area of munition industries — — — and will become liable to the provisions of the Military Service Acts." The result was just what might have been expected.

HANDING OVER.

OUR TRIP TO THE RHINE.

52nd Battalion, The Rifle Brigade.

Under the Command of LIEUTENANT-COLONEL E. P. A. RIDDELL, C.M.G., D.S.O.

There was great jubilation at the Cavalry Barracks, Colchester, when it was made known definitely that the 52nd Battalion, The Rifle Brigade, was one of the chosen units to be included in the Army of Occupation in Germany. All the officers and men were anxious to earn the distinction of serving in this new field of operations, many of the former having taken part in the earlier stages of warfare; it was fitting, therefore, that the opportunity should be afforded these in order to realise the fruits of their arduous labours.

Quite a number of N.C.Os. too, had given an account of themselves, and it was interesting to hear them relate their experiences as familiar places came into view during the tedious journey from the time of landing on French soil to the ultimate arrival in German territory.

The Battalion is particularly fortunate in its Officers from C.O. down to the junior subaltern, and the rank file are "keen as razors" in following a good lead.

Now, a brief description of the trip might serve as a souvenir, hence the attempt of the Battalion Correspondent to relate what came under his personal observation, with "little bits" interspersed from other sources.

The draft leave having come and gone, the family farewells duly performed, everyone settled down and made himself fit as the proverbial fiddle. At length the eventful 27th February, 1919, was reached.

The usual fitting out witk overseas hit had taken place, the packing up of the necessary material duly undertaken, we were ready for the final parade on the Square at Cavalry Barracks. The day of the "A. iv's" life had arrived.

We were to march through the town to St. Botolph's Station, and punctually to the time appointed the Battalion, headed by the band of the 52nd K.R.R.C., and lead by Colonel Riddell, moved off with the familiar "Rifleman Step". Headquarters, Signallers, and details followed closely on the heels of the first party, being headed by the Pipe Band of the 52nd Gordons.

At the station, the entraining of the men was carried out without the slightest hitch in quick time, the bands meantime discoursing lively music until the train moved off. A few more handshakes, then to the strains of "Auld Lang Syne" we commenced our journey en route for Dover.

It was a long run to, and around London, 'ere the port of embarkation was reached. The travellers had taken a last look at old London — the "old stagers" hud experienced the trip on previous occasions, consequently there was nothing new to them.

The night at Dover was passed at a "rest camp" where hot meals were partaken of and much enjoyed after the tedious run from Colchester. Here could be observed those wonders of organization, which is the outcome of experience in dealing with large numbers. Blankets were issued, and the men made themselves comfortable for the night.

Reveillé was sounded at 4.30 a.m., blankets handed in, breakfast partaken of, and at 6.30 the Battalion paraded.

Embarkation was carried out in good order, the numbers taken and in quicker time than it takes to record, everyone was aboard. Lifebelts were fitted as a wise precaution in view of possibilities of stray mines, and punctually at 8.40, anchor was weighed, and we were crossing the "briny".

It was a really delightful trip over, yet there were a few cases of "mal-de-mer". Those who suffered from the little inconvenience, were, however, soon "feeling themselves" again when they set foot on shore at Dunkerque, which was reached at 11 a.m.

THE A. IV. IN FRANCE.

A brief halt at the Quay, and we were once again on the march. By this time, rain had set in, and we experienced what it was to marched through a quagmire of French mud. We wallowed through miles of muddy track, passing en route to the Rest Camp, hundreds of trucks or railway waggons, either captured or taken over from the enemy.

These trucks were to take us into Germany. They seemed to represent every town or province in the country. Some were marked with the familiar eagle, now partly obliterated; some with the crown of Saxony. All had been fitted with stoves, and a kitchen truck had been attached to the train — a greatly appreciated fiature, as we were to live and sleep on this train for at least three days and nights!

After a march of a few miles, we reached a Rest Camp. It was a real Rest Camp — particularly as it adjoined a small Chinese Cemetery! with its curiously shaped mounds surmounted with elaborate artificial floral tributes. Within a hundred yards or so of this burial place we were to spend our first night on French soil.

Since landing at Dunkerque rain had been falling steadily, so that everyone was glad to find some sort of shelter. This took the form of tents, and all were ready and anxious to dispose of packs, draw blankets, and afterwards proceed to the Dining Tent. Here a substantial hot meal was awaiting us, and very much enjoyed. A clean-up was the next procedure; afterwards blankets were put down — oh! those wet blankets; yet we managed to get to sleep in them with a fair amount of comfort — then "Tommy" walked out and commenced to "parlez-vous" with the natives.

The first really pleasant surprise was the facility afforded for obtaining cigarettes at a reasonable price. A young cockney was heard to express himself thus: "You can afford to smoke two fags at a time if 'yer' want to."

Attractions in the Camp were varied, and quite entertaining. For instance, you could book a seat at "The Crumps" or "The Magpies" or even a picture show for the price of one franc or less. The artistes in each place acquitted themselves admirably under great difficulties, for exactly at the time fixed for the commencement of the programme the electric light failed, and candles had to be resorted to. However, popular choruses made up for the lack of light, and a couple of hours passed off very agreeably.

"Lights out" sounded at the usual time, and soon there was peaceful slumber.

Learning Poker.

Parker (heavy loser): "Why the deuce did I learn to play poker?"

Marker: "That's just where you make a mistake. You didn't learn." — London Mail.

Printed and published by "The Cologne Post" at 35 Marzellen-Strasse, Cologne, April 2, 1919.

An officer asked his batman to obtain for him some hot water for shaving from the people at the billet. "You know what hot water is" said the officer. "Yes, Sir" said the batman, "Water hotted up."

An officer was in rather a quandary as to how to transport the valise from his billet to a point about a mile away. His batman relieved his anxiety by saying "Don't you worry sir, I'll conscript something." Of course he was thinking of the word "Commandeer."

The Aiv. is showing great promise in many ways. For instance, I know an officer who possesses a really smart servant. At the first meeting of officer and servant the former in the usual way made know his peculiar desires. "Of course," said the officer, "I would like my 'Gunfire' at 7 a.m." "Yes, sir," remarked the servant, "but who is going to call me?" "Perhaps I could" replied the officer. "Alright, sir, we'll leave it at that, shall we?"

The lesson for the morning was dictation, and the subject taken was "The last fight of the Revenge." The pupil was a little mixed up, as he wrote seriously about "Six English lying battle-ships." The lad was evidently thinking of camouflage!

Hares are plentiful in the Langel district. A budding Lance-corporal having possession of a sporting rifle lent to him, had visions of "jugged hare" looming before his eyes, and in due time proceeded to try his luck on a mating couple. Bang! bang!! rang out as he pulled off. "Did you get him?" asked his officer, looking on. "No, sir," replied the Lance-corporal, "but I gave him a terrible fright."

CAPTAIN FRYATT'S MURDER GERMAN INQUIRY OPENED

POST OFFICE WAGES RAISED

TERRITORIALS TO TOUR TOWN

BATTLE WITH SPARTACISTS AT FRANKFORT

MURDER OF CAPTAIN FRYATT.

GERMAN INQUIRY OPENS.

"The moving finger writes; and having writ,
Moves on; nor all thy Piety nor wit
Shall lure it back to cancel half a Line,
Nor all thy tears wash out a word of it."

It needs no effort of recollection — it spring ins antly to mind when the name of Captain Fryatt is mentioned, that the British Government warned the German Government at the time of his murder that full reparation would be exacted in due course. The surrender of those respon sible for the deed has been demanded.

Yesterday a debate was opened in Berlin before the German National Law Commission to investigate the facts.

The President of the Commission is Professor Schücking; Legationsrat Eckert represents the German Foreign Minister and Captain Vanselow the German Admiralty.

The Prime Minister of the Netherlands, Ritter von Rappard, is watching for England.

Among the witnesses is Captain Danzer of Submarine U 33.

The following are the points to be raised before the Court:—

Whether at the meeting with U boat 33 the S.S. Brussels tried to ram the submarine.

Whether a trading vessel hasthe right to resist a man-of-war.

Although the German evidence says it can be proved that the ramming was attempted, the Norwegian Naval Attaché Mair doubts whether Captain Fryatt really attacked the U 33.

The commission concluded its sitting at 7 pm.

The facts of the Fryatt case are, briefly, as follows: On the 28th March 1915 the S. S. Brussels, commanded by Captain Fryatt, was intercepted by the German submarine U 33, which was then commanded by Captain Geniffer, when eight miles west of the Maas lightship, but was not captured. In June 1916, Captain Fryatt was taken prisoner and retained by the German Naval Division in Flanders. Instead of being interned with the rest of his officers he was tried on the charge of having attempted to ram the U 33 fifteen months earlier, sentenced to death by the military court a Bruges, and there shot.

VISITS TO THE BATTLEFIELDS.

The Army (Annual) Bill passed the second reading in the House of Commons yesterday. It is understood that the Government will propose in the Committee Stage an important alteration in the clause relating to restrictions on discussions and criticism of matters concerning the administration of the army.

CONFLICT IN KOREA.

Reuter's correspondent at Peking telegraphs that on the 26th March twenty thousand Koreans demonstrated at Seoul. Their attitude became so threatening that the military were called out. A hundred leaders were arrested and numerous casualties were sustained by both sides. Serious developments are expected.

BOLSHEVIST DEFEAT NEAR KIEF.

The Ukrainian Army Command intimates that the Ukrainians have captured Borodianka, twenty-five miles from Kief and have also defeated the Bolshevists in the direction of Bordichef. General Peteura's troops are now advancing on Kief from the region of Koromstyn-Zitomel.

PASSED TO YOU, PLEASE.

Replying to a question put by Lt.-Col. Guinness in the House of Commons yesterday, Capt. the Rt. Hon. F. E. Guest stated that in November last the War Office Staff numbered 21,807. Since then it had been reduced by 2,097 and further reductions would be made whenever possible.

Another question elicited the reply that the total number of officers in the Army on full pay is 113,205.

MILITARY STAFF COLLEGE RE-OPENED

Closed in August 1914, owing to urgent requirements elsewhere, the Military Staff College at Camberley was re-opened on Monday.

The number of students is the largest in the history of the college, which is under the command of Major-Gen. Warren Hastings Anders, formerly of the Cheshire Regiment.

POST OFFICE WAGES UP.

ARBITRATOR'S AWARD.

The Court Arbitrator on the wages of Post Office officials has awarded various increases which became operative from 2nd April.

Men whose wages were under sixty shillings weekly receive twenty-four shillings extra, plus a bonus of twenty per cent of ordinary wages.

Women on weekly wages receive fifteen shillings extra.

Salaries are increased by twenty per cent.

TERRITORIALS TO TOUR THE TOWNS.

Sir C. Kinloch-Cooke (Co. U. Devonport) spoke up for the London Territorials, and was informed by Capt. Guest that the Lord Mayor of London (Sir Horace B. Marshall) hoped to arrange for a triumphal march through the metropolis.

It was also stated that applications had been received by the War Office from a number of provincial towns anxious to welcome their own territorial regiments. The authorities are doing everything possible to meet their wishes, and despite the difficulties of assembling men, the plans have every prospect of maturing.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

JAPANESE OPINION.

A mass meeting was held at Tokio at which resolutions were passed expressing the decided opinion that Japan should oppose the formation of any League of Nations which did not stipulate for the abolition of race discrimination.

HAMPSHIRES' HOMECOMING.

Although it was nearly midnight on Monday when the 2nd. Bn. The Hampshire Regiment arrived at Aldershot from Cologne, large numbers of the townspeople awaited them and gave them a rousing reception.

The men were met at the station by Gen. Sir Archibald Murray, who spoke a few words of welcome and appreciation. All the streets on line of route were lavishly decorated with flags and festive emblems.

An address of welcome was presented by the Chairman of the Council at the Municipal buildings, and subsequently the men were entertained to dinner, the function taking place at the Fire Station.

The battalion has had over four years arduous service in Gallipoli and on the Western front, and of the original strength, fewer than one hundred returned to Aldershot.

LOOK AT YOUR MONEY.

Members of the old Army will remember the exasperating frequency with which the tender of paper money of low values in France and Belgium elicited the expression "no bon" from the purveyors of café au lait, chips or alleged beer.

Foreign currency is entirely different to English. In England only the Bank of England is authorised to issue paper money, but on the continent Municipalities, Chambers of Commerce and even private concerns are allowed to issue tokens representing value, first satisfying the State of their ability to pay on demand. These tokens are intended for local circulation only.

The practice has great disadvantages and in Germany these are very obvious. It behoves everyone therefore to be particularly careful, when receiving change, to examine it, otherwise they are liable to suffer loss.

Thus the notes from five marks to one hundred marks issued by the City of Cologne, or any other city or district in the Rhine Province, are cancelled and are not legal tender.

As a general safe-guard therefore no note from one mark upward should be accepted which does not bear either the word "Darlehnskassentchein" or the word "Reichsbanknoter," the former meaning "Treasury loan note" and the latter "State Banknote."

Vouchers for pfennigs are still good for value.

The Lord Chancellor has approved thirty-nine new K.C.'s. This is a record list.

The titles of the Earl of Armagh and the Viscount Taaffe have been removed from the roll.

According to an Amsterdam telegram the Ex-Kaiser intends to buy the estate of Spalterhold, near Beckbergen.

At Naples three hundred and fifty priests voted in favour of the abolition of celibacy for the priesthood.

The German tug Gernot, which was towing a vessel to England, broke loose in a storm and was sunk by a mine. Six of the crew were drowned.

QUESTIONS IN THE COMMONS.

INTERESTING POINTS RAISED.

As was to be expected, question time in the House of Commons invariably brings to the front many points of the utmost interest to all ranks of the Army. With four years of war happily behind us, many matters which could not be discussed and grievances which could not be ventilated while there was so much arduous work on hand, are now being brought forward, and question time is proving at least that memories are long even if reform and redress are long winded.

PRISONERS' SWORDS.

Mr. Cecil Harmsworth stated that it is not proposed to demand the return of their swords from officers taken prisoner by the Germans at the beginning of the war. If this proposal received the support of the Military authorities, Mr. Harmsworth promised to bring it to the notice of the Secretary of State.

OFFICERS' DEMOBILISATION.

Replying to Sir Henry Craik (C.U., Scottish Universities), who asked if it were true that in consequence of the suspension of demobilisation there were many officers in France with nothing to do, Capt. Guest said that demobilisation of officers had not been suspended, but was proceeding as rapidly as circumstances permit.

TERRITORIALS IN INDIA.

Brig.-Gen. Page Croft (N.P., Bournemouth) elicited the information that the number of Territorials sent to India in 1914 who had seen active service was not available at present but was much greater than the general public was aware.

OVERSEAS TROOPS.

In a written answer, Capt. Guest said that the question of an official reception of Dominion troops in London was under consideration by the military and other authorities. A scheme was being prepared and he hoped to make a statement at an early date.

Mr. Macmaster is to ask the Secretary for War whether he has made any preparations or arrangements for the nation to testify its gratitude for the splendid services rendered by overseas troops, and will he afford the public in some of the leading centres of the United Kingdom the opportunity of greeting and honouring representative Units of these troops before their departure.

ARMY OF OUR POLICY.

Under the above heading yesterday's Times has a trenchant article. It says that the greater part of the British Army which defeated Germany has preceded the Commander in Chief in returning home. The smaller part stays behind, but for what length of time depends partly on the settlement partly on the extent of the loyalty wherewith Germany accepts its defeat and on its future relations with Bolshevism. The progress of voluntary enlistment is also a factor.

It is regrettable that the army cannot return all at once. Those critics of Mr. Winston Churchill who say that men could have been got voluntarily have no conception of what war-wearines is. In the army it is duty, not the pleasure of living on the Rhine that keeps men there. The Allied Armies form the chief guarantees against Russo-German combination.

Some critics say that the Army is no longer fighting for principle, but merely collecting debts. Well, debt collecting is an honourable occupation and when debts are due not to selfish ambition but to an ideal future society, the collecting of such debts is not beneath the dignity even of the Army of the Rhine.

VERY DOUBTFUL PERSONS.

Four youths were yesterday sentenced at Dublin to six months imprisonment as "doubtful persons." They were the ringleaders of a party which indulged in illegal drilling. When searched they were found to be carrying documents giving detailed instructions for blowing up bridges, railway stations and police barracks.

Capt. Morgan left Liverpool yesterday with his Martinsyde biplane for Newfoundland, to compete for the transatlantic flight, at the end of which is the £ 10,000 offered by the Daily Mail.

TAX ON BACHELORS.

The Daily Mail political correspondent states that a bachelor tax is almost certain to be a feature of the forthcoming Budget.

Mr. Harold Ashton, the well known journalist, died yesterday.

The labour trouble at Johannesburg is assuming serious proportions. The water and sanitary services are affected.

It is reported that the German Representative in Buda-Pesth is advising Germans to leave Hungary, in view of the serious extent of the looting taking place throughout the country.

Two men entombed in the debris of the warehouse which collapsed at Liverpool have been rescued from the ruins. It is stated that four others still remain below.

Mlle Dorziat, a Parisian actress, was awarded 22,000 francs damages against another actress, Mlle. Toutain, whom she accused of calling her a "Boche". The court ordered the judgment to be inserted in ten newspapers.

DISCUSSION OF SEX PROBLEMS.

ARCHBISHOPS VIEWS.

The Archbishop of York spoke at Middlesborough yesterday on the Moral Welfare of the Community.

War, he claimed, induced sex excitement which was harmful to higher visions and higher instincts.

"The day is past," he said, "when there should be any reserve between men and women in discussing matters of sex. I rejoice that people are now prepared to face these questions without that paralysing influence which has been so deterring to progress in the past."

CANADIANS IN BRUSSELS.

Crowning a series of sporting and social functions which have promoted the most cordial relations between the inhabitants of Brussels and the Canadian troops stationed in the district, the 4th. Canadian Division gave a special gala performance at the Royal Theatre de la Monnaie Brussels, on the 29th inst.

Among those present were the British Ambassador (Sir E. Villiers), Lt.-Gen. Sir A.W. Currie, Major-Gen. Sir W. Watson, Count Athlone and numerous British and Belgian notabilities.

Special trains were run for Canadians from outlying districts.

WANTED! TWO SOLDIERS.

Two men are being sought by the Metropolitan Police in connection with an aggravated assault on the manager of Messrs. Constantine & Jackson, the well known chemists. One man struck the manager on the head with a life preserver, rendering him unconscious, while the other penetrated to the interior of the premises, saying he was going to see a young lady friend. On being informed that there were no ladies in the house the two men made off. They were in military uniform at the time.

OFFICER DECAPITATED.

A gruesome discovery was made on the London and South Western Railway near Worplesden on Monday, the mutilated and headless body of an officer being found beside the track. Search revealed the head some considerable distance away. Papers on the body bore the name of Lieutenant John Proctor, 8th Canadian Reserves.

It is believed he either fell or jumped from the train.

WILSON'S REGRETS.

President Wilson has sent a message to the Lord Mayor of Dublin acknowledging with appreciation the invitation to visit Dublin in order to receive the freedom of that city. He regrets being unable to accept owing to the pressure of other engagements.

HOW DID THEY ESCAPE?

A Viceregal Commission has been appointed under the presidency of Mr. Justice Kenny, to enquire into the circumstances under which prisoners have escaped during the past twelve months from prisons in Dublin, Cork and other places.

DUSSELDORF SOCIALISTS.

The Düsseldorf Workmen's Council, comprising twenty-seven Independent Socialists, seven Majority Socialists and twenty-six representatives of the Middle Class, estimate their monthly expenses at 35 to 40,000 marks, to be furnished by the town.

The demand that one of the Middle class should be included in a delegation of three to the forthcoming Conference of Councils at Barmen was refused. The Socialists are "whole hoggers" and appointed two Independent and one Majorite.

(Kölnische Volkszeitung.)

TO PAY FOR FOOD.

According to the Kölnische Volkszeitung the negotiations, which were opened at Rotterdam concerning the export of German products, in the endeavour to secure a higher standard of exchange for the greater purchasing value of food stuffs will be resumed to-day in Cologne. The products mentioned are wood, coal, sugar and paper. Dr. Schacht, manager of the National Bank, is chairman of the German Commission.

There was a heavy snow-fall yesterday throughout the whole of Switzerland.

During the financial year just ended the total revenue was £ 883,020,825 sterling, exceeding the estimated income by £ 48,970,000.—.

The King and Queen attended a service at Westminster Abbey in memory of men of the three regiments of Household Cavalry who have fallen in the war.

A civilian named Yates and a German prisoner were killed by the fall of a mast which was being hoisted by a cantilever crane at Beachley National shipyard. Another German prisoner was seriously injured.

H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, representing the Army in the London district, and H.R.H. Prince Albert, representing the R.A.F., were to be present yesterday at the Association match at Stamford Bridge.

STRIKES AND STRIKERS.

ENGLAND.

Local federations of miners continue to recommend their members to vote in favour of accepting the Sankey Report. North Stafford and Cheshire have also followed this course.

Metropolitan Asylum workers have balloted whether to strike or not, if their demand for a forty-eight hour week is refused.

The Master Bakers are optimistic. The journeymen want night work to be permanently abolished, and the ground for the Masters' optimism is their conviction that the Government will not remove the restrictions against new bread until they are convinced that the men will not strike.

The miners dispute at Ebbw Vale has collapsed, and operations were resumed yesterday.

GERMANY.

At Stuttgart all shops are closed and martial law obtains. The Government troops and Spartacists came into conflict yesterday, machine guns being used. There are numerous dead.

There are 56,000 strikers in the Ruhr coal district. The Communists are preparing for a general strike.

The number of looters killed at Frankfort is sixteen, of whom four are women. The police have the situation well in hand.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT.

TWENTY-TWO BIGAMISTS.

In the list of cases for the Sessions at the Central Criminal Court seventy-seven prisoners await trial, including De Veulle, charged with the manslaughter of Billie Carleton, and Capt. Rutherford, charged with the murder of Major Seton. There are no fewer than twenty-two cases of bigamy.

"DON'T PITY; FIND HIM A JOB." WELL DONE, ROTHERHAM.

Having on their register 250 ex-service men, all discharged for unfitness and a large proportion of them disabled, the Rotherham Local Advisory Committee made personal visits to large employers of labour in the neighbourhood. Three firms agreed to absorb men. In two weeks 117 men, of whom 90 were in receipt of disablement pensions, were placed. As the result of further efforts by the Committee five other firms came into line and another 45 men were absorbed.

Among the men for whom situations were found were five who had lost their right arms and one his left arm.

Three had artificial legs, while others included sufferers from gun shot wounds, shell shock and gas poisoning.

BLOCKADE OF GERMANY.

Though the blockade of Turkey, Bulgaria and German-Austria has been raised there is no foundation whatever, says Mr. Cecil Harmsworth, for the statement that the blockade of Germany has been raised.

TRANSPORT SUNK.

The Italian transport Umbria, with two hundred soldiers on board, encountered a mine when on the voyage to Tripoli and sank, with a great loss of life. Eighty of the soldiers are missing.

MAY DAY — PEACE DAY.

If peace is declared before May, Mr. Bonar Law has promised to consider a suggestion by Col. Will Thorne that the day shall be observed as a general holiday.

THE ORIENT EXPRESS.

Preparations are being made to resume the Orient Express, but not by the old route. It will pass through the Simplon Tunnel to Belgrade and Bukarest. Later on it will be extended to Athens Constantinople and Odessa. It is expected to start on the 15th of April.

The number of strikers at Essen is now over one hundred and ten thousand.

Sir Thomas Mitchell, late Chief Constructor at Portsmouth Dockyard, has died at the age of 75. He built the first Dreadnought.

The Minister of Labour has appointed Mr. E. C. Cunningham to succeed Sir Stephenson Kent as Controller General of the Department of Civil demobilisation and re-settlement.

A train leaves Cologne daily at 2.24 p. m. for Paris, reaching Liege at 6.20 p. m. and Paris at 8.40 a. m. There is 1st, 2nd, and 3rd. class accomodation, with sleeping and dining cars. The return service starts from Paris at 9.35 p.m. and is due in Cologne at 1.21 p. m.

It is suggested that Primrose day be specially celebrated this year. Several Habitations have arranged to sell primroses on behalf of an effort to provide hospital garments for sailors and soldiers. Social gatherings and a Victory ball will help to swell the proceeds.

An Amendment to the Bill to establish a Ministry of Ways and Communications proposes that railways shall have a separate Ministry. The Home Secretary told the Standing Committee for Bills that the Government intended to stick to their Bill for including railways and other transport services as a national concern, distinct from any local interests.

A NEW NAME BUT THE SAME OLD SPIRIT.

In name the Army of Occupation ceases to exist to-day, for we have been re-christened the Rhine Army. Great changes have been made in the organisation of the armies which have been left to control occupied territory and clear up devastated areas. But so far as our respective duties are concerned we still remain an army to guard the occupied territory.

The Army of Occupation in the beginning was formed from men who had borne the brunt of the fighting which marked the closing episode, and it was fitting that these men should have the honour of marching over the border line — that goal which had been their aim since they had donned khaki.

The Rhine Army is not quite the same thing although there is a great number of the old members and units still with us. Many of the Battalions which came over the border no longer exist, others have been completely metamorphosed.

But the spirit of the army is just the same as that of the Army of Occupation which last November and December made the historic march into Germany. The younger soldiers have already shown signs of the esprit-de corps which has played so prominent a part throughout the war. Let us, who are to remain here awhile, keep up all those traditions which have been handed on to us.

FRATERNIZATION.

There is some Army order which forbids the troops to fraternize with the German people, an order which has caused considerable comment — may be, annoyance — from time to time. The why and wherefore of these comments we cannot guess; indeed, one might almost dare to say that such an order ought not to have been necessary. The experiences of the past four years surely have not been in vain! The utter disregard for Belgian neutrality, the sinking of the Lusitania, the vile system of warfare as exemplified in their submarine work and in more recent times the treatment of our prisoners have, all produced in us a strong sense of utter contempt for these people. And it would be ill that this contempt should vanish. Strictly speaking, the word "fraternization" means to "make friends," and it is inconceivable that any Englishman should make friends with people who have committed such ignominious outrages during the past four years. And yet, perhaps there could be no stiffer order issued to the British soldier. He could go over the top in a flash in the days that are gone, but he finds it very hard to live amidst people with whom he should not be intimate. It is our English spirit, to make ourselves "at home" wherever we may go, and perhaps the average Tommy can be excused if, in living up to English traditions he indulges in a little fraternization. But at the same time it should ever be our aim to keep aloof, provided that we can do so and still be courteous. There is a vast difference between the two, though many may think otherwise. At all times let us be courteous to the enemy, but never let it be said that we, who have been honoured in the privilege of forming part of the Rhine Army have defiled the memory of those who sacrificed their lives in order that Germany should be taught her lesson.

OUR COMMERCIAL RELATIONS.

This brings us to another question, the one of our commercial relations with the enemy. It is regrettable to note that already there are a few in England who are eager to take up transactions with the enemy; there are treble the number of Germans who wish to do likewise with England. Of those few people in England we should like to know more before committing ourselves to any judgment, but it is certain that the census of opinion in England with regard to the recommencement of commercial transactions is decidedly negative.

The other day I heard a German say, "You have won the war, but you have had to pay for it." I remember a similar remark heard in my school-boy days. We had a youth in the school who for several months was "cock of the house" and, as such, he used to bully all the younger and newer lads. But there came a day when an inoffensive and hitherto untested youth was provoked beyond endurance, and he lashed out and put the bully under his foot, though in doing so he received much hurt. It is the remark of a coward who, being beaten, glories and tries to uphold himself in the fact that he had injured the conqueror.

Yes, we have been bruised very badly in this war, and we need no German to point out the fact. It is prominent and ugly and we must let it appear before us as such always. "Forgive and forget" may be a very appropriate aphorism for the smaller and puny affairs of life, but in the present day problems its application would be dangerous. Is it likely that those at home who have lost relatives and friends, husbands, brothers, sons — is it likely that they will readily forgive?

Or is it likely that we who have had to throw off our civilian clothes to don khaki, who had to exchange confortable home-life for hideous trench-life simply because the Prussianism had bubbled over in its intense desire to dominate the world — is it likely that we shall readily forgive?

It is chivalry which prompts the successful boxer to walk across the ring and shake hands with a man who, though beaten, has fought well, but I have known cases in the boxing circle when contestants would not adopt the proceedure. Had the Germans fought squarely and fairly in this war it would have been our debt, as a chivalrous nation, to cross and over shake hands. But the enemy, ignoring many of the conventions laid down, has fought anything but fair. There have been mentioned already enough instances for the proof of this, but innumerable others, such as the murder of Miss Cavell, might be added.

The past four years, after all, have been very profitably spent if all that has been learnt is applied to our future mode of existence and relationship with Germany. On the other hand, though, if these lessons are ignored they will prove to have been the most idle years in the whole history of our great Empire.

THE OMEN OF THE GODS.

BY JUVENIS.

The Roman Commander had just completed his evening tour of the outposts of the 12th Legion of the Roman Army, which was at that time guarding part of the Rhine frontier.

The long summer day had been spent in repelling the attacks of the fierce and warlike Germani, and Julius Severus, one of Rome's keenest young "imperators," flung himself down, exhausted, on his camp bed. The task before him was a difficult one, and his mind was filled with anxiety. He had two legions of veteran troops, some fifteen hundred men in all, with which to stem the violence of the attack of many thousand wild barbarians.

His brain refused to let him sleep, and so he left his tent to wander beside the silent flowing Rhine. As he walked beside the river, looking at the stars above, he prayed to Jupiter and the gods who guarded the destiny of Rome, to give him an omen of success for his plans.

Scarcely had his prayers been uttered, when, as he gazed across the Rhine, lit up in the silvery moonlight, he seemed to see thousands of the Germani engaged in a tremendous battle. Who were their opponents? He recognized, with wonder, the shining steel of the Roman Legionaries. The battle swayed to and fro; the short Roman swords and the long German blades flashed in the deadly conflict. The issue of the battle was clear. Again and again Severus saw the Roman eagles carried forward in the attack, but each time the Germani drove the Romans back by sheer force of numbers. He saw to his horror the eagles of his own 12th Legion captured by the wild barbarians. This indeed was an omen of bad fortune; an omen of destruction for the Roman army. His ambitions for an invasion of Germany were futile; Rome would never conquer the Germani.

The vision, however, was not yet ended. As he gazed over the dark waters, he saw the savage Germani develop from savage barbarism to apparent civilisation. He saw them clad in strange closefitting garments, building a mighty city with magnificent buildings. Towering above all other buildings, Severus beheld a lofty temple, as he thought built in honour of a god, pointing its twin spires heavenward.

Great steel bridges stretched themselves across the river as if by magic, and as if in a dream, Severus found himself in the midst of a seething crowd of Germani, clad in their new and strange apparel. Gone were their long and shaggy locks; they were now well groomed and clean.

Severus listened to their conversation, and learned to his disgust, that the Emperor of these old time barbarians had called himself after the immortal Caesar. Such presumption seemed sacrilege to the Roman; nor was his horror lessened when he learned by their conversation that these Germani aspired to world conquest. The crowd was swaying forward as if to see some strange sight, so Severus pushed forward also, with curiosity. He saw, with sickening dread, column after column of grey coated soldiers, with small spiked helmets, armed with strange weapons, march past. He realised the Germani tribe had commenced its task of attempting world conquest. The sullentramp of feet continued with unvaried monotony. Severus had already counted with consternation more legions of these strange warriors than Rome had ever possessed. It seemed impossible to the old time general, for any nation in the world to check the progress of that human tide. His thoughts flew to Rome, his native land. Would these Teutons overrun Italy, and storm the Eterna City. He dreaded the answer. The vision passed, leaving him to the unpleasant reflection that these uncivilized enemies of his were to be the future masters of the world.

Once more the vision came, and Severus again found himself in the midst of the Germani. Again he saw the crowd pressing forward, and he strained his exes to behold the new wonder. He saw, to his wonderment, the grey — coated soldiers returning from the battle. With the eye of a general he read defeat in their faces: Those orderly columns of men marching sullenly to battle were now a rabble of terror-striken fugitives. Utter confusion reigned; every man struggled to escape from some unseen enemy. Severus beheld a routed army. What could have happened to deal such a crushing blow to so apparently invincible an army?

The answer came; the fugitives had passed; he had beheld the last wreck of the German army, but now the sound of music struck his ears. It was the triumphantmusic of a band heralding the approach of the victor. Severus's thoughts went back to the old processions when a victorious general returned to Rome, but he now pressed forward to see the men who had overthrown the Germani. He saw column after column of fine set men, dressed in strange yellowish garbs, swing into the city. They carried no steel armour, but were armed just like the Germani. He gazed with admiration on the cheery faces of these wonderful warriors. They were soldiers indeed, but from what country had they come? He heard the crowd talk of Britain, but he could not credit the idea. That little island where he had served as a centurion, and whose fair maidens he still remembered so well, could never have produced an army such as this, capable of hurling to destruction such a fighting force as the Germani had put in the field.

Still wondering at the strange scenes he had beheld, Severus found himself alone once more. The river still flowed by, but gone were the mighty buildings, the twin spired temple, the great steel bridges. The dawn was breaking in the east, and Severus was awakened to the tasks awaiting him by the centurion on duty who had sought him to warn him of an approaching attack by the barbarians. Severus returned to his duties with a heavy heart. He was a true patriot, a "citizen of no mean city." Jupiter had granted his prayers; he had beheld the future; and he had witnessed the overthrow of the Roman power. He had seen the rise of the Germani to power, and then above all the exaltation of the British, a people he had almost despised. Truly the ways of the gods were strange. These Germani were to strong for proud Rome in their barbarian state, yet, even in their power, little Britannia would accomplish what Rome had failed to do.

The thought took all ambition from the mind of the young "imperator". He could not live to witness his country's overthrow, so in the battle which ensued, he recklessly sacrificed his life, choosing to die rather than behold the degradation of his native land.

Officer's instruction to an inexperienced batman (overheard):

I want to be called at 7.30. If I am lucky and you do it, I get breakfast. If I am not called by 8 o'clock, leave it, because I don't get breakfast. I like a cup of tea in the morning but I don't expect it. I like my brown boots cleaned with brown polish and not dripping, and I like both boots cleaned, even if you have to put in night work. My puttees get muddy at times. This is not for camouflage purposes and should be removed.

THE LETTERS OF ROSINE.

by S. R. D.

Bonn. Dienstag,

MEINE LIEBE KLARA.

What a dreadful journey from Hausendorf! And the trouble to get into the Zone. If it for a charming D.A.P.M. had not been I should have got here noch nicht. But he was ever so sweet, und er spricht deutsch sehr gut. The English aren't a bit terrible after all. Tears gathered in his eyes when I told him of the death of meine Tante and he promised to be a Bruder to me. Of course, he was very strict and proper, and took my name and address, and a photo.

* * * * *

Es ist gut to wear the decent clothes again; I've burnt all my old paper ones. But, meine liebe Klara, what a price! And just as bad with our gallant victors, nicht wahr? I beliefe the price of Unterkleidern ("undies" is the quaint Englisch idiom), is absolutely prohibitive in Großbritannien. My heart goes out to the Scottisch soldaten these cold days. But they say a kilt is very warm. I hear that the tartan and kilt will in fashion be here with us very short (very soon, I mean). But not, I hope, till Spring gets a bit of a move on.

* * *

Talken Sie Englisch? I'm learning fast, from a Britisch Offizier billeted next house. I believe he is a rather important person, — he is a Staff, and has little splashes of red all over him. One evening he teaches me the Englisch, and the other evening I to him the Deutsch teach. You'd to death be tickled him to hear repeating "Haben Sie gut geschlafen?" So intensely earnest is he all about it. And I'm learning things fast. I'm coming on, as it was.

* * *

The fashionable hour is fünf. Everybody who ist anybody joins the promenade on the Platz. Ach, the Musick! It the sight of life is to see the band marching up and down with the big Trommel going biff, bang, umph, — whack, zonk, whang, — tootle-ootle-oo, tootle-ootle-oo, and as follows. The Trommer twirling his sticks, now rechts, now links, zhumph, whizz, thonk; and the baby trommels whir-r-r-r-r, rap-rap, and the little waistles tootling all the time in spite of the noise. Jah, es ist gut! Up and down they go, in and out, round and round, their feet moving like the clockworks. It is the Retreat. No wonder the sun sets when the Britisch Empire comes.

* * *

But how good it is the order to have. The laws have respect and the affairs as business usual go on. How silly of us to want to fight the nice people. Let us have them here to buy in our shops. That's the worst of letting men manage the State of affairs! It was bound that the Motherland should beat the Vaterland.

* * *

Have you the story of Elise heard, and her carte de visite? Last year when they made us to carry our photos about with us, there was such a rush at the Photograph that some of us were made to look like der Teufel. So the other day Elise had her picture taken tres chic, and she was to be seen in the filmiest of wrappings doing a high kick. (Do you remember how she kicked the hat of Professor Umphfig from off his head at the University Supper in the palmy days?) Well, one evening last week, she was running like Kinderella to got indoors by nine, when she was stopped by the military! She produced her identity card with the new photo. Ach, la, la! She has had to stay home ever since, for the competent military authority placed her "out of bounds." And she the niece of a Burgermeister!

I've had a pair of dear little silver spurs made, and wear them strapped to my shoes. I was some sensation, as the Canukes put it. I got the idea from a dear old Major who is billeted in the house. His room is next to mine, and I hear him dropping his leg boots off and banging down his things at night. He always apologises next day for the noise he makes, and for disturbing me. As he is a dear old thing, I quite forgive him, especially as he gives me such lovely presents of chocolate.

Tell me how you are getting on at Köln. Is the Cathedral still there? I'll run up and see you in a day or two.

"FRATERNISING".

Beautiful auburn hair, she had an appealing look that went straight to the heart, and she wanted to be friendly. The sentry, to whom such advances were made, felt flattered, but the ban against fraternising, and the guards' restrictions upon social intercourse while on duty, held him in admirable restraint for the nonce only. The longer she dallied, the more he became enamoured. He was enslaved by her irresistible charms. Who could resist such friendly advances? — for she was a regular beauty. Deciding to ignore entirely all the rules of the guard, he lavishly encouraged such friendly advances, and, ere long, the couple became very good friends. Indeed, many of the passers-by could be pardoned if they thought that the behaviour of the pair was a trifle too lover-like in the public-street, in broad daylight. They trembled to think what would happen to the sentry, were an officer to appear on the scene. For a glance from those melting brown eyes, the sentry dared all things, and would suffer gladly all the pains and penalties the Army cared to inflict. He was playing with fire.

Suddenly, an officer appeared round the corner. The sentry sprang to attention, saluted hurriedly, and a trifle shamefacedly it must be admitted. Contrary to expectation, the sentry did not receive the rebuke he merited. His female companion still remained by his side, and that fact probably saved him. Forthwith, the officer fell a victim to the alluring wiles of the fair creature. He made a bolder guiler than the sentry, and attempted to stroke her shoulder and whisper something in her ear. She repelled such amorous advances, retiring slowly and showing marked disfavour. Nothing the officer could do would bring the "darling thing" to his side. Reluctantly the officer departed, leaving the new fond lovers together once more.

* * *

A sagacious little Airedale she was — a true representative of the canine breed. She knew, apparently, that the sentry would not fail to keep a little bit of his dinner for her. There she remained, sitting docile at his feet until the rations came up.

An interesting reminiscence of 1914 may be seen just outside Cologne at the Aerodrome. It is the first British Aeroplane captured complete and intact by the Germans.

Interesting also is the colossal Bosch 'plane which may also be seen here.

At present we go to England by train part of the way. In a few years we shall go the "hole" way.

THE APRIL SKIES.

April is a good month to commence the study of the night skies because the evenings are becoming milder and there is still sufficient darkness before "Last Post" to make it worth while. It is a good subject to tackle because the sky is at present without any quibbling, an international possession. Everyone will remember that picture of Bairnsfathers "to think that that same dear moon looks down on him" and although the aspects in that special instance were slightly different, the fact remains that astronomy is a study that one can carry on in conjunction with someone at home — or abroad. And the sky is always there — although sometimes hidden by cloud — and is always the same, free sky. No elaborate preparations are necessary, no test-tubes to wash, no grease paint to put on or wash off. With this in mind we have persuaded the Editor of "The Cologne Post" to give a summary of the things to note in the sky during the month.

Find the North Star, or Pole Star as it is often called; that never moves from its relative position enough to matter and forms a useful point of reference for the other bodies which are constantly changing their apparent positions. If you do not know where to look for it ask some other fellow, most soldiers know it, and when once located properly it cannot be forgotten. At the same time you will learn the position of The Great Bear, the Plough, The Waggon or The Dipper, to give it some of the other popular names by which it is known. This is a "constellation", that is to say a group of stars which never change their relative positions, one to the other, and to which the ancients gave fanciful names e. g. The Great Bear, Cassiopeia, Orion and so forth.

Taking between 8 p. m. and 9 p. m. as a suitable time we note the principal constellations to be seen during April. To begin with we will suppose the star-gazer to be facing true north. To the right of the Pole Star and a little higher in the sky is the Great Bear itself with its seven fairly bright stars presenting the shape of "The Dipper" of which the three stars forming the handle extend away to the right (east).

Following the curve of the handle we come to a bright, reddish star named Arcturus, the brightest star in the constellation Bootes. This star, in its composition and temperature, is very like our Sun and is actually moving through space at something like 300 miles per second, thus beating even the aerial post, not to mention the Cologne Express. As its distance is such that light, travelling at 183,000 miles per second, takes over 40 years to travel from the star to our solar system, there is small danger of a collision.

Allowing the eye to travel from the Pole Star to The Great Bear and then about as far again beyond, one sees the constellation Leo (The Lion), with its bright star Regulus as the lowest member, of a group of six having the outline of a reaping hook and hence known as "The Sickle". This group also forms the head and fore-part of The Lion which is seen lying down and facing west: but the whole configuration is upset at present, because the bright planet Saturn happens to be near to Regulus.

Now looking south-west we see the brightest star in the heavens, Sirius, or "The Dog Star", which belongs to an otherwise rather inconspicuous constellation named Canis Major (The Great Dog). Sirius is noticeable for its apparent rapid changes of colour, an effect produced by the earth's atmosphere, and is notable as having the great velocity of about 1000 miles per minute.

About half-way between Sirius and the Great Bear we see two stars of nearly equal brightness, known as Castor and Pollux, respectively, and forming with other stars, less bright, the constellation Gemini ("The Twins"). With even a moderate telescope it may be seen that Castor, the upper one of the two, is a "double star" while the science of spectroscopy has revealed to us that each star of the two forming the double star is itself double. The constellation of Gemini presents an unusual appearance at present owing to the intrusion of that wanderer, the planet Jupiter which easily outshines The Twins. The bright star about half-way between Sirius and The Twins, and a little to the east of the line joining them, is Procyon the brightest member of the constellation Canis Minor (The Little Dog).

To the right (west) of Sirius is one of the finest constellations in the heavens, Orion ("The Hunter") easily recognised by the straight belt of three stars, equally bright, equally distanced. Immediately below "The Belt of Orion" is the "sword handle" which includes the marvellous "Great Nebula in Orion" an object of intense grandeur as seen through a good telescope, and sometimes, on really clear nights, visible to the naked eye: it then appears as a small hazy patch although in reality it is an enormous mass of glowing gaseous matter the extent of which far exceeds the limits of human imagination.

We now come to the smaller fry, our brothers and sisters in the Solar family, the planets and their satellites, or moons.

Mars — the god of War — has rightly removed itself from our sight as an evening star, setting so soon after sunset as to be invisible to unaided sight. Its two satellites Fear and Panic accompany it of course.

Jupiter, the big brother of the family, having about a thousand times the diameter of the earth, is still visible in the constellation Gemini (The Twins) in the S. W. four of its nine moons can be seen, circling around it, with quite moderate optical aid. Jupiter will apparently be near to our moon at 9 p.m. on the 6th the moon being about six times its own diameter south of the planet.

Saturn, one of the most beautiful sights to be seen through a telescope because of the wonderful system of filmy rings which surrounds it, is to be found in the south-east, in the constellation Leo (The Lion) just after sunset. None of Saturn's ten moons can be seen without employing powerful optical aid.

Our own satellite, the Moon, will set at about 8 p.m. on the 1st. and should be seen as a narrow crescent in the west about the 3rd. From then onwards it rises about an hour later each evening until the 20th when it rises after midnight: it is "full" on the 15th.

Thus duringthe earlier days of the month there will be no less than twenty "moons" in that part of the sky which is above our horizon during darkness, but the majority of them would need a sort of H. V. telescope even to see them.

Venus, the goddess of Love, forsakes us quite early, going to bed just after sunset, but may be caught if looked for due west about 7 p. m.

Meteors, or "shooting stars", should be looked for about the 20th.

FOOTBALL.

1st Round, 14th Brigade League.

Played at Beusl.

The 52nd scored 5 goals to their opponents' 2 in the first half of the game. Resuming, the 51st pressed, but their shooting was weak. The 52nd added another goal to their total, and came out winners of a fast game by 6 goals to 2. The game was much more evenly contested than is suggested by the score.

THE SPORT OF KINGS.

HIS MAJESTY TO GO RACING.

His Majesty King George, in reply to a letter from the National Workmen's Council, has stated his intention of running horses in his own name and colours this season.

This decision will be received in racing circles with the greatest gratification.

His Majesty's father, the late King Edward VII, always displayed the greatest pride in his racing stables, and attended many race meetings.

Among the important races he won were: The Derby Stakes and the Two Thousand Guineas, both in 1909 with Minoru.

THE WILDE-LYNCH FIGHT.

REFEREE'S DECISION CRITICISED.

Sporting circles in England on Tuesday and yesterday discussed very keenly the decision of the referee in the Wilde-Lynch fight which took place at the National Sporting Club on Monday.

There seems to be a wide diversity of opinion as to whether the referee's verdict was justified, and many experts say the match was so evenly contested that a definite decision, one way or the other, was impossible to arrive at.

It is interesting to recall that Jimmy Wilde has been the central figure in two contests with Americans, the results of which have been strongly questioned.

INTER-SERVICES RUGBY: THE NEW ZEALAND TEAM.

In the contest which will decide the championship of the Inter-Services Competition the New Zealand team against the Mother country on Saturday will be the same as that which defeated South Africa last week:

O'Brien: Ford, Stohr, and Storey; Fea and Ryan; Brown, Sellars, Hasell, Cockcroft, Kissick, Wilson, Bellis, Fogarty, and Singe.

VI. CORPS OFFICERS' CLUB.

REVIEW OF ACTIVITIES SINCE 1916.

The history to date of the VI. Corps Officers Club which now carries on its activities in Hohe Strasse, Cologne, makes interesting reading. First opened at Avesnes-le-comte in August 1916, the club immediately established itself a welcome and popular institution. Since then, movements of the club have been many, both forward and backward, according to the disposition of the fighting line. In August, 1918, the exigencies of the period involved evacuation from Behagnies and it is a creditable fact that everything on the premises was saved.

ON NEWCASTLE SPRING RACES

The RACING CALENDAR announces:— The Stewards of the Jockey Club, having received an official report that the stabling at Gosforth Park, which has been occupied by the military authorities as a veterinary hospital, could not be cleared and rendered free of infection in time for the the meeting advertised to take place on April 21 and 22, have, in the interests of owners, requested the stewards of the meeting to abandon the fixture.

SPORT IN A NUTSHELL.

In a Lancahire section football league match yesterday, Southpark Vulcan beat Stockport County 7— 2.

Whittingham, having decided to return to his old love, has signed on again for Chelsea.

YESTERDAY'S RUGBY.

AUSTRALIAN FORCES' EASY WIN.

A Rugby Football match which attracted considerable interest was played yesterday afternoon on the Riehl ground, between the Australian Forces and 2nd Bde. R.A.F. A large ground watched a rather one-sided game which resulted:

Australia	38 pts.
2nd Bde.	0 pts.

YESTERDAY'S "SOCCER" RESULT.

The 56th Bn. Royal Scots yesterday defeated the 51st Bde. R.F.A. by 3 goals to 1.

LAWN-TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIPS.

BROOKS BOUND FOR ENGLAND.

Norman Brooks, the world's champion lawn-tennis player, will arrive in England from Australia next month for the tennis championships at Wimbledon, to be contested in June.

He has invited G. Patterson, who, although only twenty-three years of age, has achieved the distinction of being one of the most promising players at present in England, to partner him in the Tournaments, and the invitation has been accepted.

Brooks, who became world's champion in July, 1914, by virtue of defeating A. F. Wilding, won the men's singles championship in 1917. In addition, he is a keen golfer, and has played in the Davis Cup six times. He is an Australian and is 41 years of age.

Patterson, who hails from Melbourne, is acknowledged to be one of the hardest hitters ever seen in England. He is expected to win the Covered Court Championship next week.

JOTTINGS FROM ZONS.

The 6th London's in common with the rest of the Army of the Rhine, is busy settling down to its job. The major part of the Battalion is to be found in the little old world village of Zons am Rhein, which, with its picturesque towns and crumbling old walls, dates, I understand, back to the 17th century.

The afternoons are given over to sport. Soccer claims every man these days, and some exciting displays of good football have been witnessed.

"A" and "B" Companies are becoming very busy, and a keen spirit of rivalry is springing up between the teams. Last week a match took place between the two companies, which resulted in a pointless draw. This by no means represents the play as "A" Company hung well together, and sheer ill-luck was all that prevented them scoring. A return match had been arranged for this week but had to be postponed till next week. Next week's fixtures will also include a match between "B" and "D" Companies. "C" Company is just as keen, but just at present the stern call of duties demands all their time. On Monday last the Oxford and Buckinghamshire Light Infantry, brought over a rattling good team to play against the 6th. The result was never very much in doubt, and the visitors romped away to victory with a score 4—0. Outclassed to a certain extent, the sixth still put up a good fight, but a couple of stone-wall blocks held off all attacks. The game caused tremendous enthusiasm.

The Battalion Inter-Platoon Competition is to commence as soon as possible.

Battalion and Company Sports Officers have a big job in hand as a programme embracing almost every form of sport in existence has been drawn up. It is however, a pleasant task and with the cordial co-operation of the rank and file all should go well.

STILL ANOTHER "Y.M."

OPENING OF DURHAM HOUSE, RIEHL.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL METCALFE'S TRIBUTE TO Y.M.C.A.

The large Beer Pavilion and Gardens in Riehler Strasse, next door to the Zoo, known as Zum Riehler House has been acquired by the Y.M.C.A. as Canteen and Recreation House for the men of the 76th Infantry Brigade who are quartered in Riehl Barracks.

The Building is an ideal one for such an establishment and comprises a large hall capable of seating 700, a billiard room, a lending library, an educational reference library, a reading room, canteen and refreshment rooms, as well as a tea garden and sports ground.

The opening ceremony was performed on Tuesday, by Brigadier-General F. E. Metcalfe, C.M.G., D.S.O., Commanding 76th Infantry Brigade. The large hall was completely filled with Officers and men of the Brigade.

General Metcalfe, in an excellent speech, spoke very highly of the magnificent work and organisation of the Y.M.C.A. throughout the whole war, and briefly outlined the wonderful programme which the Y.M.C.A. have organised for the education and recreation of the young soldiers now forming part of the Army of the Rhine. In thanking the Organising Secretary and Staff of Workers he stated that the Y.M.C.A. never attempted any scheme without making it a large success, and if they only accomplished one half of the programme which they have prepared for the Army of the Rhine they would be doing a greater service to the young men of the nation than has ever before been attempted.

The first half of the musical programme was provided by the magnificent Band of the Suffolk Regt. of 40 Musicians, under the leadership of Bandmaster H. E. Adkins, Mus. Bac., A.R.C.M., who played enjoyable selections of music, every item of which was splendidly received by the large audience.

The Soloist was Capt. T. F. Furnell, M.C., Staff Captain, 76th Infantry Brigade, who sang "An Old Fashioned Town," and "Tommy Lad," in excellent fashion.

The second half of the programme was provided by the Brigade concert party "The Tonics" who kept the audience highly amused until 8.30 p.m.

The future list of events includes Cinema Shows, Concert Parties, Band performances, Lectures, and Whist Drives.

One of these Entertainments will be provided every evening.

It was quite evident from the enthusiasm of the men on this occasion that Durham House is destined to be an exceedingly popular institution.

AFTER FOUR YEARS' FIGHTING.

RETURN OF R.G.A. BATTERY TO ENGLAND.

The 29th Heavy Battery, R.G.A., which is one of the old time serving batteries, is now under orders to return to England, from Bonn, and will, within a few days, arrive in Woolwich. On the 12th September, 1914, the Battery embarked for France, and since that time, it has been in almost every important engagement on the Western front. During its service, it has fired upwards of 183,000 shells. Out of 200 men who left England with the Battery only 30 men will return.

Lieut. S. Bennell, who went out with the original Battery as a sergeant, will be in charge of the homeward-bound party.

A NIGHT ALARM.

FIRE IN A BILLET AT GEICH.

It is not often, that we have much in the way of excitement especially since taking up our abode in the Vaterland, our last bit of diversion dating back to the new years festivities? In the gay atmosphere of Solingen, which place, we notice, has come under the band of one of our home papers as being "A dirty, disreputable place". We only wish the writer could see us now!

We are in a village called Geich, the most benighted out of the way spot that ever the troops stayed in. They say that the good folks of "Glesco on the Clyde" have a subscription for the boys in Solingen. Patrons of this city's excellent tram service are requested to remember "the wee red boxes" (a typically "Glasgo" touch) for comforts for the Rhineland troops.

If they knew our estate, which may be likened to one of "sin and mysery", they would call for a Battalion of Tanks at the toute suite to extract the nimble coin from the Glaswegians or, better still, "boost" a grand international at Hampden. If it were not for an occasional trip to Cologne or the prospect of one, it would be sheer isolation to leave us here. It was following one of these too infrequent days out that we returned to our billets, if not in the "wee sma' oors," at least later than the average time limit of the "Swaddie".

After an extra good supper the troops retired, and it was in the dark of the early morning that I was awakened by the clatter of falling stones and tiles. Starting up, I was aware of a dull red glow in the windows, and became alive to the fact that the room was full of smoke. Hastily waking my bedmate we roused the rest of the boys and started to carry our kit to safety, after which the boys gave help to the almost paralised householders to get the fire, which had started in a barn at the back at the house under way.

With their yeoman aid, and the assistance of the village fire brigade with the usual antiquated pumping contrivances, the bulk of the household effects were saved and the flames confined to the straw shed.

It has been said that there is a humorous side to everything, and it is certain that we found the humour on this occasion, especially as I found that someone had put my boots in the first lurry and I was compelled to wander around to a new billet bare footed amid mud and snow.

NO MORE RACING IN HUNGARY.

The Bolshevists in Hungary have decided that horse-racing is a superfluous luxury and they are accordingly abolishing all race-courses and are converting them for the purpose of agricultural production.

CROSS COUNTRY RUNNING.

The 51st Bn. Royal Sussex Regt. held their Inter-Platoon Cross Country Run, at Wahn. The course, which was rather heavy owing to the wet weather, was over a distance of 4½ miles.

Out of a field of about 200 runners Private S.H. Hall of "T" Company was first man home, his time being 30 minutes.

No. 9 Platoon, "T" Company, was not only the winning platoon (as it was on the privious run) but it also had the first two men home in the whole Battalion.

The Runners in the Winning team were:— Private C. L. Hall, L/Cpl. C. B. Warren, Pte. W. J. Reade, Pte. A. H. Dalton, Pte. T. P. L. Hamilton, Pte. W. H. Howard, L/C J. H. Weeks, Cpl. E. H. J. Hall, Pte. C. E. Watkinson, Pte. S. Walker, Pte. R. C. Sweeting, Pte. G. W. Lyne, Pte. G. H. Bailey, Pte. M. J. K. Leech, Pte. A. W. Payton, Pte. H. M. Walton.

SPORTING REFLECTIONS.

In off the Red.

The appearance of a real English billiard table, with real pockets and with a baize area large enough to enable us to renew our acquaintance with the "Long Jenny" is sufficient to cheer the hearts of all billiard enthusiants in Cologne. Consequenty, there is much rubbing together of hands in happy anticipation of a hundred or two up by those who have examined the paraphernalia outside the door of the smoke-room in the 6th Corps Club. Those bits and pieces of wood and slate that are lying jumbled together in a heap are parts of the excellent billard table, which, in former premises of the club brightened many a happy hour in the days of fighting.

Who will Organise a Handicap?

But what is one among so many? There must be hundreds of officers in the district who experience but little consolation in walking round and round the miniature pocketless tables that appear exclusively to represent the billiard facilities of Germany, as a substitute for the erstwhile joys of running out in a close game with a series of losing hazards. There is sure to be a long queue (I have just observed the pun, which was not inflicted intentionally) of waiting players during practically the whole day and evening, so that the organisation of a handicap would perhaps be to much tos expect. Nevertheless, if it could possibly be arranged, such a project would be immensely popular.

"Meredith, we're in."

I was asked the other day by a member of a Cheshire Battalion if I could throw any light on the question of the system in vogue for the distribution of seats at the Cologne Opera House. He had tried all kinds of methods of getting a ticket for one of the shows but without success. The nearest approach he had had of satisfying his desire was when he walked boldly up the stairs of the building, avoiding anyone who looked at all like an official, and plumping into the first vacant box seat he came across. The overture was just starting and my friend probably cursed himself for not having thought of so easy a method of entry. But like the well-known Meredith, he discovered he was not so safely installed as he had imagined for one by one, the ticket-holders came on the scene and took their seats. Each each seat he tried in succession until once more he found himself outside in the cold cheerless night.

How to Get Opera Tickets.

I have been asked to state for information of all and sundry, that allotment of tickets is made "through the usual channels". That is to say, the Army Amusements Officer, after juggling about with the figures at his disposal, makes a definite allotment of accommodation to each Corps. These are again divided up and hustled off to Divisions who, in turn, after deducting their little quota, pass the balance onto the Brigades from whom the Battalions get their score (I was almost tempted to put a query mark after this word). Therefore, if a battalion considers it is not receiving its fair allotment, the Amusements Officer should make it his business to approach his Brigade and find out exactly to what number of seats he is entitled, and on what nights they are due.

Sunday Football.

Among the matches to be decided on Sunday next are those between the R.A.O.C. and the 153rd. Labour Coy, and A.P.S. and 10th Corps P.S. The grounds whereon these matches will be played are yet to be finally decided. They will be made known in this column probably tomorrow.

Grossmith and Laurillard Visit.

The anticipated visit of the Grossmith and Laurillard Company, whose arrival in Cologne to entertain us by putting on some dear old London shows at the Deutsche Theatre, is for the time being, held up pending the approval of the "Powers that be." Let us hope that the delay will not be too long. It is true we have a generous sprinkling of really talented parties dodging about the occupied area, but that the present supply available is inadequate to entertain all those who desire to be entertained is evident by the fact that every night men are unable to get their noses into any show, so severely is the seating accommodation taxed.

Who would be an Amusements Officer?

Talking about entertainments I should imagine the Amusements Officer's job is far from being all beer and skittles. Consider, for instance, the cold shudder down the back that this telegram is calculated to produce: "Cancel 'Robin hood' engagement at Deutsche Theatre. Two chief artistes called away through illness." This, after all arrangements have been made, and followed by a second stunning blow in the shape of an intimation that the "Tabs" due to appear at the Apollo Theatre, in revue, have had to cry off owing to five members of the company being called away suddenly.

Army Athletic Meeting.

Negotiations are progressing satisfactorily for an Army Athletic meeting to be held at the end of the present month. A programme of field events is being compiled, which will include a long distance race, that promises to provide a capital afternon's sport. Particular attention is being bestowed by the organisers on the arrangements for the provision of refreshments and good and plentiful music, matters very frequently neglected by the promoters of athletic meetings.

Contributors Please Note.

A large number of reports of football matches and other sporting news has poured into this office since the advent of "The Cologne Post" was first mooted. Obviously, the inclusion of many of these reports in our columns would be of very scant interest, dealing, as they do in the majority of cases, with events anything up to a month old. The Editor wishes me to thank these contributors, and to inform them that although their efforts are apparently wasted, he hopes the non-appearance of their screeds will not discourage future contributions. This is a daily newspaper, and it will be generally agreed that by inserting anything that is not within the category of "red hot" interesting news we should be failing in our duties.

Gladsome Golf.

Two officers who spent a couple of hours on the Cologne Golf course yesterday evening did not seem to be very greatly impressed with the excellence of the place. "It's not a bad excuse for walking about in a country atmosphere and getting a little air and exercise", said one of them, "but for a serious game of golf, the facilities make its comparison with real golf about equal to the relationship between marbles and billiards". So that's that. But I understand the matter is going to be taken in hand — by whom, at present, I know not — and three more holes added to the existing five, as well as a little variety in the way of bunkers.

MORE OPERA TROUBLES

TO THE EDITOR OF THE COLOGNE POST.

Sir, — It was very pleasing to note in this morning's issue a letter and also in your first issue, a small paragraph dealing with the question of behaviour at the Opera House.

That such remarks should appear so early in your paper seems to me a testimony of your future value. At the same time I must regret that such letters have need to be published, especially in a country crammed full of people straining their necks to find out our weaknesses and comment upon them. The Major who wrote your yesterday letter dealt fairly fully with the grievances of opera lovers. But one important point he omitted, and that is smoking. People go to the opera, I presume, because they like to hear, and they like to hear the very best that can be given. Yet one cannot expect an actor or an actress to give of his or her best in a room beclouded with smoke. It is grossly unjust and inconsiderate to those who have to use their voices for such a lengthy period. Then again to smoke in a close room with little ventilation is to undermine one's own health and comfort. It may seem quite paltry, but nevertheless it is true and serious.

I hope your paper may be the means of making an alteration in the seemingly paltry yet highly-important features which at present mar all the beauties and benefit of opera-going. —

FADDIST.

A SUGGESTION.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— In to-days Cologne Post appears a letter signed "G. L. S., Major", in which the writer draws attention to the behaviour of the late-comers among the audience at the Cologne Opera House.

I would suggest the following remedy. Every ticket should be sold on the condition that the user be at the Cologne Opera House in time to take his seat before the performance commences. At 15 minutes before the performance commences the doors should be closed to all-comers without exception. A warning to that effect should be printed on every ticket and the attention of each purchaser should be drawn to it by the ticket seller. The result would be that, say, 95 per cent of the persons obtaining tickets would receive a complete enjoyment of the Opera, while perhaps five per cent (those who are careless of the rights of others), would be disappointed.

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Questions on any subject whatever are invited and will be answered as promptly and as authentically as is possible. — Ed.]

A. D. — Mercury is the nearest planet to the Sun, and the smallest in the planetary System, appearing sometimes to the west and sometimes to the east of the sun, but never at any distance. When to the west, Mercury appears as a morning star; when to the east, it is an evening star.

THE ADVENTURES OF THE ORDERLY SERGEANT

Everybody has seen him. The fellow — generally a full Corporal — who violently digs each member of the unsuspecting front rank in his respective fifth rib in vain endeavours to count the number "on parade"; who stands, the connoisseur of admiring eyes, in the centre of a group of Officers, striving to create a dozen or so men with the point of his pencil and his imagination; who comes into the Barrack Room with that aggressive, "What-are-you-on" air, and is astonished to find that everybody has taken a violent and unaccountable attraction for the latrines; who is so paternally keen on one's getting into bed at 10 p.m., but on the other hand is even more insistent on one's arising therefrom at the awkward and matutinal hour of six-thirty; who is observed at 6.30 a.m. (should there be anyone awake to observe him) flying down the stairs at a pace dangerous for his life and limb, and at 6.32 a.m., flying up same with a speed that materially damages the prestige of the R.A.F.

Of course, the popular idea holds the Orderly Sergeant to be a gentleman of abnormal gymnastic abilities, and moreover one anxious for his own sake to indulge in that happy exercise in the most whimsical manner and on all possible occasions.

Anyway, that, I confess, was my idea when I saw his careworn face gazing into mine at the drowsy hour of 10 p.m.

"To-morrow morning, you take over Orderly Sergeant."

"Indeed!", I replied, all attention immediately. "How interesting."

"Yes — it is."

There was a wealth of meaning in his tone.

'And where do I take it over to?"

I am aware that my attempt at humour was very ghastly.

Receiving no answer, I added, rather vaguely, "Isn't the O. S. a chap who goes to bed about five and gets up at six?"

"That's it! You've got the idea exactly!"

He was so enthusiastic, I perceived I had touched him to the quick.

"You get up at six o'clock — I'll tell the Guard to wake you —"

"I say — I say, don't bother about that — I can always get up when I want — and I can hear Revally quite plainly!"

I felt it incumbent upon me to say something to prevent that beastly Guard from waking me at six. It would be rotten — Besides, I was ttired . . .

He went out — I heard the door bang — my houghts began to wander — I was half conscious of a feeling of strange antipathy towards the ninth ice I had consumed in that incomparable little Café in the Hohe Straße.

Daylight. The unmistakeable sounds of a bugle floated into the room. "Revally – ?" No. I scouted the idea. Merely en early riser indulging in a little annoying bugle practice. It was far too dark for sixthirty.

Twenty minutes later I fell off sleep and tumbled out of bed. I sighed heavily as I noted the absence of the hot water, the obliging valet, and the cup of café-au-lait; yawned wearily as I thrust my left foot into that beautiful product, the Army Boot size ten; swore obscenely as my third toe became impaled on one of its far too inquisitive nails; and at length having washed painfully in cold water, was deeply engaged in polishing my nails when a Lce/Cpl. tore into the room like a 9.2 and exploded on the spot.

people were worrying themselves to a remarkable degree about my welfare.

It suddenly struck me that this was the "Orderly Corporal", of whom Fame had often spoken to me. I at once offered him an Abdulla but apologised when he expressed his keen preference for a Woodbine. Had circumstances been otherwise I should have made a point of cementing my friendship with this amiable gentleman over a glass of wine and a biscuit. As it was, what could I do but offer him the poor hospitality of the Barrack-room stool, which I confess had been extracted by me with much sleight of hand from the bowels of the earth?

To my surprise, he declared he could not stay, and began to haul me out by my left epaulette, thereby imperilling the existence of a button sewn on by my own virgin hand that very morning . . .

"Orderly Sergeant!" The voice was the C.S.M.'s. Only our C.S.M. could shout like that.

"Sir!" The voice, my own.

I doubled up in accordance with the prescribed Army Methods. I gathered from my C. S. M. that I had already innocently commited seventeen offences of neglect of duty, each of which was sufficient to ensure my close confinement in four walls for an uncomfortable period.

I passed my eye somewhat gloomily over a wooden edifice on the Parade Ground with an inner conviction that its beams were destined to support the rope for my premature decease.

At eight a. m. I proceeded to the Mess. I was eating bread and butter with the veracity of a Zulu, when the R.S.M.'s. charming voice attracted my attention. He was saying — or rather shouting — in slightly rancous tones —

"Orderly Sergeant, — Coy.!"

I was just wondering whether the good R.S.M. had played "Faust", in the Carl Rosa Opera Co., or whether, having been unsuccessful in gaining a hearing for his vocal talents, he had never blossomed forth into anything higher than the garrulous old Lady in Pantomime, when the horrible conviction seized me that I was the O.S. in question.

I recklessly bolted a crust, with visions of appendicitis and a Battalion Obituary Announcement in the offing.

"Sir!" I said.

"What about those six fatigue men from your Company?"

"Which six fatigue men, Sir?" My tone was innocence itself.

Space being very limited, it is not given for me to record in black and white all those things mentioned by the R.S.M. Suffice it to say that when he had finished, my tea was cold and my bacon frozen to the plate in a most horrible manner.

When the Company turns out on Parade, the observant person would have beheld a cast of pitiable anxiety in my eye, as I recounted the 120 men and looked furtively up the Captain's sleeve for the dozen that weren't there.

These notes must be more or less in the nature of confessions so I crave pardon from the R.S.M. for having stated to him in cold tones "All present, Sir!"

At dinner I was so care-free that I could face the heavy responsibility of a pudding with comparative cheerfulness.

I spent a casual half-hour with the Guard chatting to them very genially about their picturesque dress, and then sought the shelter of my room. There I found time to drive another nail into my coffin by consuming a hefty ginger-cake.

Twice I was called upon by somebody in authority to conjure up ten men for an inconvenient fatigue.

MUSIC.

ROMANTIC AND OTHERWISE.

I am one of those unfortunate beings who, being gifted by Nature with a peculiar faculty with regard to the arrangements of crotchets and quavers in my mind, I am compelled to listen at every turn to chronic discords only to be equalled by tho firing of a Lewis Gun beneath my bed at two a.m.

As a civilian — a very young civilian — my adoration of my ivory-keyed instrument was greater than the love of a cow to her calf. Ever in those days, I was conscious of a shrinking horror towards the noisy baby next door, and this horror, I must confess, would change into vile hatred on those occasions when he (or she) began to howl when I was engaged in the deep intricacies of the nineteenth bar of Chopin's "Funeral March."

Anyone with musical instinct will quite agree with me if I venture to express my doubts as to whether the piercing voice of that canine abomination known as the pomeranian, in diabolical combination with the full-throated song of a yellow canary, has any ameliorating effect on on that lovely opening to Beethoven's "Moonlight Sonata."

In due course I entered the Army. Needless to say, I hauled with me much music, most of it of the classical tendency, with vague hopes of entertaining my comrades by my execution of some of these works on the piano. One day I managed to commandeer a key board. After five critical minutes spent in endeavouring to press down the three notes that would play and avoiding the thirty-seven that would not play, I retired ungracefully, leaving the field to a rival whose powers, if physically enormous, were of minute artistic worth.

My frantic explorations for some less ancient instrument resulted in my discovering in some out-of-the-way corner a piano, what appeared to have once been part of the Royal baggage of King John, and which some zealous person must have dug out of the wash not long since.

Then the Church Army Hut came to my rescue, with a Broadwood Grand. I am ashamed to confess that I spent more time on that Broadwood Grand than on my Lee Enfield Mark III, Star, and I am thoroughly convinced that my entrenching tool handle was in a most disgusting condition during those few weeks.

Of course, there were occasions when I was forced to concentrate my mind on a bun and a cup of very weak tea, awaiting the pleasure of someone whose gymnastic feats on the keyboard were exercising a hypnotic influence on a crowd of gallant soldiers round about.

I have often tried to eliminate much of the "Ragtime" from the musical minds of my comrades, but I find that, while decidedly not averse to enjoying good renderings of Rachmaninoff's Prélude, or Edward German's Dances, their hearts are irreclaimably lost to any of those melodies which have so remarkable an association with a few particular States of America. Therefore, I have been so wise as to make myself perfectly familiar with much of this strange music.

I remember once listening to a misguided young man who was endeavouring to reproduce on a rather woe-begone piano, the favourite tune of his Regimental Band.

Having finished slandering his Band thus he devoted himself to a futurist performance of Mendelssohn's "Spring Song", from which he went into "Il Trovatore", introducing therein some highly original and highly exciting chords. Had Verdi been present he would no doubt have been very impressed.

So anxious am I to represent this gentleman's talent in correct proportion, that I fear to do him a grave injustice. I must mention that were it not for the fact that he bestowed his whole attention on his right hand and allowed the left to fellow at its own sweet will, his interpretation of the Masters would have caused Paderewski to resign his political position and devote the rest of his days to hard practice.

These observations would be incomplete without my paying honest tribute to all the real musicians who are at present in the Army, and with any of whom it is a delight to come into contact.

Perhaps in Cologne, who knows? "Music hath charms", even in the Army.

One hardly appreciates the hard lot of Tommy until one has been Orderly Sergeant.

For instance, you enter a room and pounce upon the first man. You obtain from him his name and number. If you are in luck, you might also obtain a second man's name and number. Then, on casually glancing round, you observe that the seventeen other men, whose, presence had been so obvious two minutes ago, have vanished in the most accomplished and scientific manner.

On further inquiry, tho two men who have so easily fallen into your net, inform you politely that they are "employed"—sergeants' batmen or runners to sergeants' batmen — and therefore immune from interference.

By the time you have collected the ten together, you march them round the camp, in vain endeavours to find the fatigue. You then dismiss them, and five minutes afterwards, stumble across the Officer requiring the men. Then ——— but who does not appreciate the joy of being the target for the concentrated fire of a superior Officer?

But perhaps the fillip to the whole adventurous career of the O.S. is reserved for the evening.

About five, six, seven, or eight o'clock, (the times are so beautifully vague) the R.S.M. gives, "Detail".

The interview is not brief, but nevertheless is of unique interest. Here it is that the fate of each N.C.O. is settled for the next day.

It is all very exciting.

R. S. M. "— — — Coy: have you any spare Cpls. ?"

O. S. — Coy. — "No, Sir! But I've a fine line in Lance Corporals" — and so on.

There yet remains much to be told. How the Ord. Sergt.'s hair is gradually bleached in his efforts to make the Parade State balance; how he has to copy out many miles of Battalion Orders; how he calls the roll at 9.30 p.m., and warns each one of his morrow's lot; how he answers Staff Parade at 10 p.m., in a state of mental and physical collapse; how he sees "Light's Out" at 10.15, and is compelled to enter his detail book under the table, with a blanket as screen; how at 10.45 he trickles into bed, only to recollect that he has forgotten to see 11 o'clock lights out. . . .

Even now I cannot close my eyes and look back on that brief period when I was Orderly Sergeant without a feeling of dull mental agony.

Perhaps in the future I am destined for other things. Who knows?

OUR TRIP TO THE RHINE.

52nd Battalion, The Rifle Brigade.

Under the Command of LIEUTENANT-COLONEL E. P. A. RIDDELL, C.M.G., D.S.O.

Part II.

Next morning the camp was early astir, and at 6.30 a.m. the Battalion moved out en route for the rail. More mud was negotiated, this time through fields, until a German Prisoners' Camp was reached. From this place we were to board the train, made up as previously mentioned of German wagons. This accomplished, the various parties made their train quarters as comfortable as possible; and, be it mentioned, "Tommy" once again displayed his resource and adaptability to circumstances. Means of disposing of equipment or other impedimenta were devised out of any old bit of tin or iron. Brooms for sweeping out the truck were made from twigs or rushes; in most cases mess—tins found resting-places from whence they could easily be found, and everything was in apple pie order.

The waiting time was occupied by a hand at whist, or story-telling, and in some cases impromptu concerts. Bedtime came, and everyone made himself comfortable for the night, when an awful crash told us we were moving again. This time we were really on the way. It was 12.30 midnight, and soon all were in slumbers.

About 10 a.m. the railway journey really commenced, the train starting with a lurch which sent everything flying. We were actually moving. Alas. It was only for a matter of 400 yards, though, and we were doomed to wait fourteen hours!

At 5 a.m. Sunday morning, March 2nd, Merris was reached. We had covered a distance of 50 miles in 4½ hours! A halt was made for breakfast which was served at a Rest Camp some little distance from the railway siding.

Here a contretemps occurred which had its humourous side, though somewhat unfortunate for those who found themselves victims to circumstance over which no one seems to have had control.

Whilst the halt was made for breakfast, the men were getting back to the train in small groups; others taking their own time. Some 800 or so had reached the train and boarded it, when it began to move slowly, as most people thought for the purpose of shunting. To the dismay, however, of those on board, the pace gradually increased, and mile after mile was traversed. Captain Marshall made a gallant effort to reach the engine-driver, but his labours were unavailing as he failed to reach the engine.

Meanwhile the Colonel, the Adjutant, the M. O. and other officers, N. C. Os and about 140 men were left behind, in many cases minus overcoats, putties etc. They were certainly not "dressed up" and had "nowhere to go".

Those of the party who were left, knowing the peculiarities of the French railway service, during war time, proceeded to follow on in the hopes of overtaking the runaway, but no! the fates were against them. That run from Merris to Baisieux, the next stopping place, was one of the fastest sprints of the whole journey! Telegraph poles were passed at a terrific pace.

At Baisieux a halt was made to afford time for meals at another Rest Camp, and also for the wanderers to overtake the main body. At lenght these turned up, some making the journey by passenger train, returning leave train, or any other means of conveyance available.

What a motley crew they were! As they arrived, unshaven and unwashed, many with only scanty covering, they presented a curious spectacle. It is even rumoured that one officer was attired in overcoat and socks! Many were without caps; others wore cap-comforters; some were in "Shirt sleeves", some in slippers, They much resembled a ship-wrecked crew. Verily, "Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these!" All vowed vengeance on the engine driver, however, and being thus appeased the wanderers soon settled down to resume the journey — a wash and brush up compensating for many little discomforts. "Tommy" invariably adapts himself to circumstances however, and this little episode proved one of the tit-bits of the trip.

To those who have not made the journey by "truck", a useful hint might be to obtain a good store of water.

This necessity can be realised when it is stated that 12 good men and true made use of the contents of one mess — tin for washing and shaving!

A last peep at Baisieux revealed a vast amount of damage having been done to the Station Buildings and also to the permanent way. "Jerry's" method in dealing with the railway was to "blow up" the joints of the metals and this had been continued for quite a long distance up the line.

We now settled down to take advantage of the open door of our trucks which afforded excellent opportunity for viewing the passing scenes. There were many familiar spots passed en route which had been the scenes of deadly conflict. Places well remembered — alas! — by many of the Officers and senior N. C. Os — came into view, and many little white crosses dotted here and there marked the resting places of our gallant comrades who had truly "done their bit".

The shattered areas of Armentières, Lille, and towns and villages, now flattened to the earth, were passed in turn. Demolished railway stations and bridges; everywhere complete devastation; miles and miles of it. Comment now would be superfluous. The whole world knows of it, but only those who have actually seen for themselves can realise what war has done.

Here and there French peasants could be seen "Carrying on" with plough and harrow, or making effort to straighten things up a little, but a lot has to be done.

Our train jogged along, with occasional reminders in the way of awkward jerks which usually occurred whilst men were in the act of cooking their bacon. Now a mess — tin of tea went west, to the accompaniment of vows of vengeance on the driver; the piece of bread and jam, which flew from the hands of its consumer, naturally by law of gravitation fell jam downwards on the coal dust. "My blinking luck again" said a certain sergeant when his tasty bit of bacon was jerked into a tin of tea, which already had a nice greasy surface.

Oh! that driver. If he only realised the uncomplimentary remarks that were hurled at his unholy head.

It was Sunday, but there was no church parade. In the fields and passing villages there was noticeable the quiet calm of the Sabbath. No tilling of the soil. All seemed to be wrapt in solemn slumber, except the very occasional tolling of a distant churchbell — one of the few remaining in the belfry of a favoured edifice which had escaped demolition.

All through the night we travelled. Most of the men "turned in" early, some sat by the open door and talked and smoked until one, by one, we crept down to our pallets and slept the sleep of the righteous! Travelling throughout the night, we reached Charleroi in the early morning, a stop being made for breakfast.

The train was drawn into a siding, and in less time almost than it takes to record, the inhabitants of the now famous town were regaling the men with hot coffee, and in some cases wine. Here, too, a plentiful supply of water was obtained and a really good wash was indulged in.

At 9.30 we were off again, and coming into the valley of the Sambre to Namur, where the Meuse adjoins the former river, we entered the most picturesque portion of the route.

For miles we traversed the valley of the Meuse, with the rocky promontories on the opposite side to the river.

Huy was our next stopping place; whence we continued our way to Liege. At 10.15 p. m. we crossed the Belgian border, and were at last in German territory.

Cologne was passed during the night — about 3.15 — and a few kilomètres farther north brought us to the end of the long railway journey.

We detrained at Worringen and after a hasty breakfast we commenced the march to our destination, viz. Langel, some 7 kilomètres distant. Rain was falling heavily as we tramped through the muddy roads of the small town of Worringen, but this did not prevent the populace from turning out to watch the Battalion march in.

Ours was not the first British Regiment to pass through the town, but notwithstanding this fact there was quite an interest taken, particularly as the newly-acquired Regimental pet brought up the rear of the column.

The mascot was a pretty little goat handed over at Dunkerque by the Manchesters, who were returning to England. "Billy" did the journey in one of the curious "dickeys" to be seen on most of the German trucks.

His keeper, to whom the goat hastily formed an attachment, had regaled him en route with a plentiful supply of oats, and the animal was none the worse for his novel journey.

There were, of course, many humorous incidents of which space forbids a record, and it only remains to add that the whole of the arrangements were carried out with the excellence which comes of experience, and the Officers in Charge are worthy of every compliment.

The Battalion has now settled down to its programme of work. Education under the new Army Educational Scheme is well under way; Recreational Training, embodying football, cross country running, and boxing is already in full swing. An athletic meeting is in course of arrangement and there is promise of good sport.

It only remains to add that the 52nd Battalion, The Rifle Brigade, is particularly fortunate in its Officers. Colonel Riddell, notwithstanding the fact that he has not been long with the Battalion, has in a comparatively short time won his way to the hearts of the Officers and men under his command. He is a gallant soldier and a good sportsman. That is a sufficient qualification for a good Englishman — where he leads no man would hesitate to follow.

Major M. G. N. Stopford, M.C., Second in Command, and Captain F. A. Hawkins, M.C., Adjutant, are sportsmen, too, in addition to their having proved their metal in the field, and it is no exaggeration to say that "the boys love them".

CAPTAIN FRYATT'S MURDER GERMANY REGRETS BUT—

AMERICANS AND JAPANESE

FUTURE OF TERRITORIAL FORCE

CAN GERMANY PAY THE COST OF THE WAR?

GERMANY REGRETS, BUT —

CAPTAIN FRYATT INQUIRY.

After a conference lasting more than six hours, the German National Law Commission on the points involved in the execution of Capt. Fryatt. delivered its judgment yesterday. Its finding is that at the trial by Military Law of Capt. Fryatt there was no violation of international Law.

The Commission deeply regretted that the sentence of execution was carried out so quickly.

The summings up and the judgments were handed to the Prime Minister of the Netherlands for transmission to the English Government.

CAN GERMANY PAY THE COST OF THE WAR?

BONAR LAW DOUBTFUL

Winding up the debate on Indemnities, Mr. Bonar Law summarised the broad issues. The Government, he said, still intended to get what it could from Germany. Its first duty, however, was to secure Peace, which object demanded the closest understanding with France and America, but while we recognise the greater sufferings of some of our Allies, we must be just to our own Empire.

There was a very great difference between deciding on the amount of taxation that could be imposed on Germany and getting it paid to the Allies, owing to the difficulty of transferring money from one country to another.

Experts are considering every possible way in which Germany can be made to pay, but while not holding out the hope that Germany could pay the whole cost of the war, he (Mr. Bonar Law) hoped she would be able to pay an amount well worth having.

FRENCH ADMINISTRATION OF ALSACE LORRAINE.

M. Millerand, the French Commissaire Général at Strasbourg, in an interview with a representative of Le Journal, expressed himself as well satisfied with his first impressions. He stated that religious and social organisations will remain in statu quo and certain measures affecting chiefly workmen will be retained.

The matter uppermost in the mind of the population is the value of the mark. M. Millerand hopes a favourable solution will soon be forthcoming. Immigration is another complicated problem, which is receiving the attention of the authorities.

GOOD GRANT FOR GEDDES.

In the course of the debate in the House of Commons on the Ways and Communications Bill Mr. Ronald Mc. Neill (Co. U., Canterbury) referred to the fact that the Railway Company which Sir Eric Geddes formerly served had made him a Grant of fifty thousand pounds.

Sir Eric Geddes explained that he had a written agreement with the North Eastern railway, made before the war, on terms which stipulated that in the event of railways being nationalised and certain conditions arising, he was to receive certain sums in compensation.

When he was invited to join the Government it was obviously improper for him to have any personal financial interest in the question of Nationalisation. Under his agreement had the railways been nationalised the payment to be made him would have been far greater.

Until he made that settlement with the railway he never entered into the confidence of either the Goverment or of any Minister on the question of railways.

SIX MILLIARDS OF FRANCS.

The Echo de Paris states that the Council of Four has agreed that whatever indemnity is exacted from Germany, the first payment will be six milliards of francs, and a quantity of stocks, of which the most optimistic estimate is thirty milliards. The total indemnity to be demanded will not be included in the preliminary peace terms. When that is fixed an Allied Commission will determine annually in what form of payment the yearly instalments will be made.

FAMOUS SURGEON DEAD.

INVENTION, WHICH SAVED MANY LIVES DURING THE WAR.

The death is announced of Sir James Mackenzie Davidson, the famous surgeon and radiologist, at the age of 63.

He studied medicine in Edinburgh, Aberdeen and London, and became an eye-specialist. For the last twenty years he devoted his attention to Ray work and invented a precise method of localisation for foreign bodies in the eye and orbit. During the war this invention was the direct means of saving thousands of lives, as, the exact location of a bullet or shell splinter being known, surgeons could operate with certainty and speed.

Sir James, who was knighted in 1917, was Consulting Radiologist to the Military Hospitals in the London district.

TERRITORIALS' SACRIFICE.

"LORD GOD! WE HAVE PAID IN FULL."

When the war can be studied in the perspective of history — and it is much too recent for that to be done — one of the biggest and finest chapters must be that concerning the Territorials and the part they played in critical times from the very outset.

There are several Territorial divisions which have made such proud names for themselves as vis with anything ever accomplished in the history of the British Army. Some day it shall be our pleasurable task to write some of the things which we do know.

Meanwhile the following bare figures are surely eloquent enough. They are an epic in themselves.

The Secretary of the Territorial Force Association says that 1,095,000 Territorials of all ranks were sent overseas. Of these, 6,500 officers and 105,000 men were killed, out of a grand total of 23,900 officers and 535,000 men killed and wounded. Twenty nine officers and forty-two men won the Victoria Cross.

FUTURE OF THE TERRITORIALS.

A conference was held yesterday at Westminster between the Secretary of State for War, Mr. Winston Churchill, and representatives of Territorial Force Associations.

Mr. Winston Churchill, who presided, outlined the Force as an essential and vital part of our defensive system. Territorial officers should be eligible to command its Brigades and fill positions on Divisional and Brigade Staffs.

He hinted at the possible utilisation of the present Volunteer force for the purpose of reconstituting the National Reserve of pre-war days.

AMERICAN REFUSAL TO FIGHT.

Colonel Wedgwood (Co.L., Newcastle under Lyme) asked in the House of Commons whether American troops in Siberia had refused to cooperate in fighting near Blagovestkensk against insurrectionary Russians, and if so, why; and whether British were used for this sort of warfare.

Mr. Winston Churchill replied that the Americans did refuse, the reason given by the General Officer commanding the Americans being that the forces which attacked the Japanese might prove to be insurrectionary Russian peasants mistaken for Bolshevists.

The British had not been called upon to quell disturbances but will co-operate with the other Allies including Americans in maintaining order in a area where they are stationed.

Col. Wedgwood asked for an assurance that if there is any difference of opinion between American and Japanese troops the British troops will co-operate with the Americans, not with the Japanese.

This remark elicited loud protests and cries of "Why?"

Col. Wedgwood Because they are white men.

Mr. Churchill: I think these matters must be left to the discretion of the officers on the spot. In this particular case there is no doubt this was a powerful well-armed band of Bolshevists.

CAPITAL CONSERVE.

With the view of preserving capital for domestic purposes within the United Kingdom and preventing any avoidable drain upon foreign exchanges through the export of capital, the Treasury has appointed a Committee to advise under the Defence of the Realm Act upon all applications for licences for fresh issues of capital.

UNWRITTEN LAW UNAVAILING.

Since the "unwritten law" was first imported from America and successfully pleaded in the English courts, it has become a stock defence in cases involving the "tertium quid."

This plea was advanced in the Court of Criminal Appeal by a soldier named Vivian Coryton, who was sentenced at Manchester Assizes to seven years penal servitude for shooting with intent to murder a man named Davies, who had admitted improper relationship with Mrs. Coryton.

Mr. Justice Bray said that unfortunately there had been several similar cases, and it was neccessary for the court to lay down quite clearly that in no circumstances was a soldier entitled to take the law into his own hands.

The application for leave to appeal was dismissed.

Architects and sculptors, who wish to compete for the design of the memorial to commemorate the attack on Zeebrugge can obtain all particulars from the hon. secretary, Mr. Algernon Mandslay 35 Albemarle-street, W. 1., to whom also donations or the memorial may be sent.

QUESTIONS IN THE COMMONS.

CONCERNING 1916 MEN.

In a written answer Capt. Guest stated that he regretted it was impossible to entertain the proposal to give special consideration, with the view of demobilisation, to the cases of those men who, volunteering under the Derby scheme, were rejected proir to 1916, but were subsequently called up after 1916, notwithstanding their low medical category.

ALIENS IN ENGLAND.

Mr. Shortt, in a written answer, said that the number of Aliens in England is about twenty-six thousand, of whom about five thousand are interned. At one time the number of interned was thirty-two thousand.

During the last ten years the number of aliens naturalised from countries at war with us was about two thousand nine hundred.

DOGS, DEFERRED DEMOBILISATION.

The Secretary for War, Mr. Winston Churchill, in a written answer, said that owing to the importation of rabies through dogs brought from France, it had become necessary to forbid officers and men bringing their dogs home with them.

The Army Council, however, had accepted the generous offer of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals to defray the cost of maintenance of a limited number of dogs for the six months quarantine required by the order. Only five hundred at a time can be accommodated at their kennels at Hackbridge.

The dogs are collected at a depot in France and when passed as free from the symptoms of rabies are sent across to Hackbridge in batches.

Over one hundred were received in March.

HORSES' HAPPIER HOME - COMING.

An Army horse, which had been at the front since 1914 was recently sent home from France with a labie attached bearing the words "Please give me a good home".

It was put up to auction and after keen bidding realised the sum of 142 guineas, the purchaser declaring, that he would never part with it.

EVERYBODY'S WANTING THEM NOW.

Col. Jessel, visiting the Remount Depot at Shirehampton, emphasised the splendid results which followed good Army horsemanship. In consequence everybody is rushing to buy demobilised mounts, which are realising extraordinary prices. It is now admitted throughout the Continent that the horse mastery of the "improvised" British Army reached the very highest standard during the campaign and the unhappy taxpayer could see a golden stream pouring in to the Treasury because the Army had possessed such humane, conscientious and skilful horsemasters.

PEACE BEFORE EASTER.

At a luncheon given by the Republican Press Association yesterday at Paris, M. Pichon predicted that the preliminary Peace treaty will be ready for signature before Easter.

NAVAL PROMOTION HONOURS.

The Board of Admiralty announces that Viscount Jellicoe of Scapa and Vice-Admiral Sir David Beatty are promoted Admirals of the Fleet in recognition of their distinguished services during the war.

On Sunday next, 6th April, the Grand Fleet, as such, passes away. The following are the chief appointments. Admiral Sir C. E. Madden to be Commander in Chief of the Home and Atlantic Fleet; Rear Admiral A. B. Leveson to be Vice-Admiral commanding the Second Battle Squadron of the Atlantic Fleet: Admiral the Hon. Sir E. C. Fremantle to command the First Battle Squadron of the Atlantic Fleet; Vice Admiral Sir H. J. Oliver to command the Home Fleet and Rear Admiral Sir R. J. B. Keyes to command the Battle Cruiser Squadron of the Atlantic Fleet.

F. P. No. 1. TO BE DEMOBBED.

An interesting amendment to the Army (Annual) Bill, which is in the Committee Stage in the House, was made by Major E. Hayward (L., Seaham) who moved to substitute hard labour for F. P. No. 1.

Mr. Winston Churchill contended that this punishment was not actually cruelty. Its use had even obviated the carrying out of death sentences.

He promised however to institute inquiries with the view of arranging the suggested substitution.

A RECORD AEROPLANE ASCENT.

The giant aeroplane Goliath, piloted by Boussoutrot, reached this evening, in spite of cloudy and rainy weather, an altitude of 6,200 mètres (20,336 ft) in an hour and a quarter, carrying five passengers. This beats by more than 2,000 mètres (6,560 ft) the record established in 1916 by the pilot Poirée. The ascent was stopped by the freezing of the propelling machinery in the exceedingly low temperature of 72 deg. of frost Fahr. The airman Muller accompanied Boussoutrot. — Reuter.

BILLIE CARLETON CASE.

De VEULLE ON TRIAL.

Reginald de Veulle, 38, dress designer, appeared in the dock at the Old Bailey before Mr. Justice Salter, charged with the manslaughter of Miss Billie Carleton, the actress, by supplying her with cocaine, and on a further count, of conspiring with Ada Lo Ping to procure cocaine.

Accused appeard to be in good health and spirits, though a trifle pale. He pleaded "not guilty" in a loud clear voice.

The two main questions were, said Sir Richard Muir, (for the Director of Public Prosecutions): Was the cocaine from which Miss Carleton died supplied to her by De Veulle? If so, did he supply it in such circumstances as to make him liable for manslaughter? The prosecution suggested that she sniffed the cocaine up her nostrils and, quite unintentionally on her part, it caused her death.

Among the witnesses called were Dr. Hamerton, divisional police surgeon, and Dr. R. C. Jewesbury, who both were of opinion that death was due to cocaine.

Dr. Frederick Stuart was in the witness box when the case was adjourned. He will be cross-examined by Mr. Huntley Jenkins.

THE FUTURE OF WOMEN.

ADRESS BY THE HON. MRS ALFRED LYTTLETON.

On Wednesday, 2nd April, 1919, the Hon. Mrs. Alfred Lyttleton paid a visit to the Army of Occupation in Cologne, and delivered to the R. A. F. at Bickendorf a striking adress on the problem of Woman's Status after the War. Woman, she said, had earned the right by their unfailing loyalty and devotion to the Empire during the struggle through which she has passed, to a place of equality on almost every platform — egislative, industrial, professional — previously monopolised by men. Differences were of degree, not of kind.

The "Subjection of Women" was a thing of the past and the married status in particular was going to improve — must improve. The wives of men in the industrial classes especially had not the considerate treatment they deserved from their husbands. But emancipation from drudgery must follow from the share they had taken in shouldering man's responsibilities. The women themselves would see to this if the men didn't. They simply would not be side-tracked. The Hon. Mrs. Lyttleton's appeal was simple and direct and was charged with her personality. It was the same appeal that has been put forward through the ages, at the one end by Plato, and by John Stuart Mill at the other, but Mrs. Lyttleton's advocacy had behind it more than theirs. Women had earned their place as the equal companion and partner of men.

The address was much appreciated by Officers and men, and there was a large attendance.

ADVENTURES IN THE AIR.

AMERICAN OFFICER COURT MARTIALLED.

At the American Headquarters in London an American officer stood his trial by court-martial. His name is Captain Edmund Chamberlain, of the United States Marine-Corps.

He is charged with fabricating reports of his exploits, thereby gaining recommendations for high British and American distinctions.

The defence is not yet opened.

LIBEL ACTION AGAINST THE DAILY MAIL.

Sir Hedley Le Bas commenced an action for libel against the Daily Mail, alleging that he had been accused of mean and loathsome conduct by inspiring political attacks against Mr. Lloyd George, whom he was professedly supporting, and that he had been playing into the hands of the enemy. He further alleged that he had been represented as deliberately attempting to corrupt the Press and to deceive the public by persuading local newspapers to publish articles purporting to be his own opinions while in fact they were advertisements paid by him.

The defence will be that the charges are true.

Mr. Justice Darling is hearing the case.

COUNT SALM'S CURIOUS SALUTE.

It is reported from Vienna that ex-President Karolyi arrived at Vienna on Saturday, Count Salm waited for him in the evening, with two witnesses in attendance, and smacked his face twice, saying "This is the salute from the South Western front."

The usual challenge to a duel followed.

The Leviathan, formerly the "Vaterland," reached New York on the 3rd. with 12,000 American troops aboard — the largest number of souls ever carried in one keel.

KITTY'S BIGAMOUS CAREER.

SIX LITTLE NIGGER BOYS.

At the Old Bailey yesterday Kitty Ingram was sentenced to nine months hard labour for bigamy.

During her husband's absence at the front, Ingram made the acquaintance of a coloured man and lived with him for six months. He went to sea and she married another coloured man.

When she was arrested six more coloured men were found to be living in the house.

FLYING THE ATLANTIC.

100 DESTROYERS TO GUARD ROUTE.

The American and British navies will cooperate in a grand patrol of the course to be followed by the various contestants for the Daily Mail and other prizes.

Sixty American and forty British destroyers will patrol the course, the former from Newfoundland to the Azores and the latter between the Azores and the British Isles.

DECAPITATED OFFICER.

AN OPEN VERDICT.

An inquiry was held at Woking into the death of Lt. J. A. Proctor, the Canadian officer whose headless body was found on the line near Worplesdon.

A Miss Elsie Reeveley stated that her name and that of Lt. Proctor had been connected in legal preceedings. She travelled from Waterloo with Lt. Proctor but on the journey she fell asleep.

Lt. MacGerrison, Canadian Army, said he was in the same compartment. He saw Lt. Proctor go towards the toilet compartment and immediately afterwards there was a draught of cold air.

An open verdict was returned.

AND A TIGER FROM COLOGNE.

Mr. Winston Churchill announced in the Commons that at the wish of the House the motion of Mr. W. Adamson, Labourite (West Fife), to reject Clause 12 of the Army (Annual) Bill, providing for two years imprisonment for acts likely to cause disaffection in the Army, has been withdrawn. The Government had a large mass of machinery for dealing with such cases.

The aunouncement was greeted with loud cheers.

MINUS MANY MINUTES.

On Clause 6., giving power to deal summarily with charges against officers, a series of amendments was proposed. That by Mr. W. H. Foster (Co. U., Bromley) was adopted, making it plain that the G.O.C. has power to dismiss cases without having to wade through all the evidence.

TAX ON BOUNTIES.

The Board of Inland Revunue states that the re-engagement bonuses of officers and men, and the bonus for those not released by 1st May, are subject to income tax.

The Women's Royal Naval Air Service is to be demobilised.

NO DICTATION.

Representatives of over 100 touring companies resolved, at a meeting of the Theatrical Managers' Association, that they could not submit to the dictates of the Actors' Association.

NO BEER: NO WORK.

Half a million telegraphists and associated workers belonging to the Central Federated Union (America) have announced their determination to strike work on July 1st if the sale of beer is stopped. The union secretary declares that the "No Beer: No Work" movement is increasing at a tremendous rate.

CLEMENCEAU'S ASSAILANT.

The appeal of Cottin, who shot at and wounded M. Clemenceau, has been rejected. He now intends to appeal to the Court of Cassation.

FOUR COLONELCIES FOR THE PRINCE OF WALES.

The King has approved the following appointments of H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, K.G., G.M.M.G., G.M.B.E., M.C., etc. To be Colonel in Chief of the Twelfth Lancers and the Royal Scots Fusiliers: To be Honorary Colonel of the Fifth Bn. Devonshire Regiment and of the Fifteenth Bn. The London Regiment, T.F., (Civil Service Rifles.

LABOUR TROUBLES AT DUSSELDORF.

BIG STRIKE IMPENDING.

It is anticipated that a big strike of all trades may take place tomorrow at Dusseldorf.

Although the Sparticist element is not numerous in the district — the small numbers consisting chiefly of young people, even girls — it is feared, that owing to the obvious weakness of the Government, this small element may seize an opportunity of getting hold of the workers and so creating serious trouble.

The Hungarian Soviet has decreed that no political rights shall be accorded to priests, monks, lunatics, merchants, persons who live without working, ex-prisoners, minors, and exploiters of labour.

Pawnbrokers are seeking larger profits in the form of increased interest and higher charge for tickets. The present charges were fixed by law more than 40 years ago, one half-penny per 2s. a month for pledges under 10s. in value.

THE RELEASE OF 'CONCHY'

There is an agitation in progress in England at the present time for the immediate release of the "conchies", and much controversy has been and is still being raised on this question. The "conchies" — at any rate the absolutists, — as all soldiers know, are a band of men whose consciences and higher instincts would not allow them to take any part whatever in this war. The majority of them are scattered about the country in our various prison residences, living more or less in peaceful solitude that calm, quiet life which their own reasoning has dictated to them as the ideal one. So long as we here were amusing the Huns, the "conchies" were content to live their gaol-bird existence.

But not so now. Many of the boys have left us to resume their normal occupations, and it appears that this fact has caused much perplexity in the minds of our obstinate brothers in prison. It is curious to note that they have some friends at home, who, as an organized body, are endeavouring to hasten their release. One could hardly expect them to have many friends, though I dare say most of us sympathize with them in the cramped and unromantic existence which for so long they have led.

As soldiers, how over, we cannot tolerate them We prefer a valiant enemy to a skulking brother. Whilst they have been following their peaceful existence under state control, we have been plodding through mud: whilst they have been contentedly digging turnips for their dinner, we have been digging trenches for our safety from the hurling whizzbangs; whilst they have been calmly reposing on more or less soft beds, we have been standing in those lonely heinous outposts. That is why we cannot tolerate them.

And now they have the audacity to claim release, whilst still so many thousands are keeping watch in enemy territory; they have the barefacedness to attempt to resume normal occupations before we can get back to our old jobs.

In a letter to the Daily Mail the Joint Advisory Committee of the No-Conscription Fellowship writes: —

"Especially do we urge upon all those interested in the question that anything short of complete release will leave the problem entirely unsolved, a position which must soon become intolerable seeing that the continued imprisonment or detention of C.O's. is already repugnant to everyone who loves justice and freedom of opinion."

The remark appears to us soldiers who have won for our country an everlasting peace from Prussian militarism, and who have made for the Empire a security which by war alone could be obtained.

By our fighting and our victory we have merited for ourselves a certain right to claim attention. Let us then give the freedom of opinion which is mentioned.

We don't want the C.O's out here it is true, but at the same time it is only fair that not one of them should be released until every retained soldier in the occupation armies is back at his accustomed work.

They use the word "justice." For four years they have received infinitely better treatment than any which justice could mete out to them. Let them now live on the happy memories of those good times spent in gaol until we are home to receive them.

BRITAIN.

In discussing the relative merits of men of various nationalities there is to-day a strong tendency on the part of many Englishmen to belittle the capacity of their countrymen to the advantage of the men of other countries, and particularly the German. One frequently hears the expression, "Oh yes, the Germans can give us points", and some will even go so far as to assume that, as a race, the Germans are intellectually superior.

Without being too egoistical the rightthinking Englishman, after a little careful study and thought, will prove for himself that this idea is entirely erroneous. Facts must speak for themselves, and a careful study of the history of human prodress in its varied phrases, will soon convince any Englishman — or to be more correct, any Britisher — of the great part his countrymen have played, and are still playing, in the history of the world. The Britisher should certainly not be boastful, but should bear himself before all men with that quiet confidence and pride in his own country, the record of which surpasses that of any other nation on the face of the earth. Let us, for a moment, look at a few of the things the Britisher has accomplished.

To thingk of Britain, one almost naturally thinks of her as a living, humming, vibrating hive of industry; and probably no element enters more largely into the maustry of Britain than steam — that mighty force which enables our railway trains to run from John-O'-Gr — ats to Land's End in a few hours, and by the help of our "ocean greyhounds", brings the United States within five days of the British Isles. Steam is to the Britisher almost "part of himself", and he has indeed harnessed it to his requirements like no other man.

"In the history of Invention and Discovery" to quote Lord Avebury, "the name of Watt will be always associated with the steam engine, of Stevenson with the locomotive, Wheatstone with the electric telegraph, Arkwright with the spinning machine, Hargreaves with the jenny, Fox Talbot with photography. In medicine, the circulation of the blood was discovered by Harvey; vaccination, by Jenner; anaesthetics were brought into use by Simpson; and the antiseptic treatment in cases of wounds and operations, by Lister. In science, we have many great names — Bacon and Newton, Young and Darwin, Davy, Dalton, Cavendish, Faraday, Herschel, William Smith, Lyell, Murchison, Owen, Tyndall, Huxley, Hooper and many others."

On the sea, the exploits of the British have been amaz ng, and it can be said truly that Brittannia rules the waves. One half of the world's merchant ships fly the British flag, whilst our men-of-war, built of iron and steel, are indeed worthy sentries of our shores, revealing to a wonderful extent the ingenuity and inventive gen us of the British. The marine chronometer had its origin in the brain of a poor English carpenter, John Harrison by name.

British-built ships, motor cars, agricultural implements and machines of all descriptions have their home in all quarters of the globe, and are recognised as the finest things of their kind in the world.

In literature, too, has not Great Britain made her mark on the civilization of all time? Who that has gloried in the wisdom of Shakespeare, the sublime thoughts of Stevenson or Carlyle, the humour and pathos of Dickens, or the superb poetry of Milton, but has not felt that truly these were great men apart from any question of nationality. Yet the nation is made up of individuals and from the wor kof these great Britishers we get a true index of the mind and art of our people. In war, too, our record has been glorious. No more valiant or chivalrous soldier than the British soldier has ever shivered a lance or fired a shot. His personality has won ungrudging admiration even from his enemies.

In the records of this war, Great Britain has proved to the world that she has lost none of her virility. Superb in her strenth and power, she has dominated the collosal struggle, championing the cause of the weak, inspiring her Allies, quick in her aid to those weakening in the struggle, and stunning in her blows to the enemy. Her sons, too, have proved their inventive capacity, excelling every invention of the enemy in his fierce struggle for world domination. The British explosives, arms, artillery of all discriptions, and last but not least, the tanks, bear witness to the creative capacity of the Britisher; whilst the supremacy of the air has indisputably bee wrested from the enemy.

Among the nations of the earth, Great Britain has always been a mighty exponent for the uplifting of mankind and her established laws have been constantly copied and introduced by the Governments of other countries. In the history of the world no nation has poured out so much blood or treasure for the emancipation, the enoblement, and the betterment of mankind.

Shall not we Britons, as we meditate on these things, resolve within ourselves that we will, in some measure, be worthy of our heritage "tight little island" or indeed of the Empire on which the sun never sets. The simple realization of the fact that we are of Britain, should send the blood tingling through our veins in a paeon of pride and thankfulness. It is the man who makes the nation, and all the abiding things which enoble and grace our national life lie wrapped in the heart of the individual. Let us, then as we return to our homes with our patritism deepened and purified by the suffering of the past four years, strive our utmost to be worthy of the great land to which we belong.

Think for Yourself.
C. H. RHODES.

Do your own thinking, ever tried it? No! wel', make a start TODAY. To morrow may not come, now is the time.

Carefully analyse all facts and events of life which concern you, and you will get a better and clearer conception of life. Be original in every possible way, don't "try" to be original: just be YOURSELF, and you will be.

The men who make good in this world, are the men who do "their own thinking": they are not copyists, but creators of thought and ideas, hence their success in life.

Always count yourself the full 100% value and let the world discount your value if it is necessary for them to do so. Your duty is to see that it is'nt.

Never set limits to your talents. You can't say what you are capable of doing. You do not know yourself, yet, until you have tried, so why condemn yourself first? If there is any following to be done, let the other chap do it. You set the pace.

Only by a true realisation of YOURSELF, can you get to the front rank of success. There are no two men or women in the world possessed of identically the same characteristics. We inherit a mass of peculiarities from our ancestorts each person is a distinct type and individuality. You are unique, and in that very fact lies most of your value to society.

In the world of business, science, art, as also in the world of thought, there is one cryand one cry alone. It is ORIGINALITY, and it is you who can fill the bill. Unsuspected, perhaps, as yet by yourself, there is in you some power, some combination of qualities which no one but yourself possesses, and the world is waiting for you to use that power, and those qualities, for its benefit, and yours. Because you alone can fill this need, the world will pay you — and pay you generously — but it will have little use for you, and still less pay, if you permit your originality to remain dormant.

The world is not full up yet, nor is there any likelihood of its being so for centuries, but there is no room for sleepers, slackers, and wasters. Wake up, be alive, use the gifts with which you have been endowed — your mind, your brain. Train them, use them — that's what they are for — and having done so, go out into the world for the position that is yours, and yours alone, calm in the assurance that you will not fail to find it. But you must first of all make yourself fit and worthy of the post.

NO PLAY, NO PAY!
W. NEVILLE RENDALL.

A probable strike of actors is causing considerable interest in Bohemian circles. In and outside the green-room, behind the scenes, even in the "prompt corner" and on the "O.P. side," the situation is being openly discussed.

By casually strolling down the Strand (which is the favourite haunt of members of the histrionic profession) and turning into Bedford Street, one can observe little knots of actors, actresses and artistes engaged in animated conversation.

Note the traditional tragedian, whose astrakan glistens in the pale April sun; he discloses his identity with every gesticulation of an imposing arm. He is one of the "old school", a "heavy lead", and is "resting" more often than not. In the ordinary run of life people refer to his habitual state as unemployment, but members of his profession refer to it as "resting".

Then note his pale, deep-lined face, the blue clean-shaven chin, the sunken eyes mounted by tufts of bushy hair, and the peculiarly red lips which seem redder still in contrast with the pallor of his countenance. You cannot help remarking on his quaint dolman and black slouch-hat. The latter is a relic of his "palmy' days, the lucrative days when playgoer was wont to lend a ready ear to the denouement of 'Hamlet', the petty jealousy of an ill-suspecting 'Othello', and the protestations of an ardent 'Florizel'. Those were the happy days of yore, when life was a gay masque ball.

A PRECARIOUS PROFESSION.

But do not laugh and scoff, do not jeer, do not desecrate his history with your satire; Sheridan can supply you with the latter. As I draw the picture so will I give you its interpretation. I see nothing in that time-seared face to turn my thoughts to mirth. That pallid face has a lean and hungry look, those lines were wrought by years of struggle in a precarious profession, though accentuated by Lichner's grease-paint and the inevitable "liners". Those dog-like eyes are the wells of bitter, scalding tears; for even as water penetrates through rock, so do tears spring from unknown fountains. Ah! reader, if you could perceive the mockery, if you might but catch one fleeting glimpse behind the scenes and note the poverty-stricken cradle, the anxious, brooding mother, and the dire, relentless landlady who, with bill in hand and gall in heart, threatens immediate eviction — then you might glean a little of the pathos and some of the real tragedy of a tragedian's life. Even as there are wheels within wheels so are there tragedies within tragedies.

THE LADDER OF SUCCESS.

The "profession" is a pseudo-autocracy. It calls for unlimited competition, late hours, and sleepless nights. The Ladder of Success is high, and the lucky being who secures the top-most rung can draw a Cabinet Minister's salary. I regard him as a profiteer. He puts public money in his pocket with one hand and takes the bread out of the mouth of his fellow artistes with the other. But he is immune from attack because his talent is unexcelled, and public estimation is so high.

At the foot of the ladder surges a tide of benighted humanity. Every class is represented and every age. Honest men, ne'er-do-wells, and aspiring women join in a common struggle for existence. Young men, old men, young women and old, and little children with geasy curls and pinched faces (who should be in the class-room) all endeavour, in a maddening throng, to grasp the first rung of the ladder.

MOTHS.

It is the most sordid and squalid of all the professions, the worst-paid and the most badly provided for. The footlights have a glaring attraction for young people, persecuted crooks, and inveterate gamblers, and they attract these distinct classes very much in the same manner as a moth is drawn to a candle-light.

Salaries on tour range from 30/- to £4 per week; lucky is he who draws more. The life en route is expensive.

An actor paying for his fly-blown rooms is sometimes paying double the rent for the entire house. Catering is naturally more costly than it would be at home or in an organized household. If his landlady caters for him, (as she usually does) she invariably levies a 1d. extra on this article and a few pence extra on that, until the bill assumes the amount which her dishonesty prompts her to extract. Then there is the expense of laundry, baggage, "tips' (your actor is foolishly generous), grease-paint, powder, "props," and the habitual endeavour to "keep up appearances."

REHEARSALS WITHOUT PAY.

More often than not an actor is "resting" for six months out of the year. Twenty-six weeks is considered a fairly long tour, and prior to this a fortnight's rehearsals, without pay, is the usual custom observed by managers.

There is an "Actors' Association", and also "The Actors' Benevolent Fund" in existence, which make a weak attempt to right the wrongs, redress the grievances, and relieve the pecuniary embarrassment of the sorely pressed. These, unfortunately, do not avail the out-of-work actor to a very great extent.

A strong Union, or a Federation, could put this jaded and over-crowded profession on its feet. It calls for a consolidated body of principal actors and actresses, who would combine their energies in drawing up rules and laws to safeguard the rights of their brother artistes.

EDUCATION.
W. A. J. MARTYR.

Someone has said "a little knowledge is dangerous thing." During the time I have had the honour to be Battalion Educational Officer, the truth of that saying has been impressed deeply upon my mind.

Contact with men has again and again proved the truth of the proverb which asserts that "empty barrels make the most sound."

Here is a man who is continually giving advice to his fellows and setting himself up as the platoon philosopher. The wisdom of his remarks is generally too deep; or perhaps I should say too shallow to be understood by the ordinary mind.

He reminds me of the man in the dug-out who, "intoxicated with the exuberance of his own verbosity," and turning out a volume of meaningless words, received the reply: "If it comes to big words: 'diphtheria' to you."

The wisdom at the back of that remark is profound. Educational instructors too often use words far "above the heads" of their hearers. Even if their words are simple in themselves, their sentences are so involved that they lead to even more confusion.

I was once told the story of a clergyman, who, in preaching to a rural congregation made use of the phrase "drawing an inference." The country squire took the reverend gentleman to task for using such an expression, and in order to prove that the words were meaningless to the ordinary mind, he called up his coachman and said: "John, what is drawing an inference?"

"Wel', Sir", was the reply, "I don't exactly know, but if our old black mare can't draw it, I don't know what can".

Poetic phraseology may "tickle the ears" of an educated audience, but to the average mind plain hard facts are the things that tell.

I often suspect that the speaker who uses that high flown language, is hiding his ignorance of the subject under the cover of so-called rhetoric. My advice to any man who, relying upon oratory, and oratory alone, thinks he can impress an audience is the same as that given by "Mr. Punch" to those about to get married — Don't!

Never insult your hearers by giving them your second best. Words and words alone lead to nothing, or to quote "King Lear," "Nothing can come of nothing."

Hard, patient, consistent, and persistent plodding, and that alone enables a man to turn out the right sort of stuff to benefit his fellows.

It was said of Lord Chatham by those who listened to him that there was something finer in the man than anything which he said. The largest part of his power was latent.

Work of his hard
He nor commends nor grieves;
Pleads for itself the fact;
As unrepenting Nature leaves
Her every act.

The man who knows his subject has a reserve force behind him which can always be brought into play if occasion demands.

Men of talent and eloquence are few. What others effect by talent or by eloquence, the ordinary man by sheer pluck in sticking to his aim accomplishes by force of character. It should be said of any man who poses as a teacher "Half his strength he put not forth". To quote Emerson: "His victories are by demonstration of superiority, and not by crossing of bayonets."

"O Jole! how did you know that Hercules was a god?" "Because," answered Jole, "I was content the moment my eyes fell on him. When I beheld Theseus, I desired that I might see him offer battle, or at least guide his horses in the chariot; but Hercules did not wait for a contest: he conquered whether he stood, or walked, or sat, or whatever thing he did".

So it comes to this: Education produces character and character tells in the end.

Not every man can be a Hercules, but it ought to be said of any teacher, "He knows his subject, and I feel bound to listen to him."

Herbert Spencer defined education as a preparation for complete living. A writer on the value of education estimates that "three generations in which every educational process ceased to function would take us back to the dawn of recorded history."

I do not propose in this short article to deal with the social problems that would be solved if every man received a high standard of education at the expense of the state. Problems might or might not be solved if we accepted the "theory of Malthus".

I merely wish to point out to my readers that the educational opportunities offered to all in His Majesty's Forces should not be put lightly on one side.

To instructors I would say: "Study hard in order to put the best into your subjects," and to the instructed: "learn all you can in order that you may be better fitted to be a useful citizen of our vast and varied Empire."

FACULTY OF IMAGINATION.

There is one faculty of the mind which is sometimes referred to with a certain degree of contempt, though in reality it is an immensely important factor in success, and particularly in the business world.

This is the faculty of imagination. It is by the power of imagination that we are enabled to picture "what might be" and are thus encouraged to persevere.

Imagination has played a most important part in the lives of all leaders of men, from the time of Caesar down to the present day. Our leading statesmen, merchant princes, our women folk who occupy high positions in life, have all used their imagination.

Do not think that the mere "imageing" of things will bring you success, or help you along life's road, — no such thing. Imagination is merely the creation of ideas in theory, which you must put in real, solid, and genuine hard work before you win through.

Do not allow your imagination to degenerate into a daydream or reverie, but rather let it be an energising incentive, calling you forward to the goal of its realisation.

Everybody would like things to be better, and more pleasant. Well, in imagination you have the means at your hand to help you to realise them, and as to how you use the ideas your imagination creates, so in like proportion, you alter your position in life. Whether for good or ill, it rests with you, and you alone.

Start at once using this faculty of mind, and you will be agreeably surprised at the quantity of ideas that come to you. You do not know what you are capable of doing until you try, and an idea that brings success in a minor degree will spur you on to greater things.

Have a piece of paper handy to jot down ideas as they arise from your imagination, study them well over, improve on them. Then, when you have sorted out the best ideas, apply them to your own work in your own business. They will bring you, as reward, better and more congenial conditions in life.

You have at hand all the material you require, brains, mind, memory, and will. It is up to you to utilise them to the best advantage for your progress through life. There is plenty of scope for all. Go in and win. Imagination will help you quite a lot.

YACHT RACING PROSPECTS.

SIR THOMAS LIPTON IN NEW YORK.

The New York Correspondent of the Daily Telegraph wires: Sir Thomas Lipton's arrival in New York to renew acquaintance with his great host of friends and admirers, and, incidentally, to resume his sportsmanlike quest for the Am rica Cup, is a pleasant episode to which the papers here give great prominence. No visitor from your side is better versed in conditions here, and none better qualified in most essentials to act as an unofficial ambassador of Anglo-American relations at a time when a good understanding and loyal friendship between England and the United States are of supreme importance to the peace of the world. When I saw him to-day at the Commodore Hotel, the world's latest and largest home for travellers, with 2,000 rooms, each with a bath, Sir Thomas was radiantly cheerful. He had arrived only the previous day by the Aquitania, but already with his keen intuition and local knowledge he had sensed the immense change which has come over the spirit of the United States since his last visit in 1913. "It is good to be here again," he said. "As to old prejudices, animosities, and misunderstandings, I find them going, going, and almost gone." President Jefferson was right when he said it would be a good thing for the world if any righteous cause should ever see British and Americans fighting side by side, and Lord Rosebery was also right when he said, "Blood shed in common is the cement of nations."

TIME CHANGETH ALL THINGS.

To speak frankly, it is very much of a new country that Sir Thomas Lipton finds to-day, by comparison with any former visit, and be came here first, as he himself is not ashamed to admit, as a very poor boy, "to try to make his way in the world, and help mother." This time he cherished the idea that he might remain quiet for a few days without the knowledge of the reporters: but he was foiled at the start, because he was met by the news gatherers aboard the Press boat at sea, and at his hotel to-day there was another crowd of reporters and photographers, all anxious to see the visitor and know his views about the next great yacht race, as to which Sir Thomas wants to consult his friends here, and mare particularly to examine the brilliant suggestion brought forward to-day that the tercentenary celebration, in 1920, of the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers at Plymouth Rock should be the occasion for the next great sailing contest, representing the land whence the Pilgrims came and the land in which they settled.

To-morrow Sir Thomas goes to Brooklyn to have a look at Shamrock IV., which has been stowed away during the war. If the New York Yacht Club accepts his challenge, of which nothing can be said just yet, he believes the club would rely upon Resolute, one of the two trial boats built to meet Shamrock IV., with which the builders and owners here seem satisfied. My own opinion, based upon some knowledge of local conditions, is that there will be very little yacht racing of any kind in American waters this year, but with the return of more settled conditions in the year of the Pilgrims' tercentenary, things will be doing off Sandy Hock lightship which will again hold the attention not only of yachting enthusiasts, but of the sport-loving public on both sides of the Atlantic, as in the golden days of yachting before the war.

ARMY SPORTS CHAMPIONSHIP.

COMPETITORS FOR ALDERSHOT CONTESTS IN TRAINING.

The Inter-Theatre of War Championships, which are to be held at Aldershot this month, are attracting an immense amount of interest, which, after all, is only natural, since the very highest standard of sport will be represented. The Championships include association football, boxing and cross-country running in which representatives from all theatres of war will participate.

The organising committee, or to give the body its real title, the B.E.F. Sports Control Board, are neglecting no effort that will ensure producing the best available men for each branch. Already those who have been selected are in training, and plenty of practice is being indulged in.

There are to be several native Indian runners included in the Egyptian cross-country team.

FOOTBALL.

AIRMEN BEAT THE GRENADIERS.

The R.A.F. team journeyed from Roehampton yesterday to meet the Grenadier Guards in the semi-final of the "Bulldog" competition.

On the whole the play was decidedly poor, and the airmen wasted many golden opportunities before Pick scored with a particularly brilliant left footer.

438TH FIELD COY R.E. V. 529TH FIELD COY R.E.

Played at the Stadtwald on Monday. The Cheshire's had it all their own way, and won by 7 goals to.

51ST V. 53RD. NORTHUMBEERLAND FUSILIERS.

A "No goal" score was the result of a very exciting match played between the above-mentioned Battalion teams yesterday. Both teams were well represented and evenly matched, as the result indicates. From a spectator's point of view, it was a "back" game. A keen contest in the return match is expected.

14TH BRIGADE OFFICERS MATCH.

52ND V 13TH KING'S LIVERPOOL REGIMENT.

A very fast and interesting game was witnessed at Obercassel on Tuesday. The visitors (13th K.L.R.) pressed, and the home goalkeeper was lucky to clear, after a scramble in the goal mouth. The home forwards then got going in fine style, Capt Foss sending in a good shot which just went over the bar. Shortly afterwards, he was succesful in beating the visitors goalkeeper with a swift shot. The 52nd added a second goal before the interval. Resuming, the 13th broke away, and Capt Carson scored with a low shot. The 52nd added a third goal, and from a corner, Lieut Whittacker scored for the visitors, bringing the final score to 52nd King's 3. 13th Kings 2.

9th DURHAM'S v. LOWLAND SIGNALS.

Played at Lindenthal, Cologne. The Signals opened strongly and early on scored a pretty goal from a corner kick. The Durhams came more into the picture after this reverse, but failed to score before the interval.

Soon after the restart Stevenson equalised from a penalty, and later put the Durhams ahead from a nice cross by Holborn. The Durhams had most of the play after this, and scored a third goal from a scrimmage. Result: 9th D.L.I. 3 goals, Lowland Div. Signals 1 goal.

MOTOR TRANSPORT HANDICAP.

Twenty-six teams competed in the R.A.S.C. Motor-transport three miles handicap at Grove Park yesterday. The M.G.C. won with twenty-three points; R.A.S.C. Motor-transport came second with sixty-five and the R.E. Signals with seventy-one.

Individual honours went to Blewitt who scored five successes in the last six races.

A HALF-WAY HOUSE.

Two Church Army Hostels, situated at the Hotel Mittelhauser and the Hotel zur Post are for the exclusive use of men on duty, or men proceeding or returning from leave. Tickets, procurable at the Town Major's Office, afford access to all the facilities of the institution. During the last two months, it has accommodated: for meals, about 5,000 men per week, and beds for 80 men per night. The rooms are commodious, places being set apart for reading and writing and billiards.

Moreover, the hostel occupies a central position, being but a few minutes walk from the station.

ETON COLLEGE SPORTS.

After many postponements, owing to heavy floods, the Eton Steeplechase took place on Tuesday. The course for the seniors, which was 2 miles 970 yards long, included a 20ft. brook near the winning post. The race was won by I. J. Pitman, one of the best allround athletes Eton ever had. Last year, he won practically all the flat races, and has been the winner in three of the five contests for which he is eligible to compete — the steeplechase, long jump and hammer throwing.

School Steeplechase. — I. J. Pitman, 1; J. F. de S. la Terriere, 2; P. S. Akroyd, 3; C. E. Pitman, 4; J. G. Hawtrey, 5; C. H. Gooch, 6; W. Li. P. de Winton, 7; R. G. R. Oxley, 8; S. J. R. Bucknell, 9; C. P. Dewhurst, 10; N. R. Pilcher, 11; A. D Kinloch, 12. Time, 16 mins. 33 secs.

Junior Steeplechase. — N. Usher, 1; C. T. Mitford, 2; C. R. S. Beale, 3; A. C. Crossley, 4; H. W. Kerr, 5; M. R. Bridgeman, 6; A. L. Barclay, 7; T. W. Nicalls, 8; H. F. Gibson, 9; T. C. Gouldsmith, 10; R. H. B. Arkwright, 11.

Miniature Rifle Competitions. The House Cup competition at the miniature rifle range was won by Mr. Macnaghten's House with an average of 81. Mr. Churchill's House was second with 77,51. Mr. Robeson's third at 76,84.

In the Soltau-Symons Cup competition the result was: Mr. Dobbs's House 77,62 average, 1; Mr. Robeson's, 77, 2; Mr. Byrne's, 75,5, 3.

SEELSCHEID NOTES.

A traveller arriving at Seelscheid by day would hardly mistake it for London. The village is divided into two, and the southern half, with which we here are chiefly concerned, has but a single street. To walk down the length of it takes only a few minutes, and would occupy still less time were not its state such as to make ordinary walking impossible. But were he to arrive in the evening he might well think himself back in London — not a London in an air raid, for the streets are dark, but that city with its whirl of gaiety and amusements.

Twice a week, there are dances and a combined stretch of imagination and a canteen provide a supper. To the enlivening strains of a band or the softer music of a piano, army-booted feet trip lightly in the waltz or two-step. The Jazz has not penetrated thus far yet.

On other nights, whist drives prevail, and it is only by the exercise of much brain power that the successful players win the coveted and artfully chosen prizes.

Still stronger in their claims upon thought are the Friday night debates. It has been decided that men without work awaiting them at home, should sign on for the army of occupation, and that bachelors are not to be taxed. But this latter decision was clearly arrived at in a house packed with bachelors, who recorded their votes in the face of overwhelming argument. But be it said to their credit that the strongest denunciation of the selfishness of bachelors came from one of the oldest unmarried men in the room.

Boxing, too — that most violent sport akin to war — has had its turn, and one worthy exponent went far in the 2nd Army championship.

IMPERIAL SERVICES RUGBY.

NEW ZEALAND TEAM FOR CHAMPIONSHIP.

The Imperial Services Championship match, which is to be played at Inverleith on Saturday, is exciting an extraordinary amount of interest.

The Mother Country, who are opposing the New Zealanders, will be represented by: Cumberlege, Day, Cullen, Pickles, Hoon, Lewis, Pym, Brown (Captain), Brunton, Uster, Laing, Lawless, Pillman, Gallie and Jones.

IN THE RING.

WILDE'S NEXT MATCH.

WILL PAL MOORE OR PETE HERMAN ACCEPT

Jimmy Wilde, who, on Monday night, defeated Joe Lynch the American bantam-weight at the National Sporting Club, has signed papers to box Pal Moore or Pete Herman, of America, for the world's bantam weight championship and a purse of 5,000 pounds.

Mr. C. B. Cochran is authorised by Mr. Lewis, Wilde's manager, to issue challenges to Pal Moore and Pete Herman accordingly.

ECHO OF MONDAY'S GREAT FIGHT.

Interviewed at the National Sporting Club by the Daily Telegraph boxing correspondent Joe Lynch said:

"I have no kick to make. It is my proud privilege to have fought at your National Sporting Club, and to have met such a marvellous boxer as Wilde. You will agree that it was a hard fight. With my showing I am thoroughly satisfied. I would not discuss the justice of the verdict, that would not be fair or sportsmanlike, but I may say without appearing to be a disappointed man, that at the finish I was going strong and well, and suffered no ill effects. I would like to have a return match, fifteen or twenty-three minutes round, and I am prepared to do 8st 6lb at the ringside. Already a purse of £3,000 has been offered for a second meeting, and if Wilde can see his way to fight me again my supporters will back any money on my chances; further, I will agree to the winner taking the whole of the purse and sidestakes."

It is not expected that Wilde uill be agreeable to fight again, for some time, at all events, since his programme is already well filled.

THE "DOM" HAWKS.

A remarkable sight, in a town the size of Cologne, may be seen by anyone passing near the Dom. Almost at any time of the day several birds of the hawk tribe may be seen soaring and hovering in the immediate vicinity of the twin towers. The first time that the writer woke to the fact that here, in a large town, such a sight was to be seen was one day when passing down the Marzellen Strasse. There, poised in the sky, was a fine hawk with a plane away in the background and for a moment the senses were deceived into seeing two aeroplanes. But suddenly the smaller one began to flop and, since "flapping-flight" for planes crashed years ago, the illusion was spoiled.

These birds seem to live in the Dom towers, surely a remarkable habitat for their kind, and have been seen to hunt the pigeons which congregate there. Judging from their respective weights a real fight, hawk versus pigeon, should be an interesting one to watch, a treat the writer has not yet enjoyed.

No doubt the numerous smaller birds of Cologne provide these hawks with sufficient food.

SIGNAL COMPANY "A" 187th. BRIGADE HEADQUARTERS.

The match between the Divisional Signal Company "A" team and 187th. Brigade Headquarters, yesterday, resulted in the former team winning by three goals to 2. For the signallers, Driver Buckley secured 2 and Corporal Walker 1, while Sergt. Blumdell was responsible for both the Brigade Headquarters goals.

The match which was full of exciting incident, was witnessed by a large number of spectators.

INTENSIVE SPORT.

Sport as arranged in the 52nd Bn.. The Rifle Brigade, at Worringen, aims at every man taking a part, and a normal afternoon's programme shows to what extent success has been obtained. The Battalion has fitted out three "soccer" and one Rugby ground. The competitions running are an inter-Company League and Inter-Platoon League. A Battalion team both in "Footer" and Rugby are also run, and it is a condition that officers and men playing in the Company Teams are debarred from Platoon Teams.

To cope with the Platoon League it has been found necessary to play as many as seven matches in an afternoon. Each match lasts 30 minutes and it speaks well for the organising ability of the Sports Officer, Lt. Clayton, that referees are obtained, and everything proceeds without a hitch.

Having recently arrived from England the Battalion has not been able to shine so far as the Battalion teams are concerned, but they are certainly out to win the premier position in the "Army of Occupation".

Football is not the only branch of sport taking place, as there are many useful boxers of all weights, who, as soon as an opportunity presents itself, will make their mark, whilst in tug-of-war, team races, cross country running etc. there is a wealth of talent available.

Arrangements are being made for cricket, tennis, and other summer sports, and practice will soon be in full swing.

If Sport is to be one of the main items of training for the "Army of Occupation" then the 52nd Battalion, the Rifle Brigade, is indeed training hard, and, being blessed with officers and N.C.O.'s who are the keenest of sportsmen, they will surely uphold the reputation of the Brigade, which has always been famous as a sporting unit.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

BY "METEOR".

Friday, April 4th, 1919.

Surface wind light westerly. Fair; mist or fog early; some cloud later. Visibility improving in the afternoon. Very cold morning and evening.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

(WITH AN OCCASIONAL ENTERTAINMENTS NOTE.)

"In the Spring, Tra-la-la."

At last Spring seems to have come to stay. All traces of recent snow were dispelled yester day, once and for all, by the bright, cheery sunshine that warmed the cockles of our hearts and made our thoughts fly to flannels and bathing garb, and what an influence a little sunshime has on everybody's spirits. All day yesterday the streets were thronged with happy smiling faces; every second soldier appeared to have a camera slung over his shoulder, while lime juice and sodas were in great demand wherever they were available. Altogether, it was generally decided that the Weather Clerk was not such an old curmudgeon as we thought him a day or two ago, and I dare say this little encouragement will prompt him to switch on to this planet a little more generous supply of sunshine in future.

Snap-shooting the Cathedral.

The mention of cameras brings to mind the wonderful attraction the Cathedral has for the camera fiend. At three o'clock yesterday afternoon a walk past the two principal sides of the huge building would have revealed no fewer than nine enthusiastic photographers in the act of getting a picture.

Day after day amateur "filmites" turn their attention to the Dom and the dozens of results I have been privileged to see usually depict nothing more artistic than a hazy-looking building (which might easily be mistaken for "St. Paul's by night") leaning forward at a perilous angle. At a rough estimate each of these results probably costs a couple of marks. And yet there are dozens of shops in the town where a really first rate photograph of the same subject may be purchased for a few pfenigs. As a lecturer at the Y.M.C.A. Hall reminded us the other night "Man is an extraordinary animal."

Music hath Charms.

An interesting experiment is being tried by the Y.M.C.A. people at Cologne to-night. A competition has been arranged in connection with which prizes will be awarded to the best exponents of the violin, the piano and vocalism, and humorists will have their chance to shine by warbling comic songs in opposition to each other (not simultaneously, as the ambigity of this sentence night lead you to suppose). The efforts of the competitors ought to provide a novel and amusing entertainment.

Tennis Prospects.

The knowledge that Bonn is going to provide tennis lovers stationed there with plenty of facilities for the game in the coming summer is prompting many people in and about Cologne to enquire what prospects there are here for occasional sets. Enquiries reveal the fact that Cologne is much better off than a good many people suppose. There are eighteen courts in the Lindenthal area and six in the neighbourhood of the zoological gardens. The majority of these in common with most continental courts are of rubble, but there are exceptions and a tennis expert who played on one of these in pre-war days, tells me that at that time the turf was smoother and more resilient than any other court he knew. Just how the matter of the allotment of the courts is to be arranged it is yet impossible to say, as soon as particulars are available they will be inserted in the Cologne Post.

And We Will Row, Row, Row."

Contrary to general opinion (including my own up to yesterday afternoon), rowing on the Rhine is not an impossible idea. Looking at the rippling wavelets from the bridge, the current of the river seems to be very much swifter than it really is. "The proof of the pudding is in the eating," someone, somewhere, once said, and with two friends who have had more than a little regatta experience, I hied me to the river brink yesterday and in a fairly light skiff skulled without undue exertion half a mile up stream. The result was thoroughly agreeable, for although the propelling effort was perhaps a little more difficult than that required on the Thame it was by no means too strenous to render some excellent sport in the summer practicable.

Our Lady Entertainers.

The women's theatre company complete their most successful nine days wonder- I mean visit the Apollo theatre to morrow (Saturday). The talented company of artistes, under the personal direction of Miss Inez Bensusan, has been delighting large audiences nightly with a series of clever one act plays and the form of entertainment, admirably presented, has appealed so strongly to the troops that a return visit will be paid to Cologne by the Company the week after next, this time to the Deutsche Theatre. In the meantime, the ladies will visit Wiesdorf, Bonn and Euskirchen.

'Mac" Indisposed.

Frequenters of the Central Y.M.C.A. will be very sorry to hear that Rev. Mackensie (better known to his intimates as "Mac") is laid up. He has been away from the Hall for the past ten days and the organising genius he has shown in "getting up" all forms of entertainment, (as well as his own cheery self) has been sorely missed. With all his friends, I trust his activities will very soon brighten things at the "Central" once more.

THE RAMBLER.

A WARNING TO STAMP-COLLECTERS.

It has been noticed with regret that owing to the enormous demand by inexperienced but ardent young collectors for the War Issues of enemy Countries, of the new Russian States and of the Balkan States, an extraordinary inflation of the prices of these stamps has taken place. The German dealers in the occupied territory are able to charge and obtain practically any price they like, simply because the prospective British buyer has no knowledge of the value of these stamps owing to them not being catalogued by any English firm.

The writer has carefully observed the rise in prices and knows that several of these sets are now fetching anything from 30% to 40% higher prices than they were one and two months ago, and in some cases even double the prices. A dealer actually said that they are trying to make money on the rate of exchange, admitting that their regular German customers would be supplied at a considerably lower rate than British or Allied customers would.

As an example: The writer took a set of surcharged Polish stamps to London and tried to sell them. He was told that they could be bought in London 50% cheaper than he could afford to sell them.

THE QUEST OF THE OTTER.

AN APRIL MORN'S SPORT.

"George, reach me down my otter-pole, and see that the hobnails in my "K" boots are sound." With this injunction I send my trusty henchman to the gun room, where my brass-studded ash-pole holds a place of honour upon the wall amid the trophies of the chase. For on the morrow I am to be up with the lark, and away across the moors to the opening tryst of the Otter Hounds. The tramp of several miles gives the leisure to think, and the uppermost speculation is as to who will be at the well-known cross-roads to greet the Master and his famous pack. War's alarms scattered good men and true to all quarters, and some will never more hear the mort-note, for across the water they have been called to the "happy hunting grounds," having lived and died typical English sportsmen. The "field" is a large one, and many new faces are seen, while lads who, in 1914, were almost of the gay and giddy class have, through their campaigning, developed into robust and warriorlike types and receive the homage of the many ladies who are "out" with becoming modesty.

GREY BREECHES AND A POT HAT.

The old gamekeeper from the Squire's estate "Veele purty zure thur'll be main gude spôart this marning," and proceeds to justify his remark by quoting the number of litters he has discovered in the holts. For, it must be remembered, otters have on some streams carried on their domestic affairs without let or hindrance, while Master, Whips, and Supporters of the Hunt have been after a sterner, and as wily, a quarry. Five minutes grace, allowed for late-comers, elapse, and then hounds and field move off to the river bank making a picturesque scene this April morn. Scarlet coats, grey breeches and stockings, with a pot-hat of the same hue, go to make up a hunt dress which may not be as smart as the dark greens and white breeches of other Hunts, but this pack is the oldest in the Kingdom, and one Master held office for over fifty years!

Hounds "feather" directly they skirt the water, but the "drag" is evidently a stale one and fizzles out. From the opposite bank a well-known farmer notifies a "spur" in the soft mud and hounds are soon busy again on a trail that is not many hours old. Numerous small streams enter the river here, and the Master has to use his knowledge of venary to the utmost. A timely word of warning not to press too closely on the hounds keeps a few too-eager ladies from a race for a gap in a hedge, and hounds work away through orchards to shallower water, the lair of many a mighty trout. Scent has been catchy, but hereabouts the "drag" is strong, and our game-keeper friend gives useful information anent the various holts that here abound. "May be ur be in the drain, or may be ur be at whoame under thic thur pollard." "Vie," the terrier, is now requisitioned, but the drain is drawn blank, while hounds mark at the pollard, the long twining roots of which run down into the water. The terrier also gives her testimony that lutra vulgaris is at home, and once more the keeper surmises as to the whereabouts of the otter. "Thic thur hover," he says "goes back yorty veet!"

WHEN THE TALLY SOUNDS.

The well known method of jumping on the bank immediately above the holt has the desired effect, and a shrill "tally" goes up from the opposite bank as from the dark recesses of the tree-base a rich brown streak shoots to the water. All is excitement, but everything orderly, and hounds are tested to the full for the water is deep. A long line of almost imperceptible bubbles denotes to the practised eye the subaqueous course of the otter, and as he comes up to vent, another tally brings hounds, either on bank or in water, in the proper direction. Eighty yards below is a stickle, and this is barred by a line of followers, ladies included, standing knee to knee. "In the excitement one lady "tallies" a moor-hen which has lain "doggo" neath the bank amid the unaccustomed tumult.

Then tallies sound from two directions at once and as each comes from a trusted source it is certain that the good things prophesied may eventuate. Hounds work thoroughly all the water and over-hanging banks for over an hour, and the cognoscenti aver that the quarry has not left the water up or down within the radius of the stickle or the big weir. At length a rough Welsh hound gives tongue near a piece of broken water and lutra is seen for a moment and then lost again. With splendid pluck the quarry dashes in the direction of the stickle's human barrier, to be forced to vent a few yards away. Up stream, and to swim beneath the oncoming pack is the only escape, but a hound springs from the bank, and momentary hesitation to snap at the foe is fatal. A short worry in deep water, in which the otter's little teeth do vicious damage, and there is danger of the terrier being drowned in the surging scramble, and then the Master wades in and secures the limp carcase.

IN AT THE DEATH.

Around the clamouring pack the field forms the ring, the trophies are distributed, the owner of the land adjoining the spot of the kill getting the mask, and the rudder and pads going to various ladies, the last-named eventually to appear as brooches or decorations in hats at future hunts. The next item on the programme is lunch, and, if possible, a visit to the nearest hostelry. In the afternoon further sport may, or may not, be experienced, and then the best part of twenty miles home to kennels. As otters have increased so largely during wartime, it is advocated to form packs to hunt smaller "countries", so in the near future there will be plenty of otter-hunting, as this means of keeping the rivers clear prevails where trapping and shooting are failures.

INDUSTRIAL SITUATION AT HOME.

A very interesting lecture on "The Industrial Situation at Home" was given by Mr. Wilfred Hill, a member of the Whitley Commission, in the 14th Brigade Cinema Hall, Obercassel, on Tuesday.

The lecturer said that after 4 years of war, our victory was complete. This was a great achievement, obtained at an enormous cost in life and wealth.

In 1914, England had been wealthy and prosperous, trade was at its zenith. Our national debts were being reduced by millions per annum.

To-day our national debt was £8,000,000,000. The vital need of the moment was co-operation. The key to the golden age; to "A better England," was "output." That could not be achieved by conflict, but by hearty co-operation between employers and employed.

That was possible by the adoption of the Joint Industrial Councils, comprised of representatives of employers and employed, as proposed in the Whitley report.

Mr. Hill concluded by describing the Whitley scheme, giving examples of the scheme in operation.

ALL FOOLS' DAY 113 BDE. A.F.A.

The Sergeant of the Guard sounded the four sharp blasts on his whistle, which heralded the beginning of another day for the Gunners of Wahn. We turned over for another nap, but that whistle would give us no respite, and the "Quarter" shrilled out, to be soon followed by the "Five Minutes," which sent us scampering to stables, buttoning tunics and comparing watches. Every watch apparently was half-an-hour slow, but at that moment, instead of the "fall-in," a new reveille sounded from close quarters, but apparently from under cover, and, not until we saw the Sergeant, shrieking from the Guard-room, did we realise it was "All Fool's Day" and we were "had."

We are still looking for that Sergeant!!

MORE UNSOLICITED TESTIMONIAL.

In a letter received this morning from a C.Q.M.S. he says that yesterday he went to the Baths at Bonn. After waiting for an hour and a half he managed to squeeze in and there he saw a man in the bath reading the Cologne Post, entirely oblivious of both surroundings and time. It was hard luck on the man forming the queue, but it certainly speaks high for the success of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—May I congratulate you and your staff or our new Cologne daily? As a worker of over 20 years' experience in the composing and reading departments of dailies, weeklies, and other journals, the only fault I have to find is that some improvement might be effected in the proof-revising. Perhaps, however, this is only apparent to the technical eye and is doubtless due to a lack of knowledge of English by your printers.

A TALE OF TWO CITIES.

"BODGE,"

No two cities speak with the same voice or stand forth dressed in the same colours. A comparison of Cologne and Brussels could not possibly produce a more striking study in contrasts. It is by no means easy to explain the differences, because it is quite as much a matter of atmosphere and sensation as appearance and external features. The place we visit has a way of impinging upon the nervous system and leaving us with an impression, dull or bright rather than a printed picture. It was not easy at first to analize what exactly had impressed us in Cologne, but after subsequent excursions we felt that it was its stolidity, rigidity, and prosperity that had printed itself on the brain: It had ruled itself upon the consciousness in a number of straight hard lines. We had a kind of feeling that we could never get away and above Cologne. It had us, so to say under its thumb. There was a sense of restraint, a lack of freedom and expansion.

We are quite certain as to what happened in Brussels. The reader will do well to remember that a sober Padre is writing and, if he be susceptible, need fear no shocks: whilst if curious, he will probably be disappointed. There are no shrills in the capital of Brussels which as of old, gathers there "its beauty and its chivalry," we breathed freely and enjoyed a kind of exhiliaration as though walking upon air. In a manner we were kindred spirits with the light aereal-like figures that glitter in gold on the domes and turrets of the civic buildings. There is a fulness and rich bloodedness of life as expressed in Ruben's pictures. No one is allowed to take his pleasures sadly in Brussels for there one foots it lightly. Life is not "real and earnest," but a dance, a song — a brilliant mirage, if you will.

But a city as such, is in itself a self revealing thing like a person. In its brick and mortar-streets, dome spires, chimneys, public monuments, the physical features as well as thes genius of a people are in some manner incarnated. In this regard, Rhineland and Belgium challenge comparison, and the architectural features of the two cities stand out in startling opposition. The fine Cathedral of Cologne needs no description. It is a forest of beautiful columns a marvel of "frozen music," in spite of other criticisms; and yet, standing amid rather medicre dwellings, it seems somewhat out of place. It appears as a vast after-thought, or as if the neighbourhood had risen up against it in material protest to the sublime and the austere in its midst. The avenue that opens to it from the other side of the river is the Hohenzollern bridge, a marvellous piece of engineering craft. But it is iron, iron everywhere, until the realism of the iron age comes home to the spectator. Through arches and between stands of steel, one must look at the cathedral. The impression which the juxtaposition of the iron bridge and the ecclesiastical pile leave upon the mind is that somehow the makers of the city have failed to subordinate the less noble parts to the more noble. Here is an artistic flaw in the scheme of things.

Brussels is nothing if it is not an harmony. It is a symphony of colour tones, with the magnificent Palais de Justice as the key note. There are touches of ugliness, but never any striking discords such as to mar prevailing unison of the city buildings. It is not alone the Market place with the Hotel de Ville and the other fine and gilded monuments that strike the eye of the visitor, but that in unexpected twists of the road or jutting from some angle, a church, an image, a garden or a museum, break pleasantly and surprisingly on the vision. Brussels must have sprung forth at the bidding of some magic wand or risen out of the ground to the pleasant pipings of Pan.

And not in the material structure alone, but in the feature and form of the people, we can mark contrasts. Brussels succeeds in expressing human life in its most graceful and rythmic lines. In the opera, itself a series of wonderful curves in crimson and gold, with a charmingly painted ceiling may be witnessed every night the poetry of action, whilst the most musical cadences of the voice are a never-failing delight. In contrast to a speech that sounds harsh in the ears, it is a pleasure to hear even the paper sellers calling their "Dealy Meal" and "Dealy Meeyor" — as though these things were some fine fruits. Belgian's capital may be wayward but like Phyllis in the the time-worn song "she never fails to please."

There is the iron hand in Cologne, but there are fairies — we refer to the invisible kind — in Brussels.

THE RETURN OF THE VICTORS.

From all parts comes news of the preparations which are being made to welcome home the men who for years have been engaged in overcoming the Hun menace. Not that we are needing any great public show of gratitude, but it undoubtedly will add to the pleasure of every one of us to know that our labours and trials have not passed unrecognized among the people from whom we come.

On St. George's Day, April 23rd, at Newcastle there are to be great doings. The Novocastrians are determined that the redoubtable Fusiliers of Northumbria — the fifth of the regiments of the line — shall be publicly acclaimed. There has been arranged a great "Victory March," wherein the returned Victors will appear, followed by several forms of jollifications.

At Cambridge, too, arrangements are being made officially to welcome back the 1/1st Cambs. Regt. which has spent over four years of fighting in France. One of the few Territorial battalions to have a "first" as its designation, the 1/1st Cambs. have a glorious record for hard fighting and endurance during the several campaigns.

At a recent meeting of the Cambs and Isle of Ely Territorial Association it was decided to give the cadre of the battalion an official welcome which is to take the form of a public reception at the station, a march through the streets of the university city with colours flying, and terminate with a dinner and concert to be held in the Recreation Room of the First Eastern General Hospital. No doubt the procession will be a great deal merrier than many of the awful number which has preceded it to the same place.

"COMRADES IN SERVICE."

"Comrades in Service," published in Paris by an organization bearing the same name, has several excellent notes in its No. 5 which we have just received. The movement with which it is connected had for its chief aim the binding together of all American citizens who have served in the War so that the spirit of camaraderie, i.e. minifying of the "each for himself" idea, may be fostered and employed for the future good of the nation. There can be no question of the enormous awakening of better feelings that has taken place among the men who have camped together, suffered together and faced death together, and it would be an irreparable loss should this spirit cease to exist when we once more face the comparatively hum-dum "civvy" life. With this idea we greet with a feeling of pleasure any movement which shall lead the Yanks and all of us "to strive for the realization of the highest type of Democracy."

THE POWER OF SUGGESTION.

[In case the libel laws in the Rhine Provinces are strict, it may be as well to state that all names — and most of the incidents — in this story are purely fictitious.]

2nd Lieut. Smith-Browne — an actor in private life — decided after the armistice to return to his former profession. As far as the Army of Occupation is concerned, he was last seen on a January night in a state of semi-demobilisation, somewhere near the Dom Hotel.

In London he again adopted the artistic garb for which he had often longed whilst in the trenches. Once more he had his freedom, but he found, somehow, that something was lacking in his new life. He made the discovery, as others have done, that the term "Lodging, Light and Fuel" is far more attractive when read in a Pass Book than when intoned by a resolute landlady. In short, after a few weeks, Mr. Smith-Browne was pretty well "fed up".

Then came the rift in the clouds, and the sun of opportunity shone on him once more. He read in a paper that demobilised officers would be allowed to wear their uniforms, if they took off all badges of rank and all regimental signs. Smith-Browne's histrionic soul simply soared as he read it. He retired to his room and spent an hour there, chiefly in front of the mirror.

Dusk fell upon the earth and the late officer emerged and started on that bold career which even yet does not seem to have reached its zenith. His make-up was magnificent. Like a true artist, he knew where to stop. His costume was unassuming, but it was packed full of suggestions. His plain military tunic, with its sombre buttons, and the neat civilian collar above it, discarded medals. On his left breast was a very faint line of lighter-shaded cloth. It was almost as though the bare khaki were sighing for its accustomed line of ribbons. At least that is what Smith-Browne meant it to suggest, and he was successful, almost beyond his hopes. There were no impostures about his performances — not legally, at any rate. — With that quiet, imposing tunic and a few references to the Ypres Salient — a district he KNOWS by heart — he found that he need never be thirsty. Inexperienced subalterns simply pushed refreshments on to him. A cruder soul would have overdone the part, but Smith-Browne was an artist. He would occasionally scratch at his leg, as though an invisible field boot were irking him, also he would occasionally scribble rough notes and plans as though he were making out dispositions — this last touch he reserved chiefly for his lady friends, and it went very well.

But his great triumph came one night after closing hour. Smith-Browne and a few friends were listening dejectedly to a bitter speech from an A. P. M. The situation was threatening, when Smith-Browne opened his civilian overcoat and revealed his tunic in al its grand suggestiveness. The effect was wonderful. Smith-Browne extricated his whole force in ten minutes without loss. Rumour even has it that the A. P. M. gave a surreptitious salute as they parted for the night.

His career is one long success. He hardly pays for anything outside his owa lodgings. It is reported that he is joining the Board of a City Company. No limit can be put to his possibilities. He may even become a military critic for a London paper.

Who shall say?

PHYSICAL TRAINING.

H. CLAYTON.

"Necessity is the mother of invention."

The present army system of physical training supplies the need of training large numbers of men without proper apparatus or clothing, and procuring the utmost activity of brain and limb so essential to the modern soldier, who must be an individual, not a mechanical automat. From the urgent necessity for quickly training the millions of men which the nation has sent to war has arisen a new system, a system which recognizes that the soldier must be well disciplined, a good marcher, intelligent, smart, active and quick. Many systems of physical training aim at producing a man with big muscles, but the vital force of the body does not always consist of biceps, etc. I know men who have very strong arms, but unwholesome blood and delicate lungs and stomach. It is of more importance to have vigorous lungs and heart, good digestion, and sound kidneys and liver, than to have a "Sandow-arm." It is quite a different kind of strength that is aimed at. We want a man of pin-wire, a man who can endure a hard day's physical exertion, and still have sufficient vitality left to enable him to flag a hard game of Rugby or Football.

The soldier to-day must be quick. I heard once an inspecting officer say that there are two kinds of soldiers — the quick and the dead. Physical Training quickens the brain. The brain is aroused through the medium of the body. A horse will strain every nerve on application of the spur, the nerve centre, the brain, being stirred to greater activity through the medium of the body. The recruit, when doing physical training, must keep his brain ever alert, or his body will fail to move, and the instructor will soon find the absent-minded one. Moreover, a special class of exercises known as "quickeners" or pitfalls for the unwary have been provided, to ensure unfailing activity of the brain. So, unless a man ceases to concentrate upon his drill, he will fall into one of these pits. It requires determination to carry out the exercises. Correct positions are obtained only by a victory of the will over the obstinate body. The body is controlled by the brain. When the arms are fully stretched, for instance, it requires "that extra ounce" to straighten them so that there is no bend at the elbow. Every exercise, if done properly, is a distinct tonic for the body. Nothing can be done unless the individual is first of all willing to do it.

A sufficient amount of "I will" results in action being done. A physical training table is a succession of challenges to the will. As a matter of fact, one can often see by the expression on a man's face that he is having to put determination into it to get there. The system also begets control. A man becomes master of the body. Mind and muscles co-ordinate. There are exercises, which cannot be done without control — and how essential is control to the soldier.

To prevent monotony, games and general activity work are introduced. They introduce an element of enjoyment that the men do not get in other drills. The competitive element is often introduced here, and men will work with the utmost energy without realising that they are working strenuously and attaining quickness of mind and body.

Without health life is indeed a failure — and the existence of the nation depends upon healthy manhood.

THE ARTISTIC STATUS OF COLOGNE CATHEDRAL.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir, — I am afraid Major Bles is rather severe — and in parts unjustifiably so — in his article on the general architectural features of the Dom. There are few, I think, who will be inclined to agree with him in his sweeping condemnation of the Cathedral's artistic points. I do not say it is a perfect work of art, flawless or faultless, but I do maintain it is in many respects a "thing of beauty," and can take its place among the world's monuments of architecture. Time after time I have heard expressions of opinion regarding the exquisite ornamentation of the towers and the façade. In forming an opinion on the artistic status of the Dom wo ought to remenber that, like Rome, it was not built in a day, and the building therof passed through various vicissitudes of fortune.

Extrinsically, I think the Dom loses much in being so much surrounded by buildings.

However, we are all entitled to our own opinions in criticising works of art; and what seem beautiful and exquisite to one person, might not seem so to another. —

WORRINGEN AM RHEIN.

To the Editor of the Cologne Post:

Sir. — I have read with interest the article on Cologne Cathedral which appeared in the first number of the "Post." Although laying no claim to any degree of expert knowledge I cannot but think that the adverse criticisms which it contained are in a large degree unmerited.

If the spirit of the designers and craftsmen of the Middle Ages has not been inherited, it is no matter for blame under the conditions which have been since evolved in the modern industrial world. That much or nearly all of this spirit has been universally lost is widely recognised; a sentiment well expressed in the lines to be found in "The Life of Sir Gilbert Scott" our great apostle of the Gothic revival in England.

With all the light a happier age has brought'
We work not yet as our forefathers wrought.

To the writer the marvel is that so much, and not so little, of the beauty of design and execution which prevailed in the middle-ages should have been revived. And the wonder is increased, when it is born in mind that the results, which one previously supposed had almost if not altogether rivalled those of times referred to, were achieved towards the end of a period when ecclesiastical architecture had fallen into a deplorable low ebb in England, that is, during the Georgian and early Victorian periods, as has been so strikingly illustrated in the well written and severely satirical book "Pugin's Contrasts."

As to the interior, surely the nave is indeed of extraordinarily noble conception and execution (can it be anywhere surpassed?) and therefore, even if it be the case, that the alleged defects exist, so great an achievement should surely atone for any such short-comings. There is perhaps just one point to which reference may be made as forming subject of criticism, that is the extraordinarily large size of the finials upon the two western spires, rendering them liable to be considered somewhat disproportionate and obtrusive.

AN AMATEUR.

THE QUESTION OF TONGUES.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post:

The above-mentioned article in your first issue of The Cologne Post raises a subject for much discussion.

Putting aside all so-called international tongues such as Esperanto and Volapuk, which may be a well-meaning but unpractical solution of the language barrier, there still remains the fact that we have no single language to bridge the gulf between various nations, and also the fact that those who would do business or have intercourse with these foreign peoples must of necessity become linguists.

How many Englishmen to-day can call themselves linguists?

Why does not the average Englishman take up the study of modern languages? Not because of incapability, Latin and Greek scholars are numerous. The reason is rather that he is not sufficiently encouraged or valued when he has acquired a knowledge of one or two languages.

There are several officers and men who, although competent linguists, have throughout the war never been used in their proper sphere of usefulness. Also, there are men who, possessing great linguistic abilities, have never obtained a well-paid post in a British commercial house.

Our own people preferred to employ foreigners as correspondents and foreign agents or travellers. What is the result? Our trade got into foreign competitors' hands. Before the war hundreds of foreign clerks were employed in Great Britain. In most cases there especially those who were of German nationality, were subsidized by their Government. They were content to receive low salaries from their British employers. In a word they were commercial spies, learning our methods, our customers, and our trade secrets at the same time.

Let us hope the English business man has awakened to the truth of the matter, but there is much to be done.

Educate our young men in foreign tongues. Abandon the idea that everyone speaks English. How many men in the Rhine Army are to-day making a serious attempt to learn German? "A man who speaks two languages is worth two men." "With each language a man wins a new soul," are sayings with much truth in them.

Strange it is that the Englishman, who is the greatest of travellers, is the poorest linguist.

It is a duty to make up for the time lost during the war. New methods must be adopted, our goods must be "hoosted" in the tongue of the foreigner to whom they are sold, his wants and personal characteristics studied.

Let us then encourage our linguists, they will more than repay us. The heralds of British commerce and the interpreters of the Empire, have a great future before them. —

CRITICAL SITUATION IN NORTH RUSSIA

ALLIES ANXIETY AT ARCHANGEL

APPALLING BOLSHEVIK BARBARITIES

EX-CROWN PRINCE AND HERR LUDENDORFF

MURMURINGS FROM MURMAN.

ICY ISOLATION.

Considerable anxiety exists in authoritative military circles about the situation of the Allied troops in North Russia on the White sea. Relief or reinforcement of the troops in that sector of the Murman coast is a matter of great importance. Already a detachment of American troops has left, on American cruisers, for Murmansk and a force of British troops is being prepared to follow.

At Archangel too, the situation gives cause for apprehension, as during the next two months, until the ice breaks up, no reinforcements can reach them from the sea.

It is only to be expected that the Bolsheviks will make the most determined efforts to push them off the land. The enemy has very superior forces and, of course, lines of communication which the Allies absolutely lack.

The fact that the enemy's sector of the river Dvina thaws sooner than the sector which is in our possession will naturally be of very great help to them.

Our troops therefore are likely to have a very hard time and great emphasis is laid on the fact that it is absolutely essential for them to be reinforced or relieved at the earliest possible moment.

It must be obvious that it would be impossible to evacuate Murmansk, which is a warm water port, until all the Allied troops are withdrawn from Archangel.

There is one enormous factor of very great advantage at Archangel. That is the personality of the General Officer commanding. General Ironside is a man of wonderful initiative and energy, undeterred by the heaviest odds.

Of the men under his command it is already proved that they fulfil the highest traditions of the British Army and worthy to rank with the best.

No praise can be too high for the splendid endurance shown by the troops composing the original British force which was sent to North Russia last summer. In view of the enormous demands at that time for men for the Western front, we were compelled to build up a force almost entirely of low category men. Nevertheless they have withstood the inevitable privations and hardships of an Arctic winter with the utmost fortitude, and beaten off time and again the fierce attacks of superior enemy forces, inured to the rigours of the climate, with that dogged tenacity and courage which causes the British soldier — with his back to the wall — to stand out alone, without a compeer the world over.

Grief, indignation and bewilderment are among the feelings expressed in the newspapers at the revelation of the position at Murmansk. While it is urged that the peril of the troops is an urgent reason why the Peace Conference must settle its policy towards Russia without delay, it is emphasised that no steps must be neglected to relieve the force. The Times suggests that the best form of relief might be an offensive agains Petrograd or Moscow just as the best way to defend Rumania would be to invade Hungary from the west from the direction Czechoslovakia.

SHACKLETON'S SUGGESTION.

Sir Ernest Shackleton, lately returned from Murmansk and Archangel was interviewed by a Reuter Correspondent. He said the position of the Allied North ra Forces is undoubtedly anxious. He was however confident that sufficient volunteers could be obtained to meet the situation. He urges that the British have not yet realised what s at stake if the peril is not instantly grappled with. A three months campaign by a volunteer army would break the Bolshevist monster, which is becoming far worse than German Militarism.

ODESSA.

Reuter's correspondent also wires, that the garrison of Odessa has been greatly strengthened and the French Commander is confident of his ability to hold the town. The Bolsheviks managed to reach the outer defences, which were strongly defended, but failed to penetrate them.

JOINED ALLIES ON SNOW-SHOES.

The British fleet has sailed from le Havre.

There are 850000 unemployed in Belgium.

Mr. Ramsay Macdonald & Mr. Henderson have arrived at Paris for a consultation with Mr. Lloyd George.

Four hundred Siberian troops of Koltchak's Army recently travelled on snow-shoes to join the Allied forces near Troitsk, on the Petshura river, North Russia.

BOLSHEVIK BARBARITIES.

In accordance with a decision of the War Cabinet made in January last, a White Book has just been issued by the Foreign Office containing British official and other reports covering the Bolshevik regime in Russia from the summer of 1918 to the present time.

It is an appalling story of atrocities and miseries.

A memorandum by a Britisher who left Moscow in December, says that thousands of the inhabitants were shot, a fashion in killing which was subsequently changed to hanging. He mentions one hundred and fifty Russian officers, prisoners at Pskoff, who were sawn into pieces by Mongolian soldiers.

The British Consul at Ekaterinburg under date 13th January reports the murder of hundreds of civilians in Ural towns.

Captured officers had their shoulder straps nailed to their shoulders. Some civilians had their eyes gouged out, the noses of others were cut off; others were dipped into water through holes cut in the ice until they froze to death.

The Dutch Minister at Petrograd did his utmost to succour British and other Allied subjects who were arrested wholesale in Moscow in the panic which followed the attempted assassination of Lenin. He repeatedly interviewed Tchitcherine, whom he impressed with England's power, assuring him that the time will come when the Soviet authorities must pay individually for acts of terrorism.

He found it impossible, however, to obtain definite promises from Tchitcherine regarding the fate of the arrested Britishers.

BOLSHEVISTS BANKRUPTCY.

In an appreciation of the economic situation, compiled from statistics in it possession, the British Government concludes that the legislative and other measures taken by the Bolshevists can only end in bankruptcy, although the resources of the country are so great that there is still scope for the continuance of the Bolshevists regime for some considerable time. The position of agriculture grows more acute as each month passes and eventually seed and grain must be consumed, and foodstocks and livestock exhausted.

BOLSHEVISM AT BRISBANE.

RETURNED 'AUSSIES' TAKE A HAND.

Australian soldiers who are back home "down under" have speedily shown that they intend fiercely to resent, by forcible means if necessary, anything in the nature of Bolshevism.

Some Australians who demonstrated in front of the Russian Association Headquarters at Brisbane were attacked by Bolshevists whereupon the returned soldiers made plans to avenge them. They paraded before the Russian headquarters and threatened to burn down th premises. A huge Australian flag was hoisted amid great enthusiasm, and a resolution passed demanding immediate Federal and State action against the Bolshevists.

Tramloads of armed police were hurriedly sent to the spot and were greeted with jeers.

The soldiers then tried to reach the Russian Hall and in the fracas the Police Commissioner and Senior Magistrate were injured.

Eventually two soldiers were permitted to enter the hall. They reported it untenanted, whereupon the crowd dispersed.

Next day the crowd smashed the windows of the Labour news-paper, the Standard which had applauded the carrying of the red flag by the Russian demonstrators.

One soldier shouted "If an apology is not published to morrow, then God help the Standard!"

The soldiers intend processioning constantly, to ensure that the Russian Bolshevists do not again take charge in Brisbane.

MARSHAL FOCH AT SPA.

Erzberger made quite sure he was not late for his orders at Spa. He arrived overnight and slept, as did his suite, in the train.

Marshal Foch's train reached Spa at 8.20 a.m. and stopped in front of the German train. The French Generalissimo had a long talk with General Nudant, President of the French Committee at Spa, and sent Col. Fournier to notify Erzberger that he would be received at 9.30 a. m.

At the appointed time Erzberger arrived. The French interpreter, Laperche, was present, also General Weygand. The conference lasted 40 minutes. Foch handed to the German Plentipotentiary the decisions of the Entente. At 10.30 Erzberger left the train with his portfolio under his arm. He seemed very excited.

After an hour's conference with General Hammerstein and his technical advisers he proceded to the Hotel Britannique, where the German members of the Armistice Commission stay.

Marshal Foch went to the Villa Neubois as the guest of General Nudant.

The whole town is decorated with flags and banquets in Marshal Foch's honour have been arranged by the British and American missions.

A second conference at which were present Marshall Foch, General Weyand and General Nudant, Herr Erzberger, General Hammerstein and Herr Simon took place yesterday at the Villa Neubois, lasting one and a half hours.

DAILY MAIL LIBEL ACTION.

THE JOCULAR JUDGE.

The action for libel brought by Sir Hedley Le Bas against the Daily Mail was resumed in the High Court to day before Mr. Justice Darling.

In the course of cross-examination the plaintiff admitted having referred to the Fifth Army disaster, which he claimed to have been due to the attitude of politicians. He was terribly anxious about the future of his country and if he had had a newspaper like Lord Northcliffe's he would have attacked Lloyd George very much more than he did.

Counsel suggested that the paying for insertion of articles as Le Bas had done was a new method of political propaganda.

The plaintiff described this argument as absurd. Such practice was first adopted by Ceylon, who paid newspapers to insert reports of speeches advocating Free-trade. He said the charge made in the Daily Mail, that he was circulating anonymous articles against Lloyd George was a monstrous lie.

In re-examination, Counsel for the plaintiff read an article published in the Daily Mail on 2nd December, violently attacking the Government and calling for Mr. Asquith's resignation.

Plaintiff described it as an anonymous attack.

Mr. Justice Darling asked how long the Government lived after the publication of the article.

"About a week", replied Counsel.

The hearing was again adjourned.

QUESTIONS IN THE COMMONS.

CONCHIES AND SOLDIERS.

Mr. Will Thorne (Labour, Plaistow) asked whether the Government has been considering the advisability (!) of releasing on the signing of Peace all conscientious objectors, political prisoners and soldiers who have committed various offences.

Mr. Winston Churchill replied that the Government had decided that demobilization is now sufficiently advanced to justify them in approving the proposals of the Army Council for dealing with soldiers of various classes, including conscientious objectors, who commited offences under the Army Act and were in consequence sentenced to imprisonment.

All such soldiers will be discharged from the Army for misconduct and if, or when, they have completed a total of two years imprisonment in England they will be released.

[Apparently this means that if a conchy or convicted soldier serving a sentence has completed two or more years of such sentence when Peace is signed, the remainder will be remitted.]

INDUSTRIAL SETTLEMENT FOR DISABLED SOLDIERS.

About five hundred acres of land at Meathop Flats, Morecambe Bay, have been secured for the industrial settlement of disabled soldiers and sailors. The first party of settlers will start training at a hostel at Lancaster immediately after Easter.

FLYING THE ATLANTIC WESTWARD.

Limerick aerodrome has been selected as the starting point for his translantic flight by Captain J.C.P. Wood.

He is the only competitor attempting the flight westward.

MONEY SPINNING.

The value of the estate left by Lord Glenavar, a director of Coats, Limited, the cotton thread firm, has been returned at over four and a half million pounds. The estate duty will amount to nearly nine hundred thousand pounds.

KING'S FUND FOR WIDOWS AND ORPHANS.

The Times understands that the King's Fund will shortly discontinue its work in aid of partially disabled soldiers and sailors, which work will be taken over by the Ministry of Pensions. The King's Fund will continue to act as an agency for the relief of widows and orphans of deceased members of the Forces. Half a million pounds has been expended and 20.000 applications remain to be dealt with.

WILSON AWAY ABOUT EASTER.

President Wilson hopes to leave for the United States about 20th April. Before leaving France he will summon Congress by cable to meet in special session early in May.

Sir Douglas Haig is in Paris.

Hot Cross Buns are to be allowed in England this year.

Socialists and trade unionists in every district of France are organising meetings of protest against the acquittal of Villain, who assassinated M. Jaurès.

The miner's Transport Federations decided not to participate in the national Industrial Conference, called by the Government, which met yesterday. The National Union of Railwaymen was represented.

LITTLE WILLIE ON MANNERS.

LUDENDORFF'S RED RAGE.

In an interview given at Wieringen by the ex-CrownPrince to the Correspondent of the Copenhagen paper Berlingske Tidende, some rather piquant passages are set down.

"I would never have been so silly" said Little Willie, "as to want the war at a time when the whole world was against Germany . . . The great mistake was that the Germans knew nothing about the other countries. I knew the British and I knew they would never content themselves by sending only three hundred thousand men over the Channel.

"The Germans considered themselves to be the selected among nations and closed their eyes to realities. Why? Not because we had bad manners, or because we ate with the knife, but because the Reichstag did not spend enough money on propaganda. The German Ambassador at Peking had twenty thousand marks each year for propaganda purposes and the Russian Ambassador two hundred thousand roubles. When at last we decided — much too late—to spend more money in this way, the war was already lost.

"Ludendorff's communiqués were all lies during the last half year. It is impossible to lose three aundred guns and thirty thousand men — like Herr Ludendorff — and claim it as a defensive victory. There are limits to the clumsiness of a lie."

The ex-Crown Prince spoke about Ludendorff's inconsideration: "In the summer of 1918 I said to the Kaiser: 'The First Division of the Guard, which had fought on all fronts with honour, had sustained heavy losses. In the first line only eight hundred rifles were left. The division wanted at least four or five weeks to recuperate, but it was ordered to the front again after only one week's rest. That meant annihilation.

"Next morning at the General Stuff lecture the Kaiser said:

'My son, the Crown Prince, observes that . . .'

"Ludendorff, red with rage, glared at the Kaiser through his monocle and without waiting for him to finish, blared out: 'It is a shame that such things should be mentioned to the all-highest War Lord. The Crown Prince does not know what he is talking about. I demand that in future he confines his interest to matters connected with his own command and does not interfere with our dispositions."

BEWARE OF BRITISH BANKNOTES.

All troops are warned that British banknotes tendered by persons other than Field Cashiers are probably forgeries and should not be accepted.

It has been ascertained on good authority that counterfeit British banknotes are being prepared for use among British troops in the Army of the Rhine.

Hundred pound notes are specifically mentioned, so it behoves "other ranks" to be particularly careful.

PRINCE OF WALES VISITS LONDON SLUMS.

Yesterday the Prince of Wales followed the example of his mother and made a visit of inspection to the poor district in Southwark, South London, to study the housing conditions.

The Prince entered a number of houses and investigated the sanitary conditions which in some cases were deplorable' despite the unceasing vigilance of the local authorities.

It was explained to the Prince that it was hoped before long to demolish a large number of houses in the neigh bourhood of Chapel-place and Long-lane in order to build modern tenements in which the inhabitants could preserve their self-respect.

PAGEANTS AND PROCESSIONS.

ANZACS.

It has now been decided that a detachment of Anzacs, five thousand strong, shall march from the West End to the City, saluting the Lord-Mayor at the Mansion House. The procession is fixed for Anzac Day, 25th April.

MERCANTILE MARINE.

A mercantile Marine pageant has also been arranged comprising hundreds of ships' lifeboats suitably decorated, drawn up alongside the Embankment from Blackfriars to Chelsea.

CERTIFICATES OF MENTIONS.

It is announced that the Army Council, the Admiralty and the Air Council intend issuing certificates to all personnel belonging to Home, Indian, Colonial, Dominion and Egyptian forces who have been mentioned in despatches, and to members of the British Red Cross, Y.M.C.A., Y.W.C.A. and other recognised organisations who have been similarly mentioned.

TRIAL OF DE VEULLE.

The trial of Reginald De Veulle, 38, dress designer, was continued at the Old Bailey yesterday.

Belcher, the actor, was the principal witness. He admitted selling cocaine to De Veulle but not with the intention of it being supplied to Billie Carleton. He also admitted buying cocaine in five £10 packets and selling it at about double the price.

The trial is following a course almost identical with the police court proceedings.

SOLENT BOOM REMOVED.

The boom across the Solent has been removed. It consisted of a wire net 3½ miles in length, stretching from Cowes to Stone Point. It was loaded with iron. One thousand fathoms of chain and 200 anchors kept it in position. There was a gateway in the centre hydraulically operated.

ARMY CHAPLAIN DETAINED BY AUTHORITIES.

LODGED IN THE TOWER.

It is stated in the Evening News that, pending military inquiries into an alleged incident in the West End of London, the Rev. Everard Digby, the well-known sporting cleric, now an Army chaplain, has been detained by the military authorities and lodged in the Tower of London.

The Rev. Digby, who was stationed at Farnborough, was recently in London on leave and attended the Wells-Beckett fight at the Holborn Empire.

He claims to be a victim of mistaken identity.

COLOGNE MILITARY COURT.

CHEAP AT THE PRICE.

A vixen quarrelled with her husband, a joiner to such an extent that he lost his temper, went out of the house after time and was 'picked up' for being without a pass. "You had two rooms," observed the presideut of the tribunal, "why did you not lock yourself in one of them?" "I should have the curtain lecture just as well" remarked the unhappy joiner, who had ten marks to pay.

LABOUR'S LITTLE LOT.

Conferences were held at Westminster yesterday under the auspices of the Parliamentary Committee of the Trades Union Congress. The Labour Party resolved to call upon the Government to:—

Withdraw British troops from Russia:
Raise the blockade:
Withdraw Conscription Act: and Release conscientious objectors.

It also adopted a series of amendments to the League of Nations covenant aiming at democratic constitution and control of the League.

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, in moving the amendments, ridiculed the idea that Labour is only concerned with hours and wages. He demanded that the Government consult Labour on the Covenant as it had an intimate connection with the industrial charter.

THE PARTITION OF GERMANY.

COLOGNE DEPUTY'S VIEWS.

Speaking at a meeting at the Bürgergesellschaft yesterday evening Oberpfarrer Kastert, Cologne Deputy to the Prussian Assembly, explained why the Centre (Catholic) Party took part in the Prussian present Government.

At the end of his discourse he dealt with the suggestion for a West German Republic and said that the Rhineland should claim the right of self-determination as outlined in one of President Wilson's points, in order to protest against separation from the German Empire.

"Germany" he said "is more to us than is Prussia and when Germany's well-being needs it, Prussia must, in the interests of the Empire, be divided into several parts. The West German Republic would claim a position of its own, because of its history, the economic situation of its provinces and of its national peculiarities."

EX-KAISER'S HORSES SOLD.

Such of the horses and carriages of the Kaiserlich stable at Berlin as escaped the thieving propensities of the Spartacists were sold by public auction yesterday. Oscar, the ex-Kaiser's son was present. Prices ruled high, two old saddle horses of the ex-Kaiser and ex-Kaiserin realising twenty thousand marks each.

GOVERNMENT OF IRELAND.

Replying to a question concerning Irish policy, Mr. Macpherson said that he was determined to maintain law and order in Ireland and to preserve the rights and liberties of law abiding citizens.

For so long as outrages of the most cruel kind continue to darken rish life, the need for the presence of the military would be understood, and while conditions continued as at present it would be unsafe to alter the system of Government.

THE RED TRIANGLE CONTROVERSY.

In The Times of March 29, there appeared a letter by Edward L. Swansea, in which are made many sweeping statements with regard to the work of the Y.M.C.A. Association.

During the past four years there has been no greater friend to the British soldier than this organization. From the very outset of the war the Y.M.C.A., has worked ceaselessly and ungrudgingly for the welfare of the troops, and though a few may have found cause to complain (it is difficult to cater for every member of the human family) the majority of us soldiers have reason to be thankful for the benefits which we have enjoyed from time to time.

The Y.M.C.A. (and other kindred associations) has become to us a great need, a part of our life as soldiers, just as the advent of our mail, or our rations, or the existence of our battalion canteen. This is an established fact, and no argument is necessary. We have only to cast our minds back to the old times, when from the torment and strife of the Ypres salient we have wandered down to the canal for respite in the Hut down there. Throughout the war they have followed us from place to place always ready to administer to our needs, that practical Christianity for which soldiers have a great desire. In all theatres of war they have been established. Not only in France and Germany, but in Salonica, along those long winding roads bleached by a scorching sun, we have been able to halt and run for a lemonade; in Egypt, in Palestine and in nearly every spot whereon the soldier has trod, there, also, has followed the ardent Y.M.C.A. workers.

As soldiers we pay our tribute, and let us hope that our words may prove as valuable in the public estimation as any which can come from the pen of the Bishop Suffragan of Swansea. In referring to an article on the work of the "Red Triangle," the Bishop Suffragan writes. "We have read so much like it, and the sense of contrast between these idealized pictures and actual experience of the methods of the Red Triangle at home and abroad rises unbidden. To say truth, the very last thing many of us desire for the peace and well-being of the countryside is the universal intrusion of the Red Triangle."

That is a direct challenge, not only to the organizers of the Y.M.C.A. but also to us soldiers, and it is only fair that we, who have revelled in the benefits and enjoyments, which, at all times and wherever possible, have been placed at our disposal by these zealous workers, should answer the challenge. There is only one conclusion which we can draw from the letter; the writer has had no experience of Y.M.C.A. work abroad. If he has, then he has chosen to ignore the most vital points of this association's work.

In pre-war days the Y.M.C.A. was an organization of very small means, to-day it is a living national institution—a sufficient testimony to the work that has been done during the war.

It is regrettable to note that a representative of one Christian body should so attack another. The effect is disastrous to the practical mind of the soldiers.

But whatever be issue, let us as soldiers give our sympathies to those whose religion has been indeed practical and manifest.

ON MOUSTACHES.

A FARCICAL SUGGESTION.

When the first armistice terms were drawn up, one very important item was omitted, but its omission was not apparent until the troops reached Germany. Then, even the least observant saw the mistake.

When I came to Germany first, I tried to read the German character from the face, but found it impossible. The moustache was in the way, camouflaging all the features. This terrible enormity begins beneath the nose and hides the upper lip and mouth, which are two important guides to character. Then, not content with growing outward, it aspires for higher altitudes and commences its ascent of the face, in doing so it hides the lines from the nose down past the mouth. If a German has rather pronounced wrinkles at the corners of his mouth, he hides the fact by giving a downward bend to his Schnauzbart before he allows it to begin its ascent.

All know the twin towers of Cologne Cathedral, but almost every German has a pair of twin towers on his own face, and he is prouder of the latter than the former as can be seen by the way he caresses and coaxes these hirsute edifices. They sprout and spread in most forbidding attitudes, and resemble the horns of an angry moon. I used to be amused by the moustache attempts of the youthful "Tommy", when it was compulsory to grow one, but this German aspiring-tower-business gets beyond amusement. Imagine, if you can, this madness crawling up your face, and consider what its effect would be on you!

All German moustaches are not alike, in fact they are almost as different as were the rats at Hamelin, but however different they may be at the beginning, they all end in that upward flourish. I have not been able to find out yet whether it was an attempt at pious horror of the elderly maiden attitude or an imitation of the "Merry Kamerad:" stunt, but perhaps some one can enlighten me. The Germans have been noted for their discipline and uniformity, so what must life be to the poor unfortunate who cannot cultivate one of these? Avoided by friend and foe alike, he is an outcast, and dare not let himself be seen or be as other good Germans. He may kiss a fräulein in the dark, but it will be an only kiss, for a kiss is no kiss to her unless her cheeks and eyebrows are tickled with the German mark of manhood. The man without the moustache will crawl through life unpitied and unpaid, finally dying of vexation, and will rest under the following inscription: "Here lies Kutzer Krippen, who had no hair raising experiments. Ye who read beware!"

Admiral von Tirpitz struck out on a new line in growing one upside down, and on his chin instead of the upper lip, but rumour has it that he erased it because he had no imitators, not because he failed to be King Neptune the Second. Hindenburg has one that twists and turns like an eel before it attempts to wind itself round his ears. I do not know whether he has followed the example of Tirpitz, but I should think not, for he is an old man and might catch cold if he removed his lifelong face warmer.

This madness of the facial hirsute adornment must be stopped, and we all hope to see a clause in the Peace terms to that effect. It might infect us if it is not caught in time, and what would our people at home say if we came back with a couple of hairy pyramids on our faces! But there is hope, for President Wilson is bare faced, while Clemenceau and Lloyd George follow Bairnsfather's "Old Bill", so do not be surprised if the last clause in the Peace terms reads:—"All Germans with upturned moustaches must immediately turn them down." W. J.

UNDER "AN DOVER".

On behalf of those men pending demobilization, the Government has at last decided to adopt, at enormous cost, (up goes the rates) the much-talked-of "Channel Tunnel" scheme. Plans of construction have already (its rather sudden) been placed "in competent" (two words, please) hands, and it is hoped to commence this valuable work in the early autumn of 1920, and, according to expert opinion, to complete same in readiness for the next great conflict, in order that the demobilization of the remainder of 1914-15 men may be continued without interfering with the transport of the "new armies" on their way to "fresh fields of glory."

THE EDUCATION OF A.IV. BOYS.

A. SCHEME SHOWING ITS NEED, POSSIBILITIES AND BENEFITS.

The war has, amongst other things, shown us the result of the utterly inadequate educational system that obtained in England during the last decade.

The boys of 18 years of age who have been called to the Colours recently, have in the majority of cases proved to be vastly below the standard of education that one would expect of boys of that age, as many as five per cent of them being quite illiterate. On the average they are not sufficiently educated to enter, with any degree of fairness, into the struggle for existence that will re-commence immediately the industrial market regains a normal condition. Also in the case of the minority of boys better educated than the rest, these were taken from their studies at a time when they were nearing completion, with the result that much of the advantage they had already gained is in peril of being lost to them.

We now have the opportunity to rectify this state of affairs to some extent, as it is our bounden duty both to the State and to the individual to give these boys the utmost advantage we can from their compulsory military service and compensate them somewhat for the losses thereby caused to them.

We owe it to the Nation to make each of our citizens as productive as possible, and we can vastly improve the usefulness of these boys by training them in the occupation of their choice, and educating them to the standard necessary to ensure the best result of their work for themselves and for the State.

We have them at a period of their lives when their minds are in the most receptive state, and when they, responding to the growing belief in their manhood, are eager to do something with their lives. At this time a boy commences to look to the future and to appreciate the fact that now the days of dependent childhood are over, and to seek experience and guidance in planning out his scheme for his life's work: no moment could be more psycologically perfect than this in which to assume control of a boy's education, and lead him with the help of experience through the difficulties of over-late study.

There is no reason why, given the necessary time, we could not return these boys to their civil occupations each one with his studies completed and with his "apprenticeship" passed.

Were the subject taken seriously, and did we all realize the immense importance of the gospel of maximum production as an industrial warcry, we would not hesitate to place our best brains and experience, machinery and equipment, or anything else necessary, at the disposal of these lads so that when they re-enter the arena of industrial competition they would enter as highly trained re-inforcements and not as incubus which they would be were they thrown on the Labour market at present.

Below is tabulated a list of subjects which I think are suited to the occasion.

GENERAL.

ELEMENTARY: Reading, Writing, Arithmetic.

INTERMEDIATE: Emperic History and Geography, International Relationships (Commercial & Political), Patriology, Common Law, Religion, Morality and Hygiene.

ADVANCED: Citizenship in relation to everyday life; Parenthood, its duties and responsibilities; Theology, The Ethics of Life, physical and moral; Physiology, Universal Regeneration; Modern Industrial Problems, national and international; Discipline as a necessity to National Life; Natural Science, Agricultural Law.

PARTICULAR.

COMMERCIAL: Arithmetic, Book-keeping, Shorthand, Typewriting, Commercial Law, Modern Business Methods.

LANGUAGES: French, Spanish, German.

SCIENCE: Chemistry, Physics, Economics, Agriculture, Hygiene, Anatomy, Aeronautics (if near Aviation Centre), Electricity, Veterinary Surgery.

TECHNICAL: Mechanical Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Civil Engineering, Motor driving, Carpentry and Cabinet Making, Saddlery and Harness making, Shoemaking, Tailoring, Painting, Plumbing, Gardening, Cooking, House-service valeting etc.), House construction and repair, Care of Horses, Farriery, Agriculture — Stock, Dairy, Crops; Hair Dressing.

All these subjects could quite easily be taught to A IV. boys wherever they were situated, and the apparatus necessary would be very little more than is carried in an ordinary Infantry Battalion. The chief difficulty would be expense, but the Nation which could easily find £ 8,500,000 a day for the prosecution of war, can surely spend a few thousand pounds for the preparation for Peace. Should a Battalion find itself stationed in an industrial centre such as Sheffield or Mannheim, practically any trade could be taught by using the Local factories and workshops for the purpose. To my personal knowledge this was done in England during the winter of 1917—1918 at Sheffield, where the Local Authorities entered whole-heartedly into the scheme, and about five hours a day were devoted to this work.

For general instruction in the form of lectures a class of 250 could easily be handled by competent men, but for particular subjects, no instructor could do justice to either his class or his subject with a class of more than 30 members. In a Battalion School there is the difficulty of non-attendance, and I think that at least 20% would be always absent on fatigues or sick.

Sympathetic co-operation on the part of Company Commanders could lessen the inconvenience thus caused by taking for fatigue duties those men who were in least need of educational instruction.

Twenty four hours per week, or five hours on four days and four hours on another (pay day) could easily be arranged — say from 2 o'clock to five and six to eight, and although this may seem to make a rather a long day, I have seen such a programme actually in operation over a period of the six winter months and the result was entirely satisfactory.

The complete change from military work, combined with the interest and enthusiasm the boys themselves showed, enabled them to pay attention and derive benefit right up to the end of the classes. They got their time to themselves on Saturday afternoons and Sunday, which is all they would have in civil life, and their daily work hours were no longer than in a factory or workshop while the work was much more varied.

In short, reviewing the situation, the need of Education for these boys is obvious, the opportunity is present, and the benefits to both the State and to the individual would be enormous; all that is required is the recognition of these facts and then the difficulties of ways and means could be speedily overcome.

THE REAL REASON.

Park Orator: "An' I tell yer that all them millionaires' money is tainted—all on it!"

Unconvinced Person: "'Ow d'ye mean, 'tainted'?"

Park Orator: "Well, 'taint yours, an' 'taint mine, is it?" London Mail.

THE DUMP.

PRINCEPS.

DUMPS. This does not sound a very exciting subject to write about, but all the same I think this is a true diagnosis of the complaint from which we (and the whole Division) are suffering from at the present moment.

However, it is not this sort of Dumps I want to deal with; for nothing would have a more depressing effect upon the readers than to enlarge upon this form of incipient insanity.

The Dumps I mean are those new things which have come into our lives as a sort of additional burden.

A Dump can be well described as a first cousin to Hump; in its abstract sense it is the latter with a big "D" in front; in its concrete sense it is a patch of grass one day, mud another, where fatigue parties—the only luxury the A.S.C. enjoy to the disadvantage of the Infantry—display their agility, energy, and temper. On a fine day this bucolic method of food distribution provides a healthy recreation for the body and a theme of inspiration to the soul. When the day is bright and the sun is high it is extraordinary how large a number of officers' riders require exercise—by their owners. But on a wet day (and W——— is favoured with a few) the highest moral values in mankind are taxed to their maximum worth. Patience, coolness, banality of temper, and largeness of disposition display themselves to an undreamt of and alarming extent amongst the Infantry helpers.

Quartermasters and their intelligent Sergeants reveal their angelic qualities unsuspected heretofore by hasty and severe juniors. The A.S.C. supply men demonstrate their vicarious and unselfish virtues by letting willing hands do all the dirty work. The drivers get soaked and just smile. It is an orgy of self-sacrifice, a wet day at the Dump—as yet unsung by any poet—which would fill the soul of the moralist with ecstatic joy.

Not Virgil with all the powers of rhythmic range at his command could do justice to such an epic scene. All ye seekers and praisers of our glorious humanity be present at a Dump when Jupiter Pluvius lords it over all; all ye revilers and detractors of moral virtues attend also upon such an auspicious occasion. Joy and revelation will be yours.

The efforts to ensure that the food of the men should be kept dry and wholesome are herculean and marvellous. And what if the food should, in spite of all, suffer a little soaking in the transit? Do the troops complain? Shame upon such a thought! Are the Quartermaster's ears stung with reproaches and grumbles? Not a sound; only heartfelt thanks reward their labours of love.

The simplicity of the Dump system is attractive and alluring. It is mobile and requires little paraphernalia. No rent is paid, as public property is temporarily borrowed. We all love economy—in others.

All units—thanks to the ever-watchful eye of their zealous representatives—secure the full dole of rations. Not a single ounce is lost. For, once and for all, the effete idea, long current in the minds of the sceptical, that the A.S.C. were actuated by a system of ration abstraction, for euphony's sake called "winnings," is entirely dispelled. This peculiar term does not imply that we were thought frankly dishonest, but only that we were expert and unscrupulous exponents of the best traditions of twentieth-century commercialism. The Dump system has been responsible for more empty mouths in the A.S.C. than any of the short-sighted reductions in the Army rationing scale.

Dumps are the rumour exchanges of the Division. Here the latest lies are repeated, with all the necessary embellishment to give them verisimilitude. Truth may be naked, but we all prefer it a little adorned, even if the skirts are alluringly short. Amidst the romantic surroundings of the Dump, the imagination roams away—and so do the rumours arising therefrom. One day on the Dump, says a fatigue man, is better than a thousand in the Detention Hut; and he would rather be a humper of meal and a dumper of bread than attend for one hour at a C.O.'s parade.

The Dump is the fraternizing ground of the Division. Here the various units learn that the A.S.C. is not a collection of pickpockets and scallywags temporarily taken from their usual occupations and put into a respectable uniform, which hides a multitude of civilian shortcomings. It is even sometimes demonstrated here that we actually work, or, at least, are capable of it. Not only can we work, but, if pushed, can fight. Never did our kind friends the Infantry have such an eye-opener than when we appeared on the ranges one morning at 6.30 a.m., with real guns, and commenced to fire at the targets. Never were these same gentlemen so surprised as when we had finished our firing. The results were staggering and beyond all imagination. The War Office had a busy time.

If anyone wants a day of education, of joy, of revelation, of hope, let him come to any one of our Dumps at the time of the daily issue. He will go away a wiser and a better man. His former conceptions—I should say, misconceptions—of the A.S.C. will undergo a complete revolution.

We owe much to the Dumps, and our threatened three years' sojourn in W——— will always be associated, in after years, with two things—the Dumps and the weekly medical inspection.

MENTAL EXHAUSTION IN GERMANY.

The well-known Berlin physician Dr. Marx publishes an interesting article in the Berlin medical review "Berliner Klinische Wochenschrift". He starts from the fact that the Germans could not succeed to understand the point of view of their enemies. They lacked also psychological comprehension for their own ways. The different classes of the German nature could not understand each other. Now the war has brought us to declare permanently the law of the shortest way, according to which the slow progression of history is often broken by crises which want to precipitate the course of events through the shortest way possible. During this war the German people have had to undergo numerous privations and disappointments, the shortage of food being a specially great influence on the psychological development of the population. The specialists for mental diseases have already studied the results of this exhaustion. The gambling and dancing manias are manifestations of it. Besides the increased excitability of everybody, the enhanced receptability for psychical contamination, the wholy modified state of mind of the masses, the strike-fever, are all signs of a general mental exhaustion. In this state of mind, man is very much inclined to follow the law of the shortest way. Everybody can see the danger of the situation, when the man in the streets wants to, and can, change everything in the shortest way possible. They are actually a great peril in the German public life, where all the social fetters seem to have disappeared. To cure this mental exhaustion there is only one means—sufficient food.

BILLIARD HANDICAP AT SOLINGEN.

We, who are now exiles of the Rhine, have not a few ways to while away the time. But one of the best we have yet struck was the above competition which brought out talent and amusement.

We are fortunate enough to mess in a "Restauration" where there are two very good billiard tables, so once the idea got going it was not long before the aspirants for championship honours began to show their prowess with the cue.

To those accustomed to haunt the "Hanover" the "Carlton" or similar rendezvous of the "Blighty" cueist, the small pocketless tables with the proportionately big balls looked easy game, but it didn't prove to be as simple as it looked. The handicappers had been weighing up form for a week or two, and as a rule, the back-markers had to travel all the distance. Our provost and one of the "Professors" (those high brow fellows who go in for the educational stunt), were a great pair. They were out for blood and no mistake, and hung on to each other like grim death.

Then the stars began to shine as the lesser lights went out, one by one, till at the finish we had two M. S. s' — hot stuff too! We wonder what is the secret of their manipulation of the ivories. We know they can do a bit of juggling. In fact they must, in these rapid days.

Souvenirs of the "Village" here formed very acceptable prizes, and though not issuing any challenges meantime, we wonder if we could find a quartette to beat our little lot. NICOLO.

MUSIC AND MIRTH AT WAHN.

The first of the 113th Army-Brigade R.F.A. concerts took place at Wahn Barracks on Wednesday evening, in the hall of the Y.M.C.A. (kindly lent for the occasion by Mr. Mc. Kean). The 51st Royal Sussex String Band, under the able conductorship of the R.S.M. provided the music, and the selections were much appreciated by a critical audience.

Sergeant Linsay of C.' Battery was obviously ill at ease in "If you Look in her Eyes", but his encore effort "Roses of Picardy" went with a swing.

Messrs. Bottomley and Church in a humourous skit provided plenty of amusement, and the former, a born raconteur, was particularly funny. Gunner Church with his quaint mannerisms, improves on each occasion and George Robey must look to his laurels. Lt. Royle of "A", as a female impersonater in pale blue, depicted "Helen of Troy", while Corporal Goldburn emulated Charles Whittle and Captain Hooper's rendering of "Laska" with success. Captain Story, M. C. and Lt. Fairhurst helped to make the concert a success.

The concluding item of an interesting evening was a sketch entitled "The Yorkshire Lad" in which the indefatigable Bottomley — not Horatio of that ilk. — played the leading role.

The proceedings were graced by the presence of Brigade General H. W. Higginson C.B., D.S.O. and staff, and officers of the Brigade were mustered in strength.

Altogether a very enjoyable evening was spent which reflects great credit upon the organisers and all who participated.

P.M.S.W.

WITH THE HOUNDS.

24th BRIGADE R.F.A. HUNT.

Hounds met at KNAPSACK, near KENDENICH, on Tuesday — A very small field attended, perhaps on account of the somewhat inaccessible position of the meet. This, however, was all in favour of the Rhineshire "Thrusters" who had matters all their own way.

A fox was quickly found in KNAPSACK gorse, but, after dodging round, soon got to ground in a thick brushwood covert. The Master decided to unearth him and shortly afterwards hounds were streaming away in a S.W. direction. He was then headed and turning left handed crossed the Cologne-Liblar Road. The scent now became indifferent and led to a short cluch. A successful cast in the direction of KIERBERG Mine brought hounds once again on to the line, and turning left-handed he doubled back towards WILLENHAUS at a nice pace. On reaching WILLENHAUS, hounds were finally stopped by a blinding snowstorm after a very good run of an hour and ten minutes, over some first-rate country.

LIST OF FUTURE FIXTURES.

INOCULATION.

(IN THREE INJECTIONS).

W. Reynalds.

You remember, you remember
The other pre-war fronts,
Where on the pies especially
You did some novel stunts?
You got the "glad" so often then,
(Perhaps you do so now),
And used to spend your afternoons,
In pleasant sport — and how?
In oculation.

You remember, you remember
The M.O.'s special day?
The needle and the vaccine tube
He never put away;
The Sergeant and the iodine,
The sudden stab of pain,
And what releas'd you two short days
Before parades again?
Inoculation.

You remember, you remember
Our long and weary march?
Across half Europe, so it seemed,
One long triumphal arch;
And how we came to Germany
By quite a devious route?
You may have noticed that the Hun
Did not come out and shout —
In Hockulation.

FOOTBALL.

BONN ASSOCIATION CUP.

Third Round.

The Third round of the Bonn Association Cup Competition was played yesterday afternoon at Hofgarten, when the X Corps Cyclist Bn. opposed the 146th H.B., R.G.A.

The glorious weather, and the prospect of an exciting encounter, attracted a large number of spectators.

The "Heavies" found it impossible to withstand the "pushfulness" of the Cyclists, and at half-time they were "down" 2—0.

After the interval, the Artillery improved considerably and finished up with the by no means disgraceful score of 3—1 against them. The scorers for the Cyclists were Macilroy (2) and Farman.

DIVISIONAL RUGBY FINAL.

WELSHMEN'S COMFORTABLE WIN.

The final for the 1st Divisional (Rugby) Championship, which took place at Cologne, between the 1/6th Bn. The Welsh Regiment, and "Z" Battery, R.F.A., ended in a comfortable win for the Welsh by 14 points to nil.

The ground was in a sloppy condition, snow and sleet having fallen continuously during the previous two days.

In the first half the only score was an unconverted try, the result of some fine footwork by the Welsh pack who took play to the "Gunners" line, for Capt C. G. Lewis to snap up the ball and cross wide out. During this half, the wind, which was intensely cold, favoured the Gunners Despite this, however, they were kept busily defending for the major portion.

On changing over, the superiority of the winners soon told and, after a bout of passing in which all the backs handled, Capt Brabazon scored their second try. Good play by both packs ended in the "Welsh's" favour, and C.S.M. Lloyd scored under the posts for Lieut Buckland to convert.

More strenuous footwork followed, after which the Welsh halves got the ball away to the backs, and another fine handling movement ended in Lieut. Pullen crossing in the corner. The Welsh were thus the winners by 1 converted goal and 3 tries to nil.

Considering the bad state of the ground, play was really good and full of interest throughout. It is noteworthy to mention that the "Welsh" who were also last season's champions ran through the competition without having a point scored against them, although leave and demobilization necessitated rearranging the team for practically each match.

CHESHIRE BATTALIONS OPPOSED.

On Thursday, the 1/7 Bn., Cheshire Regiment kept up their long succession of wins by beating the 1/4th Bn. of the same Regiment at Hersel. There is a good deal of friendly rivalry between the two teams and the many supporters of both sides, anticipating a rattling good game, were thoroughly satisfied with the fare provided.

In the opening stages 2nd. Lieut Shaw relieved steady pressure by the 7th, and displayed wonderfully clever head and foot work in the process. Then Corp. Baskerville sent across a well-judged corner kick which the 4th left back disposed of.

An incident in the 7th. goal mouth, resulted in Maden the keeper, being injured sufficiently badly to necessitate his subsequent departure from the field before half-time. The said incident which, unfortunately, caused a little unpleasantness resulted in Shaw opening the score in favour of the 4th from a penalty kick. Corpl. Pool shortly afterwards equalised.

In the second half, notwithstanding their absent goalkeeper, the 7th had the better of matters and scored two more goals through Corpl. Pool and 2nd. Lieut. Wilkinson.

FIELD ARTILLERY BEATEN BY HEAVIES.

The 4th Brigade R.G.A. on Thursday registered a comparatively easy win in their match against the 50th Brigade R.F.A. when they scored 4 goals to their opponents nil, at Opladen. Play was very keen in the first half and the "Heavies" should have scored on more than one occasion, had the three inside forwards displayed better combination. Driver Spencer, who missed an open goal, quickly atoned by opening the score for the garrison team. In the second half the ball was rarely out of the 50th half, and three more goals were added by Driver Ross, Corpl. Fischer and Lieut. Buzza.

52nd BR. BEDFORD REGT. V 102 FIELD AMBULANCE.

Undoubtedly, in this match at Siegburg, on Wednesday afternoon, dash and quick passing among the forwards, with safe tackling by the backs and half-backs gained for the 52nd Bedford's, their victory over the 102nd Field Ambulance by a margin of five goals.

From the start the Bedford's forwards, admirably led by Sgt. Blackwell, assumed the aggressive and in quick succession Pte. Gigli scored twice, while before the interval L/c Merry found the net from a corner.

Immediately on resuming Gigli completed the hat trick from a centre by Lieut. Simson. Keeping up the pressure, Pte. Whitehead headed a fifth goal, while Pte. Gigli scored his fourth by dribbling the ball into the net. Playing very pluckily, the 102 Field Ambulance at last caught the Bedford defence napping and scored in the closing stages of the game.

The pleasing and outstanding feature of the game was the return to his old-time form of Sergt. Blackwell of the Bedford's.

CROSS COUNTRY RUNNING.

A great amount of interest is being taken in the Army cross — country run that is announced to take place on Monday next, and the names of several prominent runners are included in the list of entrins. The course will be five miles in length. Neusser Wall is the starting place and there will undoubtedly be a large number of spectators present to cheer on their favourites when the runners move off at 2.45 p.m.

22 Clubs in Southern League.

DEVELOPMENTS OF SWANSEA AND MERTHYR.

The Southern Football League has resolved to extend the first division to twenty-two clubs, comprising eighteen old ones and four new ones. The additions are, Swansea Town, Brentford, Gillingham and Merthyr town.

THE INNER MAN.

The Salvation Army, in keeping with their good reputation, have provided two comfortable Rest Houses in Cologne. One is at the Stork Hotel and the other is in Obermarspforten (near E.F. Canteen). Dinners are provided between the hours of 12 and 2 daily and tea and refreshments can be obtained from 4 o'clock in the afternoon until 8 p.m. The reading and writing room is open all day.

CATCH AS CATCH CAN.

WRESTLING MATCH AT BERSCHEID.

SERGEANT THORPE BEATS DRIVER MC. CARTHY.

As the outcome of a challenge published recently in our bright little contemporary, The Watch on the Rhine, an interesting match was contested at Berscheid. The challenge was thrown out by Driver A. E. Mc. Carthy, the 10st. 7 lb. champion of the Territorial Force Association, who offered to wrestle any man in the Army of Occupation for the championship of that army. An acceptance was produced from S.S.M. Thorpe who, gaining the better of three 15 minute bouts in the resulting tussle, was declared the winner.

THE MATCH DESCRIBED.

1st. BOUT: S.S.M. Thorpe immediately took the offensive, Mc. Carthy brought to the mat by a sharp hip buttock and lay passive though alert. S.S.M. Thorpe even after several minutes was unable to take advantage of this to register a fall, as McCarthy cleverly extricated himself and both wrestlers regained their feet.

Result of the first bout S.S.M. Thorpe declared the winner on points.

2nd. BOUT: Both wrestlers were considerably refreshed by the attentions of their seconds and the spectators looked forward with renewed interest to the following.

After two minutes McCarthy was brought down tothe mat but cleverly avoided being pinned.

On the moment they both regained their feet McCarthy attempted to throw S.S.M. Thorpe by a hip buttock but was thwarced by a right hand check; McCarthy tried again but was too slow, and S.S.M. Thorpe crashed him to the mat. This time the wrestling was strong and a splendid exhibition of the art was given by both, McCarthy gaining a headlock troubled S.S.M. Thorpe very much. S.S.M. Thorpe escaping from this, and attacking McCarthy's legs, gained a crutch hold.

McCarthy's cleverness in head spins at this period was superb, and undoubtedly saved him from being pinned.

After this McCarthy locking S.S.M. Thorpe's legs, brought him to the mat, McCarthy on top, attempted the half nelson, but this hold was countered by a sharp arm roll which brought S.S.M. Thorpe op the top. The efforts of both nere were splendid, being very quickly applied and countered, but undoubtedly S.S.M. Thorpe was deserveuly given the verdict in this bout.

The winner was presented with a prize by the C.R.E., 29th. Division, and declared 10st: 71b: Champion of the Army of Occupation.

Boxing at Wahn.

On Wednesday, a Boxing Competition was held in the Church Hut at Wahn, when the best talent of the 51st, 52nd, and 53rd Battalions, Royal Sussex Regt gave a fine display of the art. The arrangements were in the competent hands of Captain Weeler, with Captain Baylis as referee and C.S.M. Simmonds as M.C. There were some finely contested bouts which were much appreciated by a critical audience.

SPORT IN A NUTSHELL.

At Liblar, on Tuesday, the semi-final between "C." and "D." companies of the 5th K. O. Y. L. I. resulted in favour of the first-named. Second Lt. J. Cummings scored the only two goals of the match. The final, which will be played today, is between "A." and "C." Companies.

A. Saxby by the falling of Svetoi in the Grand National had six stitches put in his tongue. His face was also badly discoloured, and he was in consequence compelled to relinquish his riding engagements on Saturday at Liverpool.

After the race for the Liverpool Hurdle Handicap on Saturday all the riders with the exception of Mason, Piggott, Lancaster, Morgan, Ashworth, and Hulme were called before the stewards on the complaint of the starter for disobedience at the post and delaying the start, and were each fined £2:

It transpires that after the Grand National Pollen was found to be bleeding freely. A subsequent examination disclosed the fact that the injury was due to a thorn having penetrated an artery in the stifle. On Saturday morning the horse was found to be all right and he returned home with Poethlya.

A HOME FROM HOME.

Since its inauguration on Feb. 7th last, the Light Divisional Rest House, Marzellen Strasse, has accommodated over 800 members of the Light Division. Men spending a few days in Cologne are well looked after. Each man has a bed. (there are four to a room) and the victualling arrangements are excellent.

There is a well stocked dry and wet canteen on the premises, occasional concerts are held, and men are allowed to invite their friends.

The final winners in the 1st. Divisional Tug-of-War, Association football and Boxing contests, at Bonn, were as follows:

TUG-OF-WAR: 1st. Bn. Cameron Highlanders beat 1st. Div. Artillery (catch weight). 1st. Bn. Cameron Highlanders beat 1st. Bn. South Wales Borderers (light weight.

FOOTBALL: 1st. Bn. Cameron Hrs., 3; 1st. Divl. Engineers 1.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

(WITH AN OCCASIONAL ENTERTAINMENTS NOTE.)

Coaching in Germany.

That most picturesque of sports, coaching is almost as dead as the Dodo and the sight of a sprightly team ca eering about on usy thorough fares in England (or here in Germany for the matter of that) is a rara avis, indeed, nowadays.

But we have at least one enthusiast with us in the occupied area in the person of Capt. Michall Wallington, M.C. who dispite everything is thoroughly ardent in the pursuit of his pet hobby. Consequently, it is by no means an unfamiliar sight to see his magnificent team driving through the busy streets of Bonn.

An old song tells us that from "Wimbledon to Wambledon is sixteen miles." The same distance separates Hennef and Bornheim and it it speaks well for the stamina of Capt. Wallington's animals that this journey was completed by his team, in the return from the Hennef races, in 1 hour 35 minutes.

Two of this good team appear also on the polo ground at Bornheim and are played by Captain Wallington who is not only a fine whip but a very promising polo player.

Brighter Cricket.

If all the words printed in the newspapers during the war, on the subject of cricket reform, were placed end to end, they would reach quite a long way. Innumerable suggestions have been advanced for increasing the attractiveness of the game, from a spectator's point of view, by I should think, representatives of every class of the community who take any interest at all in it. Sporting and other journalists, of course, have had a great deal to say about the matter, sports committees have probably never foregathered without passing resolutions, while "Letters to the Editor" have been written by cricketers of varying stages of proficieney, from the pro' to the youngster at school who as yet has but mustered the incipient stages of the game.

To Continue in the Old Sweet Way.

And what has been the out-come of all this controversy? Absolutely sweet — nothing! The rules of the game are exactly the same as ever in all details. The only alteration I can trace, that has any bearing on the subject, is a ruling by the Advisory Committee that the championships this year shall be decided by wins only, on the percentage of matches played.

In the method formerly observed for scoring, the side leading on the first innings in an uncompleted match, was given three points, and its opponents, one; while, in the event of a tie, the points were equally divided.

I do not suggest that this alteration has anything to do with the brightening of cricket, but as a change in championship rules it is interesting.

Promise of Football Boom.

The return of conditions in England to something like normal is responsible for an ever-increasing boom in football which promises to continue next season. At all events, that this is the opinion of the league officials at home is indicated by the news contained in a telegram just received, — that the Southern League has resolved to extend the First Division to 22 clubs. The additions to to the pre-war list of clubs include Swansea Town, and Merthyr Town.

The inclusion of these two Welsh clubs is significant, since it suggests that at last, after many years struggle, "soccer" is likely to share some of the popularity and public patronage that have previously almost exclusively been bestowed on the "handling code" in the land of the leek. Nothing succeeds like success may be applied to the fortunes of a football team with the truth born of experience (as many an oft-defeated team will sorrowfully testify) so that the new Southern League teams have only to win a match or two to ensure permament establishment in popular favour in Wales.

Logic Made Easy.

The match between the X Corps Cyclists and the 146th Heavy Battery produced rather a remarkable process of reasoning from one of the spectators. This was the effect of his argument: At half time, the Cyclists were leading by two goals to none, and (if "form" counts for anything) it is logical to suppose that the final score should have been "four-nothing." But, bless your heart, the actual result was no more decisive than 3-1. Therefore, argued my friend on the line, if the match had been continued for a few more hours, the "Heavies" would have won. In other words, they were the better team. What a brain!

Catch as Catch Can.

It is a refreshing relief to hear of a good old wrestling match and it makes one wonder, when reading of the two recent bouts in England, followed by that of Thorpe and Mc. Carthy (reported on this page), whether we are to have a revival of the epidemic of ten years, or so, ago. Wrestling and roller skating are two forms of sport that stand out (arm in arm, as it were) and enjoy their season of popularity in cycles divided by long intervals. Lack of sustained interest in the performance of weird and wonderful evolutions on roller skates is not altogether incomprehensible, but why the wrestling art should not have a permanent place in our sports fixtures, it is difficult to imagine.

But this always was a neglected phase of physical sport which the most capable of our organisers have been unable to keep alive. We must look to the Physical and Recreational Training Staff (who, by the way, are none other than our old, but always energetic, P. T. and B. F. friends, under another name) to lend their help to the promised resurrection of this ancient, but excellent branch of sport.

THE CAMERA FIEND.

"With Pan-Anastigmatic plates you must pay a great deal of attention to the Actinic value of the light at the time of using". That is what I heard as I entered the Mess one Sunday afternoon.

Why had I chosen that particular moment for enjoying myself with a book in a comfortable chair? I might have known it would be thus. Had it not been the same, day after day, week after week, until one got sick of the word "Camera?" I tried to back out, go anywhere in fact. But alas! It was too late, I had already been observed.

"Come along. . . . Just in time. . . . Most interesting discussion on Cameras", I knew I was lost for ever. I remember murmuring something about not knowing anything about cameras, had never owned one in fact, and sat down and tried to read "Flu before and after" by Prof. T. I. Foid.

Have you ever tried to read a book, in a Mess, on a Sunday afternoon, with a lot of hooligans howling about photography? Some Fiend laying down the law to a bunch of enthusiasts whose one aim and object in life is to congregate in large numbers for the express purpose of spoiling your well-earned Sunday siesta?

Yes! I thought so, you sympathise? I thank you from the bottom of my heart.

I could'nt read, that was evident. I threw my book into a corner of the room and tore my hair. Could I steal away quietly get to the door unobserved, and make a dash for the open air? No, I should be seen and dragged back to be tortured afresh. I could only grin and bear it.

"The Actinic properties of the light to-day," he was saying (I could see they were all "Pelmanising" as hard as they could), "are fairly good", Personally I saw nothing wrong with the light, it seemed to be a good day, sun shining and everything. Oh! for a machine . . . . To be in the air . . . . Steen Fokkers on my tail . . . . Anything . . . . anything but this.

"In which case I should give it a 50th." He went on. "Now with this particular camera of mine, I can go from one to 1/250th."

"Yes" they all said. There seemed nothing else to say. It was so obvious.

The fiend, (I call him a fiend because he was a fiend) was holding a wonderful contraption covered with little nobs and gadgets.

"I guarantee" he said, "to take a photo with this Pan-Anastigmatic camera of mine which will be absoluteley unrivalled in clearness and astchromaticity".

There was a deathly silenee. Could this be true? The air was tense. Electrically charged with astchromaticity so to speak.

I felt I could stand the strain no longer.

"Clearer than a V.P.K.", I managed to blurt out. The moment I uttered the words I wished I had'nt spoken. The pent-up energy discharged itself with one mighty avalanche of abuse.

"Of course it would be clearer than a V.P.K.. V.P.K.'s were not in the same sphere with Pan-Anastigmatic cameras. Boil your V.P.K. and every other V.P.K. with it." I did. There seemed nothing else to do. I sat very still, looked down my nose and put my tail between my legs, as it were. I felt as though I had made a fool of myself.

To describe the whole of that lurid and nightmareish conversation here would take too long. The result was, that we were all cajoled into having our photo taken, en masse, by the fiend, and we were all promised copies to send home as Souvenirs of the great war.

* * *

The following day I strolled into the Photographic Section, at about a quarter to one.

"Have Mr. . . . . 's films been developed yet" I asked the spruce corporal in the office.

"Well Sir, they have but, of course, as usual, they're a wash out. I really don't know what they do, but they bring in yards and yards of films and when they're developed there's not a blinking thing on 'em. They all do the same", he added with a sigh.

If . . . . ever starts talking "Photos" in the mess again I'll kill him. I.M.R.

MULES.

AN INFANTRYMAN'S LAMENT.

(H. MAULE—F. FINCH.)

Mules! Never mention mules to me again. I used to think the army mule one of the most useful creatures in existence. That, however, I now see to have been an idle dream. Come to think of it, I prefer a 9.2, easy. Fritz used to send 'em over pretty frequently when we were up the line, but if one hit you — well, you were unlucky. But a mule! He just waits for you in the mildest sort of way and "biff!" — he gets you every time. Don't talk to me about mules!

It all happened this way.

We were living a peaceful life somewhere on the Rhine. After the day's work was over we drank Fritzy beer by the gallon and lay back with a "fog", at peace with all the world. It was too good to last. I knew that all the while.

One afternoon the Sergeant comes round and says: "Hamilton, you will parade with the party proceeding to Cologne to-night. Don't know what the job is but I think we've clicked for a good thing."

It is wonderful what dreams a sergeants will dream. They are so lady-like, you know. I 've known many a good soldier spoilt by being given three stripes, a new tunic, and a clean bayonet. But this fellow knew better. He came with us, poor fellow! They took him away yesterday in a Red Cross ambulance. He was "hit" trying to persuade a mule to pass a bale of hay . . . Oh, yes, a blighty one, I think.

We duly arrived at our destination minus "the unconsumed portion of the day's ration." Funny how that does go missing. We marched into the camp and the officer says: "Just put a little style into it my lads. Remember, these people may never have seen soldier before, and we want to make a good impression."

Oh! vain thought! As we entered the gates of the camp there were whines of delight from a few mules who seemed to have escaped from their proper places, of course the "boys" sent up a great cheer. That di dit! We're little things! They thought we were old friends. With a wild rush they arrived.

Now, we are infantry of the line, you know. Under pressure of superior force we retired, hastily. F.O. is no joke though. Poor Timmy caught his foot on a rope and fell. Before he could recover half a dozen mules were having an argument over his pack. They ate it, ground sheet and all, before Timmy was rescued. That was bad enough. But when they ate the seat of his new trousers and the tail of his shirt it was past the mark. Timmy has had his own back though. A mule was seriously hurt by a bayonet last night. Giving evidence this morning

A RÈVERIE.

It was a chill morning in December; the air was cold, the road hard, and a thin sheet of snow covered the whole earth in view. The sun — great red orb of hope and splendour — had just appeared above the distant purplish hills, and was preparing to mount its way through the clear blue heavens; casting down upon the earth beneath, its rich warm rays, the terminals of which danced playfully in the flakes of snow.

Along the high road, which winds in and out towards the picturesque village of Modford, briskly marched Pte. Eversham, dressed in full battle gear, his boots, trousers, and tunics still bearing the traces of his past habitation; still bearing that sticky, clinging mud of Flanders so well know to most of us. Anyone could see that he had just returned from the region of blood and mire — his uncouth, uncanny, untidy appearance as he marched along the road, valise on back, rifle on shoulder and wearing his old tin helmet, bespattered with mud. But despite his untidy appearance, and the roughness of his figure, despite the fact that he had borne the brunt of battle for ten months, Pte. Eversham marched quickly and soldierly towards that coveted goal, Modford, and the bright little home with all its comforts, which he had left now a year past, to serve his King and Country.

No braver soldier ever marched along that road than did Eversham, on this sharp December morning. It is quite probable that the coldness of the air accentuated the man's step. It is equally probable, too, that this huge red ball of fire, majestically lifting itself higher and ever higher into the azure sky, brought a renewal of vigour to him, and compelled him to dance with joy to be in the dear old home-land once more.

The few little noble choristers there were at this time of the year, whistled in his ears from the bare trees along the road; the flakes of snow winked to him with glistening eyes as he hurried along; and he became acutely sensible of these attentions paid to him by kind Nature.

Did not all the people in that village know that he was coming home? Were they not all eagerly awaiting, with outstretched hands, his approach? Yes! he had come home after valiant service in the field — service which had gained for him the Victoria Cross, and the whole folk of the village were prepared to receive him with full honours. He was to have breakfast with the Vicar; then he was to prepare himself for a public reception and receive the recognition of the villagers in some manner of which he was not sure. Yes, he would have to listen to lengthy speeches, and in all probability would have to make some suitable reply. But Eversham could not, for the life in him, puzzle out his reply speech.

Thus did he muse, whilst walking along that winding road.

He had taken the last bend in the road, and now his native village lay before him in all its wintry splendour. Ah! there they were, all waiting and eager to get a first glance of their hero. The street leading into the village square was crowded with people. He saw them, and they saw him. What excitement followed!! With wild joy they rushed towards him, arms outstretched, children cheering, young men and women joyously shouting and running, elderly couples watching soberly. On they came, each minute getting nearer and nearer, until at last the first young lady, swiftest runner of all, was just about to embrace him. He could hear some wild words. "Albert, Albert, is it my hero? You have really come?" "Yes," replied Eversham, "it is — —."

Down into the dug-out a burly sergeant was exhausting his supply of fury. He had been shouting for the last three minutes. "Do you hear, Eversham, your turn next." And Eversham awoke, amidst the cold clammy weather of December; amidst the rain, and the mud, and the hundred other torments of trench life. Gazing blankly around in semi-consciousness, the awfulness of the reality came to him once more, and he put on his helmet, grabbed hold of his rifle, and went out to take up his post of duty, and to live over again those glorious moments in a more sober mood.

TO ALL CONTRIBUTIONS.

The Editor regrets to say that so far he has been unable to answer the numerous letters with contributions which have come in to him. In course of time this will be rectified, and he hopes that all those who have already sent in contributions will continue to do so ad lib. Others who have not get begun, and who are aspiring journalists may take up the cue also.

Timmy said: "Last night while on picquet, sir, I was attacked by a mule. It charged me while in the execution of my duty and having challenged twice I made a long point short point and a jab . . ." He got off.

They call us infantry men, then wake us up for "Stables" in the dimness of the dawn. "Hay up" with a crowd of hungry mules is a game. Timmy said the other day: "Now, what I says is: We ain't no bloomin' R.A. we ain't no' orsemen either. What do the likes of us know about mules. The only one as knows ought is 'Arry wot drives a moke about Lunnon when 'e's clothed in 'is natural. It's always the blummin' infantry wot gets it. Fat lot these gunners is doin' since the Harmistice, beyond eatin' rations and pinchin' eggs . . . Woh! Steady, steady there. Hi, old, you old beast. Go on! Go away if you like. I don't care if you run away, s'truth I don't."

It is the same everywhere. We don't like mules. We've marched many a mile on foot, and that is good enough for us.

Loading and unloading a mule train is a nightmare. Wait till you have a small platform of leaping, kicking mules. Sometimes a bold one has an argement with the engine. Life is exciting for a mule, I guess.

The other morning a mule got loose in a truck we were unloading. Having eaten all the oats and finished off the bale of hay down to the wire binding, he proceeded to eat his pals' tails. Then there was steam. A great cloud of dust rose from the wagon, and all we could see was a picture of flashing hoofs. Twenty-five infantry of the line were standing round and shouted advice, but there was not a spirit bold enough to enter. We sent for the nearest gunner and the brute walked out as meek as lamb. Two minutes later, he kicked the sergeant in the shins. Then he escaped and was found eating a rubber tyre later by a lorry driver.

Mules can kick any way. Backward, forward and, sideways all are equally possible. A mule can scratch his ear with his hind legs and, according to a bombardier, one has been know to eat its own tail.

Funny animals, these mules. But as an infantryman I don't like them. As I said before, even a 9.2 has its advantages.

"Hay up". Once again the sergeant calls. I have made my will, and my mind is at peace with all the world, so I am ready for anything. Fare thee well, kind friends. Surely the war is won when infantrymen of the line have to do a mule stunt all on their own.

Mules! I hate them!!

THE CASE OF THE EARLY 1916 MAN.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir. — After the first convulsion of the demobilization scheme the subject was completely re-organised, It was stated by the Minister of War that the "modus operandi" employed as the basis for demobilization would be on the principle of "First out" "First home" etc. This in effect meant the discharge of the 1914 and, 15 men, irrespective of length of active service. The scheme seemed to be a fair one and very little grumbling was heard, although many of the 1914 and 15 men were wounded in the early part of the war, and after their return to England remained on Home Service, for instructional purposes. However, as a comprehensive scheme it was satisfactory.

These men have practically all been released, or are awaiting their demobilization, and now the question of further reductions comes up for consideration Mr. Churchill departs from his policy of "Fair's Fair" and states that the next men to go will be — "Men of 36 years of age, men of 35, 34, and men with two wound stripes."

The majority of these men, over 34 years of age, are married men who, after their attestation, received long periods of exemption at the Tribunals and, in most cases, arrived in France during 1918.

In January, February, and March, 1916, the first ten groups of "Derby" recruits were called up for service. These men received a short period of intensive training, only in rare cases did this period of preparation exceed ten or twelve weeks — and were rushed out to France in June and July, in great numbers, for the great Somme Offensive and, with the exception of the badly wounded, remained out there until the last phase.

The majority of these men have a record of nearly three years active service and are in most cases "war-worn."

My own case is typical of many. When the 60th Division left France in 1918, for Salonica, it was brought up to strength by large drafts of Derby men of the early groups. After six months in Salonica, with its deadly climate and privations, they were sent to Palestine, where they took a leading part in Gen. Allenby's campaign from Beersheba to Jerusalem and the Jordan Valley.

The hardships and sufferings they had to undergo in this campaign were inconceivable. Lack of water, scarcity of rations, the intense heat, the torments of the mosquito and every other type of insect animalculae known to those parts, together with the long weary marches over desert and later over rocky mountains, alway marching in full pack during the advance, made for intense war-weariness.

In July 1919, after the Jordan Valley 'stunt' the Division, greatly depleted, returned to the Base and was broken up. My Battalion was despatched to France, made up to strength by new drafts and sent up the line for the last big push, with the 62nd Division.

We started in conjunction with the Guards Division at Monchy and advanced, fighting all the way, past Cambrai, and eventually arrived at Maubeuge at the time of the signing of the Armistice in November, after which we marched through Belgium to the Rhine Provinces, with what then was the Army of Occupation.

Those of us who are left in the Battalion are only typical of thousands of others who joined the Army in '16 and surely, with a record of service in the field like this, we have some claim for consideration when the next step in demobilization takes place.

I would suggest that the principle of "First out, First home" should be continued, and the men to be discharged next should be those who joined the Colours in January, February, and March 1916, and who have over two year's active service. Following this principle, each month would yield a large number of men whose three years would be completed and these could be discharged month by month, until the Army of Occupation is reduced to the minimum required.

If, as the Official pamphlet states, the fairest method is to discharge the 1914 and '15 men first on the grounds of length of service, it is only right that the same principle should be applied to the men who come next, viz. — the early '16 men, who have every reason to be ,war-worn'; otherwise these men may find it impossible to return to civil life at any early date.

"THE RELEASE OF CONCHY"

Tho the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—Your reference to this extraordinary breed is interesting and opportune. There is, I believe, a Government promise to the effect that Conchy shall form the rearguard of demobilization, and it is to be hoped that this will be proof against any agitation for an early release of those that failed the Country in its greatest crisis.

We have always been a tolerant race and no greater evidence of this has ever been evinced than in our treatment of Conchy during the war.

He objected to kill, he objected to maim, he objected to manufacture, or assist in the manufacture of, anything that would tend to destruction of life, limb or property. We conceded his point of view, and let him grow fat on self-cultivated allotments.

Now however, destructive war is at an end. Why not give Conchy a chance?

Belgium and the north of France are crying aloud for labourers to clear up the chaos of Armageddon prior to reconstruction.

No more humane or constructive work could ever fall to the lot of a body of "thinkers," whose "Soul" was inspired with so deep a desire for construction that it could not even become an agent in the 3rd or 4th degree to the destruction of evil.

VANDALISING.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.-May I ask publicity for the gross vandalism being carried on by soldiers of the Allied forces in the Beethoven Museum House at Bonn.

I am continually conducting parties of interested soldiers over the house and the unfortunate caretaker, twice this month, complains that soldiers in their zeal for souvenirs take articles exhibited.

These soldiers, I need hardly add, are not in my parties.

Whatever crimes the Germans may have committed in other places ave no excuse for wanton and senseless pilfering.

THE C. Q. M. S.

I wonder if all Company Quartermaster Sergeants are as inquisitive as mine? Sometimes he makes me feel as if I could be positively rude to him, and if it was not for the presence of the Company-Sergeant-Major, who usually lurks in a corner behind a Company Roll Book, counting aloud the strength of the Company by Platoons; there is no telling how much of my wrath I would inflict upon him at his own bidding. The presence of the Company storeman too, is another point in his favour. In fact whenever I interview my C. Q. M. S. it, always seems a three-to-one chance against me, and I simply loathe second and third evidence, because on certain occasions they are too convincing. They then, are his only safeguards. Even the responsibility and the ardourous nature of his rank, would not shield him from the antagonism which springs up within me each time he asks me a question. I know that he has many inconveniences to suffer, such as trudging around in the mud to get acquittance rolls signed by erring Tommies, (generally Bn. H.Q., and Transport), and is often intruded upon by zealous Platoon Officers at his Company-Office-Bed-Sitting-Room; who, after talking about everything in general and nothing in particular remarks, "Quarter-Master-Sergeant, I'm sure your breakfast will be cold", then apologises and departs. Yes, I am fully aware of all that, but still I always feel as though I owe him a grudge. Every time I go near him he always seems to bombard me with the most personal questions possible.

The other day I had occasion to visit him at his C.O.B.S.R., on an errand of most trivial nature. I had hardly stepped into his presence when he demanded my Pay Book.

"Where is your Pay Book?" he shouted; "In my pocket" said I, "but . . ," "Always have your Pay Book handy when you come to see me" he bellowed, so I handed over the disreputable little book, my temper rising quickly, and at the same time I caught the C.S.M. looking over the top of his Company Roster with one eye sort of style. I felt like gritting my teeth. The Storeman was counting out dirty socks in the corner.

"Is that your correct number?" roared the C.Q.M.S., looking into my book. "Yes" I answered, "but . . ."

"When did you last leave U.K.?" he continued.

I told him, and then tried to commence to tell him my mission. But he swamped me.

"Is this Proficiency Pay shown here correct?"

"Yes," I said "but I only . . .," then came a salvo of questions.

"Was I married?, how many children?, was I a Specialist?."

I think he mentioned something about "Forming fours" too, had my wife heard him she would have torn his eyes out. My blood boiled also. I thought I would be able to conclude my business quicker if I answered his questions promptly and plainly, so I let him carry on. "Terms of Service?, Place of enlistment?, age?, date,? number of overseas chevrons?, where was I born?, WHY?." He did let himself go, and I was itching to tear him to pieces. But at last he became unwound, and stopped. So I said, "You asked me all this just a day or two ago, Quartermaster Sergeant." "What?" he yelled, "Your name is Jones, isn't it?". "Yes," I answered; "but there are many more Jones' in the Company; and possibly you might have put down in your book against one of the others, all those personal things you asked me the other day." His eyes brightened; "Anyhow" I continued, "I have just called in to ask you not to put me down for any pay next pay day."

It afterwards transpired that he had made a mistake. I am usually known as "14 Jones", but the man he was after was "41 Jones".

If I ever meet him in civil life I 'll . . . . .

BOLSHEVIST ATTACK REPULSED AT ARCHANGEL

LABOUR'S NEW CHARTER

STATE AID FOR DEMOBILISED SOLDIERS

EXPEDITIONARY FORCE FOR HUNGARY

ARCHANGEL ANXIETY.

BOLSHEVIST ATTACK.

On the 2nd of April the Bolshevists delivered an attack on the Archangel front. It was made in the neighbourhood of Bolsheozerki, just west of the railway.

The Bolshevists were beaten off with a certain amount of loss. Our losses were slight.

RELIEF FOR TROOPS IN RUSSIA.

The Secretary of State for War, Mr. Winston Churchill, has cabled to the British troops in Russia promising them relief at the earliest possible moment and immediate repatriation when reinforcements arrive.

It is understood that the relief for the expeditionary force at Archangel will be sent in specially constructed ice-breaking transports which it is hoped will arrive about the middle of May.

BLOCKADE CONTROL.

HOW IT IS WORKED.

From official sources we learn that a recently signed memorial shows there is still some misapprehension about the blockade. This memorial makes it appear that it is the blockade which is preventing the supply of food to the distressed countries in Europe.

This is quite wrong. The blockade is in no respect hindering the relief.

The blockade is operated by two inter-allied bodies on which there are British, American, French and Italian representatives. There is first the Superior Council of the Blockade which sits in Paris, and secondly the Allied Blockade Committee, which meets in London.

The Superior Council decides the wide question of principle such as, for instance, the raising of the Blockade of enemy countries.

As regards food, the supreme Economic Council at Paris is the authority.

This authority decides what food supplies are to go to friendly, neutral and enemy countries when there is a food shortage.

Food is not on the "free list", but there is no blockade restriction of any sort on the activities of the Supreme Economic Council.

It has been the difficulties of shipping and finance, and of organisation within distressed countries that has delayed and hindered relief. The delay is not in any way the result of any obstacle placed in the way by the Blockade authorities.

CONDITIONS AT MURMANSK.

Comparative tranquility reigns at Murmansk, says the Times correspondent, telegraphing on the 3rd April.

Walking out after dusk is attended with some risk, stray shots being thereby invited.

General Maynard is well aware of the Bolshevist tendencies in this growing town, which contains six thousand Russian labourers. He prevented a revolt last week by arresting twenty ringleaders.

The health of the troops is excellent. They have good food and plenty of sport and entertainment, while the climate is ideal.

H.M.S. battleship Glory, lying in the harbour, commands the town and minimises the danger from Bolshevists, who are a much greater menace at Archangel.

BOLSHEVISM IN BAVARIA.

According to the Kolnische Volkszeitung the chairman of the Central Council at Munich (Nikisch) has proclaimed a Republic of Councils (Soviets). The Parliament (Landtag) is accordingly abolished.

BIG EARTHQUAKE IN BRAZIL.

A tremendous volcanic eruption occurred in Brazil on 30th March. The mountains near Palmeiro los Indios were rent asunder and a crater over two kilometres long opened. A large number were killed; all the remaining inhabitants in the surounding country fled.

Volcanic activity in this region has hitherto been unknown.

FREEING THE FILIPINOS.

Reuter's Washington correspondent telegraphs that Secretary Baker has received a delegation from the Philippine Islands. He told them that in President Wilson's opinion the time has arrived to grant them their independence.

FORTHCOMING GERMAN STRIKES.

Krupps workmen at Essen.
General Strike at Düsseldorf on Monday.
Bank clerks at Berlin on Monday.

The number of strikers in the Ruhr district has risen to 260,000, of whom 145,000 are miners.

DANZIG DRAWS A BYE.

The German Armistice Commission announces that the agreement concerning routes to be used by Polish troops passing through German territory was signed yesterday evening at Spa by Marshal Foch and Herr Erzberger.

The important point is that there will be no landing at Danzig.

Before signing the record Erzberger declared that the German interpretation of article sixteen of the armistice terms of 11th November was not in accord with the Allies' interpretation.

A compromise was arrived at. Erzberger proposed the following routes:

1. via Stettin, Kreuz, Posen, Warsaw.
2. via Pillau, Koenigsberg, Memel, Korschen, Lyck and Grajens.
3. via Cobienz, Giessen, Kassel, Halle, Eilenberg, Frankfort, Bebra, Erfurt, Leipzig, Kottbus, Lissa, Kalish.

The German Government guarantees the absolute security of these routes.

Transport of troops will begin about the 15th April.

Should any hitch occur, Marshal Foch reserves the right to revert to the original clause in the armistice agreement.

STATE AID FOR DEMOBILISED SOLDIERS.

It is officially announced that the Government regards it as an obligation to give assistance out of State funds to restart in business demobilised and discharged officers and men who joined the forces after the 4th August 1914.

The State assistance provided will be administered by a Civil Liabilities Committee under the Ministry of Labour.

As a result of the decision the King's Fund will be relieved of a very large proportion of cases for which it has hitherto provided the only source of assistance.

The necessity for the continuance of the King's Fund will in no way be diminished nor its usefulness restricted, as there is a very special claim upon its resources in respect of the widows and fatherless children and of disabled officers and men who need special assistance.

PROPOSED MEMORIAL TO THE ROYAL ENGINEERS.

With a view to establishing a memorial to the fallen comrades of the Royal Engineers, a Committee is appealing for one hundred and fifty thousand pounds, part of which is to be devoted to a monumental memorial in London and the remainder to the endowment of an educational scheme for the benefit of all ranks in all branches of the corps as at present constituted.

The London memorial will contain a special tribute to Lord Kitchener.

DEATH OF SIR WILLIAM CROOKES.

Professor Sir William Crookes, the great scientist, died yesterday at the advanced age of 87.

To recount his discoveries would need considerable space.

His researches were mostly in Physics, and more especially Light, although his published works cover such a wide range as sugar, dyeing, printing, metallurgy, manures, wheat and diamonds.

He received the Order of Merit in 1910.

NEW CHARTER OF LABOUR.

CAPITAL AND LABOUR IN ACCORD.

At yesterday's meeting of the Industrial Conference a resolution was moved by Mr. Henderson welcoming the report of the Provisional Committee and agreeing to submit it for the acceptance of constituent associations immediately it was legalised by the Government.

Mr. Henderson said that the giving effect to the report would be an example to the whole world.

Sir Allan Smith, Chairman of the employers' representatives, seconded the resolution, declaring that the employers would put the report into operation in the spirit as well as the letter. If trade unionists did the same there need be no fear for the future of the nation.

Mr. Horne said the report was the most momentous document presented to the country for many years.

The resolution was carried with acclamation.

Among other things the Report recommends:
Maximum working week of 48 hours;
Universal minimum wage for all industries;
Discouragement of systematic overtime;
Adequate provision for maintenance of unemployed;
More generous provision for sickness;
Old age pensions;
Establishment of a Council of employers and workers to advise the Government on national industrial questions.

Posen is altering all German street names.

TOOTLING OUR TRUMPET.

Fully conscious of our defects but withal, susceptible to flattery after a week which has been full of arduous toil and anxious moments, it is pleasant to read that we have been welcomed at home. All the week we have toiled early and late with one eye on the clock, which is the Nemesis of a newspaper, and the other on a body of estimable — yes, estimable — German workmen, who know no English, have not the slightest idea of style (for German newspaper production is execrable), who work by antiquated methods and who are so hungry that their efficiency is impaired. We have been handicapped as no daily newspaper before was handicapped. Lacking the tentacles through which a newspaper assimilates the matter by which it lives, lacking, as yet, the means of verification which the poorest of publications at home possesses, we are at the mercy of memories impaired by four years of war and of such casual reading as we have been able to secure. At the mercy of delayed cables, late breakfasts, and those to whom time is not, yet nerved to our task by the difficulties with which we have been confronted, we present the seventh issue of The Cologne Post as the final effort of a week which has been a labour of love, with the philosophical reflection that "the course of true love never did run smooth."

We shall eliminate the defects before long.

Taking heart from the fact that one unenviable record, that of short life, can not fall to us, we gently chide the Manchester Guardian for wishing us "a short life and a merry one." The phrase is misquoted for one thing and for the other, we anticipate a life long and honourable. We intend to keep the watch fire of England burning brightly on the Rhine for at least as long as we are here.

In the course of a leading article on the subject of "The Cologne Post", The Manchester Guardian says:

"It is good that the Army of the Rhine should have a paper of its own. The Cologne Post should be a useful medicine against the weariness that will come on many men after the freshness of their experiences in occupied territories has worn away. The Cologne Post, which is soundly catholic in interests, has some piquant features. There are some remarkably frank letters from officers about our manners at the Opera, which appears to be pretty much like manners at 'Beecham's.' Under Answers to Correspondents The Cologne Post announces that the present Secretary of State for War is Viscount Milner. Is it a bad watch they are keeping on the Rhine or are they only trying to take some one down a peg? At all events The Cologne Post will enliven the army when off duty, and since we want the men on the Rhine back home, we wish it "a short life and a merry one."

NO "COLOGNE POST" TOMORROW

IN ORDER to comply with the German industrial rule customary in the printing works and to ensure a free Sunday for the work people and staff, it has been arranged that "The Cologne Post" shall appear on Sunday as usual but not on Monday. We realise that in any case a small amount of work is unavoidable on Sunday, but undoubtedly by the arrangement proposed by far the greater number of work people will be able to have every Sunday free Remember — NO "POST" TOMORROW

Our week starts on TUESDAY.

NEXT ISSUE TUESDAY

NO FLUKES IN THE R.A.F.

£200 DAMAGES FOR SAYING OTHERWISE.

In the High Court yesterday, Capt. William Leopold Samson, of the Royal Air Force, attached to the Headquarters staff at Felixstowe, was awarded two hundred pounds damages against the proprietor and editor of the Aeroplane, for libel.

The libel was contained in an article which contained a statement to the effect that a certain Staff officer won the Distinguished Flying Cross by his fluke bombing of a submarine while suffering from air sickness.

GIRLS FOR THE CONTINENT.

There is a flutter among the women members of the Ministry of Food staff at the prospects of a trip to the Continent, where the various food missions are already employing 20 women from headquarters. A few more are required. There are 20 women in Paris, 2 in Poland, 2 in Rotterdam, 1 in Cologne and 4 in Constantinople. The women needed now will probably go to Paris.

ROYAL AIR FORCE FOR CANADA.

An interchange of ideas is taking place between the Canadian Government and the British Air Ministry regarding the formation of a Canadian Air Force.

Col. Malock is sailing for Canada to assist in its establishment.

The personnel of two Canadian squadrons now training in England will also be sent over as complete units.

BIG DIVORCE DAMAGES.

MILITARY CORRESPONDENT.

In the Divorce Court yesterday Capt. George Rowland Alexander Pallin, Army Service Corps, obtained a divorce against his wife, the co-respondent being Vivian H. Piercy, until recently a captain in the Royal Welsh Fusiliers.

Damages of fifteen hundred pounds were awarded.

HUNGARIAN MAGNATE TAKES VERONAL.

From Budapesth comes a message that Manfred Weiss, who formerly owned the largest munition works in Hungary, took five grains of veronal.

He was conveyd to the hospital unconscious and his condition is regarded as critical.

GERMAN APOLOGY.

"WE HUMBLY REGRET".

On the 21st March the Socialist newspaper, the Rheinische Zeitung published an article describing as "uneatable" bread made for the poor with flour supplied by the English.

As was to be expected they have had to retract their words. On the 25th March the organ announced that its distrust in the truth of English assurances is without foundation and yesterday there were more regrets that they had stated their impression that England was delivering inferior food stuffs.

Edmund Burke, was it not? who wrote "And having looked to Goverment for bread ..... they will turn and bite the hand that fed them".

OFFICIAL ARTIST FOR AMERICA.

Mr. C. R. W. Nevinson, whose impressionist drawings from the front were the most convincing, is going to America in a semi-official capacity towards the end of the month. His admirers have seized the occasion to arrange a dinner in his honour. It will take place at the Café Royal on the 11th April, under the Chairmanship of Sir Walter Sickert.

ONE WOMAN EQUALS ONE MAN.

PEERESSES TO SIT IN THE LORDS.

The House of Commons yesterday unanimously passed the second reading of the Labour Party Bill abolishing all disabilities of women in respect of civil judicial offices: conferring the franchise under equal conditions with men; also enabling Peeresses in their own right to sit in the House of Lords.

Dr Addison, on behalf of the Government, intimated that they would propose in Committee the deletion of the equal franchise clause.

The Government would, however, accept the other principles.

REFORMING THE WEST END.

PURITY PROCESSIONS.

The Rev. Father Bickersteth, of the Community of the Resurrection, has started a novel campaign in an endeavour to reform the West End of London.

It takes the form of a procession. Every Thursday night it starts from St. Martin's-in-the-Fields and parades through Leicester Square, the Strand etc.

Hymns are sung en route and prayer meetings are held at various places. The procession is headed by a cross. Then come choristers, white-robed priests, and women workers carrying lanterns.

The women workers hold conversations with girls who frequent the West End and prevail upon them to return to the church with the processionists.

LEAGUE OF INTERESTS.

MR. CLYNES' APPEAL.

When the National Industrial Conference again met to consider the recommendations of the Joint Provisional Committee, a letter was read from Mr. Lloyd George, expressing his hopes of an industrial peace by co-operation and promising that the recommendations of the Conference should have "immediate and sympathetic consideration of the Government".

In the course of the discussion on the question of wages and overtime a delegate rose to protest against the Military Service Bill.

The chairman appealed to him not to introduce politics into the Conference.

Mr. Clynes in proposing an adjournment to enable the two parties to the Conference to retire in order to consult separately, with a view to a decision being arrived at that afternoon, appealed to them to make a strong endeavour to set up a League of Interests between employers and employed and to replace compulsory force by devising such machinery as would work for industrial harmony.

SELLING THEIR OLD SHELLS.

A Stockholm telegram says that the German Government is negotiating with a Swedish Syndicate for the sale as scrap iron of millions of shells.

HUNGARY TO BE ATTACKED.

From Vienna, via Copenhagen, comes a report that a campaign against Hungary will soon be commenced.

Italian, French and Colonial troops will combine. They are now ready to march against Buda Pesth. The intention is said to be to occupy the whole country.

No confirmation from any other source has been received.

French workmen are asking that Jaure's body shall be exhumed and deposited in the Pantheon.

BILLIE CARLETON CASE.

VERDICT OF NOT GUILTY.

At the trial of Reginald De Veulle, 38, dress designer, for the manslaughter of Billie Carleton-the actress, and of conspiring to procure cocaine, a police witness admitted that the charge of procuring cocaine was brought after the whole evidence had been given and the doctors cross-examined.

When the trial was resumed yesterday De Veulle's counsel intimated that he would call no evidence for the defence.

Addressing the jury, counsel asked them seriously to consider his submission that Billie Carleton committed suicide. He asked them "Why did Doctor Stewart put the box containing trional into his pocket if there really was trional in it and not veronal?" They must have come to the conclusion that death was due to suicide, misadventure or foul play.

Finally counsel submitted that, even assuming that De Veulle did supply cocaine to Miss Carleton, that act did not cause her death, which was caused by her own act.

The Judge, in summing up, said there was no doubt Miss Carleton died from narcotic poisoning. The only question was "Was the poison cocaine?"

The jury ultimately brought in a verdict of "Not Guilty."

SOUTH WALES MINERS.

Despite the adverse vote at the recent Cardiff Conference the official leaders of the South Wales miners are strongly advising the men to accept the Sankey Report.

The view of the leaders is that acceptance of the terms will greatly improve the status of the miners and lay the foundation of a bright future.

WHO SAID SUBMARINES AND ZEPPELINS?

HUGE INSURANCE PROFITS.

During the war the Government made a net profit of seventeen million pounds on war-time shipping insurances and over ten and a half millions on aircraft and bombardment insurance.

DAILY MAIL LIBEL.

VERDICT FOR DEFENDANTS.

The action brought by Sir Hedley Le Bas against the Daily Mail for alleged libel was concluded yesterday.

The defence was that the comments were true, and the jury returned a verdict far the defendants.

SYMPATHETIC CARDSHARPERS.

The funeral took place yesterday of John Buckles, a very well known official of the London and South Western Railway Company's police.

He was senior inspector at Waterloo and invariably accompanied the Royal trains, including the ex-Kaiser's special.

By cardsharpers and similar frequenters of race meetings he was regarded with terror, yet when he was lying ill, they were among the earliest and most frequent callers.

He had thirty eight years service in the Company to his credit.

PUT HALF-NELSON ON THE EX-KAISER.

A TUSSAUD TRAGEDY.

A tragic fate recently overtook William Hohenzollern, the ex-Kaiser.

A British sailor, obviously "three sheets in the wind" seized William by the scruff of his neck, administered a half-nelson (or should it be a half-Beatty?) and speedily had the quondam imperial shoulders on the mat.

Not content with winning on points, this stalwart of the silent Navy proceeded to "mix it" and jumped violently on William's tummy.

The haplees ex-Monarch was rescued by an attendant but he had suffered grievously. His moustache was clipped, his nose broken and his shoulder dislocated.

The tragedy took place at Madame Tussaud's.

REGULARS V. VOLUNTEERS.

A correspomdemt of the Manchester Guardian says that the proposal to authorise volunteer officers to retain their military titles is strongly resented by service men.

"BIG FOUR" SPEEDING UP.

A meeting of the Industrial Conference was held in London yesterday to hear the report of the Provisional Joint Committee of employers and workers which was constituted at the Industrial Conference summoned by the Government on 27th Febuary, to report on hours of work, wages and general conditions of Labour.

The Minister for Labour presided.

In the course of his opening address he said we were now in a position to anticipate that within a comparatively few days a stage will be reached in the Peace Conference which will allow the Prime Minister to return to this country for a considerable period.

GERMAN REGIMENT COERCED.

ARTILLERY AND MACHINE GUNS.

In consequence of the Augusta regiment resisting the German Government's decision to convert them into an Imperial Defence Force and repeatedly showing their untrustworthiness, the military authorities were compelled to take very firm measures towards disarming them.

These included the complete encirclement of the barracks, bringing up of artillery and the posting of machine guns in commanding positions.

The regiment then submitted to disarmament.

It is stated from Berlin that Herr Edward Bernstein will be the next German Ambassador to England.

THE VIOLATION OF INTERNATIONAL LAW.

We have a new question confronting us at the present time — the question of International Law. The latest theories from Germany are astounding beyond any comprehension, save by men of their own special intellectual breed. One really wonders whether there is any value in such laws, when a nation can reduce them to suit her own requirements, as is the case in the recent inquiry into the murder of Captain Fryatt. We use the word "murder", for murder it surely was, and as such ought to be investigated. If the German authorities cannot give a true interpretation of the international laws, then why not demand the culprit for trial by a British court. At least we expect to find British representatives at any such important inquiry.

That Germany should appoint a special commission is proof positive of the seriousness of the case, and is a convincing sign of uncertainty on the part of the German authorities. Hence the inquiry.

During the past week a six-hour conference has been held by a German Commission of Inquiry, resulting in a verdict being given that there was no violation of international law at the trial of Captain Fryatt.

What, then, is international law?

In Germany it is like all other laws — merely the law of necessity, the one rough basis which has been the foundation of all her actions during this war. There has been nothing too ruthless, too wanton, too destructive, to which this hideous law of necessity would not concede, and thus we find German authority without honour, without virtue, and with nothing but a hideous record on which to plant its dying laurels.

That is the great danger which confronts us in the planning of the peace terms. The German people has been ruled with the rod of iron and their one great law — that law of necessity — covers a multitude of sins, whilst everything else is a mere "scrap of paper". Her signature to a treaty is no guarantee of good faith, and we who have been compelled to learn this lesson with great personal injury require something far more stringent than a stroke of the pen.

Why give her the opportunity of voicing her opinion before signing the treaty? There is only one sure way of dealing with her, there is only one means of securing a lasting peace, and that is by crushing her old regime as an active power. We soldiers were not given the opportunity of making this a sure reality, for the Armistice intervened. But we placed it within the powers and possibility of our statesmen at home, and at this critical hour we look to them in good faith and with earnest hopes that our labours have not been in vain, and that they will complete what we were restrained from completing in November last.

WHY THE STRIKE!

A strike leader of the Ruhr district was interviewed by our Press representative, the other day.
"Why do you strike?" he asked.
"We want to be loved!" was his reply.
"But how?" exclaimed the representative.
"Well, during the war we were told the Germans were hated in the world because they had worked too much."

LEAVE.

BY "ONE WHO HAS HAD SOME".

Leave is a delusion. It ought to be abolished by the Army Council forthwith—or at least suspended for three months. By that time I shall be due for another trip home. I don't think leave is at all good for you. For one reason, it causes no end of bad feeling between you and Messrs. Cox, Holt, Mr. Gregor, or whoever it is who guards your account at the bank. And the money — if the above named gentlemen will let you have any — simply wastes itself away on such things as stalls at revue, tickets for Jazz, "bubbly" for all sorts of people, and odds and ends for the only best girl. And at the end of the leave, when you return to this land of comfort and happiness you look back on those prodigal days at home and down at your debilited bank balance with regret — probably regret that both hadn't panned out longer — but none the less with regret. — The money would have been far better spent in war loan, or income tax, or something like that.

You are full of fight just before your leave — you'd love to fight anybody, including the blighter who is an honorary member of your Mess, who always "bags" the only armchair available, pinches The Tatler and takes it into his billet, from which limbo it never returns; and who drinks the whisky, quite accidentally, of course, contained in the bottle upon which you have carefully written your name. Well, you would like to fight him. Then there is the Quartermaster who won't let you have a pair of "issue" boots without paying for them: you feel like filling your pockets full of Mills' best and making a daylight raid in that direction. And as for the batman who persists in taking your best silk pyjamas to a local washerwoman and bringing back, in the course of time, a collection of garments made of ersatz material, which never were meant to fit the male form undivine, then, I tell you, you feel like following the example of the Biblical person who got loose amongst those Philistine people — even to using your batman's jaw bone as a weapon!

I say again that immediately before going on leave, you feel like doing all that fighting. But just consider how different your views are immediately you have come back. You've been "bagged" for duty at Victoria station. The R.T.O. has made you sign something in a book, and hasn't given you time to know whether it is a confidential report on you or merely your own death warrant. You have found yourself in charge of innumerable Highlanders, who no more want to come back than you think you do, and, after a tour of duty as ship's Orderly Officer, combined with distressful bouts of mal-de-mer (we haven't forgotten our French yet, you see) you find you've missed your place on the "Creeping Beauty", and that you are detailed to proceed to Cologne on a troop-train, still in charge of the reluctant Highlandmen. By the time you've reported at your destination, you haven't as much fight left in you as a Hun with his hands up. You haven't a kick left in you. You are really a case for the first sympathetic Yankee M.O. you can find in your Division, if there is such a one. So I put it to you, can leave be good for you if it works that change? Long ago, before there was an armistice on, and before even the latest-joined recruit from the coal-mines even knew there was such a word as "demobilization", we had the idea that a soldier's job was to fight. Well, suppose the war broke out again whilst you are away, would you be fit, after all the hardships of leave, to take up the Mill's bomb again?

So, all you people who are sweating on leave, take a fool's advice. When your warrant come's through, remember all I have said above, and send you warrant along to the Editor of the "Post". Under separate cover I've instructed him to send it on to me. I've got a top-hole use for it.

S.S.S.

QUESTION TIME.

OR UNCLE ARTHUR'S LETTER BOX.

All questions by correspondents answered with promptitude, special attention being paid to those concerning Demobilization.

SOLDIER: Q.—I have been retained owing to lack of reinforcements, although I am eligible for demobilization. Is this right, and when am I likely to get away?
A.—Yes, this is right. To put it clearly, if you are an eligible man yet retained, you are not a retainable man and are demobilizable as you are not eligible to be retained; retainable men though eligible are not demobilizable if eligible for retention. Anyway, you don't get away till you are demobilized.

ANXIOUS: Q.—My trade is "snicker and tester" in a coronation programme factory. In what class shall I go home?
A.—Probably as a "Pivotal".

MOTHER: Q.—Can you tell me when my boy will be sent home, as the girls are so anxious to have him back. I enclose his photograph?
A.—See Dem. Reg. 342A Part II, para. 3b (i) "Repatriation of Regimental Mascots".

FADDY: Q.—What colour shall I choose for my "civvy" suit?
A.—You might choose peach blossom mixture or heather cling tweeds, though the subdued mustard colour known as khaki is not to be recommended. You might also choose mouse-grey or aureolin, or perhaps a rose madder spring suiting; but brown or blue is all you'll get.

WAR BABY: Q.—What is demobilization?
A.—Never heard of it.

AMAZON: Q.—Why hasn't my husband, Pte. George Smith, No. 12472, come home? I have been been waiting for him for four and a half years.
A.—No. 12472 Pte. George Smith has re-enlisted for twelve years colour service.

SAPPER: Q.—I am a ballroom floor polisher. Under what heading should I be classed?
A.—Obviously a 'slip' man.

CHESHIRE: Q.—I got married on my last leave. In what way can I be demobilized as soon as possible?
A.—Apply for A.F.Z. 56, the form for the "one man business".

CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS.

PLEA FOR MORE LENIENT TREATMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS DEBATE.

In the House of Lords on Thursday Lord Parmoor called attention to the position of conscientious objectors whom the tribunals had found sincere in their convictions, and asked whether the Government was prepared to reconsider their position, more particularly in reference to those who had been in prison for a period of two years or more. He had brought this matter forward as an armistice resolution, and hoped that further steps would be taken in regard to it, and that this blot on the justice of the country would be removed.

The Marquis of Lansdowne thought that this might possibly be the last debate in that House on a subject which he had always regarded as particularly odious and humiliating. If the Government could state that they could see their way to close the episode, the announcement would be received with universal satisfaction.

The Marquis of Salisbury took a different view from Lord Parmoor with regard to the question. He said that the Government had been obliged to vindicate their position, but he suggested that at this juncture the punishment might be mitigated by the removal of hard labour in every case.

Viscount Peel, in reply, said that the number of conscientious objectors imprisoned was not 1,500, as Lord Parmoor had stated, but 888, and that the number who had served at least two years was not 773, but 464. About 600 conscientious objectors had been completely exonerated by the tribunals, but there was ample evidence to show that many of those who claimed to be conscientious objectors were by no means conscientious, and that many of them had been engaged in a deliberate conspiracy to break down the Military Service Act.

There was no doubt that what these men had done would have resulted in the complete breakdown of the State if their example had been generally followed. The rule that had been adopted was not specially applicable to conscientious objectors. It was of general application, the Government having decided that those men who were looked upon as bad soldiers should be discharged form the Army after being two years or more in prison.

The Archbishop of Canterbury hoped there would now be a very speedy ending to what had been a melancholy story. He believed an endeavour had been made to act fairly by these men, but it had broken down in the attempt to apply strict principles of logic or law to men to whom neither of these conditions were really applicable. He asked that those who were still to remain in custody should remain under conditions as little penal as could be arranged. He could not believe that the position in which we were now placed was one which involved the necessity of these men being subjected to treatment so penal as that which had broken down the spirit and health of not a few of the misguided men who were now in prison.

The subject dropped at this point, and their lordships adjourned at eight o'clock.

A BONN LEGEND.

One is apt to regard a University town as a fairly quiet place, more especially since Cambridge has, to so great an extent, given up the practice of pyres in the market place, but Bonn in a thunderstorm must have been an A1, pandemonium in earlier times. An ancient legend records that a thunderstorm near the church of St. Cassius was sufficient to set the church bells ringing without human agency, and all the ancient "speerits" crying out in anything but unison. It happened this way.

Roman Bonn.

In ancient times the site of the Minster of Bonn was made the sacred place of the Roman colonists who, at that time, were heathens. Here they had their principal altar and on this they sacrificed slaves and prisoners of war.

However with the coming of St. Helena, who was a Christian and the mother of Constantine, all these things were changed. The sacred oaks were hewn down, the heathen buildings and the idolatrous customs were erased. In the place of these "abominations" the saintly Helena had a Christian church erected and gave to it the name of St. Cassius. As time went on the church was enlarged considerably and a fine tower with an wonderful peal of bells were added; and through what wonderful vicissitudes passed Bonn while those same bells went on singing the same old notes. One is reminded of the great bell of Cologne, primarily French cannon, recently German shell cases, now, probably, Flanders, or French, mud. These bells of Bonn heard the excited crowd which welcomed Frederick the Beautiful, Emperor of Germany, and Charles the Father of Bohemia when they came to be crowned in the Minster; they also were witnesses of the coming of the French and rang out doleful sounds as their steeple blazed away.

Bells versus Thunderstorm.

It was when Nature's forces became angry, however, that the bells—according to the legend—were busiest, for then they apparently made a practice of trying to soothe the populace by drowning the voice of Jove.

The battle was joined and reinforcements arrived; for all the spirits of the ancient heathen, whose bones were laid in the precincts, rose to assist their own special King of the gods, Jupiter to wit, as he hurled his thunderbolts, and pandemonium flourished.

The Dogs of St. Cassius.

St. Cassius, whose bones rest in the church, must have had a breezy time during thunderstorms, for the legend tells us that the heathen spirits detested the saint, whose martyrdom brought thousands to the Christian cause, and did all they could in the noise line to give him an uncomfortable time. But the allied powers of darkness fight a losing fight, always, and, without any aid from companologist, the bells rang out clearly above the inferno of heathenism. With cries of "Woe to us, the saint watches, the dogs of Cassius have warned him. Woe to us the dogs of Cassius have barked," these spirits disappeared, with gnashings of teeth and rattling of bones, into the darkness of the spirit world, no more to come forth until the next thunderstorm. It was always the same tale, says the legend, of infernal noise and supernatural bell ringing; but it is no more, devils and saints, labelled as such, no longer fight. Their noises were replaced by the noise of the undergraduates; and even that has passed; one doesn't have an A.P.M. and "rags".

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.-Will you kindly allow me space in your columns in my attempt to get in touch with someone of musical ability, as I have written a song-poem which I should very much like set to music. I have a catchy melody for the same, and with the kind of partner I desire, we could easily arrange to meet at some convenient time and place for that purpose. Gunr. J. P.

ROYAL OPERA — COVENT GARDEN.

SEASON'S INTERESTING PROGRAMME.

Covent Garden will open its doors again on May 5th after a rest of nearly five years,.

The season will continue for 12 weeks and many interesting novelties are promised, including Francesca Da Rimini of Zandonai, and Puccini's three one act operas Giannt Schicchi, il Tabarro and Suor Angelica.

The term 'novelty' could also be applied to Gluck's Alceste which has not been heard for many yeas.

Verdi is well represented in the Italian operas selected, and the inclusion of Louise and Pelleas and Melisande in the French list will be more than welcome.

Rimsky — Korsakov's Night of May and Berodin's Prince Igor will be given in English, a notable departure from Grand Season traditions and a cheering sign to those who long for the establishment of national opera in our native language.

The Directorate is warmly to be congratulated on this innovation, as well as on the number of eminent English speaking artists already engaged in the preliminary list, such as Melba, Edvina, Kirkby, Lunn etc. Among the foreign artists such familiar names as Caruso, Gilly, Martinelli, Berat and Elsa Stralia, give promise of wonderful performances, but the list is by no means complete as many other important engagements are pending.

One particular artist whose re engagement will warm the hearts of all music lovers, is Destinn, who has now adopted a Slovak suffix and reappears as Destinnova.

The conductor's baton will be shared by Sir Thomas Beecham, Mr. Percy Pitt and Signor, Mugnone, all of whom are well known to Covent Garden habitues, while it is rumoured that Signor Toscanini will come over from Milan to conduct several performances.

Apart from the operas already mentioned, the repertoire will be selected from Aida, Boheme, Iris, Jewels of the Madonna, Madame Butterfly, Manon Lescaut, Pagliacci, Rigoletto, Tess, Tosca, Traviata, Ballo in Maschera, Faust, Romeo and Juliette, Samson and Dalila, Nail, Thais, Therese and Manon.

Prices are about the same as usual, plus Government tax, but another sign of the progressive policy adopted by the Directorate, is the inauguration of cheaper prices for Saturday nights.

"ZEPP. SPOTTING."

Results of Wireless Developments.

Lieut.-Colonel A. G. T. Cusins, Royal Engineers. lecturing last evening before the members of the Institution of Electrical Engineers upon the development of Army wireless during the war, soid it was his policy—and he believed he was backed by the War Office—to publish as soon as possible in pamphlet form all the main results of wireless that had been aotaind during the past few years. On the first clash of the present war they found Army wireloss performing a wholly new rôle, and on Aug. 19. 1914, one motor-set was working at Le Cateau intercepting enemy messages. By December of that year wireless formed an important section of the Intelligence Department by intercepting and locating enemy messages, and by its use in connection with aeroplanes there was discovered the navigation code of the German Zeppelins, simultaneously with its discovery by the experts in England. The development of the system also made it posible to discover the track of Zeppelins, and on one occasion the estimated spot where the Zeppelin was to cross the coast line was foreshadowed within a mile of the spot given by the local police where it actually did cross. This, of course, assisted the work of the anti-aircraft defence by localising the areas of danger.

BOATING TO COST MORE.

A considerable increase in the charges for boating during the coming summer season is foreshadowed says the Daily Telegraph. Hitherto the charge has been 1s. for the first hour for the use of a boat and a reduced fee for subsequent hours. The Thames Boating Trades Association, whose membership extends from Oxford to Richmond, has come to the conclusion that the present tariff is inadequate to meet the increased cost of labour, which they state has risen quite 100 per cent., and the enhanced cost of boatbuilding materials. Mr. Coyley, the association's secretary, stated in an interview that during the last four years there had been no new boats built. Now, with peace in sight they hoped to restore some of the pleasant features of the river, but this could not be done without increased cost being involved. Most of the boatmen were returning from the war, and it was impossible to expect them to take up their duties under the old con itions.

International Finance.

The New York correspondent of the Daily Telegraph writes that "American bankers are planning to educate the small investor here in the necessity, both as regards his own future welfare and that of Europe, of providing American credit to help to rehabilitate Europe, and for this purpose, it is proposed to establish a trust here. Mr. Paul Warburg, one of Wall Street's leaders, declared to a large meeting of financial experts in New York, that many foreign countries might be expected to reach a point where they will want to sell or offer American investors joint ownership in factories and assets, and that just as European capital had built up Africa and China, so now American wealth, for the benefit of all concerned, should do its share in building up Europe. A large investment trust organised on a country-wide basis, said Mr. Warburg, would not only help to preserve the trade balance, but would be of great advantage in bridging the interval necessary for a better understanding between the two countries."

General Haller's Polish troops are said to comprise Poles eliminated from the French, British and American Armies and Polish prisoners of war in Italy.

FOOTBALL.

14TH BRIGADE ASSOCIATION LEAGUE.

13th King's Liverpool's.

14th Brigade Headquarters.

The 14th Inf. Bde. team combined well together and kept the visitors penned in their own half, but their goalkeeper played a marvellous game, saving shots from all angles. The King's forwards got away, but the home backs cleared. During a scramble in front of goal the inside right banged the ball into the net. The Brigade strove hard to equalize, but could not pierce the visitors defence.

Early in the second half the Brigade were awarded a penalty from which they scored. Both teams endeavoured to get the lead, and the ball travelled from end to end in quick succession. From a corner Captain Carson scored and just before the final whistle sounded a third goal was added, bringing the score to 13th Kings 3; 14th Inf. Bde. H.Q. 1.

OFFICERS V. RIFLEMEN.

A match between the Officers and Riflemen of the 52nd Bn., the Rifle Brigade, played at Worringen on Friday ended in a win for the Officers by 3 to 2 after a well-contested and fast game.

Both teams put up a good show, but although the Riflemen played the more attractive game, the Officers by their superior speed and weight proved the victors.

Both goalkeepers, Col. Riddell for the Officers, and Kempster for the Riflemen, made many fine saves.

The Officers have beaten the Sergeants, Corporals and Riflemen and are now challenging the pick of the Battalions.

51ST DEVONS V 52ND DEVONS.

A keenly contested game was witnessed on Wednesday, April the 2nd, between representative teams of the 51st and 52nd Devons on the former's ground at Burtscheid.

The battalions are very old "soccer" rivals, having crossed swords many times whilst brigaded together at Cromer. This was the first meeting of the two teams since they joined the Army of Occupation, and a very keen interest was taken in the match. In spite of a heavy and sticky ground play was fast, and the football of a good standard.

The 51st immediately took up the attack and within five minutes Hicks opened the scoring, converting an excellent pass by Sgt. Morris, The home forwards continued to press, playing well together and receiving good support from the halves, and early on, through Sergt. Morris, added two more goals. For a time the offensive passed to the visitors and the 51st defence was kept busy. Their efforts were eventually rewarded, the inside right getting home with a stinging shot. The home team had the better of the following exchanges, but at half-time there was no further score.

On resuming play was carried into and kept for the most part in the visiters' half, and Capt. Petherham secured a fourth goal as a result of a fine individual effort. The 52nd retaliated spasmodically and their sallies, although determind, were fruitless, lacking just that little extra effort which gets goals. Time came with the score: —

51st Devons . . . 4.
52nd Devons . . . 1.

MACHINE GUNNERS AT HERSEL.

An interesting match was played between "A" and "B" Companies at Hersel. The ground was in excellent condition and the game was played with enthusiasm. After twenty minutes play, Turner scored for "A" Coy, this being the only goal of the match. During the second half the visiting team pressed hard on several occasions but did not succeed in getting through. The following men for "A" Coy played conspicuously well, — Pte. Wiltshire (Goal). L/C Ritchie (centre half) Turner (right half) and Webster (inside right) while the noticeable players of "B" Coy were, the right back, centre half, centre forward and the right inside.

BRENTFORD V. SOUTHERN LEAGUE.

TO-MORROW (MONDAY), at New Cross, Brentford play a team representing the London clubs belonging to the Southern League, which will be represented by: Alderson (Crystal Palace), Pullen (Queen's Park Rangers), Elvey (Millwall), Booth (Crystal Palace), Mitchell (Queen's Park Rangers), Cracknell (Queen's Park Rangers), Jefferson (Quen's Park Rangers), Dale (Queen's Park Rangers), Wilding (Millwall), Moody (Millwall), Fox (Queen's Park Rangers).

LAWN TENNIS.

COVERED COURT CHAMPIONSHIPS.

The draw for the covered court championships, which will be begun at Queen's Club, West Kensington, to-morrow, was made yesterday. There are fifty-nine entries for the gentlemen's singles and fourteen for the ladies' singles; twenty-eight pairs have entered for the gentlemen's doubles and fifteen pairs for the mixed doubles.

QUEEN'S CLUB DEFEATED BY CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY.

Queen's Club and Cambridge University played a three-a-side contest at West Kensington, when the latter were victorious in two out of the three matches. The most attractive match was that between Capt. R. K. Price, the holder of the M.C.C. silver racket, and M. Woosnam, the celebrated "Soccer" player. The leading feature of the latter's service was a fast railroad, which enabled him to find the nick repeatedly in the first set. He won the first two games largely owing to this keeping a good length on the floor. The next two games were won by his opponent, Captain Price, but Woosnam, continuing to play almost entirely on the floor, eventually took the game at 6-3. His play then slightly deteriorated.

In the second set, Price took the first three games, the fourth going to Woosnam, whose subsequent success finished at 2-1 in the third set. Towards the end Price gave a magnificent display, scoring a couple of strokes and playing on the hazard side in the last game of the match and so ending the rubber with a love game.

The following were the results.

Capt. T. Lacey-Thompson (Charterhouse and Trinity) Cambridge, beat Malcolm Roberts, Queen's, by 2 sets to love (6-1, 9-7);

G. H. Hardy (Winchester and Trinity), Cambridge, beat C. T, Agar, Queen's by 2 sets to 1 (3-6 6-3, 8-6);

Capt. R. K. Price, Queen's beat M. Woosnam (Winchester and Trinity), Cambridge, by 2 sets to 1 (3-6, 6-1, 6-2).

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

(With an Occasional Entertainments Note.)

Cologne Opera House.

Owing to the persistent illness of Frauline Geisler, the "Merry Wives of Windsor" will not be staged on Monday, as announced. Instead, there will be a performance of "Madame Butterfly." The performance will commence at 5.0 p.m.

Abont Polo Ponies.

The news that the Hurlingham Club proposes to suspend its rule relating to the height of polo ponies is of great interest to all lovers of polo. Owing to the dearth of horse flesh, through the war, the breeding and training of polo ponies was a serious and dangerous speculation. In spite of the rapid demobilisation of officers and horses, however, enthusiasts still manage to beguile their exiles by enjoyable, though amateurish, efforts. Infantry ponies are not conducive to the best of games, but in spite of their weakness for "standing over" the ball, they keep up the credit of their arm.

The Apollo Theatre.

Even the most hardened cynic could not fail to be satisfied with the succession of really first rate shows that have appeared at the Apollo Theatre since the arrival of the Army of Oc. in Cologne. Each successive party makes a noble effort to maintain the very high standard of excellence associated with this popular place of entertainment, and the result is invariably very gratifying to audience and artistes alike. Commencing to-morrow, the "Fragments" will present an attractive programme, and when it is mentioned that the party embraces several of the best members of the "Diamonds" (now, unfortunately, extinct) intending patrons will realise the advisability of booking seats early.

Post Office Services Football.

This match, to day, will be played on the Sports Ground, Sudbrucke, when, given fine weather, there is sure to be a big "gate".

The Arrival of Spring.

I knew they would come. Since the appearance of the paragraph on this subject a couple of days ago, we have been inundated with spring poems. Evidently, my little note was accepted as the official announcement of the new season, for everyone who has ever written a line of poetry on this always popular matter, seems to have raked his literary efforts out of their resting place, and hurled them in to Marzellenstrasse.

"Haygarth, the Hustler."

There are very few sportsmen or entertainers in the district who do not known "Haygarth, the Hustler", either by personal contact with him, or by repute. He is the Amusements Officer for the occupied area. It is not surprising, therefore, that his accession to the rank of captain, which was made known yesterday, was the signal for an avalanche of congratulations to be heaped about his head. Captain Haygarth is a man of quick decision and, having decided on a certain course of action, he "gets a move on" to achieve the object he has in mind. The result is, sports and entertainments are thoroughly well organised in the area.

Lord Cheylesmore's Thanks.

I hope Capt. Haygarth will not be very cross on account of the publication of the following extract from a letter addressed to him, which has blown into this office:

I am desired by my Chairman, Major-General Lord Cheylesmore, to convey to you his most grateful thanks for your cheque for 3,869 marks, being the result of the performances kindly organized by you in Cologne, in aid of our important work for the disabled men.

His lordship desires me to add that he is particularly interested in this valued and valuable contribution to our Funds and would be glad if you would kindly convey his warmest acknowledgments to all who helped towards this splendid result."

The Red, Red Rose.

"No play no pay"! brings back to memory the days when Lottie Collins was one of the dense throng struggling to grasp the first rung of the ladder of fame. It is interesting to note that the red rose which Miss José Collins in the Maid of the Mountains wears in her beautiful black hair, and embroidered on her gowns and shawls is in memory of the day her mother first became, a public favounite. Just twenty years ago, at Manchester, after singing a song that is still contiguous with the name of Lottie Collins, a single red rose was thrown on the stage. Once again it was the symbol of success.

THE RAMBLER.

RATES OF EXCHANGE.

BANK CHARGES OF THOMAS COOK AND SON.

In a letter to the Editor, published to-day in another page, an officer complains of what be considers excessive bank charges by the branch of Messrs Thomas Cook & Son, in Cologne.

The question raised is an interesting one, and will no doubt be responsible for a good deal of discussion among officers who have had occasion to exchange money or cash cheques at the offices of these agents.

The Manager of Messrs Thomas Cook and Son admitted to a Cologne Post representative that several officers had complained that they were being asked to pay excessive bank charges, but in every case he had been able to convince them that they were being charged no more than the recognised scale, i. e. threepence in the pound.

The manager added that he would like to have an opportunity to explain to any officer who considered he was being unfairly treated, exactely how the particular figures involved were arrived at, rather than that officer should leave the premises dissatisfied.

In the matter of the exchange of notes — whatever the currency — the method of business adopted by Messrs. Cook and Son was invariable, added our informant. The figures involved were based on the latest closing rates — which were continually fluctuating — and the usual bankers changes deducted.

The cashing of cheques made out in marks or franks (payable in English money) was necessarily governed by the current exchange observed by the particular bankers on whom the cheque happened to be drawn and not by Messrs Cook and Son.

A WELCOME BUSINESS ANNOUNCEMENT.

We learn that Messrs H. Maxwell and Co., the well-known makers of spurs, whips and boots, of 8, Dover street, Piccadilly, have reopened their Paris branch at 26, rue Macheuf. The enterprise will no doubt prove to be a great convenience to officers visiting Paris.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

JIMMY WILDE AGAIN.

To Meet Kid Taylor at the Stadium.

Jimmy Wilde has arranged a match, to take place at the Holborn Stadium within the next fortnight, against Kid Taylor the bantam featherweight champion of Western Canada.

"THE CHEQUERS" FINE RECORD.

ARMENTIERES TO COLOGNE.

After a successful career, extending over nearly four years, "The Chequers" (Eastern Division) Concert Party, has at last been broken up owing to the insistent demands of "Mobbles" upon their personnel.

Although they suffered a severe blow a few months ago in the loss of Corpl. Argent Brierly (artist and artiste) the well-known Scots laughter-monger, they nevertheless managed to carry on successfully, producing, as a last effort, "Ali Baba" at the Deutsches Theater, Cologne, with huge éclat. The show was voted by all to be one of the best ever staged by a Divisional Concert party.

But now, with the departure of "Cissie" and others, they have had, at last, to put up the shutters, and to retire into obscurity.

It is whispred, however, that the stoppage is only temporary. Both Capt. Thomas and Jack Streets remain with us, and it is rumoured that the former is gathering about him fresh talent with the idea of forming a new party, which will include some real, live girls and not the camouflaged article. — Ubique.

THE YOUNG IDEA.

53rd MANCHESTERS' SETTLING DOWN.

The simple, straightforward story of what is passing in the mind of the young soldier whose acquaintance with Rhineland extends only over a few days makes interesting reading. The following, written by a Lance-Corporal in the new army, has been submitted to us for insertion:

We were the last Battalion to march past the King in Hyde Park on March 1st, and were very interested to read in the evening papers afterwards about the smartness of the "Young Guards" and all that sort of thing. However, although we could not help feeling a bit elated with ourselves on that day, we know full well that we still have lots to learn. Still we are very glad to be out here and to be in a Manchester Brigade and to feel that we belong to a Lancashire Division. Nearly all of us come from Lancashire, from places like Bury, Oldham, Bolton and of course from Manchester, and it seems quite home-like being surrounded by chaps who are Lancashire lads. We are proud of "good old Lancashire" and are going to do our very best to be a credit to the Lancashire Division.

A Challenge to All.

Menden is a jolly little place in many ways, and we get lots of fun going to Siegburg and Bonn and now and again getting as far as Cologne. We have a football team that has very rarely been beaten, although it is mostly composed of boys, and we have won all the matches played in Germany. If there are any other teams that want to have a go at us, they have only to write to our Sports Officer and fix it up, and we can promise them a really good game.

Last night, we had a Battalion concert, which was a great success in every way. Lieut. Roose deserves every credit for arranging such a good programme. The "Jazz Band" was a great feature, and the T. T.s performed excellently. In addition we were helped by some of our R. A. M. C. friends from across the river, and all their items were very much appreciated. Lt. C. L. Smith rendered several violin solos in very good style, and P. Foster made a most efficient accompanist.

Colonel L. C. Bolton, who has had command of the Battalion since its formation, left for England to our deep regret, on the 2nd inst. We are very pleased, however, to welcome Lt. Col. W. H. Traill, C. M. G., D. S. O., as our new Commanding Officer.

Lance Corporal.

A SHORT CUT TO 'DEMOB.'

Apropos the "release of conchies". An interesting case occurred in a well-known service Battalion. Just before Messines 245648 Pte J. Snooke came up with rations. He had an avowed distaste of soldiering and conscientiously objected to the line where he was compelled to associate with men of lower moral status, who killed (and what was far more important) were frequently killed in the pursuance of their primitive ideals.

He did not allow his faculty of imagination to degenerate into a day dream or reverie, but used it as an energising incentive. After several unsuccessful but clever impersonations of a lunatic, he carefully acquired a complaint which made him temporarily hors de combat. A few months later he wrote to the Colonel expressing great sorrow at leaving the regiment so precipitately and at being unable to apologise in person. He was discharged.

WITH THE MOVIES.

CHARLIE CHAPLIN BY THE EDGE OF THE BRINY.

No I Army Cinema —

Vast crowds congregated daily last week to witness the remarkable educational film entitled "Ghosts", which was presented at the No. I Army Cinema, 32 Komödienstrasse. Too much publicity can hardly be given to a picture exhibiting the dangers of the dreaded Venereal disease and it is gratifyng therefore to learn that many thousands of British Tommies on the Rhine took advantage of this opportunity to witness an example of this salutary propaganda. During the ensuing week there will be a decided change of theme, the new films being entitled respectively, "Patsey" a delightful Fox Drama, in which Jane Caprice figures prominently; "Charlie Chaplin by the Sea", wherein the inimitable comedian cuts some characteristically funny, not to mention romantic capers by the edge of the briny, and "Red Circle" (episodes 6 and 7).

The Agrippina Theatre.

At the number 2 Army Cinema in the Breite Strasse four films will be exhibited each afternoon at 3, and every evening at 6. "The Moral Law" is a very fine Drama in five parts, while a two-part comedy Drama is entitled "Law in Order". In a similar vein of humour, and perhaps even more diverting, is a pure comedy entitled "Done In Oil." Episode 6 of the "Red Circle" completes what ought to prove a programme as varied as it is enjoyable.

The Germania Theatre.

Devotees of "Movies" are pleasurably acquainted with the charming personality of Bessie Barrascale who features in a new drama entitled "Wooden Shoes", to be thrown upon the screen at the Germania Theatre, in the Hohe Strasse, during the ensuing week. In comical vein there are two diverting films, namely "A Furnished Room" — a two-part comedy, the very name of which suggests ample possibilities, and "Two of a Kind," which is equally promising. The 5th episode of "The Red Circle" is also on the programme of the Germania Theatre.

HEAVY ADMIRALTY BUSINESS.

The business of the Probate, Divorce, and Admiralty Division, which in normal conditions is composed only of two courts, will to day be conducted in no fewer than five courts, says the Daily Telegraph of yesterday. As with the late President (Sir Samuel Evans), his successor, Lord Sterndale, devotes the best part of his time to price work. For close upon a year two courts have been dealing almost constantly with Admiralty civil causes, the one presided over by Mr. Justice Hill, the second judge of the division, and the other by Mr. Justice Roche or another King's Bench judge. To day Mr. Justice Sankey, in yet another court, will be adjudicating in an Admiralty suit, while probate and divorce causes will be heard by Mr. Justice Coleridge, who has been taking this branch of the division work for some time.

It is understood that the President is again arranging for two Admiralty courts, in addition to the Prize Court, for next term.

THE JAZZ MANIAC.

BY JUVENIS.

The Public Press has been inundated with articles on this subject of controversy. The religious world thunders out dogmatic condemnations of the immorality of "jazzing", while the more frivolous enter the fray, with equal heat, on its behalf.

Few, however, have had the pleasure of meeting a real Jazz enthusiast: few, indeed, having met him, wish to do so again. As a psychological specimen he is unique, and certainly the curators of our big museums should endeavour to obtain the best of the species for the sake of posterity.

Jazzing seems to have a peculiar effect on the minds of its adherents. It is like the terrible disease, dipsomania, as it is likely to break out unexpectedly at any moment. The Jazz maniac, in the Army, could well be imagined practising the latest Jazz steps at the psychological moment when the Commanding Officer was about to sentence him to Field Punishment No. 2 at Battalion Orderly Room. An orderly sergeant in the bonds of the American Demon would attempt to demonstrate the graceful inclined posture of his art to the R.S.M. while detail was being given. The Jazz maniac has little sense of propriety; for he absurdly imagines that everyone else's tastes will correspond with his own.

Jazzing makes a man egotistical. Though not an expert in psychology, I should like to discover the subtle influence underlying this apparently harmless pastime. One can almost detect in it the spirit of gay Chicago; it certainly has a powerful influence over those sheep-like followers of pleasure who allow themselves to be drawn within its foils.

It would be an interesting experiment for the Army authorities to form a battalion of Jazzists. Some leading American footlight dancer might be induced to accept the Lieutenant-Colonelcy, and volunteers could be taken for training. What a heterogeneous collection of human specimens would be on Battalion Parade, for example, a Jazz Band would, of course, play the men on parade, the latter coming on in the correct Yankee terpsichorean style.

The true Jazzist maniac, however, is undaunted in the pursuit of his vocation by difficulties of any kind. He will tramp for miles to attend some local dance in a rural country town, in order to teach the rustic maiden the last word in physical contortion. His first question when meeting any fresh person is "Do you Jazz?" In fact his whole mental horizon is bounded by thoughts of that wild, uncivilised mode of dancing.

The Jazz maniac, however will not last long; its worshippers, for the most part, are people who constantly seek the latest craze. The mania is un-English, and will die a natural death as soon as the English Press tires of discussing its merits and de-merits. Thus will pass out of existence the Jazz-maniac.

FOOTBALLERS FOR RETENTION.

The Football Association has announced that professional players may be registered, and that a club may give notice of its desire to retain players under Rule 30 during the month of March 1919, as well as during the month of April; but such legislation will not interfere with the player's present privilege of playing with another club during the month of May, 1919.

The programme for the National Sporting Club on May 1 next in aid of St. Dunstan's has been completed by Mr. Frank Collis Among the contests will be: Seaman Hall (Chatham) C.P.O. Dick Beland; Pte. J. Harris (Suffolk L.I.) v. Fred Archer, and Jim Burgess (Lambeth) v. J. Cannon (Notting-hill). The other part of the programme will consist of three open competitions, open to amateurs.

WHY THEY STRIKE!

A strike leader of the Ruhr district was interviewed by our Press representative the other day.

"Why do you strike?" Le asked.

"We want to be loved!' Was his reply.

"But how?" exclaimed the representative.

"Well, during the war we were told the Germans were hated in the world because they had worked too much."

"Darky" Stevens, the battery cook was never at a loss for an answer.

Recently the orderly officer and sergeant visited the cook-house. The O.O. ordered the lid of a boiler to be lifted. Seeing bubbles around the edges, although the water was not boiling in the centre, he tried to catch "Darky" napping. "Why is the water boiling round the edges and not in the centre" he asked. "Potatoes for the Guard round the edge, Sir, they have their dinner fifteen minutes before the others" was the reply.

NATIONALISATION OF RAILWAYS.

VIEWS OF SIR HERBERT WALKER.

Sir Herbert Walker, chairman of the Railway Executive Commitee, in responding to a toast at an Executive Committee dinner at the Eccentric Club, said that a great deal had been heard about the nationalisation of the railways. There were two interpretations to be put upon the word nationalisation. One would mean that the Government were going to take over the railways, and that the whole of the employees would become Government servants. Personally he, Sir Herbert, did not think that was going to happen. He might be wrong, but that was his opinion. Another, and better, solution was some co-ordination under Government guarantee by which the railways would be run on commercial lines for the benefit of the State and the trade of the country. The first thing was to eliminate competition when it was wasteful. Therefore he thought that some form of unification was essential. Also, in the interest of the railways generally, they must be made self-supporting. Traders, he believed, could afford to pay more. They were selling their goods at enhanced rates, but they were being carried at pre-war rates. So far as the public generally were concerned, he believed that a system of unification would give a better service than they had ever had before.

THE SILENT TOILERS.

"Lest We Forget!"

During the war one heard very little good of the R.A.M.C. When thinking of the men of this corps, one is reminded of the painting "The Silent Toilers". Others are better fitted to write than I, but no one has taken the opportunity of doing so.

It was in early '15 at Ypres that I first met these men. One learns that the medical services in those days were not so complete as they are at the present day.

On returning to another Division, I noticed many improvements in the medical arrangements. Again I was wounded in a big push, and they who have been wounded know something of the fine work executed, silently and persistently under fire, by a Corps one hears seldom mentioned. Last March I gave myself up for lost, being wounded in the leg and lying prostrate on the ground, with the knowledge that the German hordes were steadily advancing — but the ambulance men were retiring with our infantry. I was taken, as it were, from the feet of the Huns to a solitary car awaiting such poor creatures as myself.

So before the majority of us return to civil life, I would ask that the work done for us, will not be forgotten. We have frequently been mentioned, also our brothers-in-arms of other branches of the Service, and to forget the men who have taken us from the living hell, would be an act unbecoming an Englishman — I should say, "any British soldier."

Frequently I have heard our men say, "it is better to go over the top and get it over, than to go backward and forward like the men of the Fld. Amb. Of course, it was their work, just as it was our work to go "over the top," but we have been recognised. They have not!

EXTRACTS FROM THE LETTERS OF A PRODIGAL SON.

ON "PUBS" AND BILLETS.

Being quartered in a village about 20 kilometres west of the Rhine we find life rather quiet. However, there is much to interest the observant even in such a one-horsed village as this happens to be. I use the prefix — one-horsed — in its true sense as there is only one horse here. All the wagons, ploughs, harrows, groundcombs, etc., in use around here are drawn by oxen. These beasts are large, yellow, and generally in good condition; but the bored look they wear on their mournful faces is enough to drive a man to drink.

Speaking of drink reminds me that we have one pub in the village. The general name for a village pub in Rhineland seems to be Gastwirtschaft therefore it became easy for us to translate that cumbrous name to "Gasworks".

In our "Gasworks" we can get a very weak beer for 20 pfennigs a small glass. No one of my acquaintance has ever been known to feel capable of painting the village red, even after imbibing gallons of this imitation beer. Indeed, as a chum of mine said, "a fellow would be drowned in it and then not be drunk". I surmise that would be an accomplished fact after going under for the third time.

The alcoholic enthusiast, however, can obtain a drink which sells readily under the name of "Rhine Wine". It is a sour drink with enough acidity in one bottle to corrode an armoured car. What it does to a man's inside I do not know, but a couple of bottles have been known to clear a choked drain-pipe in which a dog had crawled to die. The dog is still dead.

However (sometimes), every Monday a few dozen bottles of Bass trickle through to our battery canteen, and it is a pathetic, but instructive sight, to see the serried rows of empties on Tuesday mornings. Yea, as Kipperling has not sung,

And East is East
While West is West
And Bass is Bass each time
So, when I'm creas't
Inflate my chest
With Bass, — sweet Bass, — sublime!
Gorblime!

While speaking of billets I may mention that we are very comfortable. The folk here seem to want us to feel at home. In my particular billet lives a small family and a very large dog. The youngest member of the family, a small boy aged three years, has named me "Vater".

We parade every morning in the main street of the village and often I find the little wet-nosed boy clinging around my legs just as we are about to march off. My section Officer generally murmurs a few words about the orders regarding fraternizing, but he hurt my feelings this morning when he told me to send little Wilhelm to Doctor Barnado's Home.

I would fain write more but the little Wilhelm afore-mentioned has just clattered into my zimmer and now, with his little nose, seems desirous of placing a wet imitation wound stripe upon my cuff.

I know of a "cuff" I would like to give him, but, it is better for a man to hang a tombstone around his neck and cast himself to the Bolsheviks than for him to incur the raging of a frau's tongue. Yea, verily, I knoweth!

OPERA SEATS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,

Having read in the Cologne Post of Tuesday a letter by Major G.L.S, relating to affairs at the Cologne Opera House, I would like to draw your attention to the treatment afforded to the "other ranks", when applying for tickets at the military booking-office in the said Opera House.

It would seem that the seating granted the military in the Opera House, is reserved for officers only; for when one or more of the "other ranks" try to book seats, they are turned away with rudeness, and with the remark, "I have no tickets for you". Yet, when officers who come immediately afterwards obtain tickets, one realises that something requires a remedy.

The soldier serving in the booking office, was distinctly told that the price of the tickets was no object, therefore that could not possibly be the reason for refusal. The undersigned, writing on behalf of numerous rankers, would like to know why this should be, as he and others have been turned away with the utmost rudeness on several occasions.

There are many lovers of Grand Opera among the "other ranks" in the army, and they would like something done to prevent the Opera House in Cologne (a public place of amusement) being reserved exclusively for Officers.

If the editor requires corroboration of the above, he can obtain it from hundreds of rankers.

DANCING CLASSES.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,

Seeing a small paragraph in the fourth issue of The Cologne Post referring to a dancing class which had just been started by the 52nd K.R.R.C. I would like to draw attention to the fact that if a similar one were started in Cologne I am sure it would be a huge success.

HE PRICE OF MONEY.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir — On coming out of the offices of Messrs. Thos. Cook & Son yesterday, I saw the "Cologne Post" being sold by a woman near by and I promptly bought a copy. Glancing through it my eye caught the announcement of the above-mentioned firm to the effect that the offices were open for the convenience of the Army of Occupation. True! but they do not add at what cost.

I had previously been to the Field Cashier, in search of a rather large amount of English money; with that captivating smile of his the Field Cashier told me Messrs. Thos. Cook & Son would fix me up with a cheque on London at Army rates of exchange.

I had French notes for the exchange — the Field Cashier told me the rate was 26.10 to the £. Messrs. Cook & Son wanted to charge me 27.80, on the whole amount I was losing about 40 Francs.

I grant banker's discount should be given, but they seem to want to make up for what they are losing on the touring side of their business!

Messrs. Thos. Cook & Son never have been a philanthropic institution, but I would hardly call the above "business."

R.F.S.

PUBLIC OPINION.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Wahn, April 1919.

Sir. — I was rather impressed by a paragraph in the first edition of the "Post" under the heading "Why we are here."

This is the part I refer to. "Let us never dishonour the memories of their presence by forgetting, even for a moment, the glorious things they accomplished, or the fact that their achievements enabled us to see Peace."

Having had four years and three months' experience of war in France I have certainly had an insight, to the dangers there were.

Whilst on leave recently, I could not help noticing how, as a civihan one was always attented to at once and with this utmost courtesey, whilst a service men with the 14—15 ribbon was kept waiting and treated with contempt. There is no doubt that the public in general are once more adopting the old pre-war standard of snubbing these men.

As some people have bad memories, I certainly should like to see the papers point these little things out to them.

Several men who have returned here have spoken of exactly the same thing.

C.W.B.

THE ENGLISH GIRLS' PERSONALITY.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— I have just returned to Germany after having spent fourteen days leave in England; and the experiences of my first trip home for very many months have impressed me with a new, but firm conviction. The girls at home are not what they used to be; their bearing and personality generally have changed completely. Previously, I was under the impression that the stupid slang expressions that have developed during the war, were the exclusive property of the army, and, in common with many others, I had hoped that the many words and phrases (admittedly, sometimes expressive) which have forced their way into our language would gradually be "demobilised" simultaneously with the troops.

But I am convinced now that nothing of the kind is likely to happen. On the contrary, England at the present time is experiencing a boom in ridiculous slang expressions which ill-become the "modern" girls who are responsible for the craze. Heaven knows how many times I was referred to as "old bean" and "old thing" and I became bored almost to tears with the frequency with which I was told that something or other was "perfectly priceless." On one occasion I was actually called a "petlet"; and this by a maiden who, when I last met her, appealed to me as a reserved, demure, modest and altogether charming young lady. Her development in every respect was just as revolutionary as her speech. She had no time for any thing but the most extravagant of pleasures and, altogether, I was very pleased to keep well clear of her company.

But, try as I would, I could find no other type of girl to assist me to spend a pleasant holiday and I returned to Germany feeling very very disappointed at the great change for the worse which has overtaken the fair sex in England.

THE IDOL OF THE BATTALION.

BY JUVENIS.

I remember his arrival; I was "scrounging" parade that day. He walked through the gates with that air of authority so beloved by warrant officers. His Sam Browne glistened, and bespoke hours of labour with innumerable tins of kiwi applied by previous batmen. Tall in stature, he was of the regulation Army pattern for W. O.'s Class I., laid down in Paragraph XY 73,913 of King's regulations, as he was some-what corpulent abdominally.

Although only a humble signaller, I vaguely wondered whether my duty was to go and introduce myself to the great man, or to remain discreetly hidden. I resolved on the latter, as his face, reddened with years of service and long acquaintance with Sergeant's Mess beer, had something about it which scarcely invited intimacy. Accordingly, I retired to my hut to discuss the new arrival with my boon companions and fellow "scroungers."

The next morning, however, we realized that something had happened when we appeared on Battalion Parade. My attention was suddenly arrested by a loud booming noise which reminded me considerably of the Air Raid Hooter, or the foghorns on the Goodwin Sands. It was only my new acquaintance of the previous day calling the Battalion to attention.

Our Signalling Officer was not accustomed to appear on morning parade, as it interfered with his regular hours of rising. Consequently, we frequently used to evade inspection, a custom which certainly saved us much mental anxiety, although perhaps it was not good for our discipline. This particular morning, just as our worthy "Ack I" corporal was about to march us to a discreet distance from the Parade Ground, the new R.S.M. cast his eagle eyes in our direction. He deported himself with haste toward us, and intimated that it would afford him great pleasure to inspect us. I shall never forget the amiable expression on his rotund face as he commenced the tour of our ranks. He started by genially remarking to our corporal that a notebook and pencil would be required, and forthwith ordered him to place his own name at the top of the list for not possessing a pencil. No. One of the front rank was also "pegged" for some discrepancy, and then began a veritable "Reign of terror." Man after man was ruthlessly sent to the guillotine, the corporal's notebook, with deadly monotony. I was number five of the front rank, and I was already feeling grievously doubtful as to the condition of my rifle, while my equipment, I knew, had long lost acquaintance with cleaning tackle. My turn came all too soon. I never realized what X-rays were until I felt the gorgon eyes of the R.S.M. upon me. They penetrated every portion of my anatomy. I will not repeat all that the worthy man said to me. Suffice it to say that the same day I was brought up for Company Office on fifteen charges, for which I did penance in the form of many days of wearying "jankers."

Some people improve on acquaintance, but I realized in this case the full truth of Goldsmith's words:

Full well the boding tremblers learned to trace
Each day's disasters on his morning face.

Life became a gruesome nightmare to us; we dreaded Battalion Parade to such an extent that the M.O. must have wondered why epidemics of "pains in the head" always originated in the Signallers. Even when we reported sick, the R.S.M. continued to display a keen interest in our welfare. He was always most insistent on placing in close confinement all those whom his wide medical experience classed as "swinging the lead." I have heard our corporal speak frequently with disgust and heat, on the same interest he showed in the clothing of the N.C.O's., especially as to the particular kind of buttons they wore.

Rumours about the great man were rife in the Battalion. His batman was constantly besieged with eager inquirers. One rumour, which I am inclined to discredit, got about that an inquisitive lance-corporal, peeping through the keyhole, had seen the R.S.M. in his private sanctum, kneeling in an attitude of prayerful adoration before a copy of A.F.B. 252, enshrined in a cheap gilt frame purchased from "Woolworths Sixpenny Bazaar."

I regret that few in our Battalion really appreciated his disinterested attentions. We all held him in solemn reverance as the Idol of the Battalion, though ours was a service of fear rather than of love. For myself, I would not dare to pass an opinion on so great a personality, but I will conclude by quoting what I heard A very competent A. IV remark some time ago:

Some say, "Good old Reggie."
But I say," — — —."

RELIEF FORCE FOR ARCHANGEL STARTING TOMORROW

BOLSHEVIST ARMY DESERTS

POLICE MURDERED IN IRELAND

HUNGARY DECLARES WAR ON SERBIA

BOLSHEVIST ATTACKS AT ARCHANGEL.

WHO'S FOR RUSSIA?

The latest British communiqué from Archangel brings events down to the morning of the 5th. April.

After a night bombardment the enemy attacked our positions near Shredmerhenga. The attack was repulsed with heavy loss, the dead lying thick round the blockhouses. A battalion commander and his adjutant, with a hundred men of his Bolshevist regiment, remained prisoners in our hands, together with five machine guns. Our casualties were nil.

In consequence of their recent disastrous failures the Bolshevists have not as yet resumed their attacks at Archangel.

According to latest information respecting the situation of the Allied troops in Northern Russia, a detachment of the Koltchaks Siberian force has succeeded in getting into touch with a detachment of Allied forces in the neighbourhood of Archangel. The position of our troops is anxious, but fortunately the Allies have command of the Murman railways and consequently of the western ports of the White Sea, so that there ought to be no insuperable difficulty about getting up relief by about the middle of May.

Meanwhile the Bolshevist forces have suffered reverses and the prospects of the existing Allied force in that region, of being able to hold out pending the arrival of relief, have proportionately improved. The Bolshevists have some armed steamers for use when the Northern Dvina becomes free from ice, but confidence is felt that our Naval forces in that part of the world will be adequate to deal with any menace of that kind. The Bolshevists have only two battleships which they can put to sea, with a few light cruisers and submarines. It is questionable though, whether the Bolshevist crews will consent to sail.

FALL IN. AT THE DOUBLE!

The appeal for volunteers for the British Relief force for Archangel is meeting with such gratifying response that already there is a large waiting list. Officers and men in the Army of the Rhine are offering themselves in large numbers.

Many Canadians have volunteered. So general is the desire of tried soldiers who re-enlisted for overseas garrison duty to go at once to the assistance of their comrades in Russia, that the War Office hopes to be able to despatch the first force on Wednesday next.

The authorities are anxious that reinforcements shall follow without delay and a special appeal will be issued immediately calling for the co-operation of discharging and demobilised soldiers.

Now then, young soldiers of the Army of the Rhine, Jump to it!

ON THE MURMAN SIDE.

The British communiqué from Murmansk says that reinforcements consisting of Infantry and Marines are being moved down the line in anticipation of suppressing a mutinous tendency among those Finnish troops forming part of General Maynard's Force, whose object, it is suspected, it to effect a junction with the Bolshevists.

PADEREWSKI IN PARIS.

M. Paderewski, the Polish Premier, reached Paris yesterday from Warsaw. He is Poland's first delegate to the Peace Conference, at which the most important claim of Poland will be for the possession of Dantzig.

SPA NEGOTIATIONS.

Almost the entire press of Germany is satisfied with the result of the Spa negotiations

"We hope that the spirit of this settlement will manifest itself with the same efficacy at the final conclusion of the Peace" is one extract from a Socialist paper.

ANOTHER SERBIAN CAMPAIGN.

A telegram from Vienna via Fiume says the Hungarian Bolshevists have declared war against Serbia. Martial law has been proclaimed in Serbia, which country is demanding help from the Allies.

HOOVER HUSTLING FOR WAGONS.

Mr. Hoover, who is regulating the distribution of food to enemy countries, has requested the German-Austrian Government to place all the rolling stock at the disposal of the Allies in order to facilitate the distribution of food supplies. He says that all states in Austria, including the regions occupied by the Italians on the Adriatic, must comply with this request.

OUTRAGEOUS RESCUE IN IRELAND.

POLICE MURDERED.

There was a sensational occurrence in Limerick on Sunday, when one policeman was murdered and several others wounded by a gang of men who snatched a man from custody and got clear away.

In March last a man named Robert Byrne was sentenced by Courtmartial to one year's hard labour. He eventually started a hunger strike and as a result of his condition he was removed to Limerick workhouse hospital, where he was placed in the custody of a party of constabulary.

Visitors are freely allowed to see their friends on Sunday afternons and yesterday a party of twenty to thirty youths, ostensibly there as ordinary visitors, suddenly started pre-concerted action. They rushed the ward where Byrne was confined, and overpowered the warder and five constables who were guarding him.

In the struggle shots were fired. One constable was fatally wounded, another dangerously, three others and the warder slightly.

The assailants then forced the six custodians into another room and roped them together. Then they decamped, taking Byrne with them. The whole affair lasted only three minutes.

AALAND FORTS FIRST TO GO.

A strong detachment of engineers has left Sweden to demolish the fortifications on the Aaland islands. A large crowd cheered the departing troops with great enthusiasm.

The Aaland islands are situate at the entrance to the Gulf of Bothnia in the Baltic sea, between Sweden and Finland. During the war they were the scene of much naval activity.

BAVARIAN SOVIET REPUBLIC.

Reuter states that when the Spartacists proclaimed a Soviet Republic at Munich, Premier Hoffmann, who was in Berlin, hurried back immediately but arrived too late. Instead of supporting him the Government troops maintained a neutral attitude, even declaring their sympathies to be on the side of the proletariat.

Peasants in different parts of the country have decided to march on Munich.

From another source comes the information that the Bavarian Government is contemplating the transfer of the seat of Government and National Assembly to Bamberg.

Ominous signs are indicative of the greatest unrest throughout Bavaria and great trouble is anticipated to morrow when the Diet is due to meet. The local Soviet has refused to provide protection.

Active rapprochement with the Russian and Hungarian Soviets has begun. Ebert, Scheidemann, Noske, Erzberger have been repudiated. A proclamation declaring the 1th April as a "national" festival ends with the words "Long live New Bavaria, long live the Soviet Republic, long live the world revolution."

BOLSHEVIST ARMY DESERTS.

At Kovel, East Ukraine, a Soviet Army has gone over to the Ukrainians. Already thirty-five guns have been handed over and the rank and file are surrendering in datachments several hundred strong.

BRISBANE BOLSHEVISTS.

Returned soldiers held a meeting in the Exhibition grounds at Brisbane, and two thousand enrolled themselves as an Army to fight disloyalty.

At Launceston, Tasmanian ex-soldiers, objecting to speakers' expressed sentiments, stopped a "one big union" meeting.

At Richmond (Victoria) soldiers broke up a Socialist meeting at which Bolshevism was being preached. The editor of a Socialist paper in the same state was sentenced to six months imprisonment for publishing blasphemous articles advocating Bolshevism.

GERMAN STRIKE NEWS.

In the Ruhr coalfields two hundred and twenty-one mines are idle, the number of strikers being three hundred and seventy-two thousend.

At Krupp's works some thousands of professedly Christian employés were prevented from working by the Spartacists.

A General strike obtains at Dusseldorf. The town is without light, and all traffic has ceased. Some fighting has taken place between Spartacists and Government troops.

In the Saar district General Andlauer has succeeded in preventing any extensive disturbance. All meetings are proscribed and assemblies of more than four persons will be dispersed by armed force. Traffic is stopped at 8 p.m., expcet at Saarbrücken, Saarlouis, and Neunkirchen.

STUTTGART STRIKE ENDED.

It is officially announced from Stuttgart that the Spartacist strike has collapsed. Most of the strike leaders have been arrested, and the situation is well under control by the Government.

MARRIAGE OF THE UNFIT.

EUGENIC BREACH OF PROMISE.

The jury disagreed in an important and interesting case on Saturday when Miss Mabel Beatrice Porter, of Barnes, sued Mr. Gerald Osmond Barnard of Machen, Mon., for alleged breach of promise of marriage.

The defence was that Mr. Barnard discovered that Miss Porter was suffering from tuberculosis and was therefore not fit to marry.

Dr. Bertram C. Stevens, for the defence, stated that although after a stay in a sanatorium Miss Porter showed no sign of active disease he would not have recommended her to marry without going through a probationary period of three years, with clean bills of health all the time.

"If we want an A I. race" he added "the marriage of consumptives must cease."

Defendant first admitted and then retracted an admission elicited by counsel that he had acted shabbily and dishonestly in causing a certain letter to be written to Miss Porter by his solicitors.

QUESTIONS IN THE COMMONS.

BOUNTIES FOR RETENTION.

Mr. Forster says in an written answer that men entitled to demobilisation who are definitely retained for demobilisation or administrative services or for garrison duty abroad will receive the bonus as from the 1st February. Men not so retained, but who are merely awaiting demobilisation, will receive the bonus as from the 1st May, if not released before that date.

TUBERCULOSIS CASUALTIES.

Major Astor, in reply to Sir Watson Cheyne stated that the number of men discharged from the army on account of pulmonary tuberculosis is estimated at twenty-five thousand. The number undergoing residential treatment in sanatoria on the 1st March was 3,150 and there are 470 on the waiting list.

DRAFTS FOR EGYPT.

Large drafts are under orders for Egypt and Constantinople, states Mr. Winston Churchill. They will leave in April and further drafts will be sent in May, June and July, thus relieving an equal number of troops who have served for long periods in those theatres of war.

No drafts can be sent to Mesopotamia or India until August, the earliest month when climatic conditions will be favourable.

OFFICERS KUT EXPENSES.

Officer prisoners at Kut had to incur large expenses in order to keep alive. Mr. Wolmer asked if these would be refunded.

Mr. Forster stated that arrangements were made with the Dutch Minister for issues from the British relief fund to cover the extra expenses of officers in captivity in Turkey. Where officers can show that their necessary expenses exceeded the amount of such grants, in addition to the advance made by the Turkisn Government, any claim showing details will be favourably considered.

PRISONERS ON BALTIC ISLANDS.

Mr. Joynson Hicks elicited the information that no British prisoners had been found on those German Baltic islands which had been searched. Inquiries are being made as to other islands.

FLYING THE ANDES.

On a Bristol aeroplane presented to the Chilian by the British Government, Lieut. Cortiner has flown over the Andes, his maximum altitude being nineteen thousand six hundred feet.

ENEMY OWNED SHARES.

The Government at Montreal is taking legal proceedings for the appointment of an official custodian in connection with Canadian Pacific Railway shares, to the value of twenty-two million dollars, owned by enemy subjects.

RUNNING THE BLOCKADE.

A German schooner captured off the Danish coast by a French torpedo boat was attempting to run the blockade. She was taken as a prize into Leith.

DUTCH SHIPS TO BE RETURNED.

Negotiations are in progress for an early return to Holland of eighty-seven Dutch ships, requisitioned by the United States during March last year. Delivery will probably be made by the 1st May.

These ships carry an aggregate of five hundred and thirty three thousand tons deadweight, and the Dutch owners received four millions dollars monthly.

Brigadier General MacLean played the bagpipes on the stage of the Alhambra on Sunday evening, at a concert given in aid of the Scottish Women's Hospital.

Serious damage was done by fire at the Royal Arsenal Bakery, Brixton-Hill, S. London, on Sunday. During the war this bakery turned out fifty thousand loaves daily aud is even now making bread for the Army of the Rhine and elsewhere.

ARMY CHAPLAIN RELEASED FROM THE TOWER.

The Rev. Everard Digby, the well known sporting cleric and army chaplain, was released from the Tower of London on Friday night. He returned immediately to his vicarage.

Although he had been detained in the Tower by the military authorities no charge has yet been made against him.

Numerous friends called to congratulate him yesterday, but he declined to make any statement except that his solicitor is considering what shall be done in the matter.

To a Sunday Times representative he said "the matter is not yet ended. It will have to be forced to an issue but in view of the fact that I am cleared absolutely, you must excuse me from making any statement at present. I shall probably have a good deal to say later on. Meanwhile the matter is in the hands of my solicitor and it would not be right for me to discuss all that happened'. The Sunday Times adds: "The Rev. Digby's popularity with his parishioners is testified by the numerous congratulations he has received since his return home.

"His case, owing to its widesperad publicity, has aroused general interest, and attention is now being directed from its purely personal aspects to that of the methods of the authorities.

"The questions raised involves one of principle and public interest. The general inference, which may not of course be warranted, owing to the peculiar circumstances of the particular case, is that any decision arrived at should be made with less delay. Point to this contention is lent by the fact that two other prisoners have been detained in the Tower day after day and kept in a state of uncertainty as to how the allegations against them are going to be dealt with by the authorities."

SIR DOUGLAS HAIG HOME.

A large crowd gathered at Victoria on Saturday afternoon when Sir Douglas Haig reached home. His reception was quite informal. He was looking in the best of health and spirits. Lady Haig accompanied him and hearty cheers greeted his departure. He was received by Sir Travers Clarke, Quarter Master General, and Sir John Furse, Master of Ordnance.

LONDON GIRL WINS.

The first prize of five hundred pounds in the Daily Mirror Beauty Competition was won by Miss Miriam J. Sabbage, of Norwood. She is only 21 years of age, stands five feet seven inches, is a good swimmer and possesses a fine soprano voice.

During the war she has been a V.A.D. nurse and a bank-clerk.

FLIGHTY HUSBAND.

The wife of a demobilised officer of the Royal Air Force obtained a separation order at Tottenham police court yesterday.

STEAMER MINED.

The Spanish steamer Calvo, bound for Odessa with Russians expelled from Spain, struck a mine at the entrance to the Dardanelles and sank. No information is to hand regarding the fate of those on board.

POLICE COMMISSIONER ON LONDON MORALITY.

COLONIAL INNOCENTS ABROAD.

General Sir C. F. Nevil Macready, who relinguished the post of Adjutant General to the Forces to become Commissioner of the Metropolitan Police, in an interview given to a representative of the National News, expressed some very forcible and timely opinions.

"The attacks on the present day morality of London" he said "are unwarrantable. Police statistics show that there is much less immorality of an indictable kind than was the case a few years ago. Certainly the streets of London, even those with the worst reputation, are far less objectionable than they were in the past."

"This is a very encouraging fact, especially when existing conditions are taken into consideration. After the high tension of the past four years a sharp reaction would have been excusable but as a matter of fact the reverse is the case. Since the armistice the conditions of our streets have been getting better every day.

"Much anxiety has been expressed on behalf of the Colonial and American soldiers in London. They are described as innocents who are an easy prey for ravening wolves of both sexes.

"My experience has convinced me that these young men are very well able to look after themselves and I am sure that they run no greater risk than do our own men. We must face the whole question of the morality of the streets. As a national problem of the first magnitude it must not be left for puritanical cranks and fanatical clergymen to try their hands upon. We have already seen some results of their ill-directed efforts. Take for example the closing of such places as the lounges and promenades of the music halls. What good has this done? None whatever."

MINERS BALLOT.

Balloting is taking place in most mining centres this week on the question of the acceptance of the Sankey Report. Messages from most districts indicate that the polls will reveal a considerable majority in favour.

After considering the official reports of the Miners Federation conferences, the executive committee of the National Union of Cokemen and By-product Workers decided to recommend all the members of the Union to vote in favour of acceptance of the Sankey Report and of the Government's offer.

They also expressed the opinion that the nationalisation of mines and kindred ndustries is the best system in the interests of the whole nation.

NO OLD SOLDIERS NEED APPLY.

On Saturday morning hundreds of colliers in the Swansea valley ceased work owing to the introduction of demobilised soldiers in one of the pits.

EMBARGO ON BEER.

Dockers at Liverpool and Birkenhead have refused to handle beer and spirits for export, on the ground that supplies are required at home. Owing to their action sixteen Liverpool shipping companies' vessels sailed without any such cargo and many firms of bottlers have been obliged to dismiss employes.

ASQUITH'S LETTERS OPENED.

"Wayfarer," writing in the Nation says that while Mr. Asquith was abroad he suffered the gross indignity of having his letters opened and examined by the censor, and that a remonstrance adressed to the War Office produced neither remedy nor apology.

WHEN LONDON WAS BOMBED

DAMAGE TO HOSPITALS.

Official reports of the London Fire Brigade show that twenty London hospitals suffered damage in the various aerial bombardments of London.

The worst damage was done in September 1917, when Charing Cross Hospital was hit. Two men and one woman were killed and twenty persons seriously injured.

POOR LAW GUARDIANS' ELECTIONS.

LABOUR GAINS MANY SEATS.

Numerous seats on Boards of Guardians were gained throughout the country by Labour representatives.

In the London borough of Bermondsey Labour contested all twenty-six seats and won six of them. The elected included a former domestic servant who is now an organiser of the National Federation of Women workers. A police constable who stood for St. Olave's Ward was defeated by the Rector.

Labour captured ten seats in Camberwell and fifteen out of twenty-four seats in Poplar.

Out of London they won thirteen out of nineteen at Enfield; twelve out of fifteen at Itchen, Southampton; four out of eleven contested seats at Walthamstow and eleven out of sixteen at Barrow.

PURELY ARTISTIC LANGUAGE OF MULE DRIVERS.

Brig.-General the Rev. Percy Devey, principal chaplain of the Army United board of Free churches, spoke at Whitefield's chapel yesterday afternoon. Addressing a general assembly of the London Brotherhood to welcome demobilised and discharged members, he referred to the wonderful vocabulary of the army. "Unless you have ever heard a mule transport driver you would never imagine the English language to be so rich. If only one could forget the awfulness of it, it becomes at once beautiful and purely artistic."

MISSIONARIES OF EMPIRE.

It is many years since Hill Burton made his delightful excursion into the by-paths of history and followed the foot-steps of The Scot Abroad. Readers who might have been daunted by Burton's best known work have revelled in his story of an "auld alliance," of the Scots Guards, of Dugald Dalgetty and men of his kind, of statesmen, soldiers, and artists who have lived in exile and carried high the banner of their country. But our children will read a greater and nobler history; for it will be the story of the British Soldier Abroad, and its greatest chapter may well be "The Soldier on the Rhine."

This glimpse into the future reveals a warning and an inspiration. It is in the power of the Army of the Rhine to create a new view of the British Empire. Why do we say a new view? Let us be frank with ourselves. Our Empire has not always been regarded, even by peoples in alliance with us, as a fair, righteous creation of noble, disinterested statesmanship. We have had our critics, shrewd, sharp, and at times bitter, who have seen in our Empire only an ugly, rapacious imperialism, a monument of plausible but spurious altruism, an artful, political idealism that has paid us well in materialistic reality. "Perfidious Albion" has been a by-word, and it has often been uttered to our amazed chagrin. We cannot burke this candid review of our imperial history; we must face it bravely and yet hopefully.

To us it is a cardinal truth that our Empire entered this sorrowful and tragic war in defence and pursuit of an ideal which has never been long absent from the vision of our ablest and most representative statesmen throughout the centuries that lie behind us. How can we prove that we have fought for an ideal? It argues a lively faith in governmental books of varied hues, if one believes that these can prove to unwilling peoples the integrity of our national faith. There is a more excellent way than that of Blue Books and His Majestys's Stationery Offices. In a word or two, it is this: Let us show the men and women of Germany, that we are living and daily practising the ideals that we boast.

Let us make good our talk of freedom for the oppressed, of kindly interest in the down-trodden, of strict and honourable respect for covenants, of abhorrence of all that is brutal, and degrading, and unholy. We pride ourselves, and we believe pride ourselves justly, that we are a country that has bred, and still breeds sportsmen, fair-minded and chivalrous. Let the Army of the Rhine "play the game;" let it "play the man," all day and every day. We have nothing to do with politics — that is reserved for more fortunate or unfortunate people — we have nothing to do even with policy in its technical sense. But we keep our watch on the Rhine to carry out the policy of our leaders, and by our carrying out of that policy we can give flesh and blood to what shall make for a better and nobler world.

There lies our responsibility, and it is only proper that The Cologne Post should put the matter thus early before its growing mass of readers. Much has been said of the correct attitude of the British soldier towards the people amongst whom it is his duty to sojourn. Why should there be difficulty in defining our attitude? We have our Scylla and Charybdis, and we must steer clear of these dread perils. We must make up our minds to avoid a forgetful, effusive, unreal fraternization. Tolerance is one of the finest virtues, but tolerance is often easiest to the man of easy principles. It does not make for lasting good that we should forget all the past in an avalanche of dubious friendliness. But we must just as strenuously avoid arrogant superiority and ill-natured regard for a nation in its throes. Vae victis is a cruel cry that shall never disgrace our traditions.

Thus have we our task. The army of the Rhine can lend new glory to our country; its soldiers are, and must be, missionaries of Empire.

CELEBRTIES IN KHAKI.

What might have happened to some past and present notabilities had they been in the British Army as Tommies.

Told with extreme delicacy by W. E.

PRIVATE PADEREWSKI.

The Battalion of the 9th Notshires were on Parade. They presented the usual monotonous and conglomerated mass of super-blancoed packs to the eye.

No. 10 Platoon, "B" Company, was being inspected by its officer. Each man, as he came within range of that piercing eye, felt horribly conscious of some button undone, some buckle uncleaned, or some hair that had grown on his chin during the night.

The Platoon-Sergeant fondled his little note-book and pencil in smug anticipation of A.F.'s B. 252 to come.

At the ninth man, the Officer halted; the Platoon Sergeant's pencil itched for action. The Officer began to recite, and the pencil left corresponding traces in the note-book.

"Puttees not crossed — must have uniformity. Take his name and number, Sergeant! button undone; equipment not polished."

Here the Officer removes the man's cap, and a wealth of brown hair blots out the sun.

"Shocking hair — take his name!"

"Name?" snapped the Sergeant.

"Paderewski, Ignace Jan" was the reply.

"Pader-whatski?"

"Paderewski, Ignace Jan."

"Great Scott — any relation to the ivory thumper!"

"I am the pianist." The reply was superbly lofty.

The Company Commander heard the case next day, and the Sergeant wondered why C.B. was not the culprit's lot. Had he heard the Pte. Paderewski at the Officer Mess the next evening he would have ceased to wonder.

The first movement in the act of "slope arms" did not appear to be at all interesting to this strange man; and wherever he gave the "present" with bayonet fixed, the platoon Sergeant was always conscious of a feeling of calm thankfulness that he had made his will some time before.

Of course he was possessed of certain peculiarities of his own.

One morning the platoon was standing rigidly to attention while the platoon Officer (himself of very tender years) was inspecting a very chic young lady passing outside the gates. Suddenly a voice shouted "I've got it, I've got it!"

This was of course, perfectly abnormal, and the Officer, who had been "swotting" up "King's Regulations" the previous night for at least four consecutive minutes, was very dubious as to the correct steps to be taken to quell so strange a disturbance. However, he transferred his attention from a pair of silken openwork stockings to an animated private, hopping about on the next fellow's toe in the most pleasant manner possible.

"Got what?" asked the officer, who observing that Pte. Paderewski was diving frantically into his left pocket with both hands, naturally surmised that "it" was an unpleasant nocturnal visitor that had been causing the unfortunate private much annoyance during the previous night.

"Why, the final bar in my pianoforte Symphony — Opus 34!" shrieked the delighted musician, who thereupon hauled out a note-book and proceeded to pencil therein complicated collections of dots and dashes.

What then transpired is not on record, but the Officer was observed to cast a regretful eye on a fleeting feminine figure, fast fading on the horizon.

Much speculation — not unmixed, it is feared with unfair judgement — was aroused when Pte. Paderewski appeared at the breakfast table with his left eye in a very abnormal condition — both as to size and colour.

His modest, and correct explanation of this phenomenon was that while engaged on the mental production of a Funeral March in C sharp Minor, he had so far forgotten mundane affairs as to walk inadvertently into an iron lamp-post. His head was bent in reverie at the time and therefore it was his left optic only that bore testimony to his harrowing experience.

He would allow his objection to those delightful instruments known generally as "mouth-organs" to develop into a mania.

On the occasion of a touching ballad (that well-known melody wherein such pathetic tribute is paid to the lady from Armentière) being performed with much gusto by one misguided youth, a bullet fired by Pte. Paderewski through the keyhole grazed the performer's left hand.

It was then thought advisable by the Adjutant — to whom a report of this affair had been rendered in triplicate by Paderewski's unfortunate Company Commander — to divert his energies into some channel wherein there would be less scope for mischief-making.

So Pte. Paderewski was ordered to report to the Sanitary Corporal. This particular corporal was a good tempered individual, but when he found his new apprentice making a fountain with a hose-pipe and putting the sound to music, he reported the matter in deep indignation to higher authorities.

There was some talk of keeping him in the cookhouse, but he sat one day in musical abstraction, gazing at the saucepan while the pudding put the fire out.

This matter was also reported to the Adjutant, and there ensued a long and earnest interview with the M.O.

Up to the time of going to press it has not been decided what to do with so impossible a person.

The M.O.'s barman declares that Pte. Paderewski is to appear before a Medical Board and be marked "Category E" on account of fictional varicose veins in both legs: while the Band corporal swears to having been officially informed that he is to be initiated into the windy duties of a bugler, and be attached to the Band for pay and rations from the — th inst.

In my opinion the theory of the varicose veins is one which suggested itself as the most practical solution of this complicated problem.

THE PERFECT PIG.

CARYL R. MOLYNEUX.

Now this is the tail of the Perfect Pig,
And it's told when the twilight fails
And pigthieves lurk in the moonlight,
Telling each other tales.

Hans Breitmann was a farmer
In the valley of the Rhine;
He bred a lot of tow-haired brats,
But specialized in swine.
Through all that river country,
From the north unto the south,
Hans Breitmann's chops and sausages
Were praised by every mouth.

Hans Breitmann fed his darlings
On the best procurable,
The thought that pigs should suffer want
Was simply unendurable.
So these proud little piglets.
Waxed fat and ever fatter.
And though the brats got lean and thin.
That really didn't matter.

Hans Breitmann had a neighbour
An evil man and hard,
Who looked with eyes of envy
On Breitmann's pigstye yard.
And trained to blood and slaughter
In many a hard-fought fight,
He stole and slew a piglet,
In the middle of the night.

Hans Breitmann's happy Country.
Is at present overrun.
By a strong victorious Army
Which will civilize the Hun.
There are sentry posts and orders.
And a strong determination.
That 9. p. m. as bedtime.
Is a standard for the nation.

Hans Breitmann's evil neighbour.
At I. a. m. essayed
To pass a watchful sentry
Of the 96th Brigade.
The sentry called — the neighbour dropped
His load of pork and lard,
And the little pig was confiscate
By "order of the Guard".

SOLDIER STUDENTS.

With regard to that part of the scheme relating to higher education and which is administered by the Board of Education, qualified oversea officers and men may be assisted to pursue a course of university standard in the United Kingdom. Conversely, qualified and specially selected officers and men ordinarily domiciled in the United Kingdom may be assisted to pursue courses of higher education at oversea universities in the British Empire, or in some cases at foreign universities.

Forms of application may be obtainable shortly at the district offices of the Appointments Department of the Ministry of Labour, and at other centres.

EXTRACTS FROM THE LETTERS OF A PRODIGAL.

PART TWO.

"SMILES AND BATHS."

The monotony of our quiet village life gets broken once or twice a week, generally on Mondays and Tuesdays. On these days we are supposed to go to the baths. These are situated in a town about three miles away, and a lorry is provided for those finnicky members of the battery who desire baths.

Spring having arrived with all its freshness, and the vin blanc kind of youthfulness imparted by the balmy air giving me heart, I took soap and towel and proceeded to the baths with some other adventurous spirits.

Inside the lorry, while on the journey, I found myself next to "Lummie."

"Lummie" is an old comrade — very old, indeed, in appearance. He has more lines on his wrinkled old face than you could find on a contoured map of Switzerland. Yea, when he smiles, a weird beauty steals over the two halves of his face, which I can only liken unto the shrivelling of slowly-incinerated sausage skins.

Here is a reminiscence of Lummie.

While seated behind him one day at the "Kins" at Cartigny, I noticed a strange thing happen. A film was being shown depicting Charlie Chaplin earning his £200,000 a year and the usual fits of laughter were exploding in rapid succession. I was enjoying the film immensely, but I could not help noticing how Lummie was smiling, in spite of the fact that I was seated behind him. Suddenly the strange thing happened!

The reel had just reached the climax of one of Chaplin's spasms of magnificent foolery, at which Lummie smiled so much that his ears actually passed each other at the back of his neck!

I felt very much alarmed, especially when, — his smile relaxing, — his ears became choc-a-bloc. Anyhow, I unhitched them, and told Lummie to be more careful about the use of his face. He retorted to the effect that if he had one like mine he would not care what he did with it as long as he could get rid of it.

And so the incident closed.

The lorrie blundered along on its cumbrous way with a swirl and many a sway. It was being driven by a "learner". This "learner" has quite a lot to learn before he becomes sufficiently efficient to be trusted with a ration lorry, or some such other vehicle of importance. As it was, we were only a "bath party," there being about twenty of us packed inside, and a valuable sergeant outside with the driver, a load good enough to practice with, anyhow.

As we entered the town the learner noticed the "Traffic Twister" at the cross-roads and, being doubtful for the moment on which side of the policeman he should pass, he split the difference and drove straight for him with a terrific "honking."

I didn't know that an M.F.P. was allowed to use violent and insulting language; but this one did, whether or no, and did it quite well. Anyhow, he was only bumped a bit, and the learner kept the old Thorneycroft on its erratic course. There are some sharp turnings in this little town, but our learner did not despise the pavement. Such difficulties as M.F.P's. and street-corners to him only existed to be conquered.

Nevertheless, it was an angry crowd that reached the baths. One stern critic advised the "learner" to try his hand at cow driving. Another called him a "bolsheviking Spartacist." He was called other things, too numerous, and lurid, to mention.

However, we had reached the baths, and as the remainder filed into the steam-filled building I pulled my friend Lummie aside. "Lummie," I said, "Do you remember the last bath with me"? He replied, "Why don't you sing it"?. I then reminded him how we had bathed together in the Somme after the "March Retreat" of 1918. I also reminded him about the awful colds we both acquired after our bathge, — colds bad enough to cause us to "cad" for spare "tots" from our teetotal comrades!

Lummie looked at me and then creased his face into a right-eyed wink. He then remarked that it would be sad if, after all the ordinary perils of war, we were to die a common death from pneumonia.

The sergeant was listening.

Anyhow, all fears about having to face the rigours of the cold shower-bath were dispelled when the custodian of the baths announced to the sergeant in charge of our party.

"No barves for your lot to-day, sergeant. You're too late! Come again next week!" Thereupon did Lummie and I look up to the sky and thanked our imaginary stars for another week's respite, and we all walked back to the battery.

OPERA HOUSE ACCOMMODATION.

In Sunday's issue of The Cologne Post we published a letter which dealt with the system of allotting seats at the Opera House. It must be stated that some of the arguments put forth in that letter were erroneous, and for the benefit of the writer and for persons with similar complaints we publish a copy of the system which was originally adopted and has since been strictly adhered to by those in charge of this particular work. — Ed.

SYSTEM OF ALLOTMENT OF TICKETS FOR THE OPERA HOUSE.

Tickets for the portion reserved by the British Authorities in the Opera House are issued to Corps, Cavalry Division and Army Troops by allotment. This applies to the whole of the Rhine Army.

Tickets are available six days in advance of performance and are held by the Army Amusements Officer. This Officer must be advised by H.Q. of the various formations how many vacancies in their allotment they wish to take up, three days prior to the performance; any tickets remaining are then placed in a pool and are for sale at the Theatre Box Offices (Officers and Other Ranks) on the morning of the third day prior to the Opera, to first-comers.

No more than two tickets care sold to one person, unless he holds a signed note from his Commanding Officer bearing the Office Stamp of his Unit.

Officers pay full subscription price slightly enhanced, which enables the Military authorities to allow their Other Ranks to see the Opera at less than half price.

All applicants for tickets from the Army Troops must apply to Army Amusements Officer. The distribution is made as fairly as possible, but it must be remembered that if every one claimed a ticket each person could only see the Opera once every 60 nights.

OUR BAND.

A TALE OF "D" COY, 52ND RIFLE BRIGADE.

"If you want a thing hard enough you can generally get it" is becoming a Battalion motto.

We applied it in "Don Troop." We wanted a band—oh! how we wanted a band! We route marched and got tired and—well you know what happens. The step begins to go; your throat gets dry and you can't sing; the man in front of you will keep changing his step; your pack suddenly develops knobs on the inside; the bit of road you' re marching on has all the highest lumps and the deepest ruts, and altogether life is just one damn thing after another.

You know that feeling? I thought so.

Somebody starts shouting "Left! right! left! right!" and it is'nt a bit inspiring. You only hope he'll choke himself and let you alone. Perhaps you even express the hope out loud in a thoughtless moment and somebody takes your name and tells you, you are for orders. And that isn't a bit inspiring either and doesn't help you any. You want a band—oh! how you want a band! Well we've got a band. It hasn't any cornets or clarionets or euphoniums or things. We just got a supply of mouth organs of the same pitch, a pair of cymbals and a side-drum. A little practice and there you are. Sometimes when the tune we're playing is a little new and strange I admit it is a little difficult to tell whether it's the Tschaikowsky "1812 Overture" or "My Mother Bids me Bind my Hair". But what matter? It sorts itself out after a while and anyway the swing of it carries us along. It helps us over the rough bits.

The Adjutant's horse is tremendously keen on it. It almost played the drum with its front feet on the last route-march. But the greatest thing the band has done has still to be told.

The rabbits that the Hun keeps in the cellar of our billet where we practise are breeding fast. But, mirabile dictu, I looked through the grating this morning and saw a full-grown pig. Talk about intensive culture! You can't beat our band.

"One of them".

"THE KNOTS" CONCERT PARTY.

"The Knots" Concert Party, composed of men of the 1/5th Battalion South Staffordshire Regiment gave a successful show at Kommern on Friday.

A duet by Lce-Cpl. Chilley and the "Leading Lady" Pte. Edwards, or "Queenie" the sobriquet affectionately given to "her" by the troops, was of a very high-class order and gave each of them ample scope for their abilities. They were accorded persistent encores and various other items had to be cut out of the programme in consequence. Pte. Griffiths, the comedian, convulsed the audience with his quaint ways and funny stories. There appears to be a future for this young man. "Winnie," another impersonatior of the fair sex, was Pte. Follett and "her" dance with Pte. Beardmore was a turn much appreciated. Pte. Sanctuary, a light Baritone, well known on the Birkenhead concert plaetforms, was twice encored for his singing. Ptes. Hicks and Beardmore seemed glued together when singing and dancing in their clever "simultaneous" act.

Prior to the ending of the concert by the National Anthem, a screaming farce entitled The Variety Agency was given by the party.

"The Knots" Concert party will shortly go on tour with the kind permission of the Commanding Officer Lt. Col. A. White D.S.O.

BILLIARD MATCH WANTED

April 6th Dear Sir. — Reference article, headed "Billiard handicap at Solingen," which appeared in your paper dated Saturday, April 5th. In this article "Nicolo" wonders if he could find a quartette to beat their little lot. A match of this kind would no doubt raise a great deal of interest. Our quartette would only be too pleased to arrange a match. An English billiard table is available for such a match at the Y. M. C. A. Lindenthal. A return match no doubt could be arranged to take place at Solingen, I would be obliged if you would refer this letter to "Nicolo." — Opposition.

JOTTINGS FROM BLESSEM.

BY A.S.W.

Like the majority of very small villages in the occupation area, Blessem is an interesting spot where the inhabitants seem to do very little else but work, and it is amusing to note with what astonishment they view the sporting efforts of the members of No 18 Field Ambulance, who are at present "at home" in Blessem.

At football the Ambulance has done very well, our last victory (5—0) being against No 4 Coy A.S.C. on the 3rd inst.

A Cross Country run on the 4th was a great success. A field of about 30 turned out, including the veteran "Teddy" Q.M.S. Barber, a well-known Northern runner of over 20 years ago. He celebrated the 23rd anniversary of his victory against France by setting the pace and coming in second in this event.

Result: 1.- Haworth; 2.- Q.M.S. Barlow; 3.- Elms 4.- Rashbrook; 5.- Dallas; 6.- Cpl. Blethenck.

Twice a week the lightfooted trip merrily to the strains of the Ambulance Orchestra and one night is reserved for a whist drive.

The Ambulance fortunately possesses a good number of officers N.C.O.'s and men very keen at sport and we are getting ready to challenge "all and sundry" at Cricket and Tennis.

E. Farnfield will play for Fulham v. Clapton Orient to day.

In a hockey match at Woolwich on Thursday the R. A. (Woolwich) beat the R. A. F. (Uxbridge) by 7—0.

Closing scores: Peall (in play), 3,502; Elphick, 1,851. Breaks: Peall 230, 133, 106, 130; Elphick 79.

SCOTLAND AND ENGLAND INTER LEAGUE.

At Ibrox Park, Glasgow, on Saturday before 70.000 spectators, Scotland defeated England in a return Inter-League match by 3 goals to 2. During the first half, the Scots benefited from a slight wind in their favour. Hardy was tested twice during the first 3 minutes, and on both occasions saved. Immediately afterwards England crossed the mid-field and for the first time Clennel with a long low shot defeated Shaw.

The home backs were thereafter troubled, but Wright relieved. The play was then transferred to the other end. Richardson kept putting the ball in Hardy's hands. The game was now of a very fast description, smart work being performed time and again by the Scottish forwards. After 20 minutes play Richardson equalised with a soft shot.

Five minutes later Elliot gave England the lead but Richardson soon equalised. Both Goalkepers were now busy. Near the interval Mc. Menemy scored. At half time the score stood as follow: —

Scotland 3
England 2.

It was Scotland's game in the second half; the forwards especially showing good combination. The game ended without further scoring, Hardy doubtless saving England from a heavier defeat.

On the first occasion where the teams met at Birmingham towards the end of February the English eleven won by 3 goals to 1. England has not won an Inter-Legue match in Scotland since the season of 1904—5.

2nd. BDE. R.A.F. v. 93rd. (late 10th) BDE. R.G.A.

This match was played on the Bickendorf aerodrome ground on Saturday, on an afternoon more suited for cricket than rugger. The ground too was very hard, and accounted for not a few minor casualties.

The R.G.A. scored an unconverted try in the first five minutes. The play was then fairly even until half-time when the score stood at 8-6 in favour of the R.A.F.

In the second half the gunner forwards showed their superiority, and rushed the ball into the R.A.F. twenty-five. Cpl. Towhill R.G.A. was twice unlucky in missing an attempt at a dropped goal. Finally the R.G.A. scored two more tries, one being converted and the game concluded with the score standing at 14 points to 6 in their favour. The R.A.F. were unfortunate in having their scrum half knocked out at an early period of the game, and were compelled to play one man short.

10th CORPS SIGNALS V 21 and 29 C.C.S.

After beating "The Tigers" by 3 goals to 2. the Corps Sig. team entired the third round of the Bonn Competition.

Both teams scored once before the interval. After 15 minutes play Brown scored his second goal for Sigs in fine style. Jaust before the whistle sounded full time Williams added a third after a good scramble in front of goal.

The semi-finals will be played on the 9th and 10th inst.

9th D.L.I. v. 51st N.F.s

FAST GAME AT LINDENTHAL, COLOGNE.

The Durhams kicked off against the sun, which troubled the players not a little. The game was very fast and evenly-contested, the home team having a slight advantage. They eame very near to scoring on two occasions, ones when a dropping shot by Holborn struck tee crossbar. and again when the goalkeeper took the ball through his own goal in saving from Stevenson. The referee gave the defenders the benefit of the doubt and allowed the game to proceed. Half time arrived without any scoring.

In the second half, with the sun behind them, the Durhams set the pace and play was almost entirely in the opponents, half of the field. The home team were showing pretty combination and had hard luck in not scoring. The hard ground and lively ball made scoring difficult. A bouncing ball robbed Holborn of a certein goal. Garrity also had a try from close range, but the ball struck the goalkeeper, and Holborn put past from the rebound. The game finished shortly after with the Durhams still pressing. The visitors played a hard game but lacked the polish of the home team who showed pretty footwork at times.

Result. - No. scoring.

SPORT REFLECTIONS.

WITH AN OCCASIONAL ENTERTAINMENTS NOTE.

Lance-Corporal V. R. Chilley, who is the capable producer and stagemanager of the Knot's Concert Party is well known on the music-hall and concert stages in England. For a considerable time before joining the Army, he was with the George Edwardes' and Miss Bertha Rolland's company in "The Girl in the Train," while his efforts on this side of the channel have entertained thousands of troops. When he returns to Theatre land in England, Lance Corporal Chilley will no doubt be even better equipped professionally than he was in pre-war days as a result of his experiences in performing for so long before the most critical of audiences — the British soldier.

Tennis for Officers.

The officers who are in the hands of the 36 C.C.S. people, at the hospital near Saxon Ring, have recently been complaining of a difficulty in killing time. Even "The Cologne Post" does not provide entertainment for the whole day, so that when its contents have been digested, with the bacon and eggs, they have arrived at a loose-end in the way of interesting amusement. The advent of summer-like weather, however, has turned everyone's attention to out-door occupations and convalescent officers have succeded, during the past few days, in improving the tennis court at the back of the hospital with the result that it is now in excellent playing condition. The amusements officer is arranging for the equipment of the court.

"Get out!"

An incident that caused a good deal of amusement among those who saw it, occurred in the E.F.C. Officers' Club the other evening. A very young and very innocent-looking sub, in describing one of the bouts in the recent boxing tournament for the edification of three or four friends, stood up and reeled about his chair by way of illustrating his remarks. At that moment a major came on the scene and mistook our young friend's evolutions for signs of inebriation. Carefully adjusting his monocle and pointing a threatening finger towards the door he thundered "Get out!" and startled the sub out of his wits. He was too amazed even to offer any explanation, and saluting smartly and with a "yessir" he made a bee-line for the exit and did not even remain long enough to wish his friends good-night.

The Atmosphere of Germany.

The great love for heat displayed on all hands by the German people has been the subject of quite a lot of comment on the part of their uninvited guests, the English soldiers. Fresk air appears to be hated like the plague for in practically every building, closed windows and doors and enormous fires are the rule. To the stifling atmosphere in hotels, shops and private houses our lungs are unaccustomed and our craving for pure air seems to amaze the Germans. The arrival of the warm weather we have experienced during the past few days has been the signal for practically all soldiers to discard great-coats. For the sake of curiosity, I counted the number of Germans who passed this office who were wearing overcoats. Out of 86 men only four had he courage to leave their coats behind!

Cricket.

A conference, at which the prospects of cricket are to be discussed, is to be held to-day by the Physical and Recreational Training Staff in Cologne. Many interesting points are to be raised and suggestions for overcoming the difficulties caused by the lack of suitable playing grounds are to be considered. A report of the proceedings will appear in to-morrows issue of this paper.

THE RAMBLER.

141st FIELD AMBULANCE VERSUS 25th BDE. R.F.A.

The above named teams played a friendly football match on Sunday at Rheinbach. From the kick-off the Ambulance early asserted their superiority, the forwards passing and combining well. In the first ten minutes Cpl. Kirkby, who has just returned from the B.E.F. trial games, placed the ball neatly out of the Artillery goalkeeper's reach and a few minutes later Pte. Riding drove home a fine pass from the left. After this reverse the gunners took up the running but the Ambulance defence was very sure though they had to acknowledge defeat by a beautiful "header" by Dr. Saunders. Play was very close after this till half-time. On the resumption play was again close, but the Ambulance wore down the opposition and Cpl. Kirkby and Pte. Riding added another goal each, the Ambulance running out comfortable winners of an interesting game by 4 goals to 1.

Arrangements are being made for the London Welsh Club to resume active operations next season.

REGIMENTAL SPORTS MEETING.

KEEN COMPETITION FOR INTER-COMPANY CHALLENGE CUP.

The 52nd Battery, Royal Sussex Regt., spent the midweek a month ago travelling from Sheringham, Norfolk, to Germany and, after a week-end—Friday to Thursday—in Siegburg, has settled down at Wahn, in the hutment camp, where landscape-gardening, with the aid of branches from the surrounding woods, has been the chief occupation of spare moments. The camp now looks much less bare and desolate than it did a month ago.

On the football ground on Saturday, April the 5th, when a regimental sports meeting was held, the proceedings were so thoroughly British and homelike that it was difficult to realise one was in the midst of foreign land. It was the lack of the cheerful and animating presence of lady visitors that brought to mind most acutely the sense of distance from home.

The keenest competition was maintained throughout the sports. For the inter-company challenge cup, awarded on points gained during the day, three Companies,—B, C, and D, tied with 12 points. An additional race was run to decide the issue and 2nd Lieut. Randell captured the cup for "D" Company, — which was afterwards photographed in a monster group with the cup in the centre.

AN OVATION.

Some admirable running talent came to light during the afternoon. In the mile, Pte. Payne, A Coy, who has done big things in this way back home, and who has quite extraordinary stayng power and steadiness, took a long lead from the start and came in apparently as fresh as paint. He received an ovation and is expected to do great things for the Battery at divisional meetings.

In the sprints and quarter-mile Lt. Robinson, C. Coy, and Cpl. Hallowes B Coy, showed fine form and Cpl, Farthing, C. Coy, and Cpl. King, B. Coy, did well in jumping contests.

EXCITING CONTEST.

The tug-of-war was contested amidst great excitement. H.Q. Coy with the Adjutant and Transport Officer amongst them, were a hefty team and had rather an easy victory against A Company. C. Company with Sgt. Staffora as a tower of strength, showed up well in the preliminaries and proved more than a match for H.Q. in the final but only a very little. after a herculean contest.

The blindfold race caused much amusement. Competitors wandered all over the field and continued long after the race was over. One competitor, with a sure instinct, made straight for the prize table.

The prizes were distributed by the Second-in Command, Major Mac-Roberts D.S.O., M.C. in the absence oft he G.O.C., 103rd Brigade, who was unavoidably prevented from attending.

THE RESULTS:

The following were the results:

100 yards: 1. Sec. Lieut. Randall (D); 2. Cpl. Hallowes (B); 3. Sec. Lieut. Robinson (C).

440 yards: 1. Lieut. Randall; 2. Pte Mc Kenzie (A).

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We are continually receiving numerous questions which should not come to us at all because they can be dealt with far more easily and quickly with the unit. All matters concerning rate of pay, pensionable service, demobilization, and so on, should be submitted in the usual way to commanders of units. In many cases the Company or Battery C.Q.M.S., knowing all the facts of the case, could give an answer immediately. Why write to us?

Take the question of demobilization for example. In every unit there is someone, generally a Demobilization Officer detailed as such, who has all the facts at his finger ends, or can turn them up from the very latest "Instructions" in two minutes.

He is the proper person to appeal to in all such cases and only needs to be asked.

Sending such queries to us wastes the enquirer's time, wastes our time, and we are so busy with a thousand-and-one other things, and moreover is against all sorts of regulations.

Why call in a third party when the matter is obviously one between two parties who know all the facts of both sides, and for which the Army Council have provided proper facilities.

We are at all times ready and willing to answer general questions, but personal questions should be dealt with in the proper manner.

Will correspondents please note this, and not call upon an overworked staff to do a job quite outside its province, and for which ample machinery has already been provided by the Army authorities.

We are so busy answering general questions, that it will be impossible even to acknowledge the kind of correspondence indicated in the above paragraphs.

In honour of the 107,444 soldiers and 1,029 sailors of the United Sta es Forces who have fallen in the war, a brief but impressive memorial service was held at Westminster Abbey on Friday under the auspices of the English-Speaking Union.

WITH THE RATIONS.

It is just week since I received orders to send a first consignment of "rations," but unfortunately two sad events occurred immediately after the despatch of those first goods. First of all, the limber became kaput. My driver, merely a learner of the AIV. breed has not had quite sufficient training in the handling of a mule (and he will not get the opportunity of doing so for a long time now) and whilst trying to take a corner he infortunately collided with the pavement, forthwith one wheel being "no more." Had that disaster been the only one we might still have managed to carry on, but this was not to be. Naturally the mule resented the first little episode, and was determined to "get its own back," at the first opportunity.

And how long will a mule wait for its opportunily. I arsks you — you who know something about mules, you who have shared the kicks and insults which these beasts of burden take upon themselves to impose at most unexpected moments.

* * * *

This mule of ours was like all other mules (and by the way these peculiar animals are the only ones which can boast of any constancy in their methods) and no sooner had it taken the bend in the road than it thought fit to attempt to clear a lorry which stood in its way. The effort was a failure, and we were left with an injured driver, a damaged mule, and a broken limber.

* * * *

Thus there were no rations on Monday morning of last week. The other day I received a letter from some men who had complained to their Orderly Officer of the absence of rations on that date. I hope that this explanation will be sufficient for them. Now that I have been supplied with a new rig-out of all those damaged effects, I hope to be abie to keep up my supply daily. But dont expect too much. You wont always get strawberry jam, you wont always get butter, but I will always try to serve up Maconachies and "bully" in the very latest fashion.

* * * *

A propos of "bully," have you noticed anything new about it? I used to think that our English cooks had exhausted the variety of its uses as a food (I dont mean for making parapets, etc.), but the Germans have taught us many new dishes already. They nearly make it appear as something other than "bully," and this is a great achievement. But, then, who knows how they do it, and what they add to it.

* * * *

One poor brother-in-arms—an A.iv. boy—was in great distress the other day. He had heard that we were all to be kept for another two years in the Army, and, judging from his expression, no greater torment could have been inflicted upon him. In vain I tried to show him the great, rich, pleasant life which lay before him — even though of only two year's duration in the Army — but it was poor consolation to him. Anyhow, its not true, so why worry? We shall all be home before we have realized that we have been to Germany, even before we have had time to learned how to splutter out their language. The only word I have learnt properly is that contemptuous ac, and this only because I have had to make manifest and forcible my annoyance so many times.

NOTICE TO REPRESENTATIVES.

No instructions concerning any alteration of numbers required can be acted upon unless they are in this office before 2 p.m. on the day before the date of issue. The work in the distribution department hitherto has been enormous and greatly complicated by two factors: (1) the reconstruction of divisions and change of units, (2) by our having to work with new methods through German workpeople. Will any unit which has had any reason for complaint please note that arrangements are becoming more and more perfected each day, and from now, onwards, we hope and believe that there will be found little cause for complaint.

BOLSHEVISM IN CHINA.

TROUBLE IN THE FAR EAST.

The Correspondent of The Times reports that the plague of Bolshevism has now spread to the Far East, and China is beginning to suffer from its effects.

General Semenoff's staff has reported the transference of Bolshevist activities from the Trans-Amur into Chinese territory. Isolated bands, surviving the overthrow and execution of the Bolshevist leader Mukhin, crossed the Amur into Manchuria to avoid capture by Japanese troops.

It is gathered from various sources that the Bolshevists intend to concentrate their efforts on stimulating their creed among the Chinese populations on the frontiers of Manchuria and Mongolia. For this reason, General Semenoff possibly may be entrusted with the task of assuring the safety of these regions instead of going to the front.

It is the unanimous conviction of well informed National leaders that Bolshevism is fast collapsing in European Russia. We confidently look forward to a sweeping victory on the Ural front. The only dark spot on the horizon is the difficulty of providing food and economic assistance o the towns and provinces that may be released from the Bolshevist thraldom. The Allies should be prepared to utilize the Black, Baltic, and White Seas this summer to send in supplies.

THE LATE. SIR WILLIAM CROOKES.

A PIONEER OF SCIENCE.

It is with great regret that we note the death of the distinguished physicist, Sir William Crookes, O.M., F.R.S., which occurred at 6 o'clock on Friday morning at his residence in London.

Sir William Crookes, was born in London 1832, and began his scientific career at the old Royal College of Chemistry in Hanover Square, then under the direction of the German chemist, A. W. Hofmann. After leaving the college he filled appointments as superintendent of the meteorogical department of the Radcliffe Observatory at Oxford (1854) and as lecturer in chemistry at Chester Training College (1855); afterwards returning to London, which remained his home for the rest of his life. His first scientific publication, a paper on the selenocyanides, appeared in 1851, and this formed the starting-point of the investigation by which he made his name as a chemist.

SPIRITUALISM.

Amongst the numerous subjects taken up by Sir William was that of spiritualism. As the result of many experiments conducted with various mediums, one of whom was D. D. Home, he was led to the view that outside our scientific knowledge there exists a force exercised by intelligence differing from the ordinary intelligence common to mortals. Later, he declared that he had nothing to retract from his earlier opinions, and that he adhered to his already published statements, regretting only a "certain crudity in his early exposition, which, no doubt justly, had militated against their acceptance by the scientific world." He published a book on the question, "Researches on the Phenomena of Spiritualism," in 1874, and in 1896—99 he served as president of the Society for Psychical Research.

SCIENTIFIC HONOURS.

Sir William Crookes, who was made a knight in 1897, received many scientific honours both in his own country and abroad. The Royal Society, of which he was elected a Fellow in 1863, awarded him three of the medals at its disposal—a Royal Medal in 1875, the Davy Medal in 1888, and the Copley Medal in 1904; appointed him to deliver the Bakerian Lecture on three occasions; and finally chose him as president. The French Academy of sciences, of which he was a corresponding member, gave him in 1880 a gold medal and an extraordingry grize of 3,000f. in recognition of his work on radiant matter and molecular physics, and in the following year he was chosen to serve as a juror at the Paris International Electrical Exhibition. In 1899 he was awarded the Albert Medal of the Society of Arts, and he received the Order of Merit in 1910. At different times he acted as president of the British Association, the Chemical Society, and the Institution of Electrical Engineers, and for some years, from 1900, he was secretary of the Royal Institution, where on many occasions he was the Friday evining lecturer. Besides publishing a large number of scientific papers, he wrote, or edited English translations of many books on pure and applied chemistry, such as a "Practical Treatise on Metallurgy" (1869), "Select Methods in Chemical Analysis" (1871)), which has gone through several editions, "The Manufacture of Beetroot Sugar in England" (1870), "Handbook of Dyeing and Calise Printing" (1874) "Dyeing and Tissue Printing" (1882), "Wagner's Chemical Technology," and others. He became editor of the Quarterly Journal of Science in 1864, and in 1859 he founded the Chemical News, which he owned and edited until his death.

FURTHER ARCHIEVEMENTS.

The scientist then turned his thoughts to the phenomena attendant on the passage of the electric discharge through highly rarified spaces, and his achievements in this field are among the most brilliant associated with his name. One of the prominent results of his researches in this field was announced in his presidential address to the British Association, at Bristol, in 1898, when he described a new member of the rare earth family, monium or victorium, the spectrum of which has its characteristic lines high up in the ultra-violet region, and, therefore, cannot be explored except by the aid of photography,

OUR FUTURE WHEAT SUPPLY.

Then followed a great deal of time on the question of the world's wheat supply. He argued that we were within measurable distance of utilizing the last areas of land available for wheat growing, and, therefore, with increasing population, we are confronted with the danger in the near future of a shortage in the wheat supply, unless the average yield per acre can be increased beyond its present comparatively low figure. The only hope of averting starvation he said lay in the artificial fixation of atmospheric nitrogen, and he prophesied that, unless that could be classed among the achievements of the chemist, the great Caucasian race would cease to be foremost in the world and would be squeezed out of existence by peoples to whom wheaten bread was not the staff of life.

Although, as the years passed by, his figure become bent, his strong alive face, with its pointed grey beard lost none of its wonderful expression, and his keen interest and insight into the many matters he studied ever became brighter.

DANZIG AND POLISH TROOPS.

On behalf of the German Government, the offer was conveyed by Erzberger to Marshal Foch at Spa, to allow the landing of Polish troops at Danzig subject to special guarantees for their behaviour.

Foch's reply thereto was favourable.

ON CHEQUES.

To the editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—

May I suggest through The Cologne Post that Messrs Cox & Co. should open a branch of their bank in Cologne, at which officers could cash cheques? The branch at Boulogne has done excellent work during the war, and if a similar branch were opened here, Messrs Cox & Co. would be doing a great service to the officers of the Army of the Rhine.

This would make officers independent of the three monthly advanaes from the Field Cashier, which, although sufficient for us when we lived in dug-outs, will hardly supply our needs during the Occupation of the Rhine.

VOLUNTEER.

(The announcement of Messrs. Thomas Cook & Son, on page 4, is of interest in this connection.—Ed.)

ON GUARDS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir—Regarding the letter "Some Guards" which appeared in the correspondence column of to-day's "Post," I, too, would like to draw the attention of "The powers that be" to the danger of overzealous sentries.

Especially is this applicable to despatch-riders. It is practically impossible to hear a challenge owing to the noise of a motor-cycle engine. Consequently I have often experienced that nightmare feeling under the fourth button of my tunic, when I have managed to pull-up within a few inches of a business-like looking bayonet.

Why not provide sentries with some sort of light if it is necessary to challenge motorists.

I am writing this mainly in the interest of the new D.R's. who are coming out to "Keep the watch."

THE FACULTY OF IMAGINATION.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

I had a little start of pleasure when my roving eye encountered this article in your issue of 4th April, and I think you contributor deserves some thanks for bringing to re-notice a thing which is almost "depised and forsaken" in our land.

Who can say what is the value of a right use of imagination in business? Used in its broad sense, the word symbolises the licence accorded to the poet; but, used restrictively, as prescience or foresight, its benefit in business is, I think, incalculable. It was one of the chief points I tried to impress upon my Commercial Correspondence students — this value of foresight, or "putting yourself in the other man's place," for only in that way can you fulfil all the wants which it was your business to do, and compete successfully in these striving times.

Acting on the principle that "the onlooker sees most of the game," and that good suggestions seldom come from workmen immersed in detail, the American manufacturer of to-day appoints a man with foresight to devise and recommend improvements in the various lines of his business. Such a one he calls his "efficiency man" and can afford to pay him a high salary. This is not an instance where technical knowledge overrides; it is due to exercising" the gift of imagination."

BETTER NEWS FROM THE MURMAN COAST

BAVARIAN REVOLUTION

PROGRESS OF GERMAN STRIKES

IRISH HUNGER-STRIKER DIES OF WOUNDS

FINNISH BOLSHEVISTS COME TO HEEL.

SITUATION IMPROVES.

The War Office announces that an official telegram received from Murmansk on the 5th April states that there is an improvement in the situation at Kandalaksha. A general rising of Finns, Karelians and Bolshevists had been planned on a large scale, but the announcement that reinforcements were on the way, and the evidence of other military precautions being taken to meet the situation, over-awed the leaders, at all events for the time being.

The leaders of the Finnish legion have signed an agreement to the effect that in future they will comply with the wishes of the General officer commanding.

This does not imply that the danger of an insurrection is completely past, but it is a step in the right direction.

BAVARIAN REVOLUTION.

A Reuter telegram from Berlin states that the Bavarian Government has gone to Nuremberg. Herr Hoffmann, the Premier, has announced that the Government has not retired but has merely been transferred from Munich.

The Cologne Post information from Bavaria is to the effect that Bamberg is the present seat of Government.

Other opinons claim that the Bavarian Government is non-existent. At least two Government officials, Simon and Unterleitner, have joined the Spartacist movement, being included in the provisional list of commissaires with Muchlon, Seglitz and others.

The Social and Democratic parties, which are still sitting at Nuremberg, voted yesterday by forty two votes to eight against the establishment of a Soviet republic.

Opinion in Berlin inclines to the belief that the crisis has been reached. It resolves itself into a trial of strength between North and South Bavaria, also between the Majority Socialists on the one side and the Communists and Independent Socialists i.e.the Spartacists, on the other.

Collisions and bloodshed are anticipated.

The Councils of Peasants of Franconia are against the Spartacists republic, but they declare that a separate republic shall be constitued in Northern Bavaria.

At Aschaffenburg the middle classes have declared against the Republic.

The red flag is flying from all public buildings at Augsburg.

MUNICH STUDENTS REVOLT.

The students of Munich University have dismissed the Senate of the University and have appointed a Council of students with professors as technical advisors. Other Universities are invited (by the students) to follow suit.

BULGARIAN UNREST.

Fresh disturbances are reported from the region of Stroumitza (Greece) which is still in Bulgarian hands.

The Bulgarian comitadji Bahirjieff, sent in command of an armed force to repress anti-Bulgarian demonstrations, was killed by peasants near the village of Davilia.

POLISH DISAPPOINTMENT OVER DANZIG.

The Havas Agency reports that Paderewski, who is in Paris for the Peace Conference, is bitterly disappointed over the Danzig decision. He is represented as saying:

"When I left Poland the state of mind of the population had reached the highest degree of patriotic exaltation and enthusiasm for the Allies. This state of mind must be taken into consideration in order to understand the disappointment which followed when, after my departure, it was announced that everything which the Poles considered as gained was again thrown open to discussion. The consequences can be very grave. There is no Bolshevism in Poland. Business men are living on great national hopes. To break these hopes means to break the moral force, to drive the Poles to despair, to create disorder and anarchy. It is necessary to present the Polish nation as a Poland independent of Prussia and Germany, having its own access to the sea at Danzig and in the south a common frontier with Rumania; a Poland united in the interior, strong in the exterior, and in close contact by alliance with the victorious democracies of the Occident.

NO FRENCH ANNEXATIONS.

Despite assertions to the contrary which have appeared in the German papers, the Temps declares that the French Government has no intention of annexing any territory inhabited by a German population. This applies especially to the districts lying between the frontier of 1814 and that of 1871.

HUNGER STRIKER DIES OF WOUNDS.

MANY LIMERICK ARRESTS.

Robert Byrne, the prisoner who was rescued by his friends in such an audacious manner from the Limerick workhouse hospital where he was undergoing a hunger strike (voluntarily) and imprisonment (compulsorily) did not long enjoy his liberty.

He died on Monday — of wounds received in the action.

In the course of his rescue he sustained bullet wounds in the neck and back. His rescuers conveyed him in a donkey cart to the Clare district, where he died during the night.

Several arrests have been made in connection with the affair and the Limerick district has been proclaimed a military area.

GERMAN STRIKES.

COERCING THE NEWSPAPERS.

Strike leaders at Essen have issued peremptory orders to all newspapers in Essen and district, prohibiting them from publishing news other than that supplied direct by the Strike Committee or the Wolff agency.

Any newspaper which disobeys this "order", cuts or enlarges news in a partial manner, or publishes headlines, comments or articles inimical to the strikers will be summarily dealt with.—their electric current will be cut off by the revolutionary workmen of the Rheinisch-Westfälische Electricity Works.

Apparently the Editors will have to encroach on the Advertising Managers' preserves.

The number of miners on strike is increasing daily.

No more operations can be performed in the hospitals at Essen, lack of coal, and consequently steam and gas, precluding sterilisation of surgical instruments

Six thousand employés at the Adler works at Frankfort downed tools yesterday.

SAXONY.

In revenge for the arrest of their leader, Brandes, the Magdeburg Spartacists captured the Minister of Justice, Otto Landsberg, and held him as hostage at Brunswick.

He was liberated by the police at Helmstedt.

The General of the Fourth Army Corps and other officers are also being held as hostages by the Spartacists.

Last night many hours were occupied in the distribution of arms and munitions to the workmen and ex-soldiers. It is expected that fighting will take place when the Government troops arrive. Martial law has been declared.

EGYPTIAN UNREST.

Communiqués state that no further disturbances in Egypt are reported. Much stolen property and arms have been recovered and numbers of arrests made. The Hawamdia and Minia regions are reported to be centres of disaffection but steps are being taken to restore order. The railway stations at Hawamdia and Bedrasheim are completely wrecked.

Owing to the destruction of the railways it became necessary to establish steamer communication with the Southern provinces, but the low level of the river necessitated the opening of the sluice gates at Assiut Assuan.

AERIAL RECONNAISSANCE.

An aeroplane which has returned to Cairo reports that when it reached Assuan it flew over the town. The airmen landed on the aerodrome and found everything normal. The usual Egyptian detachment was guarding the Dam and chief Engineer Watt was attending to his duties.

Amongst other things, the mission of the airmen was to ask Watt to release the water in order to raise the level of the Nile to facilitate the boats being brought up the river. Watt stated that the Mudir had acted very well.

The aeroplane reached Luxor on the 27th March. Everything was quiet and a large number of Arabs were offering their services, which the authorities were utilising. The attitude of the Arabs from Luxor to Assuan has been the one bright chapter in the story of events.

The aeroplane then proceeded to Assuit on the 28th of March. Assuit was restive. Pillaging and burning was going on wherever possible.

The airmen believe that the great Magham bridge to the north of Luxor has been damaged, as the bridge has swung open at one end and appeared to dip into the water.

IRISH COURT MARTIAL.

Three men were sentenced by Court-martial at Dublin to three years penal servitude for assaulting two members of the constabulary. On the 19th February, near Dublin, they tied up the constables with their own suspenders and handcuffed one with the official handcuffs. Then they departed with the official belts and truncheons.

CAPTAIN RUTHERFORD, D.S.O. ON TRIAL.

PLEA OF NOT GUILTY.

At the Old Bailey on Monday Captain Norman Cecil Rutherford, D.S.O. stepped into the dock to stand his trial for the murder of Major Miles Charles Cariston Seton.

He was wearing a rather worn-looking blue reefer suit and his drawn face showed signs of what he must have suffered since the tragedy. Nevertheless his bearing was soldierly and he faced the jury with seeming composure while they were being sworn in.

In quiet but incisive tones he pleaded "not guilty" and then sat down composedly to listen to the opening remarks of the Counsel for the prosecution.

Counsel reviewed the history of the case as it was revealed at the inquest on Major Seton. The military record of the prisoner showed that he had served with distinction, gallantry and devotion to duty. He had been mentioned in despatches and at the latter end of 1917 was awarded the D.S.O.

The jury might wonder, continued Counsel, how Capt. Rutherford knew that Major Seton was sleeping at his uncle's house at Holland Park on the night of the tragedy.

The theory was that he had intercepted a letter he burnt at Holland Park.

Counsel would not anticipate what the defence would be, but asserted that if the facts in the case were not contested there could be no defence on facts, unless the defence of insanity were put forward.

IMPORTANT TO NEW ZEALANDERS.

TAKE YOUR PAY BOOK, AND VOTE.

Fanatics in New Zealand are trying to "dry" the country, trusting in the absence of the soldiers' vote to snatch a victory for "Prohibition."

It therefore is the duty of every New Zealander to exercise his vote. Time and place can be ascertained from an advertisement on page 2, where the alternative issues are set out.

WAACS 1. WRAFS 2. WRENS 3.

An exhibition was held at the Savoy yesterday of work done by various organisations of women war workers.

H.M. Queen Mary attended and after inspecting the work with obvious pleasure and keen interest distributed the prizes awarded in competition.

A silver cup offered to the organisation contributing the largest number of individual prize winners was won by the Q.M.A.A.C., with 152 points. The W.R.A.F. scored 102 points and the W.R.E.N. sixty two.

MORE LABOUR GAINS.

Yesterday's elections for membership of Boards of Guardians resulted in more Labour candidates gaining seats, some of them being on Boards which never before have included a Labourite.

Among the Urban District Councils Wallington returned six Labourites; Beckenham seven; Catford three and Edmonton six.

In the London Boroughs, Woolwich returned eighteen (a gain of ten); Lewisham five; Lambeth six; Shoreditch six and Paddington six.

All four seats at New Malden were won by representatives of the Small Holders Association.

BRAVO! THE DUBLIN FUSILIERS.

A very humorous mistake occured at Colchester on Monday. The remnants of one of the battalions of the Essex regiment were expected home. In honour of their arrival the town had been decorated with flags and banners and various festivities were afoot.

Thirty soldiers detrained and marched through the streets to their destination, doubtless wondering why there was so much fuss, such waving of handkerchiefs and such cheering.

They happened to belong to the Dublin Fusiliers and not to the Pompadours, who, as was ascertained later, will not reach Colchester until to morrow.

Without doubt they will not suffer in the warmth of their welcome.

COLOGNE POPULATION DECREASES.

In less tham twelve months the civil population of Cologne has decreased by nearly ten thousand. On the 1st April 1918 it numbered 644,385. In the ten months to the 1st February 1919, there were 7,762 births and 12,832 deaths, an excess of 5,0 0 deaths.

During the same period 65,228 persons left the city and 60,881 took up residence, leaving the population at 634,968, a decrease of 9,417.

FARMERS' MUSICAL PROTEST.

At a sale on the Earl of Beauchamp's estates at Worcester yesterday a number of farmers, members of the Farmers' Union, made a demonstration of protest against the six months notice given to tenant farmers. Their demand was for twelve months notice and in order to emphasise their protest they sang "John Peel."

The sale was suspended until the auctioneer was able to announce that Earl Beauchamp had withdrawn the six months notice.

The adjournment of Parliament for Easter will probably take place on the 15th.

The death is announced of Madame Lallie Charles, the well known society photographer.

It is announced that men serving in the Colonial Forces, Marines and Naval Reserve may enlist in the British Army of Occupation.

GOVERNMENT HOUSING SCHEME.

THE KING'S CONFERENCE.

In the House of Commons yesterday, Dr. Addison moved the second reading of the Housing and Town Planning Bill. Three million people, he said, were living under overcrowded conditions. The Bill would compel local authorities to undertake rehousing. With the Government prepared to find millions of pounds to assist such schemes, they could not allow any local authorities to interrupt the process.

The Reconstruction Bill would also extend Government assistance to tenants to buy their houses. Grants in aid would range from forty per cent to eighty-five per cent of the cost.

Army huts were being erected in fifteen towns as specimen model houses.

The debate was adjourned.

On Friday next the King will hold a Housing Conference at Buckingham Palace, to which members of leading Local Government bodies are invited.

The King's Conference with representatives of housing authorities from all parts of the country is a striking innovation and will assuredly be full of interest. It is understood that the King, who will be accompanied by the Queen, will open the proceedings with a speech.

NATIONAL TRIBUTE TO MERCHANT SEAMEN.

A national tribute to the Merchant Service is in preparation, and never was national tribute better earned. Most people have only a vague notion of the extent of the work done by the British Merchant Service under war conditions. Food ships alone throughout the war brought into the Mother Country one thousand million hundredweights of food. That is a remarkable feat of ocean carrying under any conditions, but the British Merchant Service during those four years faced conditions which had never hitherto existed, in bringing that food and raw material for manufactures into the country.

Fourteen thousand seven hundred officers and men of the mercantile marine were killed by the enemy or enemy devices. Two thousand four hundred and seventy five ships were sunk, many of them with attendant brutality that can never be forgotten or forgiven. As many as fifty-six ships were sunk in one week at the worst period of the submarine campaign, yet even at that time there was no falling off in arrivals and departures of our ships.

Another instance of work done by the Merchant Service can be shown by figures. The Peace strength of Naval personnel was one hundred and fifty thousand. In war the strength rose to four hundred and twenty thousand. The Merchant Service supplied about one hundred and fifty six thousand of the additional numbers and still carried on its work as a carrying concern. Half the total number of trading seamen before war was taken for combatant purposes but the gaps were filled and ships still went to sea. They were never held up for lack of crews.

No wonder England wants to perpetuate such heroism and such achievements.

SIX HUNDRED WITNESSES.

At Edinburgh yesterday the trial opened of twelve men alleged to have been concerned in the Glasgow strike riots which took place at the end of January.

The lengthy indictment includes such pleasant diversions as the stopping of tramcars, window smashing, robbing a shopkeeper of a thousand pounds' worth of jewellery, assaulting the Sheriff of Lanarkshire and officers of the Glasgow police force.

About six hundred witnesses will be called and the case is expected to last all the week.

Only one of the accused, a man named Gallacher, conducted his own defence.

Counsel for the defence of the other accused men took a preliminary objection to the relevancy of the indictment.

The judge said the the charge of robbery against two of the accused would be taken out but that the other counts of the indictment should go the jury.

EXPERIENTIA DOCET.

FLAPPER BRIDES UNFASHIONABLE.

The Registrar General's report for 1917, just issued, shows that marriages of widows have been more common, and those of widows with bachelors very much more common than at any period during the last forty years.

Punch and Tony Weller notwithstanding!

THE FIRST MYSTERY SHIP.

Lord Penrhyn's three masted sailing ship "Mary B. Mitchell", the first sailing vessel to be adapted by the Admiralty as a mystery ship, has arrived at Port Penrhyn ready to resume her peaceful avocation of carrying slates.

LITTLE WILLIE SCORCHES.

Reuter's correspondent at Amsterdam telegraphs that the ex Crown-Prince, while out motor cycling near Wieringen, dashed into a gate.

The naughty gate got the better of the encounter, Little Willie retiring hurt with a fractured hand and wrist.

FRENCH AERIAL POST.

Eight postal lines of aviation are actually in operation in France, viz!—

Paris to Lille; Paris to Maubeuge and Valenciennes; Paris to Brussels; Paris to Strassburg; Nancy to Longwy and Briey; Paris to Bordeaux; Paris to Saint Nazaire; and Tarascon to Nice.

CONSPIRACY TO PROCURE COCAINE.

DE VEULLE GOES TO PRISON.

Having been found not guilty of the manslaughter of Miss Billie Carleton, the actress, Reginald De Veulle, 38, dress designer, was tried on the second indictment, that of conspiring to procure cocaine.

He pleaded "guilty" to the charge of conspiring with one Mrs. Lo Ping You unlawfully to procure cocaine, and was sentenced to eight months imprisonment in the second division.

POTATOES IN THE PARKS.

The Parks committee of the London County Council received a deputation of allotment holders, who represented the urgent necessity of extended tenure in the Parks for at least two years after the signing of peace. The decision of the commttee will be communicated to the Council later.

THE "OLD GANG" AND THE NEW.

Speaking at a congratulatory dinner given at the Carlton to Sir Auckland Geddes by one of the senior governors of Mc. Gill University, Mr. Bonar Law said he had been reading about the "old Gang." He belonged to it himself and could say truthfully that in connection with the Government of the country there had been a larger number of big posts than of big men to fill them. If the "new Gang" would make an appearance the old Gang would be very glad to take a rest.

It was largely owing to the Prime Minister that we brought in from the outside men without political experience and put them in positions of the highest importance. Not one had been a failure. On the contrary many had been conspicuously successful. Among the new men was Sir Auckland Geddes, who if he were not going away, might have entertained the hope of winning some of the highest prizes the political life of England could offer.

STOCK EXCHANGE MEMBERSHIP.

GERMAN'S APPEAL DISMISSED.

The House of Lords yesterday dismissed the appeal of a naturalized German who before the war was a member of the London Stock Exchange.

His name was Hugo Weinberger, a Bavarian.

In dismissing the appeal, the Lord Chancellor said the sole question was that the appellant was of enemy birth. The action of the Stock Exchange in excluding him from memoership was justified under their own rules and regulations and the jurisdiction of the Courts could not be invoked.

CARRY ON, BEATTY.

Admiral Sir David Beatty has hauled down his flag as Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Fleet. It is an historic occasion. Its purpose is achieved in the complete destruction of the enemy's naval power. To Admiral Sir John Jellicoe as organiser and to Sir David Beatty, as the first-class fighter and leader who crowned Jellicoe's work, go the chief honours.

Speculation is rife as to whether Sir David Beatty, who is now unemployed, will be offered the post of First Sea Lord of the Admiralty, the importance of which position was never greater. In view of the possible effect of the League of Nations upon Naval policy, it is also urged that a properly organised Naval General Staff must never again be allowed to lapse.

SHOT GUNS FOR STRIKERS.

The strike of farm labourers for fifty shillings weekly wages and a forty-nine hour working week is spreading over the whole of Ulster. Two thousand labourers are out in County Down, where women and children are helping the pickets to prevent non-unionists working. In several instances farmers have used shot guns to intimidate the pickets.

JACK CORNWALL, V.C.

HIS MOTHER'S PENSION.

Jack Cornwall V.C. was immortalised in Jellicoe's Jutland despatches as a typical example of the "Navy way".

Until recently his mother, in humble circumstances, was doled out six shillings and sixpence weekly as compensation for the loss of her hero boy.

As the result of a scathing Press agitation the Ministry of Pensions has increased this to the maximum amount possible under the Act, namely, fifteen shillings weekly.

Lt. Charles Godfrey, formerly the well known bandmaster of the Royal Horse Guards (Blues) died on Sunday.

The Prince of Wales spent an hour yesterday flying over London in a Handley Page.

The French Aviator Roget left Lyons on Sunday morning and flew to Rome, 1100 kilometres, without a stop.

BOLSHEVISTS EXPROPRIATE FORTUNES.

From Berlin comes the announcement that a law of expropriation has been framed.

No one will be allowed to possess more than ten thousand marks.

All money above this amount will belong to the State, who will allow the unfortunate owner thereof a small rate of interest.

It was "regretted" in the House of Commons yesterday that the existence of anarchical and revolutionary movements in India necessitated the passing of a new Crimes Act.

ANOTHER MESOPOTAMIA?

"In military circles the situation of the Allied troops in Northern Russia is viewed with anxiety."

So cryptic an introduction to a responsible Daily Telegraph article cannot fail to bring to mind the Kut-disaster.

Are we, even after our five years' experience of the disastrous policy of dilly-dally, to be again "too late."

The Bolshevik peril in northern Russia is real; our Murmansk and Archangel expeditions are insufficient to combat it.

A withdrawal is at present impossible, and in any case would only act as an incentive to Bolshevism and increase the prestige of its leaders.

Moreover, apart from the obvious duty of safeguarding our forces in the far north, we owe protection to the majority of the inhabitants in the Murman and Archangel regions, who have become involved in the struggle against Bolshevism and who, if now left to the tender mercies of their bloodthirsty fellow-countrymen, would be butchered en masse or, in the human desire for self-preservation, become recruited to the new system.

In the south and east the news, though not so serious, is still bad. Odessa is threatened and the most hopeful criticism possible is that this sector is "extremely defensible."

In the Donetz basin, in spite of repeated Bolshevist attacks, the situation "appears to be stabilised, though somewhat obscure."

The Allies have just emerged as victors from the greatest conflict the world has ever known.

The greatest military combination that could ever be conceived has bitten the dust before their tenacity.

Can these be the same peoples, imbued with the same spirit, who are not content to offer a weak defence to an army of proved torturers and murderers, daily growing in strength and spreading, through its organised government, its venomous propaganda throughout every corner of the globe?

Even if Prinkipo was not a diplomatic error at the time, Lenin and Trotsky have since proved that the suggested conference could not lead to any useful result.

Certain idealists were of opinion that there might be something in common between the Bolshevist and Labour movements.

There is no longer any question on this point. Britain had her labour problems. She has once more proved to the world her earnest desire for social progress. By means of conference, labour has been accorded its rightful place in the government of the country; under the new order the working man will enjoy the benefits of British citizenship equally with his more prosperous fellow-citizen, not only because of his sacrifice and patriotism during the war, but on account of the recognition of the social law that every human being has a right to a clean and healthy existence.

And what does the average working man think of the Bolshevist horrors?

No class recognizes more fully that it has nothing in common with a sect whose chief weapon is the organized massacre of its fellow-citizens.

The Bolshevist peril is real, as real as was the Teutonic peril in 1914, though fortunately, neither so great nor so difficult to overcome.

Brute force, not conference, is the only means of eradicating this modern canker, born of and fostered by a perverted autocracy.

We have a Russian policy. From Wilson to Clemenceau the same desire exists to establish Russia as a sound, wealthy member of the Nations of the World.

What action is being taken?

Siegfried, when confronted with the dragon and told of its "horrible jaws," "burning poison" and "destructive tail," asked if the horrible beast had a heart.

Though not ignoring the manifold dangers, he went straight for the heart and killed the beast.

The heart of Bolshevism is Moscow and Petrograd.

Pierce it and the canker will die out.

DÜSSELDORF TROUBLES.

The strike which is now in progress in the Düsseldorf neighbourhood is of great importance to Germany, because it forms part of an area which is comparable to the great manufacturing districts of the north of England, and includes places like Essen, Mülheim, and Elberfeld, from whose output must be derived part of the funds from which Germany will have to pay for the food and raw material which she must have if she is to continue her industrial and commercial activities. The strike has also a political importance. If the workmen are induced to join the Spartacists, and the Sparticist spirit is reinforced in the forthcoming meeting of the Soldiers' and Workmen's Councils in Berlin, the outcome for the present Government and for the weary remnants of law and order to which it affords what support it can, will be most disastrous.

The facts appear to be that the more sober-minded and intelligent workmen are against the strike. They have no sympathy for the demand for the immediate adoption of communist schemes. They do not attend the strike meetings, and resolutions in its favour are passed in assemblages at which only a fraction of the people employed in this or that industry are present. In this lies the chief hope of those who seek to retain order and continue work. There is really no question of the raising of the rate of wages. The great needs of the moment are work and food. Wages in the Ruhr district are very high, three times what they were before the war. The average wages for an ordinary mechanic is sixteen marks per day and a clerk can earn one thousand to fifteen hundred marks a month. To strike for higher pay in these circumstances is unnecessary, and since at present rates the manufacturers can hardly pay their way it is harmful. It is also useless, because if the wage be doubled it still will not provide work or food. So that there is only one inevitable aim and end to which a strike must tend, and that aim is Spartacism, and the end chaos.

To this cry for "food and work" of the workers and for communism of the Spartacists the Government of Weimar replies, "work and food, no food for those who will not work, and for those who riot with Spartacus the machine gun and the prison". It is inevitable in their present situation that the reply of authority should be on some such lines, depending as the Germans do to a large extent upon the Allies' heavily taxed resources for the supply of food stuffs; but there may be doubt whether in some cases the order of events should not be inverted, and the man fed in order to revive his capacity for work.

If the Government stands firm, and its troops remain and are well handled, Spartacism which holds out no bait to the more rational members of the community should fail of an opportunity. Already whole families of working people have emigrated from districts such as Hamborn, which these extremists have in their strangling hold. The crisis cannot, however, be said to be past until the big meeting of the Soldiers and Workmen's Councils, to be held in Berlin on the 8th, has shown what policy and methods it advocates.

GERMAN RESPONSIBILITIES.

VIEWS OF CAPTAIN VON BEERFELDE.

Captain von Beerfelde, who published Lichnowsky's memoirs, gave an interesting lecture last week at Bale to a public of independent socialists.

In his conclusions he remarked that already in 1917 the German people who in August 1914 went to war full of enthusiasm with the belief in their right cause, could realize that they had be duped and led to the slaughtering bench for a wrong cause. The government had succeeded by their manoeuvres to distorb their judgement. The socialists themselves with the exception of Deputy Kunert let themselves be bamboozled and towed by the government.

In the Austro-Servian conflict, the Russian proposition to submit the question to arbitration was conjured away by Germany. The ultimatum to Servia was drawn up in such a way that war was inevitable.

In vain the German White Book tries to present as a defensive war what in reality was a war deliberately unchained in order to conquer. All the other States did their best to maintain peace; Germany persisted in its policy of violence.

The laconism of the "Wite Book" shows the gaps in the documentation it contains. Germany promised to help Ausria against all. The Kaiser's journey was only a trick to dupe public opinion.

The Tsar's telegram, which requested that negotiations should be begun at the Hague, was purely and simply suppressed by the German Government and everything was done to hide the truth.

The proccedings of Soukhomlinoff ordered the Russian mobilisation, he had in his hands the order of the German mobilisation, and the German troops marched across the frontier before the Russian troops had reached there.

France was deliberately provocated. On the 28th July, German troops violated the French frontier.

AROUND THE DOM.

An American Citizen of Cöln. — Met him one day in a hotel, the — er — but I forget the name. Oh! a most courteous and obliging gentleman. Would persist in paying for wine. And I — not knowing sufficient German to cancel the order — accepted. Really most cosmopolitan. Had lived in most civilized (besides several uncivilized) countries in both Hemispheres. By introduction: An American Citizen resident in Cöln (German pronounciation if you please) .... Subsequently it transpired that his Nibs had lived several years in Milwaukee, U.S.A., came over to the Vaterland on business in July '14, met Hindenburg — and went to France for his health.

A D.A.P.M. Episode. That the soldier was slightly the worse for liquor was fairly obvious. He was not noisy, but had reached that superb state of stupidity, when amongst other things, one fongets that the shortest distance between two points is a straight line. Moreover, his cap, with a flower stuck in the chin strap, was set rakishly at the back of his head. Presently a car drew up at the pavement and an officer stepped out. He hailed the festive one.

"What are you doing, my man?" he asked.

No answer.

"Don't you think you had better put your cap on straight, and throw that flower away?"

"Yessir." The soldier throw the flower away and re-adjusted his headgear.

"Now don't you think it is time you went home?"

"Yessir." He saluted and withdrew.

At the corner of the street a M. F. P. stopped him.

"Do you know who you were speaking to?" he asked.

Tommy shook his head.

"That was the D. A. P. M." said the policeman.

"D. A. P. M.", was it? — hie — well he was a sport anyhow, answered Tommy.

"A RAY OF SUNLIGHT."

W. NEVIL RANDALL.

I was a derelict on the storm-tossed sea of life; abandoned by my dearest and most cherished friends I was left to drift on a waste of degradation. Life had no further need of me, the world would make no further demands on my one-time vaunted capabilities; I was a failure!

At first I sat like Patience on a monument, smiling at grief; and then the bare realities of my potent distress rushed suddenly upon me, and like a reed in the wind I was broken in body and heart.

"Oh! how I suffered for those that I saw suffer!" These words recurred to my disordered mind, and I paid an unconscious tribute to the immortal bard who anticipated my dire position more than three centuries ago. Indeed, if the salt tears welled in sweet Miranda's eyes for those shipwrecked mariners to whom her heart went out, then would she not have been grief-stricken for my own more sorry plight? Can you not picture her distress, accentuated by her own sweet pity? Moaning for the suffering of others; the counterpart of Care, she would have pined in thought and died of a green and yellow melancholy. No! not all her tears could have washed away the stains which oppressed me.

And then, like a transformation scene, the whole aspect of my affairs changed suddenly as, on entering the Canteen, I was greeted with the joyful announcement, "at last we've got some soap!" Imagine my supreme happiness at the prospect of indulging in a long-deferred bath. The clouds which had oppressed me were penetrated by a veritable ray of "Sunlight."

SLINGS, INSIDE AND OUT.

BY VANE.

On a casual glance, the title of my humble effort may seem slightly beside the point, but it is my intention to convince the reader that quite a lot may be written on "slings, inside and out."

Of course, there are many different types of slings. We have the "David and Goliath" type, the broken arm type, and last, but not least the common or garden rifle sling.

One may write many tales of romance and ridicule using as a core the very necessary and useful article.

For instance, it has been observed that occasionally Aiv.'s, even on attaining the dignified rank of sergeant, often find considerable difficulty in attaching the ordinary webbing sling to its adjunct, the Mk.HI!"

Some have even appeared on parade with the sling adjusted inside out!!

On beholding such an extraordinary phenomenon as the above, one is forcibly reminded of a trite phrase running "It's a good job we had a navy!!"

It has been suggested that a School of Instruction be started on the continent, where members of the Army of the Rhine could receive a free course on the cleaning and adjustment of rifle slings.

We should strongly advise anyone who is not perfectly cognisant with the method of correctly adjusting rifle slings to immediately receive instruction on the same, and if he is still uncertain, to borrow a rifle with the sling adjusted correctly and go into a room by himself, there to end his miserable existence with the aid of a "303."

It is a curious coincidence, but nevertheless true, that those people who are lax in the matter of slings, are also to be observed wearing antiquated tunics, jazzy trousers and, to say the least, — doubtful puttees!!!

They also favour belts in preference to braces as a means of keeping the above-mentioned trousers in their "prescribed!" position.

We must now conclude, as words fail us, or rather we are overcome by emotion occasioned by writing about such a delicate matter.

TO ALL CONTRIBUTORS.

The Editor regrets to say that so far he has been unable to answer the numerous letters with contributions which have come in to him. In course of time this will be rectified, and he hopes that all those who have already sent in contributions will continue to do so ad lib. Others who have not get begun, and who are aspiring journalists may take up the cue also.

The complaints against France were wholly invented and when Ambassador von Schoen spoke about attacks of French aviators on Nuremberg and Karlsruhe, his accusation was founded on a pure falsehood.

Through the violation of Belgium, Germany provocated Great Britain.

After the peace of conquest we enforced at Brest-Litowsk, one must agree that the Entente has the right to enforce on us similar peace terms. The German policy consisted of lies throughout: the violation of the Belgian frontier by French troops was a lie; the pretended encircling policy of Great Britain, of which there is no proof, was also a lie.

To be able to bear the consequences of the defeat, the German people has only one way: it is to require that the new Germany shall be rebuilt on the basis of international socialism on freedom, on honesty, and on humanity.

"ON THE PEG."

F. W. GREEN.

It was a glorious Spring morning; the company had paraded and marched on to the drill field, where the platoons were handed over to the "P. T. Wallahs." There were two sergeants in charge of the respective platoons, and as is customary when the "handing over" has been duly carried out, the sergeants hied themselves to a shady spot beneath a lovely old oak, there to wile away a quiet hour.

"How about a smoke," said Sergeant D—.

"Ah, wouldn't I just like a draw, but we must be careful, as it is time for the C.O. to come along, and he is sure to pass this way. Give him another five minutes and we are safe"!

The way seemed perfectly clear, not a soul was in sight, The gentle rustle of the leaves; the song of the lark, as higher still higher he soared away into the heavens; all went to make a perfect scene.

We lighted our briars and then reclining upon the mossy bank, we sent up clouds of tobacco smoke. We could hear the vociferous demand of the P. T. Wallah, "to move", right away in the distance.

To us, it mattered not a straw about "moving". We were happy in our idleness — not a care in the world to disturb our peace of mind.

Then, suddenly, a curious feeling seemed to creep over us, for none other than the great one himself—the C.O.—was looking at us from a distance of only a few yards.

Do you think we could do anything in the matter? We simply hesitated, there was an intuition that silence would be golden. Perhaps, after all, he had enjoyed his morning pipe, and feeling in a happier mood on such a perfect day, would say nothing after all.

Intuition again got a hold upon us and, gently rising to our feet, trembling like the leaves, we attempted to salute — one with the right hand and the other a jerky left.

There was no recognition on the part of the C.O. — not a rebuke, not a word!

Perhaps he had not noticed us after all, so, thus consoled, we proceeded to find our resting-places once again.

This time, however, the reclining was of brief duration as an officer approached with the demand that we were to come forward and give our names and regimental numbers, at the same time remarking "Consider yourselves under arrest."

"On what charge, Sir?" asked the bolder of the two.

"For smoking cigarettes on the parade ground," adding "Why on earth didn't you smoke pipes, you know the old man always smokes a pipe, but abhors cigarettes. Besides, if you wanted a smoke why didn't do the same as us, and keep well out of the way."

"D—," old chap," remarked, "there's no doubt about it, we are on the peg!" Alas! we were undone!

We made off for the C.S.M. and acquainted him with the fact that we were "for it."

The C.S.M. was a good old time-serving soldier, and an Irishman to boot.

"Now phwat is the charge,"? says Paddy.

Explaining in unison, we told him the plain, unvarnished truth.

"Well, shure, but they can't hang you for it, and ye're not the only defaulters"!

"But, think of it, three solid years of soldiering in Kitcheners Army, risen from full private to sergeant, and the first black mark, and possible reduction! And all gone in smoke! Oh, the degradation when going on leave!

We sought consolation from the fact that the "crime" was committed on a Saturday; that Sunday intervening, the usual twenty-four hours in which a charge should be heard will have expired. Further, did not our company officer express the opinion that after a good dinner—and there was a possibility even of two good dinners being consumed by the C.O.—the charge would be forgotten or forgiven.

Yet, we were under arrest. We dared not leave the billet area; we expressed the tenderest sympathy with the "janker boys," for were we not nearly in that position ourelves? May be, we should come under that terrible category soon. Then, as Sergeant D. said, "What about the crime sheet?" Very probably there would be an entry which would mar all future prospects. And all through that confounded alluring Princess Nicotine!

Visions of the Guard Room would crop up all through the two long weary nights of waiting. At church parade, when marching the company on to the Parade Ground "Right turn" should have been the order, when "Left" was given; and the C.O. himself was taking the parade.

"D—" old man, I confided, "we are done for!" "Why" said D—, "For heaven's sake, don't get windy', or it will fairly put the lid on. Do you know what there happened to me? The C. O. dropped his glove; I picked it up, and in my most polite manner, handed it to him. He thanked me with a nod. Now, isn't that good enough to get us off?"

Anyhow, the eventful day arrived. The "cockey" orderly-sergeant (a full corporal), whom, by the way, we had studiously avoided all the time we were under arrest, now came forward with all the swank imaginable, aud bellowed within hearing of the whole company, "Sergeant D—, Sergeant G—, you're for C. O.'s orders at 9.30 on a charge!"

"Alright", I retorted, "no need to shout about it!" That put him down a peg or two.

We paraded, with the other defaulters, at the time appointed. The R.S.M. looking fierce as ever, snapped out our names. "Take off those sidearms. Caps off. Escort, right turn, quick march, left right, left right," (in staccato voice) "Half left turn!" "Sergeant D—, Sergeant G—, Sir," snapped out the R.S.M.

"Oh!" thought I, if the floor would only open and swallow us up. If, ah! if "Jerry" would just oblige by dropping a bomb upon the scene all would be over, and we should be saved from the degradation that overshadowed us!"

Then came the evidence. Lieutenant A— stepped forward, and with a superabundance of self-assurance stated that on the morning of the 5th inst. "he saw the two accused smoking cigarettes."

"Aha!" the whole situation dawned upon me. Had I not for years sat in the Court, and known many a good case to be squashed through incorrect evidence? Just a detail, perhaps, but sufficient to save a man's neck. Here, then, was my opportunity.

The officer's evidence having been taken, there came the question from the judge (I mean, the C. O.).

"What have you to say?"

There was a wonderful display of mental telepathy when we answered in unison. "Incorrect evidence, Sir!"

"Impossible, I saw you both smoking pipes!"

"Yes, sir!" (again in unison.)

"Where, then, is Lieutenant A's evidence incorrect?"

"You stated yourself, sir, that you saw us smoking pipes."

"Yes well! what then?"

The officer's evidence was that we were smoking cigarettes!"

"Oh, ah, yes! Pipes, pipes! Beastly cigarettes!"

"Admonished — no entry. March them out!"

So ended our suspense of two whole days and nights, and that is why I never smoke a cigarette — on parade.

THWARTING OF "JERRY."

13th K.L.R. SERGEANTS' MESS CELEBRATE 1st ANNIVERSARY.

At the Bahnhof Hotel, Beuel, on Sunday, March 30th, a dinner was given by the Sergeants attached to H.Q., 13th K.L.R. to celebrate the anniversary of March 28th 1918, when the German effort to reach the channel Ports and destroy the British Army was so ably frustrated by all arms of the services.

How nobly this battalion responded, the following brief extract from an authoritative source is evidence enough, and is well worth quotation:—

"At 4.30 a.m. on March 28th 1918, the enemy put down an intense barrage on the whole of our sector. The trench mortar barrage on the front line was more intense than anything previously experienced.

"The reserve line was barraged with field guns and "heavies". Under cover of this barrage the enemy launched a terrific attack with masses of troops. In spite of the intensity of the bombardment, the front line stood firm, and poured a devastating fire into the enemy, whose attack was beaten off with exceptionally heavy casualties on their part."

"The value of this steadfastness against tremendous odds cannot be estimated. It gave the enemy his first check at the point where he was to be subsequently checked throughout the day."

Later, the enemy attacked again with even greater numbers. All that happened on this eventful day would be difficult to chronicle, but "attacked on all sides, the men mounted the parapet and fought to a finish on the ground on which they stood."

Could anything be more inspiring? Such sacrifice is beyond all praise, and will for ever live in the glorious annals of the Regiment.

To celebrate this memorable day a dinner was arranged amongst the sergeants, and the guests of the evening were: R.S.M. Adams; R.Q.M.S. Richardson; S.M., Mason; C.Q.M. Sgts. Pritchard, Howell & Goddard; and Sergts. Luther and Roberts.

During dinner a photograph was taken of the party, and the happy faces in the subsequent result is sufficient proof of the excellence of the repast and the good comradeship existing. An impromptu smoker afterwards took place, at which many fine items were rendered.

C.Q.M.S. Howell, in an able speech, briefly detailed the splendid record gained by the regiment, and in a very touching reference proposed a toast to all fallen comrades. This was given in a silent tribute. It is hoped this dinner will become an annual feature. The whole proceedings were under the able direction of Sgts. Ryle and Rawson.

OPLADEN ECHOES.

The "Demobilizables" are wearing the No. 9 smile these days, a marked increase having been observed in the number demobilized daily. It is now believed that very shortly the last of the men to go home will receive their tickets for Blighty. Leaflets for soldiers on the question of demobilization have been issued While many points enumerated are of great importance, the leaflet in other respects is scarely up to date. Its value, therefore, is greatly minimised.

Some criticism has been directed at the method pursued in releasing demobilizable men, younger men with fewer responsibilities, it is alleged, being demobilized before men of over 40 possessing strong business claims. Of course it must be borne in mind that in a question of this nature it is impossible to please everyone.

A common grumble recently on the part of military visitors to Cologne, Bonn and other centres of interest was the almost total lack of facilities for the providing of a good square meal in any of the Canteens or in the Cafes. The men armed with passes were thus compelled to take "Iron" rations, or some other similar delicacy, with them if they were to exist. The Salvation Army Canteen in Cologne has now fulfilled a long-felt want.

Pleasure trips up the Rhine have commenced. The chilly weather experienced on Monday made the wearing of overcoats an imperative necessity. A wag remarked that the necessity for a rum issue with the usual rations was just as imperative.

Notwithstanding the weather conditions the trip was highly enjoyed. The delightful scenery stirred even a "canny" Scot to remark that. "It maun be a fine place this in the simmer-time."

A subject that has created not a little interest amongst original menbers of a Battery is the proposal that such members, or as many as can possibly get, should meet annually in "Blighty" after Peace has been signed, and enjoy a pleasant hour or two at the social board. Many original members of a unit have been separated from their first love, and many, alas! have "crossed the bourne". This proposal of an annual social is likely to come to fruition with regard to one Battery at least, and the Sergeant-Major is one of the leading movers in the project.

Emanating from the foregoing proposal, many Among the different Batteries in the Opladen area are several capable players of bridge and whist. Already whist tournaments have been run with conspicuous success in connection with individual Batteries. A proposal has now been made that Inter-Battery tournaments should be arranged, which, while assisting to secure a high level of play, would go far to develop sociability and good fellowship amongst the different units.

The committee responsible for the management of the London amateur foursome tournament has decided to hold the event towards the end of July, and the offer of the Sunningdale Golf Club to lend its course for the purposes of the competition has been gratefully accepted.

FOOTBALL.

104th FIELD AMBULANCE v. 52nd BEDFORD REGIMENT.

Before a large concourse of spectators the 104th Field Ambulance and 52nd Battalion Bedford Regiment played a football match at Siegburg on Sunday, when the latter lost by the odd goal in seven. In three of the four goals registered by the Ambulance, the goal-keeper succeded in getting to the ball, but unfortunately lost it only to see it drop into the net.

The third goal scored by the Bedfords was the tit-bit of the game. Starting with L/C. Whiteman who headed the ball to C. S. M. Mansfield a series of short quick passes ensued, in which the ball travelled via Lieut. Simpson, Sgt. Blackwell, and Pte. Merry to enable Pte. Gigli to find the net with a lightning low shot. Sgt. Blackwell at centreforward maintained his previous week's form for the Bedfords, and, although missing a penalty, had the satisfaction of scoring the first ball for his side.

Throughout the game was fast exciting and thoroughly enjoyed by the large spectatorate.

5th GORDONS V. 2/4th K.O.Y.L.I.

A Rugby football match was played at Kerpen on Friday between the 5th Battalion, Gordon Highlanders, and the 2/4th K.O.Y.L.I.

After a rousing game, in which the Gordons showed splendid form behind the scrum, they ran out winners.

Scores:— 5th Gordons. . . . . 11 points
2/4th K.O.Y.L.I. . . . . nil.

So far the 5th Gordons are unbeaten this season.

51st DEVONS v. 1/5th DEVONS.

The 51st Devons met the 1/5th Devons on the former's ground at Burscheid on Saturday, when a keenly contested game resulted in a win for the home team, the score being four goals to one. The result was a fair reflection of the run of the game. The 51st were much more aggressive and the visitors' goal was in constant danger. The forwards combined well, and there was an excellent understanding between them and the halves who, in turn, received worthy support from their very sound backs. For the visitors, Terry, at back, played a brilliant game and relieved many dangerous situations.

For the home team the goals were scored by Lieut. Hooper, Sgt. Merris (2), while Hicks and Roberts at centre-forward netted for the visitors.

M.G.C. OFFICERS v. WESTERN DIV. OFFICERS.

A football match was played at Herzheim on Saturday. Fast end to end play at the commencement called upon Major-General Strickland to save for the Division, and Lt.-Col. Hope for the Gunners, and after several smart clearances both "goalies" were beaten by Major Rodd for the Division, and Lieut. Rayner for the Gunners.

Half-time: 1—1.

On resuming, the Division showed superior play, and although Lt. Chandler and Lt.-Col. Hope repeatedly cleared the Gunners' goal, Lt. Holdsworth (2), Major Rodd, Major Goodridge, and Lt. Evans added goals for the Division; while Lt. Rayner and Major Good scored for the Gunners.

Results: — Western Div. H.Q. 6, 1st Batt. M.G.C. 4.

NO. 2 FIELD AMBULANCE V. 488 BTY. R. G. A.

A very interesting football match was played on the Field Ambulance ground at Lengsdorf on Saturday, between teams representing No. 2 Field Ambulance and 488 Battery R. G. A. from Ippendorf. The opening play was all in favour of the Ambulance team, for whom Burrell scored a very good goal after five minutes play, and Howard added a second one just on half-time.

The second half saw the game very keenly contested. Half an hour from the final Marshall placed the Ambulance further ahead, from a penalty given for hands. From the kick-off the Artillery raced away, and from a well-placed corner kick managed to place the ball through the goal.

The final came with the score,
No. 2 Field Ambulance 3,
488 Battery R. G. A. 1.

Comments.

The game was a very fast one, every movement being keenly contested. The Ambulance team was far better balanced than the Gunners, who played football of the kick and rush style, and thereby lost many opportunities, particularly in the second half when playing down the slope. Captain Gaston played centre-forward for the Ambulance for the first time, and was plainly out of training, but we are expecting better things from him in future.

RUGBY UNION.

525 COMPANY R.A.S.C. v 310 BRIGADE R.F.A.

A large crowd gathered at Olef on Monday afternoon to witness a match between the above-mentioned teams. The ground was in good condition and the weather favourable.

From the kick-off the Service assumed the aggressive and kept the play in the Artillerymen's half. Scrummages were plentiful here and despite the latter's hard attempts, they could not carry the play to the other end of the field. The game was now very keenly contested, and as play was taken near the Artillerymen's line, Dews obtained possession and placed the ball behind the posts. Marriott failed to bring the goal-kick to fruition.

Soon after this and just before half-time, Sergeant Simpson got the ball, and with a good piece of footwork augmented the score for the Service, scoring a well-earned try. When Corporal Rowell was preparing to take the goal kick, the ball touched the ground, and the Artillery charged. The kick did not reach the goal.

Half-time score: —
525 Coy R.A.S.C. — — — 2 tries = 6 points.
310 Brigade R.F.A. — — nil.

SECOND HALF.

The game was contested keenly by the service on the resumption, and from a throw in close to the Artillerymen's line, Watson took the ball over. Dews missed with the goal kick. Not many minutes afterwards Sgt.-Major Wingate received the leather when a short distance from the line and carried it safely behind the posts. This time Marriott added the goal points.

For the Artillerymen, Major Currie, who had been transferred from the forward line to full back, was playing a splendid game, and saved his side from disaster on numerous occasions. Jenkins, for the Service, was also playing an excellent game, infusing a great amount of confidence into his play.

Sergeant Major Wingate once more got possession of the ball in the centre of the field, and despite the fact that he was tackled on several occasions he was successful in touching the ball down behind the posts. Marriott again proved successful with the goal kick.

RESULT:—525 Coy R.A.S.C. — 5 tries, 2 goals = 19 pts., 310 Brigade R.F.A. . . . nil.

The Army Service Corps' "Jazz Band" was in attendance, and they provided great amusement both during the game and during the interval.

BOXING ITEMS.

World's Championship to be Decided in London.

In a six-rounds boxing-bout at Philadelphia on Saturday Johnny Kilbane easily defeated Artie Cleary.

It is reported that Tom Pritchard has accepted an offer to promote on behalf of a syndicate a contest between Jack Dempsey and Jess Willard for the heavy-weight championship.

The championship of the world is to be decided during July next in London. Cables have been sent to both Dempsey and Willard stating that a purse £20,000 will be split up as they desire.

On Thursday next at the Holborn Stadium, Vittel and Criqui, the two famous boxers will be in the double £1000 programme arranged by Mr. C. B. Cochran. Vittee resently defeated Billy Fry in London.

52nd ROYAL SUSSEX REGT.

HISTORY OF A UNIT WITH MANY NAMES.

It may be interesting to record that the 52nd Battn., Royal Sussex Regt., which made its first appearance in the columns of "The Cologne Post", yesterday is in direct lineal descent from the 16th (Public Schools) Battn., Middlesex Regt., which went to France in November 1915, and had as tirring time on the Somme on July 1st, 1916.

Beginning as the 24th Battn. (reserve to the 16th Middx) in July, 1915, the unit sent out many drafts and then under the new name of the 100th Training Res. Battn., from Sept., 1916, trained men enlisted under the M. S. Acts. At Colchester in Nov. 1917, it was known for a few weeks (thanks to the vagaries of O. C. Nomenclature, War Office) as the 253th Infantry Battn.; then it received and kept for a year-and-a-half, the title "52nd (Grad) Bn. R. Sussex Regt." Under this name, in March 1918, the unit drained itself to its last drop and sent 900 men to the front from Cromer in a few days; one is glad to meet these men constantly in the towns of Germany at the present time.

Again refilling, the unit, 52nd Sussex, did a hard summer's work, but slowed down a bit when the armistice was signed and, dropping the word "Graduated" from its title, came out to Germany a month ago with the A (IV) brood hatched last summer, now as likely-looking a collection of youngsters as one would wish to see. By a happy coincidence the present Adjutant, Capt. C. E. Going, who was in the ranks in the old Public Schools Battn., (16th Middlesex) at the beginning of the war, finds himself again with comrades of 1914—15, though very few now remain.

"C" COY 32nd M.G.C. V. "A" COY 52nd MANCHESTER.

A football match was recently played between "C" Company, 32nd Battery, M.G.C. and "A" Company, 52nd Battery, Manchester Regiment on the Machine Gunners' greund at Geistingen.

The first quarter of an hour provided the best play in the game, both teams being well matched. Early in the first half the visitors' right back met with a nasty accident, colliding with the left back and receiving a cut over the right eye. This left the Manchesters with only ten men on the field but in spite of this they played up gamely.

The first goal was scored by King from a penalty awarded to the Machine Gunners. By half-time Suthers had registered a second goal with a beautiful shot from the centre of the field. In the second half the Gunners had most of the play and three further goals were registered by Levell (2) and Hughes (1).

The Manchesters, however, were not to be denied a goal, their inside left running through and scoring just before the finish. The whistle blew leaving the Machine Gunners victors by 5 goals to 1.

9th D.L.I. V 5th CAMERONS.

A splendid match should be witnessed at Lindenthal, Cologne, this afternoon, where the 9th D.L.I. receive a visit from the 5th Camerons. The Durhams have only been beaten twice this year, the second occasion being in the final of the 62nd Divisional Cup, when they were very unlucky to lose after having most of the play.

The Camerons also have a splendid record and will be considerably strengthened by the inclusion of four members of the team which won the Army Commander's Cup for the 1st Camerons.

The kick off is timed for 2.30.

HOW WE "DID" THE RHINE.

WITH THE KING'S TO COBLENZ.

On the 1st of April a party of the 13th Kings, consisting mainly of "demob's to be" hied ourselves to the left bank of the Rhine by the Bonn bridge, whence we were to proceed on a river trip to Coblenz. Despite its being April Fool's Day and the fact that the steamer seemed to be on the full side already, we stowed ourselves away in obscure corners and "pushed the boat out" at 09—15. The weather at the start left nothing to be desired and great was our astonishment later on running into a snowstorm. However, that was of short duration and everything procceded merrily.

It would take too long to describe the beauties, besides one can buy an official guide, so why worry?

Rations were consumed at mid-day and soon after we arrived at Coblenz where we tarried for an hour. Here the predominating feature seemed to be booths with "SHOES SHINEO" in conspicuous lettering on the outside.

On board again at 15.00 hours to the accompaniment of a bugle and ship's hooter to hurry up the laggards, the journey home was made in record time. The proceedings were enlivened by Caps. Service, I, careering into midstream, at which everybody, including the owner, laughed heartily. Cameras were greatly in evidence, their owners endeavouring to get ruins and castles into "vest-pockets." Only once was there a run on field-glases but of that "hush!" Billets were reached about 15.00 hours and all who took part wish to thank those responsible for a most enjoyable outing. The "demob's to be" have now the knowledge that in years to come they will be able to regale their grandchildren with yarns of "How we did the Rhine."

At the National Sporting Club Sgt. Joe Atwood (Canadians), beat Johnny Summers on points in a 15 rounds bout.

Joe Lynch's backers have challenged Wilde. They are prepared to put up a side bet of £1000 to £2000.

The Pope has written to Cardinal Czernock, Primate of Hungary, disapproving the proposed changes in the laws concerning the celibacy of priests.

20,000 MEALS A WEEK.

ACTIVITIES OF THE E.F.C. OFFICERS' CLUB.

To prepare and to serve 20,000 meals in a week is by no means an inconsiderable undertaking. And yet this is the achievement of the E.F.C. Officers' Club in Cologne — not once, as the outcome of a very special effort, but week after week.

Prior to the advent of the annex — which since its birth a week or two ago, has relieved matters considerably — the average number of dinners served each Saturday night in the main Club was no fewer than 900. In this connection it is interesting to point out — especially for the benefit of those officers who are apt to display signs of irritation at occasional little delays — the amount of work that such a huge undertaking entails as far as the German waiters are concerned. Between the kitchen and the dining-room, there is a space of about 100 feet. Allowing for the officers who dine in two's and three's this means that a five-course dinner necessitates at least 600 journeys back and forward by each waiter, not taking into account the additional work involved in the bringing of drinks. In other words, the "knight of the napkin" in the course, roughly, of a couple of hours actually walks close on two miles, to say nothing of the "little bit of extra" involved in struggling through the congested doorway leading to the hall, and dodging round tables.

The Opening of the Club.

The Ewige Lampe Hotel, with its already existing and readily adaptable facilities for conversion into an officers' club was taken over soon after the arrival of the Army of Occupation in Cologne by Lieut. Col. Berly, R.A.S.C., who is the officer-in-charge of the E. F. C. in Germany. He, with the assistance of other R.A.S.C. officers, very soon completed the necessary alterations, and on January 17th the club (labelled and complete) was opened in the happiest circumstances. The German orchestra and staff of waiters who functioned when the Ewige Lampe was under native control, were all retained and in a very few days the musicians were dispensing the latest "rags" and popular English ditties (not even emitting "When We Wind up the Watch") with as much gusto as may be expected of a London restaurant orchestra.

Where the Prefits Go.

It will probably satisfy the curiosity of a large number of officers to know exactly what happens to the profits which obviously must accrue from snch a huge turn-over as the club enjoys. A quotation from the official pamphlet issued on the subject of E.F.C. clubs generally, is itself sufficiently explicit to answer the question. It states: —

"The whole of the profits made by the E.F. canteens will be passed to the War Office and devoted to the good of the soldiers and their dependents in accordance with the orders of the Army Council."

Capt. H.S.C. Cooke, who is in charge of the Ewige Lampe Club, speaking to a "Cologne Post" representative, referred to a recent letter in this paper on the subject of the Opera House. The writer of this letter opined that among the causes of the departure of officers from the Opera House, before the conclusion of the performance, was their anxiety to be in the club before 8 p.m. in order that they might have dinner in tolerably reasonable time. This could no longer be advanced as an excuse for disturbing the rest of the audience at the opera, by a premature departure, said Capt. Cooke. During the recognised hours for dinner, be added, there was no occasion for any officer to wait. The Club with the annex, was capable of accommodating all the officers who required dinner without the slightest delay, unless there should be some extraordinary influx of patronage on a very large scale.

A Tribute to the "Waacs."

Lieut. Dorey, whe has had many years' experience in "Clubland" and who is now in charge of the annex, speaking to our representative, was enthusiastic in his praises of the "W.A.A.C.S." who had been employed in club work. He referred especially to the Officers Club at Poperinghe, where the girls of the Women's Auxiliary Corps worked for long hours under trying conditions. So close to the line was this Club that officers, covered with mud, frequently entered with such a remark as "we had a jolly good battle this morning; now we will have a jolly good dinner." The Club at Poperinghe, which was often exposed to shell-fire, but carried on notwithstanding, was subsequently moved to St. Omer, the authorities bearing in mind that "discretion is the better part of valour."

The present-day Club at Cologne is very different from those we used to know in the days of fighting. There are thousands of officers who will agree that the E.F.C. Clubs were among the greatest blessings of the war, very often constituting the only means for a little social relief from the ghostly experiences that were our every-day lot. The inducements of sight-seeing and the many other counter-attractions that prevail now that we have returned to the piping times of peace have disposed completely of the card-room, the billiard-room, and the reading-room as we used to know them, so that now the club is very little more than a restaurant and refreshment saloon. In these busy times in our social life, officers have very little leisure to devote to club games and this fact will undoubtedly become more and more apparent as he summer approaches.

The Club of Old.

The first really big E. F. C. officers' Club was opened at Etaples on 19th May 1917. There were, of course, earlier clubs in the busy French towns, but none attempted to minister to the wants of the "inner man" to the extent of the one mentioned. The club was founded by Major (now Lieut. Col.) J. E. Knott and met with immediate and enthusiastic approbation. In the large building taken over by the E. F. C. for the purpose, there was accommodation for a billiard room, reading room, library, lounge, dining and tea room, and (by no means least important) a silent room wherein many officers will remember writing important reports.

From that time onward, E. F. C. officers' clubs have been institutions of first importance. Wherever the army said it wanted a club, however impossible may have seemed the situation of the proposal at first, there, sure enough, in the course of only a few days, would appear the welcome sign "E. F. C."

CONCERT AT TROISDORF.

The large theatre at Troisdorf was on Saturday well filled for the M.G.C. concert arranged by the Rev. Cooper C.F. The first part of the programme consisted of a variety entertainment, in which Lieut. O'Hanlin proved an excellent elocutionist and the "Padre" gave some excellent character sketches of the East-end cockney. A splendid orchestra contributed some charming selections during the evening.

The second half of the programme consisted of a performanee given by the 52nd. Bedfords' Concert Party (by kind permission of Lieut.-Colonel Gilbert Cooper) of that amusing comedy "Freezing a Mother-in-law," which evoked continuous roars of laughter from start to finish.

COLONIALS AND THE ARMY.

Arrangements have been made that men serving as members of the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve, Royal Marines (Short Service Ratings), Australian Imperial Force, Newfoundland Contingent, New Zealand Expeditionary-Force may enlist into the British Army for service with the Armies of Occupation. Enlistment will be for a period up to April 30, 1920, or for such less period during which the Armies of Occupation are maintained as such. Married men with dependents in receipt of dependents allowance from an Overseas Government cannot be accepted.

All acting rank must be relinquished and a man holding substantive rank above that of sergeant must revert to that rank, subsequent promotion being dependent on his being selected by his commanding officer to fill a vacancy. A man may during his service be transferred to another unit or corps without his consent, should the exigencies of the Service make such a transfer desirable. No bounty will be paid to men enlisted under this Army Order. Men enlisted will receive from the date of enlistment pay, allowances, and other emoluments at precisely the same conditions as non-commissioned officers or men of the British Army of the same rank and corps who are retained or who have volunteered for service in the Armies at present abroad. Separation and dependent's allowances will not be given. A man who enlists will be discharged from his present engagement as from the days prior to enlistment. He will not be allowed to purchase his discharge during the period for which he has so enlisted, except with the consent of the Army Council. At the termination of the period of enlistment men will be repatriated at Government expense.

CASUALTIES.

First is the Aid Post; name, age, and religion;
"Stick out your tongue, and what's your division;
Don't bite the clyno — and what is your age,
Let's feel your pulse", says the khaki-clad sage.

Field ambulance next — doctors, in dozens,
Ask you the names of all your first cousins;
"Stick out your tongue and let's sound your chest
You've got the Flu, all you want is a rest"

Thirdly, the C.C.S., doctors in overalls,
Name, age, religion again, an orderly calls,
"Where is the pain, sonny, all in your back?"
"Yes Sir", says I. "All right, evac'

Fourthly, the base, with its hospital large —
Name, age, religion, as usual the charge;
Nurses in uniform flitting about
Saying, "Blighty my boy, you're soon going out".

Next see the Colonel of R. A. M. fame;
He wants to see if you're playing the game,
Asks you your name, and your stay in the line
Says, "You've service enough go over the brine".

Once on the boat, and in Blighty you land,
Straight into hospital, isn't it grand?
England you've made with a terrible struggle,
Its worth it you think, when you've leave and a cuddle.

THE BOLSHEVIST MENACE.

SOUTH AFRICA — UNITED STATES. BALTIC PROVINCES.

SOUTH AFRICA.

Some time ago the Minister of Justice and the Minister of Land were commissioned by the Union Goverment to make inquiries into the economic and labour unrest on the Rand. We understand that these Ministers, Mr. De Wet and Colonel Mentz, have reached Johannisburg and have already met the leading authorities of the town.

A general view of the situation indicates that the spirit of unrest which was evident a few days ago has given way to the quiet of expectancy. The Commissioners have been requested by the Strike Committees to grant a meeting at which explanations of the general situation can be made and a policy adopted by which the town's essential services can be continued and a lasting settlement of a confessedly difficult situation effectively planned.

Meantime the native position is not improving. It is stated that the authorities have decided to arrest the ringleaders, and groups of natives visiting the town stores are being placed under strict supervision. Colonel Truter, Chief of Police, has taken control of the situation.

A number of responsible chiefs at present in Johannisburg are going into the questions agitating the native mind. They condemn the movement to resist the Pass laws. It is mainly due to the chiefs' influence that the natives at the mines have hitherto kept aloof from the movement.

Last week a large crowd of natives congregated in the precincts of the Magistrate's court where those who had been arrested were being tried. When the Court adjourned the natives made a concerted move towards the entrance to the prisoners' yard, necessitating the bringing up of police reinforcements, who, armed with batons, charged the natives and dispersed the crowd. Many arrests were made and a number of natives were injured.

At Vrededorp the natives have been causing trouble. They held a meeting last week and after they had assaulted a European, mounted police were summoned and speedily mastered the situation. Three natives were shot in the affray and taken to hospital, while several whites were injured. The latter are also lying in hospital. No one was killed.

We understand from later news that at Vrededorp the natives intercepted whites as they passed through the Fordsburg subway and asked the first man they met whether he was an Englishman. Receiving a reply in the affirmative, the man being an ex-Army officer the natives escorted him to the subway with raised sticks and cheers for the King, but they refused to allow him to go to the assistance of another white who had been knocked down and whom native women were stoning from the parapet. As soon as he got clear the Englishman gave the alarm to the Police, and a squadron of South African Mounted Rifles was summoned and soon restored order. The injured white was removed insensible, but he recovered later.

At the end of last week, in the House of Assembly, Colonel Cresswell, the Labour leader, opened the question of the arrest of two men at Maritzburg. He asked for the reasons why the Public Welfare Act had been invoked. Mr. Malan, the Acting Prime Minister, replied that these men had been charged with circulating seditions and Bolshevist opinions amongst the natives.

UNITED STATES.

It is a far cry from South Africa to the United States, but even in the latter we learn that a determined effort is being made to spread a Bolshevist creed. On the authority of the Washington representative of the Daily Telegraph we further learn that some of the foreign press in the United States have recently had a largely increased circulation, and Government agents attribute this to the machinations of Lenin and Trotsky.

Senator Overman and other legislators have framed bills to meet the case, and also to provide money for the education of foreign-born or foreign-bred children in this country so that they can learn to read English and do away with foreign papers in the big cities. As to native American labour, which is well educated and nighly paid, the Bolshevik teachers are in despair, and since native labour controls the situation there is absolutely no danger in this country of the money sent by Lenin and Trotsky securing the sinister object that is intended.

It is all to the good that the policy of American employers is to keep wages at their present level until the cost of living is lowered, and of this there is no immediate prospect. Competent authorities declare that the situation a month ago was not viewed with complete satisfaction, and in many cases a reaction was noted among the workers very similar to that with which England has been confronted. At the present time there is no alarm whatever, conference, conciliation, and working agreements having done their business. The British method of ruling out the doctrinaires and hurricane reformers, and finding solutions by definite concentration upon concrete problems has not been lost upon the American proletariat, and strengthens the views that Bolshevism will never get a foothold in English-speaking countries.

BALTIC PROVINCES.

News of considerable interest has reached us regarding Bolshevism in the Baltic Provinces. Lieutenant-Colonel Tallents has arrived in London after a most interesting journey along the coast from Danzig to Reval, a journey undertaken at the request of the Supreme Economic Council. Our readers will remember that Colonel Tallents was the British representative in Warsaw of the Inter-Allied Commission for the Supply and Relief of Poland. We append the following details of Colonel Tallents' work.

He left Poland by the railway through Mlawa to Danzig, which has lately been so much discussed in connection with the return of General Hallers Army from France. He travelled by destroyer to Libau, where he found the German military authorities still in effective occupation of the town and the interior, but spent several days on shore conferring with representatives of the Lettish and Lithuanian Governments. He then went up the coast to Reval, passing through twenty-five miles of ice only one day before a change in the wind again made Reval icebound.

After conference with the Esthonian Government, his ship being still icebound in Reval, Colonel Tallents finally crossed by ice-breaker to Helsingfors, returning viâ Abo, Stockholm, Christiania, and Bergen to England, and has now gone on to Paris to present his report and to deliver a personal letter entrusted to him by the Prime Minister of Esthonia for Mr. Lloyd George. He has brought back with him some terrible photographs of the atrocities committed last January, when, before the succesful counterstroke by the Esthonians, the Bolsheviks overran most of their country.

We understand that Colonel Tallents holds the view that the prompt supply of food, clothing, and materials for the reconstruction of industry to the southern coast of the Baltic is the first condition of an effective counter to Bolshevik aggression.

WITH THE RATIONS.

Although the wearing of the new Active Service ribbon was officially sanct oned as from the Ist April, there does not appear to be any particular anxiety on the part of the members of the Rhine Army thus to decorate their manly breasts. Those lads returning from leave seem to be leading the way in the matter, so that there is quite a dash of bright colour in the boat-loads of khaki that arrive daily at the French ports.

* * *

The new decoration ribbon is certainly not lacking in "noise" and distinctiveness. Made of "shot" silk, the main colour is bright orange which forms a half-inch centre-piece. Then there are is a strip of white and a strip of sky blue, these two being divided by a narrow black line. The complete effect is rather dazzling.

* * *

The square facing the west side of the Cathedral in Cologne is gradually assuming a decided "Londony" appearance. An enterprising news-vendor has organised a definite stand for the disposal of his wares, with papers carefully arranged in tiers, very much on the lines of the al fresco stalls that are so plentiful in the Strand neighbourhood, while the appearance, for the first time yesterday, of three or four flower girls with well laden baskets was sufficient to induce thoughts of home. The "sweet vilets" and other flowers, looking very fresh and tempting appealed irresistibly to the English and American ladies who populate this part of the world in ever-increasing numbers.

* * *

The huge Handley-Page aeroplane that circled round and about Cologne yesterday morning, at a very low altitude, attracted much German attention. On one occasion in its flight, when the machine skimmed gracefully round the spires of the Cathedral in alarmingly close proximity, a German, who at one time was a pilot himself, was everheard to marvel at the wonderful stability of the monster plane.

BUCKSHEE PARS.

At the London County Council Hall the Marquis of Crewe presented to twenty-one women and twenty-nine men the Order of the O.B.E. and thirteen King's Police Medals, the recipients of the latter including six officers of the London Fire Brigade, and Superintendent Croasdell, of the Edmonton Fire Brigade, all the awards being made as a recognition of meritorious services performed on various occasions during the war.

Included in Ramsgate's summer programme are seaplane trips from the foreshore. In some of the neighbouring towns the authorities have taken the view that the landing of aircraft would be detrimental to the safety of those using the sands, but the scheme to be adopted at Ramsgate provides for passengers being ferried to and from the flying machines, so that there is no danger to those in the close vicinity.

A fine of £100, or three months' imprisonment, was imposed at Dumfermline on David Walker for having used a shed at the Dockyard for the purposes of betting. THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary, limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompamed by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

POSTAGE STAMPS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir. — A few days ago there appeared in your columns a seasonable warning to purchasers of postage stamps, regarding the prices demanded from members of the British Forces.

May I also add a note about the nature of the so-called "War Stamps" (Kriegsmarken) which are so prominently displayed in Cologne.

The majority of these come direct from the printer to the dealer and have never been in the hands of the postal authorities. Some are postmarked and yet retain their original gum; some are mounted in sets on sheets or envelopes and the same postmark put on each; some are genuine labels with forged postmarks or surcharges; whilst others, e.g. the Czecho-Slovak issues, are speculative efforts from private sources, without any official authority.

It is no easy matter even for the expert to detect all these forgeries.

War stamp of the Central Powers are not catalogued in British publications and Cologne dealers will not sell German catalogues to British collectors, as the exposure of the forgeries, with consequent loss of profit, would result. War stamps on entire envelopes are perhaps the only safe purchase at present. Of course, if one desires to have a collection of specimens of the printer's art, all postage labels, genuine or speculative, are interesting, but the price paid for the latter should be small.

I have observed so far only two shops in Cologne which do not make a prominent display of doubtful "Kriegsmarken," and in each case the proprietor is one who has had considerable business with English dealers of repute in pre-war days and is desirous of keeping his own reputation with a view to the resumption of his English connections. OLD HAILEYBURIANS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—Might I suggest that if the Service is arranging any more Dinners for "Old Boys", such gatherings should not be limited to the commissioned ranks, but that common soldiers should be allowed to sit below the salt if they are prepared to conduct themselves with a proper humility towards their superiors.

Are we not all worshippers of the great god Demos?

"RANK OUTSIDER."

SMART GUARDS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Reference the paragraph "Some Guards" in your issue of the 2nd inst, I think Mr Thomas could afford to weigh his thoughts before putting them in print.

Evidently the writer did "get the wind up", or he wouldn't have written. But his letter will tend to dishearten those young fellows who are now coming to take up the work already begun by us who have gone through the mill. It is far better to see such zeal than the "don't care" spirit, too prevalent among us. Even "weary pedestrians" are a cause of great worry to sentries at times. The Sgt. i/c Guard should be highly honoured.

FREE TRAVELLING for M.P's.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

It is reported that a memorial is being signed by members of all parties for the provision of free railway passses between Westminster and their constituencies.

Recently, when the question of an increase of wages for railway workers came before the House, the opinion was expressed that the extra charge would cripple the railways, unless they in turn passed on the charge to the public by the raising of fares and freight charges.

These same logical gentlemen are now claiming that about 700 members of the travelling public, each one certainly not "receiving" less than £400 p.a. should travel from his "home" to his "business" free of charge, at public expense.—

T. — As far as we know, the main reason was the jealousy of the Berlin Government, who greatly feared a development of the Metropol of the Rhineland, and therefore arranged that Bonn should have the University; Düsseldorf, the Academy of Arts; Aachen, the High School of Technics; leaving only business to Cologne. The danger was that Cologne without a university would only have a business spirit, and probably lose many of its ideals. To prevent this, a citizen of Cologne, Mevissen, gave to this city the money necessary for the erection of a High School of Commerce, and by this laid the foundations of the Economic faculty of the Cologne University.

SMALL SHOT.

I heard a good story the other day of an officer who has recently been demobilized.

His employers have given him charge of a branch in Paris. At a greatly increased salary, too! But he doesn't mean to remove his family and household goods to the French capital yet awhile. He has discovered that the cost of living there is sky-high. In celebration of his promotion he gave a simple dinner in a Paris restaurant the other evening. Five people; menu—soup, fish, joint, pudding; extras — a cigar each, a bottle of champagne and two bottles of ordinary wine. Bill — 450 francs.

In paying the charge, the ex-officer, who is a Scot, remarked, "does the 450 francs gi'e ye a season ticket for the eatin' hoose?"

But the intricacies of the Scottish joke were lost on the French proprietor.

AN OLD ACQUAINTANCE.

I was walking up Hohe Strasse when I met my old friend Smith. We turned into one of the cafés for a drink. Selecting a vacant table, we sat down. A waiter approached noiselessly.

"Sir?" he inquired politely.

Smith stared at him.

"I've met you before somewhere," said he.

"Dat so?" again politely.

"Yes — weren't you the blighter I threw a bomb at during that daylight raid at Arras about Easter '17?"

The waiter smiled sheepishly, but did not reply. I gave him the order, and then looked enquiringly at Smith.

He grinned deprecatingy.

"But the rotten part of the business was, I forgot to take the blinking pin out of the bomb."

ADVANCE GUARD STARTED FOR RUSSIA

COLOGNE STRIKES IMMINENT

MURDER OF AN ITALIAN GENERAL

ODESSA REPORTED CAPTURED BY BOLSHEVISTS

NORTH RUSSIA RELIEF FORCE.

ADVANCE GUARD EMBARKS.

It is officially announced that the Relief Force now being formed for service in North Russia will include Royal Field Artillery, Royal Engineers Field Signals and Postal Sections, Infantry, Machine gun Corps, Royal Army Service Corps, Royal Army Medical Corps, Army Ordnance Corps, Army Veterinary Corps and Army Pay Corps.

The Force is to be mainly composed of volunteers drawn from demobilised and discharged men, but all men re-enlisting must be fully trained, fit for general service and over nineteen years of age.

The advance guard of the Relief Force embarked at Tilbury last night.

CLASS 'Z' RESERVISTS.

There is no truth in the report that class Z reservists are being called up.

An Army Order dated the 1st April permits their joining the colours and many are volunteering for Archangel, but their re-enlistment is in no way due to coercion.

EGYPT CALMING DOWN.

Important decisions concerning Egypt were announced in the House of Commons yesterday.

Mr. Cecil Harmsworth stated that General Allenby, under the discretionary powers granted him, had issued a proclamation to the effect that now that order had been in great measure restored, he declared, in agreement with the Khedive, that there were no restrictions on travel and Egyptians who wished to leave the country would be free to do so.

This concession would include people originally barred from entering England.

A Ministry is in course of formation and a deputation of Ministers would shortly visit England in response to an invitation already twice extended by the British Government.

Reuter's message from Cairo, dated the 4th April, states that owing to the activity of the patrols and close co-operation of the Civil authorities normal conditions are being rapidly restored throughout the Delta.

The country is being cleared of brigands who, even before the disturbances, existed largely by blackmailing the law-abiding classes.

During the disturbances of the previous day patrols were several times obliged to fire, owing to the hostility of the mob. It was largely due to the discipline and self-restraint of the troops that the casualties were limited to nine killed and fifty-six wounded.

Telegraphic communication had been restored to beyond Wasta and the restoration of the railway towards Minia was only a matter of hours.

FIGHTING IN ALBANIA.

ITALIAN GENERAL KILLED.

A Belgrade telegram from Prisrend says that sanguinary engagements in which machine guns were used have taken place between Italians and Albanians near Betcha, in the Commune o Soiroj, which is occupied by Italians.

It is learned from an official source that the Italian General and his suite were attacked and killed yesterday week by Albanians at Evandegne, near Sentars.

ARMENIAN MASSACRES.

Reuter's Constantinople correspondent wires that important arrests have been made in connection with the Armenian massacres, including Halil Pasha, uncle of the notorious Enver Pasha.

SMUTS' HUNGARIAN PROPOSALS

Reuter's correspondent telegraphs from Copenhagen that General Smuts has proposed to the Hungarian Soviet the establishment of a neutral zone, to be occupied by Allied troops, between Hungary and Roumania.

He undertakes to propose to the Powers the immediate raising of the blockade and proposes a conference between the Hungarians, Czeco-Slovaks, Rumanians and German Austrians before the settlement of frontier and economic questions.

The Hungarians agreed to a conference but formulated further proposals on other questions.

GERMAN AUSTRIAN UNION.

A German Commission will proceed to Vienna on Tuesday next to discuss with a German Austrian Commission the question of the Union of German Austria with Germany.

LONDON BOLSHEVISTS DEPORTED.

In London yesterday 150 Russian Bolshevists were arrested. They will be deported to Odessa. Further arrests are expected to be made in provincial towns.

CRITICAL SITUATION AT ODESSA.

REPORTED CAPTURED BY BOLSHEVISTS.

A Reuter telegram from Constantinople dated 4th April states that the French Cruiser Waldeck-Rousseau is proceeding to Odessa where the situation is critical owing to Bolshevist pressure. The population is considerably alarmed and many people are hurriedly leaving. Thousands of refugees, mostly Greeks, have fled to Constantinople.

A Havas wireless message sent out from Moscow at 6 p.m. on the 7th says that the latest telegrams received there from Kieff announce the taking of Odessa by Ukrainian Bolshevist troops.

The evacuation of Odessa has for some time been considered preferable to the reinforcement of the troops holding the town. General Tranchet d'Esperey has apparently chosen to evacuate. The Allied fleet, however, still retains its mastery and blockade of the Black sea, which is the most important point to consider.

REVOLUTIONS IN GERMANY.

Revolutions in Germany move apace.

In Berlin a fresh one is expected and the utmost precautions are being taken. Spartacists demonstrated in front of the Chancellor's Palace with a banner bearing the words "Down with the Government, who are using violence against cripples, widows and orphans."

Wilhelmplatz and Wilhelmstrasse are occupied by the military.

During the March riots 1175 persons were killed in the streets, including many soldiers.

Freiheit contains the following cry: —

"Despair has seized the masses. Strike follows strike ..... The Government knows only one way against the movement of the masses — brutal violence. The masses have nothing more to hope for from the Government or from the National assembly," and so on, ad nauseam.

Peasants in Franconia and the Upper Palatinate have combined in a refusal to send any food produce to Munich and Augsburg until the Soviet republic is abolished. Upper Bavarian and Swabian peasantry have followed suit.

The Bavarian Landtag was opened yesterday at Bamberg, the Minister for Military affairs, Herr Schneppenhorst, refusing all outside offers of help.

The Government of Hessen, Baden and Würtemberg have declared their intention of recognising the Hoffmann Ministry as the only legal Government of Bavaria.

SAXONY.

Yesterday there was severe fighting at Magdeburg, fourten persons being killed.

Food to the value of a million marks for distribution among the population this week was looted.

STRIKES PENDING IN COLOGNE

After long negotiations with the syndicate of employers in the metal industry, the hands employed by the firm of Maschinenbau-Anstalt Humboldt at Kalk, Co ogne, have announced their intention of striking.

Other works in Cologne intend to strike within the next few days.

BOLSHEVIST DEFEAT IN LETTLAND.

Lettish Headquarters announces that in a big battle between Letts and Bolshevists near Schlock the latter were heavily defeated. These attacks it is believed, herald the beginning of a great Bolshevist campaign against Lettland and Lithuania.

CLEMENCEAU'S CLEMENCY.

At the request of M. Clemenceau, M. Poincaré has commuted the sentence on Cottin, the man who wounded "The Tiger", to one of ten years imprisonment.

Yesterday M. Poincaré and M. Clemenceau received Madame Cottin, mother of the assailant, and Me. Oscar Bloch, the barrister who defended him.

GERMAN COLONIES.

At the Peace negotiations the German Colonial Administration will be represented by the ex-Governor of German East-Africa, Dr. Schnee, and the Privy State Counsellors Dr. Marquardsen and Dr. Ruppel.

TWO HUNDRED EXECUTIONS DAILY.

Reuter's Copenhagen correspondent telegraphs a statement emanating from the Lettish Press bureau at Libau that two hundred executions for alleged counter-revolutionary activity are being carried out daily at Riga. The tribunal is under the notorious Peters and the accused are condemned without having a regular trial.

Under pressure of famine even women are enrolling in the Red army at Riga and are doing duty as bridge guards.

Lt. Col. Maurice Craig has been appointed by the Ministry of Pensions honorary consultant for neurological shell-shock cases.

QUESTIONS IN THE COMMONS.

MISSING PRISONERS OF WAR.

Answering Mr. Forestier-Walker (U. Monmouth) Mr. Winston Churchill said that the motor ambulance parties which had been searching for prisoners of war in Germany had finished their work. No men previously marked as "missing" had been found, but one hundred and twenty one men known to be prisoners of war had been discovered. The number of British prisoners of war in Germany unaccounted for was, 1796 on the 7th April.

CENSORSHIP OF LETTERS.

In answer to Mr. Bottomley (Ind., S.Hackney) Mr. Churchill stated that the censorship of letters addressed by soldiers to members of their own families would be abolished as soon as possible.

OFFICERS' RIGHTEOUS APPEAL

Many officers serving in Salonika have written, says the Evening News, begging that something may be done to prevent the sale of our army horses in Greece on account of the cruel treatment to which they will probably be exposed.

Many of the officers express the hope that they will be allowed to shoot their horses and pay for them, rather than let them go.

ATTACHE DIVORCED.

On the grounds of his wife's misconduct with Captain Lionel G.Ames, Mr. Robert Rodger Glen, an attaché in the Diplomatic service at Washington, was yesterday granted a divorce. The case was undefended.

PRINCE ALBERT, R.A.F.

Yesterday Prince Albert second son of the King and Queen, made a series of half-hour flights on Avro machines from Croydon aerodrome, in rainy weather. The flights were part of the prescribed course of instruction for a pilot's certificate.

RHINE ARMY COMMANDER.

LUNCH WITH THE KING.

Sir William Robertson, who is about to leave England to take over the command of the Army of the Rhine, called at Buckingham Palace yesterday with Lady Robertson. They were received by the King and Queen and had the honour of being invited to lunch with their Majesties and members of the Royal family.

Sir Douglas Haig was also received by the King yesterday. He takes up the appointment in succession to Sir William Robertson, as Commander in Chief of the Forces in Great Britain.

LABOURITE MAGISTRATES.

Five Labourites qualified as magistrates (Justices of the Peace) at Huntingdonshire Quarter Sessions yesterday, viz.: three railway signalmen, a foreman, a platelayer and a small-holder.

CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS RELEASED.

Of the 888 conscientious objectors sent to prison for refusing to serve or for offences committed while in the Army, 404 will be released this week.

Several were liberated yesterday.

AN ARCHANGEL WAAC.

Sir Ernest Shackleton's sister, Miss Kathleen Shackleton, went to the War Office yesterday to volunteer for the North Russian Relief Force. She was referred to the Headquarters of Q.M.A.A.C. popularly known as the Waacs.

RECORD WHEAT CROP ANTICIPATED.

American Government reports on winter wheat placed its condition on the 1st April at 99.8 per cent.

The acreage under cultivation is the highest ever planted and it is estimated that one hundred and twenty five million busnels will be available for export to Europe.

FOCH'S OPINION OF SIR HENRY WILSON.

At the request of the Prime Minister the dinner to Sir Henry Wilson at the House of Commons has been postponed until after the Easter recess.

Viscount Duncannon, one of the organizers, has received a letter from Marshal Foch, dated 2nd. April, in which he describes Sir Henry Wilson as "one of the most capable, most loyal and most valiant soldiers of the Allied armies, and one of the greatest servants his country possesses."

Sir Henry Wilson was one of England's representatives on the Supreme War Council which sat at Versailles.

H. M. the King and Queen visited the Canadian Maple Leaf hut in Grosvenor-gardens yesterday afternoon.

"Judith," a new play by Arnold Bennett, was produced with great success at Eastbourne last night. Miss Lillah Mc. Carthy was in the title rôle.

RUTHERFORD MURDER TRIAL.

PLEA OF INSANITY.

When the trial was resumed at the Old Bailey yesterday of Captain Norman Cecil Rutherford, D. S. O. for the murder of Major Miles Cariston Seton, the accused sat in the dock staring listlessly in front of him. Only at intervals did he appear to follow the evidence at all keenly.

Several witnesses, both medical and police, gave evidence regarding Rutherford's physical and mental condition before and since the crime.

In November, 1916, Rutherford was invalided home from France with eczema, which, a medical witness said, was likely to cause insomnia and mental strain.

In the course of his evidence, Dr Spilsbury, the famous pathologist, reconstructed the crime. Major Seton, he said, was probably standing in the dining room when the first shot was fired afterwards moving through the door while the other shots were being fired.

Dr. Griffiths, who has Rutherford under his care at Brixton prison, is ill and unable to appear. His report has not yet been put in.

The case for the prosecution being concluded, counsel for the defence intimated that the defence would be insanity at the time of the murder.

The case was adjourned.

BRITISH TRADE BOOMING.

EXPORTS RISING, IMPORTS FALLING

Board of Trade returns for March show that British exports are gradually recovering. Although March contained only two more working days than February, exports of British goods amounted to fifty three million pounds against forty seven million pounds for February, an increase of nearly thirteen per cent. The increase in re-exports of foreign and colonial merchandise is even more striking, the gain on the month being from five to nine millions, an increase of about eighty per cent. Imports are still showing a gratifying though slow decline. They amounted to one hundred and six million pounds for March against one hundred and seven million pounds for February, despite the greater length of March. Last month's exports amounted to fifty nine per cent of the value of imports, against a percentage of thirty six per cent a year ago. We exported over four million tons of coal and coke last month against under three million during February. The value being nearly seven million five hundred thousand pounds against under five million five hundred thousand pounds. In March 1914 we exported over six million tons. Under manufactured goods our exports of iron and steel and manufactures thereof were one hundred and fifty eight thousand one hundred and ninety tons against one hundred and eight thousand two hundred and seventy seven tons for February this year and four hundred and five thousand three hundred and thirty eight tons for March, 1914, but total value is very nearly as great as before the war.

These indications of steadily improving business conditions have given a fresh fillip to business on the London Stock Exchange.

Yesterday gilt-edged securities strengthened and buying was active in several other directions. Russian mining groups attracted more attention on receipt of an encouraging cable from Siberia.

MILITARY SERVICE BILL.

"SINISTER WAR CLOUDS."

In the House of Lord yesterday Lord Peel moved the second reading of the Naval, Military and Air Force Service Bill.

Lord Buckmaster moved that the Bill be rejected.

Earl Curzon, supporting the Bill, said that the Army which it would provide was to reap the fruits of victory. There were still sinister war clouds on the horizon and he could not agree that the maintenance of these forces was unjustified. Earl Curzon pointed out how much British troops are in demand throughout Europe and said that Vienna, finding itself in difficulties, and apprehensive lest it should share the fate of Buda-Pesth, turned to Britain and said "If you will send ten thousand British troops we can guarantee the situation."

That is because they trust British troops, said the noble Earl.

The Bill was seconded.

LABOUR ELECTION GAINS.

Out of a total membership of four hundred and fifty seven comprising the London Boards of Guardians, Labour candidates secured one hundred and thirty one seats. There were only twenty-one Labour members on the old Boards. They thus gained one hundred and ten seats. The other outstanding feature of the elections was the success of women candidates.

WHERE LABOUR DID NOT WIN.

Lady Betty Balfour has been elected to the Woking District Council, where the Labourites were defeated, winning only two out of nine seats.

RABBIT BONE CAUSES DEATH.

As the result of a rabbit bone sticking in his throat, Col. Horace Walpole died yesterday at his country seat in Hampshire.

BEATTY'S VALEDICTORY MESSAGE.

Admiral Sir David Beatty has hauled down his flag on the "Queen Elizabeth." In taking farewell of his officers and men he said: —

"The spirit of the Fleet has been beyond praise and the highest traditions of our great Service have been upheld.

"I leave in the full confidence that the spirit of the Grand Fleet will remain; that the lessons learnt in the war will be laid to heart and that the mutual understanding which exists between officers and men will be maintained and fostered for the safety and honour of our King and Empire."

CASES AT THE MILITARY COURT.

RETRIBUTIVE JUSTICE.

In order to gratify her spirit of revenge a dismissed servant laid an information against her late employer, stating that weapons were concealed in the house.

Search was made, swords and bayonets being discovered, together with a sword belonging to a friend!

The lady of the house was fined one thousand marks and the householder four thousand marks.

HONESTY NEARLY PUNISHED.

It was noticed that a railway worker at Deutz was carrying an English oil-can. He only stopped when the sentry fired at him.

Accused of theft, he said at the Court that he found the can on the line and that his duty was to deliver it th the station authorities.

Although the sentry declared that he was walking in the other direction the man was acquitted.

CHARGES AND COUNTER CHARGES.

A German soldier who returned to his home in December last discovered that during his absence at the front his wife had been unfaithful. He entered an action for divorce.

His wife thereupon denounced her husband to the French authorities, accusing him of having stolen goods, chiefly linen and cloth, in France.

On this information not only the man was arrested, but his wife also, on the charge of concealing the stolen property.

In his own defence the man swore that he had honestly acquired all the goods in France and actually described the places where he had purchased them.

The alleged vendors, members of fifteen different families, were communicated with and without exception declared that they had sold all the goods in question when they were compelled to evacuate their homes.

The man was at once acquitted, the President of the Military Court at Mayence complimenting him on his correct behaviour.

Unfortunately there is no mention of what happened to his wife.

FAMOUS DUTCH CARTOONIST HONOURED.

The famous Dutch artist, Louis Raemaekers, whose cartoons drawn during the war expressed so vividly the infamy and inhumanity of enemy militarism, was the principal guest at a dinner given in his honour yesterday by the Lord Mayor of London, Sir Horace B. Marshall.

M. Raemaekers, in his speech, said that when he came to England in 1915 he gave his services to the then Government and afterwards to the succeeding Government. For him the Government of 1915 would always have the undying glory of having tried its utmost to prevent war, not only for England but for the world. Viscount Grey had done more than anyone else to nail down the lie that war was forced on Germany, and when war was declared against Belgium Mr. Asquith made a declaration which he hoped would ever be found in the school books of English girls and boys as a monument of British policy.

The present Government, said M. Raemaekers, if it were judged by the things it had achieved, was the greatest England had ever known.

TRAINING DEMOBILIZED SOLDIERS.

At Leeds yesterday Mr. James Currie, C.M.G., head of the Industrial Training Department of the Ministry of Labour, met representatives of the Advisory and Pensions Committees of the West Riding to explain the new system of training demobilized soldiers.

In reply to a question Mr. Currie thought there was no reason for complaint by the trade unions. There had been some delay as regards the engineering trade but this was due to Government reorganisation consequent on the general election and to changes in the Ministry. So far the trade unions had given them every facility.

A representative said they had been held up for two years in training in the engineering trade because that trade union would not accept the principle.

Mr. Currie hoped all such difficulties would be removed by the end of the week.

NEW BREAD FOR STALE.

A Food Ministry Official said yesterday that there was no reason why new bread should any longer be prohibited except that the masters and men had not reached an agreement on the subject of night work.

A few days ago the masters were convinced that men would not strike because the Government would not cancel the order prohibiting the sale of new bread.

FOUR AND TWENTY BLACKBIRDS.

Yesterday evening the Metropolitan police raided a house in Bloomsbury and arrested twenty four coloured men who were playing a game of hazard with dice.

They were all bailed out at Bow-street police court.

Many of them were jazz band players and hurried off to fulfil engagements.

100,000 STARVED TO DEATH.

Information comes from Vienna to the effect that from the beginning of the War to the end of 1917 no fewer than a hundred thousand deaths from starvation had occured in German Austria.

The agreement presented to Erzberger by Marshall Foch at Spa was signed in the room where the ex-Kaiser signed his abdication.

THE SURE SHIELD OF OUR EMPIRE.

The Grand Fleet is no more! On Monday of this week the flag of the Commander-in-Chief of our navy was hauled down, and once again our fleets and squadrons are on a peace establishment. Thus passes the greatest navy which the world has known. The time has not come when historians can calmly review the four-and-a-half years of war and apportion to each arm of our services its due in the triumph of our cause, but already it is undoubted that the British navy played a noble and wondrous part in victory. Were Captain Mahan alive he could see how surely the war now happily ended has proved his historical contention. The influence of sea-power is supreme.

The Grand Fleet which was in August, 1914, entrusted to Admiral Jellicoe as "Commander-in-Chief"—an eighteenth century and not a new title—grew stronger each year of war. Queen Elizabeths and Royal Sovereigns, battle-cruisers of amazing armament, light cruisers and destroyers that rivalled in speed our fastest locomotives, "hush" boats of all sizes, and innocent-looking "mystery" ships—all vied with each other to make our shield of Empire surer. One must not forget how much we owe to the men of our ship-building yards, engine shops, and armament forges when we speak of this accession of strength.

But the Grand Fleet, despite the monotony of its labours, its constant training, its unceasing watchfulness, its lack of warfare's excitement, maintained and even increased its morale in a fashion that made anxious hearts rejoice and shamed pessimism into nobler faith. Zeebrugge and Ostend were the climax of a zeal that never wavered.

None can dwell on the achievements of the Grand Fleet with unmoved soul. They carry him back to the dim yet glorious days when England fought for her proud title of mistress of the sea. We think of Cabot who, on the 5th of March, 1496 — the birthday of the British Empire — received from Henry VII a charter for voyaging to the El Dorado of the West; of Martin Frobisher and Francis Drake and the hardy buccaneers of Queen Bess who defeated the pompous Armada of a Philip; of Blake and the seamen of the seventeenth century who wrested from Van Tromp and De Ruyter the ruling of the waves; we think of Hawke at Quiberon Bay and his famous sentence, "Now lay me along side the French Admiral;" and, last of all, of Nelson, whose genius and inspiration saved our empire from the domination of its foes.

The spirit of such men is not dead. It has been alive in the men of the Grand Fleet, and they have preserved the old tradition of seamanship, chivalry, and victory.

All honour to the Fleet that is no more!

A SOFT JOB.

BY L.C. LEAPMAN.

A wise saying of Solomon which runs:—
"There are three things which are too wonderful for me; nay, four which I know not:—
The way of an eagle in the air,
The way of a serpent upon the rock,
The way of a ship in the midst of the sea,
And the way of a man with a maid," is to my mind incomplete.

Had he lived in these days, I am sure he would have added:
"And the arrival of a troop train in France."

It is a "scream", and the direct effect on the R.T.O's office would provide splendid material for a revue or sketch, whilst the fact that the French and Belgians now control all traffic adds of course to the general excitement.

If you can imagine a small office, containing a huge stove that threatens to roast alive the harassed staff; a telephone that rings incessantly, and a tiny window labelled "Enquiries", you have some idea of the scene.

A train arrives—in itself an event worthy of record — the troops crawl sleepily out of the "Hommes 40, Chevaux 8" on to a platform entirely devoid of light, and the fun commences.

An immense crowd of Tommies besieges the window and asks to be directed to obscure units and places the staff has never even heard of; officers, scorning the window, and quite regardless of an imperative notice pinned on the door, intimating that "Entrance of unauthorised persons is forbidden", pour into the office and enquire as one man, where they may put their kits, where they may be accommodated, where and how they are to go, and a thousand-and-one other questions, all of which are drowned in the general uproar.

Then the door communicating with the French office bursts open and a very excited Frenchman — or maybe two or three — literally hurls himself through, waving Ordres de Transport, etc., and volubly explaining in rapid French, which no one understands, that something or other is wrong, and giving the impression that a frightful accident is about to happen, or has happened.

At the same moment the crowd in the doorway is scattered by a frenzied "Sub" who rushes in, clutching his Train Diary in one hand and a wire cheese-cutter in the other, and wildly demanding if anyone has seen, heard or has otherwise any knowledge of the whereabouts of the O. C. train.

This is the train officer, whose job it is to interview the O. C. train or T. C. O. with the object of obtaining his signature to the many army forms with which he has been provided by a well-meaning but distinctly annoying H. Q. — an operation evolving great tact and power of persuasion on the part of the T. O.

Engines whistling, as only French engines can, and the almost deafening hissing of steam, completes this picture of chaos. In the midst of all, the R.T.O. himself, if he is a wise man, stands with a cheerful countenance and an expression which suggests that no problem is too great for him to solve; that really everything is quite normal and not in the least discouraging.

Gradually, the crowd disperses; the Frenchman is pacified and retires not quite certain whether he has been understood or not; the T.O. having failed to elicit any information whatever, and unable to convince any officer that he would make an ideal deputy for the missing O.C. panics out in a condition bordering on lunacy, and is immediately heard "strafing" the unfortunate members of his staff who have unwisely come to "help".

The engine, with one last long and defiant shriek, rumbles out of the station at a speed of two miles per hour, which, by the way, is rarely exceeded unless it is descending a steep gradient with defective brakes, and we settle down to comparative peace once more to await the next arrival.

Such is an R.T.O's office on these occasions, and to those who are suffering from ennui or desire a new and original form of entertainment, I can recommend nothing better than a night spent with the R.T.O. and his staff.

SANDWICH BOARDS AND COOKING.

BY "LOST SHEPHARD."

My Dear Father.—You will be relieved when you read in the gossip-columns of the Police Gazette that I have volunteered to stay "over here" until such time as those in authority can afford to dispense with my services. You probably will marvel at my voluntary prolongation of absence from the home fire-side, but I have my own melancholy reasons.

I tried hard to get a guarantee of employment from the Manager of Mopstock's Advertising Department, as previous to the war I was the leading man in the Walworth Road file of "Sandwich-board-humpers." Yea! Well do I remember how, with measured tread and slow, I used to lead my little party of life's miscellaneous mishaps along the kerb of the busy pavements.

When the war broke out I cast off the encumbrance of sandwich-boards, and dashed off to the nearest Recruiting Office offering myself as a component part of that living wall of "England's Best" which kept the wave of German militarism from washing our Empire from the face of the earth. That's how I became STORIES I HAVE TOLD.

BY M. Mc.ALOON.

FLANNIGAN IN KHAKI.

The first time I met Flannigan was when he rolled up to enlist in the early recruiting days, at Jardine Street. Captain Barrie sized up the roguish looking Irishman for a moment, and then asked if he could read and write. "Both, yer anner," said Flannigan. "Well," said the Captain, "perhaps you can read that," pointing to the sign in Chinese above Ah Bons' laundry across the street. "Troth, yer anner" said Flann. scratching his head "I confess I cant rade it, but if ye give me a fiddle I'll play it for ye."

* * *

Flan was paraded at Hitchin with the rookies, and the Sergeant Major, Jock Donald, was calling the roll. "Anderson?" "Here sir." "Flannigan?" "Here Sir." "Montaig?" No reply. "Montaig?" At the second time of asking a pale young fellow in the ranks beside Flann took a pace forward and said, "I beg your pardon, Sir, perhaps you mean me, but my name is Montague." When the "Major" recovered his balance Montague got it thick and heavy. "Oh, Montagew is it? All right Montagew, fall out to the rear and do two hours fatigew."

Strange to say, for an Irishman, Flannigan was not particularly robust, and his persistent falling out on route marches grievously annoyed the S.M. "Look here Flannigan," said he on one occasion, "the next time there's a war on and you want to enlist, join up in the Flying Corps and then you'll only fall out once."

* * *

Major Muirhead was giving a lecture on discipline and its value, particularly with regard to the good bearing of the soldier in public. "For instance" he said, "if there was any trouble in a public bar, a well-conducted soldier would drink up his beer and walk out." "Now, what would you do Flannigan, if a civilian tried to pick a quarrel in a public-house?" "Why, Sir," said Flann, "I'd simply drink the beggars' beer and 'hook' it."

* * *

When the winter caps were first issued, Flannigan wore his in the Scotch gamekeeper style, with the flaps over the ears and tied under the chin. But only for one day. Next morning he was early afoot to the Q.M.S. and astonished Archie with, "Give me my ould cap back, quartermaster. Finnigan asked me into the Herberg for a drink last night, and I cuddn't hear him."

* * *

In the "Canada," near the Crombeke road, Finnigan and Flannigan were discussing the going west of poor old Dolan.

"He wuz a good man, wuz Dollan," said Flannigan.

"Yis he wuz a good man, wuz Dolan," said Finnigan.

"An he wuz a foine man, wuz Dolan," said Flannigan.

"Yis, he wuz a foine man, wuz Dolan," admitted Finnigan.

"An a ginerous man, wuz Dolan," said Flannigan.

"Well," said Finnigan, "I cant say as I know of his generosity. Did he ever buy you anything?"

"Very nearly," said Flannigan. "He came into the Herberg one night where me an a couple of the lads were waitin' on someone to stan' us a drink, an' Sez: "Well boys, what are we goin' to have — rain or snow"?

* * *

Flannigan was on the way down from the Ramparts to Goldfish to complain about the absence of tea in the sugar, and got one in the leg — nothing much, but great visions of Blighty. In the dressing station at Pop. where Flann. was pretty well known, Doc. made a thorough examination, and said to the orderly, in a semi-serious way "As subcutaneous abrasion is not observable, I do not think there is any reason to apprehend tegumental cicatricisation of the wound." Then to Flann. "What do you think of it yourself Flannigan"?

"Shure, sir," said Flannigan, "you've taken the very words out of me mouth. That's just what I was going to say meself."

* * *

Flannigan got there alright and enjoyed woodbines, tea, and excursions at Leamington Spa. Casey, a pretty bad case, arrived in the next bed to Flann. one day and after about a fortnight on his back, opened up conversation by asking what like the staff were. "Shure," said Flannigan, "they're not bad at all. The nurses are darlints and Doc. he's a jewel, but he's very forgetful. He had old Bill Kerr over there on the table wan day, an later on he missed his pincers, an' had to open up old Bill before they were found. Another day he left a packet of Kingfishers inside Alf and they would have been there till this day if Alf hadn't jibbed. By the way weren't you on the table, yesterday"? "Was I"? said Casey, "I dont know."

Just then, Doc. appeared at the ward door, and shouted, "Has anyone here seen my Sam-Browne belt"? — and Casey fainted.

Flann. won his medal at Maubeuge, celebrated at Charleroi, and was demobbed at Düren. He got on Captain Hose's soft side one night at six, produced a guarantee letter from Fred Dasie, giving, Rivershore for the Newbury Spring Cup and went home as a hot-cross-bun manufacturer Lucky old Flann!

one of "England's Best"! Well, being "one of the best" I lately applied to Mopstock's for my former employment as sandwich-board squad-leader, with confidence born of past achievements. To my dismay I received a reply to the effect that the sandwich-board squad has now become a "one-man-business."

It appears that an economic idea has struck Mopstocks Advertising Department for, in place of a squad of six melancholy, meandering bearers of boards, they now employ a rotating contrivance carried on two wheels and pushed by one man. This machine exhibits six different boards which rotate by means of cogs attached to the wheels. Thus are Mopstock's jams, hams, and other flim-flams, brought to the notice of the public by the labour of one man instead of six. So, my dear father, being robbed of my sandwich-boards I cling to my six-foot handspike as my only means of support. My O.C. has thanked me for signing on for another year. He tells me I have saved the battery from disbandment. What will England say?

So, dear father, you can see how all my fond dreams of civilian greatness seem to be doomed to rude awakenings. Therefore, for a while longer I will stick to the guns; though there is a rumour that I may be appointed to a high position in the Battery cookhouse. I had the job as cook once before, but, either through jealousy or a deplorable lack of discipline, the gunners threatened to go on a hunger strike if I were not "sacked." Thereupon, the O.C. came to the conclusion that I was a better hand at dealing out death to the enemy than at serving out duff to my comrades. Anyhow, I went back to the guns and, eventually — won the war! So, now you know!

CELEBRITIES IN KHAKI.

What might have happened to some past and present notabilities had they been in the British Army as Tommies. Told with extreme delicacy by W. E.

(II) PRIVATE CHARLIE CHAPLIN.

I quote from Part 2, Para. 7, Battalion Orders of the 115th Slopshire Light Infantry, dated 18th June, 19—.

Strength, Increase: No. IIIIII Pte Chaplin Charles, having been compulsorily transferred from the 7th (Canadian) Californian Fusiliers, reports his arrival on the 17th inst. and is taken on the strength of the Battalion as from that date.

I have always agitated for more details and more humanity in Battalions Orders than Commanding Officers usually display in that brief exercise of their literary faculties. It seems such a pity that the unique events about to be recorded here should be extinguished beneath the blight of official literature.

The information above, however, is only a predecessor to a series of remarkable events—events which I shall endeavour to relate in the most faithful manner possible.

At 10.30 a. m. on the morning of the 17th, the M.P. on duty at the gate saw, approaching him, a figure. Being considerably puzzled as to whether this figure was a tramp, a German Baron in reduced circumstances, a decrepit vendor of newspapers, a poetical member of his Education Staff, or a Brigadier-General in mufti, he had just rushed in and warned the Guard to turn out when he perceived that the cause of his anxiety was merely a private soldier. True — a soldier in most wondrous attire.

I cannot attempt the impossible, but I feel it my duty to give to the public some idea of this wonderful sight.

The figure was clad in khaki — now soiled by the mud of many countries. He carried his rifle by the sling like a basket of newlaid eggs, and with his left hand grasped a string, tethered to the end of which was a little once-white dog. A little cane, strangely familiar to the bewildered M.P., was hung from the third button of his tunic.

As to his boots, I shall always be of opinion that the proper place for such extraordinary specimens of the manufacturer's art is in the Kensington Museum.

Private Charles Chaplin impressed everybody favourably from the first. No doubt the R.Q.M.S. found it rather troublesome to supply suitable garments for so slight a figure.

Charles had a wonderful knack of making his khaki suits pathetically reminiscent of his film-acting days. In a very short time he would reduce new suits to strange proportions. His lady friends (their name was Legion) always felt painfully conscious that the superfluity of cloth in his trousers could be attached with great effect to his tunic, though, of course, their feminine modesty would always prevent them from making him aware of the fact.

His life of wealth and luxury had ill-prepared him for the hardships of a military life. And it was truly pathetic to see his sickly smile at his neighbour when the scent of partially-cooked cabbage reached his nostrils.

He lived on the contents of huge hampers which were almost daily arriving for him from London.

So fond was he of his little dog, that he was not ashamed to confess that they always shared the contents of these hampers together, in the most affable manner. Charles had only one regret with reference to this. It was that in the course of time his pet grew so fat that he was quite impossible to camouflage with any success in the seat of his master's trousers — a film feat that had aroused much morbid enthusiasm throughout many continents.

Private Chaplin's room (he had "wangled" one for himself) was always besieged by a cordon of breathless sight-seers. On one occasion a business-like looking man with a black bag and a Roman nose was observed to enter the sanctum. It has been since rumoured that this was the Insurance-Agent pressing for the quarterly premium on Charlie Chaplin's feet.

No verification of this statement has, however, been received from Pte. Chaplin himself, who, you will agree, is the most likely person to be correctly informed on so delicate a matter as his own pedal extremities.

But I am not at all sure that a registered letter bearing a Canadian post-mark was not a passionate love-letter from Miss Mary Pickford. Besides, he has her photograph on the wall, with his own in close proximity.

Perhaps it will be wondered (the more especially as he was doing splendid work in organizing Concert Parties on his own unique lines) why he had to leave our Battalion with such lamentable suddenness.

Unfortunately, the censor is still very active in these regions, so I can do no more save hint intimacy between Pte. Chaplin and somebody's daughter.

If I venture to murmur that on the occasion of Charles and that young lady indulging in a much rehearsed love-scene on the veranda, the latter's betrothed — a fiery Captain in the R.A.F. — made a sudden and dramatic interuption, it will of course be generally realized that I have the best grounds for attempting to avoid a grievous scandal.

Thereafter the Demobilisation Officer received urgent private instructions to hasten Pte. Chaplin's speedy demobilization.

I can see him now, as he left us, walking along in his inimitable style much the same, it must be confessed, as when he first arrived.

Only, his dog had grown very fat, and was prone to view, with an anticipatory licking of his jaws, the far too capacious seat of his master's trousers —

"Strength, Decrease: — No. IIIIII Pte. Chaplin Charles, having proceeded on the —st to No. 15 Demobilization Centre, is struck off the strength of the Battalion with effect from that date."

And that is all that remains as a bitter-sweet memory of the past!

"HE THAT IS WITHOUT SIN".

CARYL. R. MOLYNEUX.

Who can so measure, or who can dissever
The value or follies of days of the past?
Who can adjudge them, or paint them or smudge them?
Onlya merciful Judge at the Last.

What is your knowledge, learnt only at college?
What do you know of the ends of the earth?
How dare you venture to question or censure?
What is your value and what is your worth?

Living in clover and wrapped up all over.
With the glamour and glare of your family pelf
You raise an objection to other's defection
When utterly useless and worthless yourself.

Think of your station — Set no condemnation
On the men striving hard for the past to atone;
Leave them to fight to it — have you the right to it
Are you so worthy to cast the first stone?

THE WAHN FOLLIES.

PRESENTATION OF SKETCH—"A YORKSHIRE LAD."

On Tuesday last the above-mentioned concert party gave another sucessful show in the Y.M.C.A., Wahn, (kindly lent by Mr.McKean. The 51st Royal Sussex String Orchestra, under R. S. M. Blake, provided the music, which was much appreciated.

L/Cpl. Messen opened the programme with "God Send You back to Me". Bombardier Bottomley gave some humorous renderings of that old-time ditty "Three blind Mice," and as an encore "An old-fashioned Town". Capt. Muirhead caused great amusement with his patter and originality; while Corp. Goldborn gave a dramatic recitation followed by a humorous song. Capt. Story in "My Bassoon" was loudly applauded and as an encore gave some humorous examples of serial-story endings. Lt. Rayle, who impersonated the "fair sex" and Pte. Pollard, violinist, also helped to make the evening a success. The concluding item was a sketch entitled "A Yorkshire Lad" given by special request; Bombardier Bottomley played the leading role.

Altogether the evening was a great success and much appreciated by the troops.

53rd ROYAL SUSSEX.

KEEN COMPETITION AT WAHN ATHLETIC MEETING.

That the 53rd Royal Sussex Regt. are not behind other Battalions of the Army of Occupation in their pursuit of sport was evidenced by the excellent programme of athletics they carried through at a meeting held at Wahn on Sunday afternoon. Thanks to the enthusiastic cooperation of all ranks and to the capable handing of the arrangements by 2nd Lieut. Cockrill (Sports Officer) there was a capital entry for each of the various events while competition was at all times keen and exciting.

The chief honours of the afternoon were carried off by Sergt. Bond, of "A" Coy., the versatility of whose successes revealed a fine clean type of English athlete, his "bag" including the 100, and 220 Yards, the Long Jump, Putting the Snot, and the Hurdle Race. Capt. J.A.B. Gemmel won the mile comfortably, and Capt. C. Underhay, M.C., brought off the High Jump, though L/C Griffin retired gamely an inch below the 5ft/1inch of the O.C. "D" Company. Another creditable perfomance was that by Private Clifford in the 440 yeards.

A Popular Feature.

One of the most popular features with the large crowd was the Officers' Charger Race in which Capt. Grant, M.C, R.A.M.C., and Lieut-Col. M.V. Le Poer Trench provided a keen and exhilarating finish, the Medical Officer winning by half a length. The Mule Race for which there was a large field, also produced a good finish and was won by Pte Neil.

The following acted as officials: — Referee: Lt. Col. M.V. le Poer Trench (Commanding officer) Judges: Major N. H. Hampton M. C.; Capt. W. S. Robertson and Capt. A. H. Muirhead; Clerks of Course: Capt. J. R. Grant, M. C., R. A. M. C., Lieuts. V. M. Walsh, J. D. Bishop, and 2nd Lieut. N. C. Smith; Starter: 2nd Lieut. L. G. Cockrill; Competitors' Steward: Sergt. TO BE PLAYED AT STAMFORD BRIDGE NEXT MONDAY.

A trial game, North v South, has been arranged to be played at Stamford Bridge next Monday, the teams having already been chosen by the district members of the Selection Committee.

Only three of the North representatives played in the Inter-League match last Saturday, namely Hardy, who retains his place as goal-keeper, Longworth (right back), and Fleetwood (right half).

Of the Southern eleven much interest will be manifested in Woosnam (Cambridge University), who plays centre-half and whose special duty it will be to check the dashing proclivities of J. G. Cock (Huddersfield Town).

The teams are as follows: —

NORTH.

S. Hardy (Aston Villa); E. Longworth (Liverpool), F. Duckworth (Blackburn Rovers); T. Fleetwood (Everton); J. M'Call (Preston North End), A. Grenyer (Everton); R. Turnbull (Bradford), D. Shea (Blackburn Rovers), J. G. Cock (Huddersfield Town), J. Smith (Bolton Wanderers), and H. Martin (Sunderland). Reserves: J. Bagshaw (Derby County) and W. E. Gault (Everton).

SOUTH.

Hufton (West Ham United); Clay (Tottenham Hotspur), Harrow (Chelsea); Ducat (The Arsenal), Max Woosnam (Cambridge University), A. Grimsdell (Tottenham Hotspur); Ford (Chelsea), White (Brentford), Puddefoot (West Ham United), Chipperfield (The Arsenal), Penn (Fulham). Reserves: Hanney (Brentford), Groves (The Arsenal).

Referee, A. Warner (Nottingham). Linesmen, J. A. Fash (London), J. T. Hornby (London).

WHIST DRIVE AT WAHN.

On Friday evening the 51st Battalion Royal Sussex Regt., held a very successful Whist Drive in the Y.M.C.A., Wahn Barracks. Over two hundred Officers and men were present and everybody voted the evening well spent. Sgt. Cogger admirably filled the position of M. C.

Refreshments were served at the close of play after which the Commanding Officer, Lt. Col. V. J.R. Ford D.S.O., expressed his deep appreciation of Mr. McKean's kindness in placing the Hall at the disposal of the Battalion.

The prizes were distributed as follows:- 1st Prize, Safety Razor etc — Sgt. Bridger; 2nd Prize, Watch,—Pte. Bradley; 3rd Prize, Wallet,—Pte J.W. Bell; 4th Prize, Cigarette-Case-Pte. Snipe; 5th prize, wallet—Sgt. Turner.

Booby Prize: — Pte. Gross.

Quite a stir was created when a Hidden Number Prize was announced. The number was 98 and the winner L Cpl. Paine.

Col. Ford concluded by thanking Capt. Story for so ably organising not only the present entertaiment but many other similar events. The band of the Battalion, conducted by R.S.M. Blake, gave numerous selections during the evening.

BONN ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL COMPETITION.

121 HEAVY BATTERY R.G.A. v 77 SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A.

This match took place on the Hofgarten, Bonn, on Saturday afternoon before a large crowd of spectators.

The game was very evenly and keenly contested throughout, and it was not until the last few minutes of the match that the "Heavies'" inside right, Whale, scored the only goal of the afternoon, following a fine centre by Harvie. The defence of both teams was excellent.

Result: — 121 H.B. . . . 1; 77 Siege Bty. . . . 0.

WHITES V. BLUES.

D.A.C. Football Match Drawn at Lülsdorf.

A football match was played at Lülsdorf on Friday between the D.A.C. of Langel (Whites) and the D.A.C. of Lülsdorf (Blues):

The Blues came away briskly at the start and secured a couple of corners which, however, they were unable to make anything of owing to their opponents splendid defence. Later on, after much give and take play, they managed through Bailey, to beat the Whites' custodian. They also secured a penalty but Taylor was all there at the critical moment and made a wonderful "save."

At half-time the Blues were one goal up, and the second half started with hard endeavours on the part of the Whites to equalise. Time and again they besieged their opponents' goal but good play on the part of the backs averted disaster.

With 15 minutes to go, Cornell scored a beauty, thus equalising, and an interesting game finished with the score at one goal each.

SIGNALS' SOCCER.

The 4th Corps Signal Company and the Second Highland Divisional Signal Coy engaged in a game of soccer on Tuesday when the former won by 2—1.

Football Professionals in Rhineland.

93rd BRIGADE R.G.A. V. 23rd ROYAL FUSILIERS.

The 93rd Brigade R.G.A. and 23rd Royal Fusiliers played a football match at Kalk on Sunday. To apportion the 93rd's victory is no difficult task. The Artillery forwards played delightful football. The dainty touches of Tully (Rochdale and Clapton Orient) backed up by Stalker proved too much for the Fusiliers' defence.

Early in the game Green defeated the "goalie," but the upright intervened. Gladwill also had hard luck with a shot from the wing. Tully opened the score for the 93rd with a fine shot from long range and the Artillery led by this gool at half-time.

The pace in the second-half continued fast. Early on Stalker scored a thrilling goal. Receiving the ball in midfield he went through the defence and although tackled by the back he got in his scoring shot. This he followed with another good goal. This woke up the Infantry and the inside left reduced the lead. But before time Stalker and Hunt scored for the 93rd.

Result: 93rd Brigade R.G.A. 5; 23rd Royal Fusiliers, 1.

The game proved a splendid exhibition of good football. The 93rd possess a good side including professionals in Yule (Aberdeen) James (Llanelly) Olpert (Clyde) Kenyon (Blackburn) and Tully (Rochdale.)

THE EPISTLES OF PETER BIRSE, JUNIOR.

SCOTLAND AND GERMANY.

Dear Maister Editor,

I dinna suppose ye ever heard tell o' that great Northern magnate, Peter Birse, Esqueer, o' Printfield, Kittybrewster, Aiberdeen, ex-poacher, scientific rat-catcher, and retired coal contractor? He retired frae the last-mentioned bizness afore the Great War begood — mair's the peety — an' in his pa'my days he was regairded as a ceetisen o' substance' a man o' strong indiveeduality. For mony a day the added to the gaity o' the colams o' the "Bon-Accord" — the "Punch" o' the North o' Scotland. Tho for vaurious reesons he cudna wear the fite flooer o' a blameless life in his top-coat button-hole, he of'en sported a geranium frae the manshun-hoose conservatory — (I lookit up the dicshanur for that word, Maister Editor) — and on his wescit there dangled a massive gowd chain.

Weel, sir, a'm his son an air, an wi' your permeesion, I purpose vritin tae ye ilka week, tellin' ye fa and fat a've seen, creeticisin this that and the neist thing in Coloan an' roon' aboot' an' blawin' the Scotties' trumpet finever I get a chance.

As yer weel aware, sir, the "weemen frae Hell," as the "Jerries" used tae ca we', hae taen a hefty share in bringin' the Breetish, the Yanks, the Froggies, an umpteen ithers into this "Promised Land" flowin' wi' beer an' water. A worthy chip o' the auld bloke, a've played m' pairt like a man. Modesty an' the fear o' retaliashun only prevent me frae tellin' ye hoo mony Germans I hae personally accounted for. Be that as it may, I can haud up m' hied i' the Hoho Strassy or the Outschman's Ring, an so can ilka Scottie i' the toon. Mony a time there were nane but Hielan' bonnets there, an fin that was the case God peety the Germans! The reesin I an' a currin mair cam safely through, I suppose, is because "the Deil's aye kin' till his ain!" At laist I've aye lat it stan' at that.

A BRAVE MAIRSHAL.

This is no the first time, sir, no, nor the second, that Scotland has come tae "Jerry's" asseestance. Awa back at the beginnen o' the auchteen h century there lived a Jamie Fracis Edward Keith, wha greatly disteeng-wished himsel in baith Rooshia an' Prooshia. Frederick the Great o' Prooshia, a clever carl, ane o the maist skeelfu sodgers that ever lived, made Keith a Mairshal, an weel he micht, for Keith cam frae the same pairt o' Scotland as masel. Some dirty galoots wi mair malevolence in their herts than knowledge in their hieds alledge that the Mairshal simply sold his services to the highest bidder, who happened to be Frederick. That may hae been the custom o the day, but my private opeenion is that the King, being a cute kin' o a lad an' recogneesin' the connsummate abeelities o' the wanderin' Scottie, wisely invited him to join his' army. On that point, hooever, "es macht nichts," which translated means, "san fairy ann."

Jamie, puir chap, noo sleeps i' the Faitherland. Tae quote Tam Carlyle he is "far from bonny Inverugie," an if he's setisfeed so am I.

THE DOME.

Even the braw Cathedral that the Coloan fowk think sae muckle o' an the Toon Major thinks sae little o' is indebtit tae Scotland for its very foondation-stanes. Few are aware that these very stanes cam frae Carmylie in Forfarshire, but this is the case, sir, I ashure ye.

Speaking o' the Dome reminds me o' an expirience I hed the very first nicht I landed in Coloan. Like a littlin' at the skweel I was ankshus tae see a' the sichts o' the bit toonie the first nicht — as if there were nae mare nichts available for that purpose!

"Hae ye seen the Cathedral?" cried Sandy McFlummocks, stan' in' at the corner o' the Lang Gassy an the Bricht Strassy.

"No," ses I, "fat dae they ca'd?"

"The Dome," ses Sandy, wha arrived in Coloan a fortnicht afore me.

Thankin' him, I made aff for the Dome for altho in nae sense o' the word am I a kirky man — no even like m' father an auld-kirk man — A'm rael fond o' catheedrals fae the mason's point o view. An the mare gingerbreed toories they hae the fonder am I o' them. In the dim an' distant past they built tae the glory o' God; noo they build at so much an 'oor.

For three lang 'ours I searched for that confoonded Dome, eventwally landin' masel, in the airms o the military polis for wanderin' aboot near eleven oclock withoot a pass. Fin I fund masel in this predeecament I was fair disjeskit. Explanations followed in coorse o' time, an if lauchin' like a hyena be a preshious thing they twa bobbies appawrently got their money's worth. I explained I was lookin' for a Dome, but damn a Dome cud I fin' in a' the place.

A WISER MAN.

Am wiser noo, sir, but fancy onybody wi the reputed education o' the Germans call'n a thing a dome that has nae dome at a'! Its aboot as bad as the street in Jerusalim call'd "Straight." Accordin' tae Mark Twain it's as straight as a corkscrew. Similarly, Broad Street in Aiberdeen is one o' the nairrowest thorofares in the ceety. But honestly speakin' I cud never enjoy this contrafashious kin' o' humor, an noo that the above-mentioned incident has taen place A'm mare digusted wi'd 'than ever. It landit me in a bonny scrape at ony rate, an' there's no sayin' hoo mony mare hae been diddled the same wey.

THE TWA STEEPLES.

As for the twa steeples that the Dome boast's o' maist kirks are setisfeed with one, an' sometimes that ane — like the steeple at Drumlithie — has, accordin'g tae report tae be taken in in weety weather, or when the beadle gangs for a holiday. It was jist like the Germans tae build twa hiech tooers on the same preenciple I suppose as the twa keels tae one.

Some o' the gless tae has tae be stained yet an' I winner they dinna transfer some o' the bonny pinted lozens frae the railway station near at hand. But for a' that the Dome's a braw sicht an' I can honestly recommen' a' the masons, architecks, glaziers, an' jiners frae the Mull o' Galloway tae Johnny Groat's tae come ower in peace-time an' see'd for themsels. Margaret Pow thocht there was a lot o' waustry in St. Peter's, in Roam an' A'm no sayin' but fat there's waustry in Coloan Catheedral, but notwithstan'in, an' a'thing conseeder'd it's weel worth a veesit in the simmer-time fin the doos 'll be flee'n roo'n' an' roon' the spires in the upper atmosfeer. Even noo there's a winderfu' amount o' life in that exalted region an' wi' that remark A'll conclude till neist week.

Yours respeckfully
PETER BIRSE, JUNIOR.

THE PRICE OF PETROL.

It is learned on high authority that a considerable reduction in petrol prices will take place shortly. Simultaneously the quality of the spirit will be improved to the standard prevailing before the war.

MULE-RACE FOR KILTED BANDSMEN.

48th Battery R.F.A. Sports at Hoven.

Sunday last was quite a red-letter day for the 48th Battery, R.F.A. at Hoven. A lengthy programme of events was arranged, and the numbe of entries was very large. The piper's Band of the Q.V.R., who were kindly lent for the occasion, discoursed popular Scotch Airs during the intervals of the events. The day was an ideal one, and the ground in perfect condition.

A mule race was arranged for the bandmen, who in their kilted uniform caused much laughter, as also did Bdr. Briars as a white-eyed coon, and Dr. Rowe as Charlie Chaplin. Mention must also be made of Bdr. Barwick and Gnr. Knock as Totalizators. Gnr. Ward as a village maiden caused roars of laughter, especially from the female spectators who were present.

Events and prize-winners.

The following is a list of the events and the prize-winners:

"A Few Bits From Old Bill."

AMUSING SKETCH SUBMITTED BY THE ZOO-ZOO CONCERT PARTY.

Under the patronage of Major Mills, Major Claudet, Major Siggers, and other officers of the 36th Brigade, the Zoo-Zoo Concert Party (36th Brigade R.F.A.) gave an entertainment on Saturday last in the D/36 Battery dining-hall. The hall was well-filled and by the rounds of applause which greeted the artists, it was obvious that those present were enjoying the fare put before them.

Lt. Lambkin, in his song "I'm on the Staff" tickled the audience immensely, as also did the American cross-talk of Bdr. Scott and Gunner Lifford. Bdr. Scott, in his mohologues "Alaska" and "Christmas Bells," showed great talent as an elocutionist. Gunner Lifford, in his light comedy songs, delighted the audience with "Signora" and other items; Gnr. J. Bennett, with songs at the piano, Gnr. Cowham in sentimental songs, and 2/Lt. Saunders, who contributed two humorous songs, also helped to contribute to the success of a very enjoyable concert.

Gnr. Barnes and Gnr. J. Bennett were the accompanists, and displayed great taste. An original sketch "A Few Bits From Old Bill," which caused roars of laughter, was given by Lt. Lambkin as "Old Bill," Bdr. Scott as "Erb," and Gnr. Lifford as "Alf." Staff-Sergt. Wheeler Baxter acquitted himself well as stage manager, assisted by Driver Payne and Fitter Butt.

A TIP FOR SWEARERS.

LECTURE BY BATTALION EDUCATION OFFICER.

A very interesting lecture was given by Lieut. W.A. Wain, the Battalion Education Officer, on Thursday evening to the N.C.O's of the 51st D.L.I. on "Habits".

The lecturer said that habits were the impressions left on the mind by continual practice of certain actions. He spoke of the virtues of Cleanliness, of careful conversation and of self-constraint. His advice with regard to conversation was "If you want to swear, swear like a Christian."

The lecture was most entertaining and instructive, although many of us left with the impression that our esteemed Education Officer must have practised the habit of sarcasm for many years. F.R.D.

Five ran, and three-quarters of a length separated the first and second, and second and third.

ACTIVE SERVICE GOLF TOURNAMENT.

FAULTLESS 78 RETURNED BY LORD CHARLES HOPE.

The most notable amateur golf tournament since 1914 opened on the Sandy Lodge Course near Northwood on Tuesday with a qualifying competition. As a result 32 Competitors started yesterday, 18 belonging to the British Army, 3 to the Royal Navy, and 4 to Air Force. There were also two Australians, two Canadians, two New-Zealanders and one South African.

SIGNAL'S MATCH AT DÜREN.

Highland Div. Signal Coy. v, 9th Corps Signal Coy.

The match played yesterday at Düren, between these two teams resulted in a victory for the Highlanders by 5 goals to 2. The scorers were — Sapper Whittet (3) & Sapper Rutherford (2) for the winners; and Sapper & Cpl. Percy (1 each) for the 9th Corps.

R. A. O. C. BASE DEPOT VERSUS 153 LABOUR COY.

This match was played at Sudbrucke on Saturday. After an exciting game, producing some excellent play on both sides, the Labour team came out the winners with a score of 2 goals to 1.

For the Labour Coy, Farley and Vealer scored one goal each, Longhurst scoring for the Ordnance.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

Rhine Army Amusements.

Additions to the Amusement Officer's Staff were made yesterday by the arrival of Lieut. D.A. Onions, who is to look after the Sports Department, and Lieut. E.S. Percy, on the theatrical side. The former officer is well known in sporting circles and has proved himself a capable sports organiser during the time he has functioned as Sports Officer with the 2nd Bn. Monmouthshire Regt. He comes to Cologne from the 9th Bn. Cheshire Regt. to. whom he has recently been attached.

Lieut. Percy, who as a London actor-manager and producer has made many friends, is thoroughly qualified to look after our "Thespian" friends and the theatrical side of our amusements should benefit considerably as a result of his administration.

Capt. Gourney to be Demob'd.

Many sportsmen in Cologne will learn with regret that Capt. Gourney is to retire from the presidency of the Army Headquarters and Troops Sports Committee. This officer's sunny disposition, to say nothing of his wide experience in all phases of sport has endeared him to many, so that the fact of his "demob" at an early date, will cause a great deal of regret.

Lieut. Onions, the new Army Sports Officer, is to succeed Capt. Gourney.

Draughts Made Difficult.

I heard the other day of a certain R.A.M.C. sergeant who is experimenting on a rather unique stunt. He is prepared to play, synchronally, twelve games of draughts or six games of chess. I don't know whether he intends to throw out a challenge, but I will, later on, dwell on the success or otherwise of the experiment.

Sports Equipment.

The inconvenience of getting sports' gear sent over from England — why is it we always want it at about two days notice? — has been overcome by the opening of a Sports Depot, by the E.F.C. people, in Glockengasse — not far from the Canteen. The stock includes such diversified articles as watches, pipes, challenge cups, and tie-pins. A large stock of cricket apparatus is due at the end of the month.

Quoit-tennis.

Why does'nt somebody introduce quoit-tennis into our sports' programmes? All manner of new-fangled games are finding a place in various organisations, but so far there does not appear to be any mention of quoit-tennis. (I hope I have got the correct name for the game.) Very little tackle is required—therefore it is quite inexpensive, and a weight-reducer, there are few of the less-strenuous games to equail it.

Wahn-Sports

The organisers of the excellent Sports Meeting of the 51st Royal Sussex Regiment, which was followed with a vast amount of interest on Monday, are to be congratulated upon the satisfactory result of their efforts. Nothing was forgotten that was likely to add to the success of the event. The ground loked delightfully fresh in the bright spring sunshine, the white markings showing up well against the green background of the grass. Thousands of tiny flags added a welcome splash of colour, while the artistically decorated band-stand, from which the merry strains of music were provided by the Battalion orchestra, formed a pleasing centre-piece to the whole effect. Throughout the afternoon, tea, dispensed from a snowy-white table was much in demand as a welcome refresher.

THE RAMBLER.

Arrangements have been completed for the Canadian National Convention, to be held at Ottawa in August, to select a leader to succeed Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

THE ARTISTIC STATUS OF COLOGNE CATHEDRAL.

GERMAN VIEWS.

It will be remembered that in the first issue of The Cologne Post an article by Major Bles, dealing with the architecture of the Cathedral from an artistic standpoint was published. This aroused keen interest, not only among the English people, but amongst the Germans.

The Kölnische Zeitung (Cologne Gazette) thinks that the author of the article about the cathedral in our first issue was too severe and that his declarations and assumptions need to be rectified.

The Kölnische Zeitung remarks as follows:

"The Cologne Cathedral belongs to the historical buildings, which the spectator can only understand and appreciate by considering their growth and change in the course of centuries. It is just as little homogeneous as most of the Cologne churches (for instance St. Gereon or St. Maria in the Kapitol), but is the architectural result of an historical development of nearly 1000 years, which began with the modest Bishop's Church consecrated in the year 874. About the middle of the 13th century the Gothic movement of style begins here also with plans of extension, promoted by the bishops and the population as well as by the activity of the Cologne architectural school which gave birth to many capable masters and sent many of them away, as, for instance, Johann Hültz to Strassburg.

"The new building of the early Gothic choir, commenced under Konrad von Hochstaden in the year 1248, was only consecrated in the year 1322, while the substitution of a new tower for the old romanesque bell-tower was only begun at the end of the 14th century and continued until the beginning of the 16th century.

"A hard period of trial began as in the year 1794, for, under the French Occupation, divine service was stopped, and the Cathedral was used as a military storehouse, whilst the funds for its maintenance were confiscated. The result was that the bulky unfinished building was abandoned for almost 30 years. Only in the year 1824, thanks to funds given by the state, could urgent repair and the new roofing of the choir be commenced. The spirit of sacrifice of the population, their love for the artistic legacy of their ancestors formed the stimulus which inspired the worthy completion of the famous Cathedral. After the repair of the Choir it was decided to continue the old nave which up to then united the higher choir with the unfinished tower. Only after the completion of the Gothic nave was the work on the tower resumed, and it accorded with the original plans of the Gothic master.

"The work of finishing was indeed a bold enterprise, when one remembers that the question was to start harmoniously from a building discontinued at least two centuries ago and to educate again the artistic hands necessary for this work. One may criticize the ornamentation of the Gothic of the Rhineland, but the worthy and elevating impression which especially the choir-circle and the interior of the church make on every impartial spectator remains untouched.

"Instead of measuring with the rule of personal artistic ideals the multiform buildings, the original life of which is the result of certain objects and times, we should rather try to understand the stirring although strange language of forms in which history is speaking to us. It would be very instructive to compare in a manifest way English cathedrals with those of France and Germany, and to fix the common leading lines of Gothic expression not only as they appear in complete buildings but also as they appear in fabrics which diverge from the original ideal, for ecclesiastical architecture is very much influenced by the ground, the material, the climate and the usages of the population. We must, under present circumstances, renounce the study of general characteristic features of our home art.

"'We learn' says John Ruskin 'the noble arts not by concurrence but by doing our best with calm, everyone in his own way; by doing what is right, by creating what is honest, by building not for pride or money but for the love of arts.'"

The Cologne Post published several English letters which also protested against the arguments of the dissertation we have spoken of above.

According to the Melbourne Argus, the health of Mr. Watt, the Acting Australian Prime Minister, is impaired, and he will take a holiday, when Mr. Hughes returns.

THE HOUSING BILL.

SECOND READING.

In Parliament on Monday the second reading of the Housing Bill was moved by Dr. Addison.

Sir D. MACLEAN said of all the social questions dealt with at the General Election that of housing easily took the first place. The revelation as to housing conditions was one of the most potent influences in connection with the Coal Commission. So far as the acquisition and price of land were concerned, he was disappointed with the proposals in the bill. He did not think that in connection with the housing question anyone had a right to any additional price for his land, over the pre-war price. He also hoped that soldiers and sailors would have the first claim under the new scheme. (Hear, hear.) On the question of private enterprise, he urged the Local Government Board to use its powers to get building firms at work by providing building materials, and not waiting for State enterprise.

Mr. J. E. DAVISON mentioned that for many years the working classes had been lectured on the folly of restricting output, but that folly paled into insignificance compared with the policy of successive Governments in restricting the provision of housing accommodation. The census of 1911 showed that there were 23,311,000 people in England and Wales living in tenements of from one to five rooms, and the total number of rooms in those tenements was 21,000,000. The other third of the population, slightly over 11,000,000 people, lived in tenements of from six to ten rooms and over, and the number of rooms was 17,000,000. Infantile mortality was for the skilled artisan class 100 to 130 per 1,000; for the mining class 160, for the unskilled and casual labourers class 150 to 250, and for the agricultural labourers' class 97. On the other hand, the babies of doctors died at the rate of 40 per 1,000, and amongst the upper and middle classes at the rate of 77.

Major D. W. MORGAN, in a maiden speech, said that he represented a district for which the word "overcrowded" was in no way adequate even in pre-war days. This was a domestic question which would not brook delay in its settlement. House-hunters in his part of the world were in the habit of using anything but complimentary terms as to hon. members, referring to them as the "Weary Willies of Westminister." The housing question was the chief cause of unrest in his district, because whilst the mineowners found capital with which to sink the shaft, equip the mine, and erect houses to cover the machinery and stores, no attempt was made to house the human machinery necessary to give effect to the investment of capital.

Mr. J. D. GILBERT attributed much of the trouble in London to the leasehold system, under which the holder of the lease spent as little as possible upon a house, because he knew that eventually the property would revert to the ground landlord. If this system were abolished, large houses would speedily be turned into flats, with consequent relief to congested districts. Under the bill as at present drafted both the London County Council and the local Borough Councils would have power to deal with the housing question, and he feared that unless some clearer definition were given as to which was the local authority under the bill, Dr. Addison would find that both authorities would be spending a penny rate in the same localities. The London County Council did not object to paying a penny rate; they objected to the way in which it would have to be paid under the bill. A penny rate in London produced £180,000, and it was calculated that under this bill, before the Council could get any assistance from the Treasury or the Local Government Board, they would have to lose the amount of a penny rate to spend about £6,000,000 or £7,000,000.

He contended that the amount paid for slum property should be merely the housing value, and not its value as a warehouse or factory site. The County Council had to pay £1,1,000 for the Tabard-street area, whereas on its housing value it was only worth £69,500.

Colonel WEDGWOOD stated that he did not intend to move the motion he had on the paper for the rejection of the bill. Since he had been in the House he had seen eight housing and town-planning bills introduced, and of the eight this was probably the worst. All these bills were designed by a bureaucracy to cure the housing problem by the exercise of further bureaucratic powers. The scheme was unjustifiably burdened with compensation to people who had no right to one penny more than the pre-war value of the land. The bill would destroy the whole building trade, and the houses built under the bill would be let at "charity rents." He did not think the present Government was capable of running a rag shop, let alone a housing monopoly. The present rating system increased the price of houses and checked building.

Captain PRETYMAN held the opinion that private enterprise in the building industry had been driven out of existence by the legislation of 1909. The damage done by such legislation was not measured by an amount of money only, but by the sense of insecurity which it created. The intention of the Government was that private enterprise should, as far as possible, be encouraged to resume its operations. Private enterprise might do a good deal eventually in providing new houses, but he could not see how it was possible for private enterprise to deal with the slum area problem, which must be dealt with at once.

GENERAL PLUMER AND SOLDIERS' CLUBS IN COLOGNE.

The Commander of the Army of the Rhine, Sir Herbert Plumer, G.C.B., G.C.M.G., G.C.V.O., formally opened two Soldiers' Clubs in Cologne on Tuesday 8th April. The Scottish Churches "Huts" Club, 84 Schildergasse, was first visited and later in the afternoon the Army Commander went to the Soldiers' Christian Association Club in the Apostein-Strasse. With General Plumer there were the Military Governor, Lieutenant-General Sir Charles Fergusson, K.C.B., K.C.M.G., Major-General Guise Moores, C.B., C.M.G., Brigadier-General Gordon, Colonel Howell, Colonel Mercer, the Rev. F. I. Anderson, A.C.G., the Rev. J. H. Miller, A.P.C., the Rev. F.W. Stewart, A.P.C., and others.

At the S.C.A. Club the distinguished guests were received by the Revs. C. Ross Lowdon and Hugh Watt and Miss Mathieson; whilst at the S.C.A. Club they were received by the Rev. E. Lewis Neilson and Miss Figg. In each of these clubs the opening ceremony was much appreciated by the workers and soldiers, and Sir Herbert Plumer after inspection of the respective premises — Canteens, Lecture and Recreation Rooms, declared his admiration for their equipment.

The Army Commander is a felicitous speaker as well as a renowned soldier, and in his speeches at these Clubs he dwelt on the value of such institutions not only in war-time but in these days of peace. He specially referred to the great service which lady-workers can and will do for our men in Cologne, and while giving them formally the thanks of the Army he reminded them that they could bring to our boys some of the blessings of "home."

We wish these and all kindred Clubs the greatest sucess in their kindly labours.

WITH THE RATIONS.

Have you noticed the civilians walking about town glaringly labelled M. G.? This label consists of a vivid green armlet bearing huge red letters. I overheard a controversy between two Bosche people yesterday and fain would I have enlightened them had not the ban of fraternization in public come instantly to my mind.

Needless to say, both were wrong, and not for the first time.

No, neither are they mud guards, as a Tommy remarked, nor machine gunners, nor mad grenadiers. These letters merely serve to show that the wearer is a member of the Military Governor's Staff.

There is no reason now for the evening picquet to be stopping them every few minutes after 9.30 p. m. Of course, it has been a source of annoyance to both parties.

One unerring corporal, ever striving to maintain the English standard of courtesy whilst at the same time following out his strict duties, stopped an English girl and asked her in broken and difficult German, "haben Sie einen Pass, bitte?" Imagine his dismay and surprise when she answered, "I am sorry I cannot understand you, will you speak English please."

I saw many yesterday amongst both our lady workers and the men — and one must confess that in many cases the new colour scheme seemed, to say the least, lurid. I have heard that some of our lady friends have already shown distaste to this new design, but it will afford them a glorious opportunity of fulfilling one of their dearest traditions and most cherished habits — ordering new costumes to match.

I hear that Mr. E. W. Hornung, the creator of the famous "Raffles," is shortly to give a series of short lectures on the subject of "Short-story writers, and how they work" at the Y. M. C. A. Cologne. Budding novelists should find these lectures of extreme value, especially as Mr. Hornung will invite questions and discussion at the conclusion of each discourse.

A Tommy I know is confronted with grave and serious obstacles. On the car the other evening he met two charming young ladies who were conversing in French, and as is natural, by some lame pretext he began a conversation. It appeared they were Belgians, and had lived in Cologne for the past five years. Now the question arises, should he continue this acquaintance, or will it be a contravention of the fraternization order?

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary, limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

OFFICERS' WIVES.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

May I be permitted to trespass on your kindness, by airing a small grievance, which for some time now has been crying for voice. Admitting that actually the War is not yet over, I think the presence in the War Areas of the Allied Armed Forces will successfully check any tendency to a reopening of this great world war. Being of this opinion too, the Authorities are to a great extent trying to alleviate the monotony of our stay here, by organised recreations and amusements. But for some of us, that is not all we would have them do. There are a considerable number of Officers here who have served at the front during the whole or the greater part of the War. And amongst those Officers are some who though married have seen but little of their wives during the last five years. Would it not be a graceful and welcome tribute, to permit such Officers as desire to, to bring their wives here? I know only too well that this suggestion will reap many criticisms. But what are they for the great part? Some will say that to bring a woman here away from her family, friends, and social life, or amongst a people who are hostile and desire us not, is the suggestion of a madman. So it may be, but even madmen are given to sane moments, and I believe that many officers and their wives would welcome gladly the permission to do so. Food and housing present no difficulties, both could be done through the present channels. Then, too, I beg to suggest that by doing so, we should raise the moral tone of our Army.

The man who suggests that an Army quartered in an enemy country without the influence of its own womanfolk, is moral, is a fool. It isn't, and it certainly is not the case with ours. Moreover, by the constant meeting of their countrywomen the Officers here would discover that there are other things to discuss than the subjects which at present monopolise the conversation of Messes.

I can already see, Mr. Editor, the small dark cloud of criticism which is arising to crush me in its gathering weight and force. But I'll risk my pate and give my request voice. And I think that if we are honest we will admit that the morals of this Army of ours are not worthy of its glorious past. As a questioner of great import I sign myself. R.D.

WAR SAVINGS CERTIFICATES.

Attention is called to G.R.O. 4137. The decrease in the sale of War Savings Certificates through Army Post Offices suggests that the advantages of these investments are not being brought to the notice of fresh drafts arriving in the country. Pamphlets and Application Forms are being issued on a scale sufficient to reach the smallest Units. These should be placed on Units' Notice Boards, and everything possible should be done to call attention to the advantages to be gained by this method of saving.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We are continually receiving numerous questions which should not come to us at all because they can be dealt with far more easily and quickly with the unit. All matters concerning rate of pay, pensionable service, demobilization, and so on, should be submitted in the usual way to commanders of units. In many cases the Company or Battery C.Q.M.S., knowing all the facts of the case, could give an answer immediately. Why write to us?

Take the question of demobilization for example. In every unit there is someone, generally a Demobilization Officer detailed as such, who has all the facts as his finger ends, or can turn them up from the very latest "Instructions" in two minutes.

He is the proper person to appeal to in all such cases and only needs to be asked.

Sending such queries to us wastes the enquirer's time, wastes our time, and we are so busy with a thousand-and-one other things, and moreover is against all sorts of regulations.

Why call in a third party when the matter is obviously one between two parties who know all the facts of both sides, and for which the Army Council have provided proper facilities.

We are at all times ready and willing to answer general questions, but personal questions should be dealt with in the proper manner.

Will correspondents please note this, and not call upon an overworked staff to do a job quite outside its province, and for which ample machinery has already been provided by the Army authorities.

We are so busy answering general questions, that it will be impossible even to acknowledge the kind of correspondence indicated in the above paragraphs.

DEATH OF WELL-KNOWN BANKER.

Lord Hillingdon, the London Banker, died on Monday morning at his London residence. He had been in ill-health for some years.

Charles William Mills, second Baron Hillingdon, who was born in 1855, was well known in the City for many years as a partner in Glyn, Mills, Currie, and Co. From 1885 to 1892 he was in the House of Commons as Conservative M.P. for West Kent, and Parliamentary work occupied a good deal of his time. But in the later '90's he began to attend more closely to business, and some years before he succeeded to the peerage he was constant in his attendance in the bank parlour.

Later he was struck down by illness, which put an end to his active work in the City. His abilities were considerable, and he would probably have made his mark as a London banker if his health had permitted; for, in addition to his business capacity, he possessed an agreeable and cheerful disposition and a good deal of quiet humour, which he showed in conversation. He was connected with one or two important undertakings, apart from Glyn's, especially the Royal Niger Company, in the affairs of which he took a good deal of interest. In his youth he was a respectable cricketer, and played for Kent occasionally. He was also a fair racket player.

NORTH RUSSIA RELIEF FORCE. RUSH TO ENLIST

BOLSHEVIST PEACE OFFER

GERMAN STRIKES AND REVOLUTIONS

PRIME MINISTER REPEATS HIS PLEDGES

NORTH RUSSIA RELIEF FORCE.

BIG RUSH TO JOIN.

Colonel Clay, Chief Recruiting Officer at Scotland Yard, interviewed yesterday regarding recruiting for the North Russia Relief Force, said "We are simply swamped with applications from retired officers and men."

Fenchurch-street station was crowded out on Tuesday morning with officers and other ranks, representing all units of the service, forming the advance guard of the Relief Force. They all looked remarkably fit. One of the most noticeable features was the number of distinctions won in various other theatres of war.

RISINGS IN KOREA.

From Tokio comes the semi-official news that over a hundred risings occurred at different places in Korea between the 31st March and 2nd April. Rioters, armed with clubs, sickles, axes and similar lethal weapons assaulted the police and gendarmes. Goverment buildings were burnt and the telegraph wires cut. Most of the violence among the rioters was due to propaganda disseminated from the Bolshevist headquarters at Shangnai. Reuter.

ABYSSINIA.

Replying to a question put by Major Hon. H. O'Neill (U.Mid.Ant im) Mr. Cecil Harmsworth said the Government had received no confirmation of the reports regarding revolution in Northern Abyssinia which had appeared recently in the Press. Telegraphic enquiries on the subject are being made.

The general situation in Abyssinia said Mr. Harmsworth has not materially changed since the present regime came into force in 1916.

A certain amount of unrest in the more distant provinces is always present and political conditions in the country contain elements of instability owing to the limited control exercised by the Central Government in the outlying parts of the country.

SPITZBERGEN "NO MAN'S LAND."

Major O'Neill also asked whether Spitzbergen now forms part of the British Empire. Mr. Cecil Harmsworth said it does not. Spitzbergen is "no man's land" and there is no regular system of Government. Major O'Neill then asked whether or no there were valuable coal deposits in those islands and whether any effort is being made to develop them. Mr. Harmsworth "Yes. I understand that there are coal deposits in the islands and that various companies are making efforts to develop them."

EGYPT QUIET.

Mr. Cecil Harmsworth replying to another question said that latest information from Egypt was that the situation is quiet. No further disturbances have occurred since the riot at Cairo on the 3rd April.

MESOPOTAMIA EXCAVATIONS.

In the course of replies to a series of questions by Sir Martin Conway in regard to the protection of ancient monuments in Mesopotamia, especially the partly excavated ruins of Babylon, Mr. Fisher, with reference to the question as to whether he was aware that numerous casual excavations had been sporadically carried out in Mesopotamia and objects removed by members of the Expeditionary Force, said that the late General Maude issued a proclamation in May 1917 prohibiting all unauthorised removal and destruction.

Under a general routine order dated 6th April 1918, all ranks were specially warned against the defacement or mutilation of ruins, the removal or mutilation of bricks and other antiquities, either at Baghdad or elsewhere. There was no reason tho believe that these orders had been disregarded.

TRADE WITH SPAIN.

Madrid, 9th April. Senor Romanones has had three conferences with the British Ambassador to discuss the details of the new trade agreement between Great Britain and Spain.

It is reported that Great Britain will permit the export of oranges to such extent as the English market can absorb and will release 150,000 tons of coal per month for Spanish requirements.

The amount of the Spanish loan is reduced to seventy five million pesetas. It is guaranteed at five per cent. Havas.

NEW "BIG THREE."

The Paris correspondent of the Daily Telegraph states that there is under discussion a new proposal to supplement the League of Nations by an alliance between Great Britain, America, and France. It will have a limited purpose — the enforcing of the Peace terms to be imposed on Germany.

"TO STAND FAITHFULLY BY ALL PLEDGES."

PRIME MINISTER'S DECLARATION.

A telegram signed by over two hundred Members of the House of Commons was sent to Mr. Lloyd George, the Prime Minister, at Paris. The text of it was as follows:—

"The greatest anxiety exists in consequence of persistent reports from Paris that the British delegates, instead of formulating a complete financial claim on behalf of the Empire, are merely considering what amount is exactable from the enemy. Our constituents expect the first action of the delegates to be as you have repeatedly stated in election speeches, viz:— to present the bill in full, make Germany acknowledge the debt, and then discuss the ways and means of obtaining payment."

In reply, Mr. Lloyd George telegraphed to Mr. Kennedy Jones (Co.U.,Hornsey) on whose initiative the telegram had been sent:—

"My colleagues and I mean to stand faithfully by all the pledges given to our constituents. We are prepared at any moment to submit to the judgment of Parliament and if necessary of the country, our efforts loyally to redeem our promises."

GERMAN REVOLUTIONS.

Berlin 8th April. — Spartacist disturbances have occurred at Nuremberg and strong forces are now patrolling the town. Wuerzburg voted against a Soviet Republic.

At Munich three socialist parties are opposing one another. Confusion reigns and a bourgeois strike is threatening. The German Government has refused to release Ledebour which the Congress of Soviets demanded. Reuter.

Berlin 9th April. — The Vossische Zeitung declares that the agitation for a general strike has slackened. The Government however has taken all precautionary measures. Majority socialist workers have manifested against a general strike owing to the probable stoppage of food supplies. Government troops have taken possession of Magdeburg, where the public services have been resumed. Workers at Brunswick have begun a general strike. Banks, newspapers, railways and trams are suspended. The Landtag has adjourned indefinitely, and the newly elected Workers Council held a meeting to proclaim itself sole authority. — Reuter.

The isolation of Munich will shortly be complete. It is already cut off from the North. The Reichsbank has stopped the supply of money. Troops of the garrisons of Passau and Preising are supporting the Government.

Herr Noske, Minister of National Defence, when asked for a statement on the Bavarian question said: "If my friend Hoffmann holds out for only a little time the situation will change in favour of the regular Government. Epp was formerly commander of a Munich regiment of the Body Guard and is an excellent officer. If other means fail, Munich must be kept down as were Bremen and Dusseldorf."

GERMAN STRIKE NEWS.

The Minister of Labour, Herr Bauer, has proceeded to the Ruhr district to negotiate with the miners. The number of strikers is 290,000.

According to the Kölnische Volkszeitung the Government has conceded the principle of the six hour day, but refuses to put it into force yet on account of the low standard of German economical life and the necessity of a greater coal production.

At the Krupp works fifty-five per cent of the hands have resumed work. Regular work for all has been rendered impossible owing to the damage done by the strikers. Lorries carrying machine guns traverse the streets; two persons were killed yesterday.

At Saarbruch, in spite of orders issued by the French, only one fifth of the miners resumed work. Twenty one of the strikers were dealt with for disobedience of orders and were sentenced to terms of imprisonment ranging from two to five years. Others were expelled the Rhineland province.

COLOGNE STRIKES.

Employees of about twenty milliners' establishments in Cologne have decided to strike for more pay.

The employees at the Kalker Maschinenfabrik have ceased work. Negotiations between the employers and workmen at other firms are still in progress.

DEPORTED RUSSIANS DROWNED.

Madrid. The Premier announced, with reference to the sinking of the steamer "Manuel Calvo" which struck a mine at the Dardanelles while en route to Odessa with Russian deportees, that there were a hundred casualties out of four hundred passengers and crew. Havas.

RUTHERFORD MURDER TRIAL.

GUILTY BUT INSANE.

The third session of the trial of Captain Norman Cecil Rutherford D. S. O., for the murder of Major Miles Cariston Seton was held at the Old Bailey.

When accused entered he was looking very pale and haggard. He walked across the dock with his eyes downcast. After bowing to the Judge he spoke to his solicitor and sat down with his arms folded across his chest.

Counsel for the defence called several witnesses who testified to the peculiar behaviour of the accused in the past.

One witness said he was subject to extraordinary outbursts of sudden temper which he seemed quite unable to prevent or control.

On these occasions he spoke in a peculiar voice which appeared to be choked with suppressed rage. His manner became very markedly threatening and extremely insulting.

Doctor Mainwaring White who was a fellow student with accused at Edinburgh spoke of Rutherford's engagement to be married and recalled a violent outburst due to jealousy on part of Rutherford when witness went for a walk with Rutherford's fiancée because Rutherford would not go himself.

Witness alluded to the fact that Rutherford coached Seton for his surgical degree at Edinburgh.

Another witness said that he asked Rutherford why he shot Seton. He replied "Seton has had an evil influence over my children." Witness then asked him pointblank "Have you anything to say against Mrs. Rutherford?" Accused replied "No, nothing." The next question was why Rutherford fired so many shots, to which Rutherford replied "Because I disike to see anything wounded." Witness had asked him several times if he still thought he was justified in shooting Seton and he invariably replied "I have not altered my opinion and would do the same again."

The jury were only away for five minutes, returning with a verdict of "Guilty, but insane."

The judge, Mr. Justice Salter, agreed with the verdict. He ordered Rutherford to be detained during His Majesty's pleasure.

SALE OF ARMY HORSES.

FAVOURITES MAY BE ACQUIRED.

Since the signing of the Armistice, no fewer than 75,652 surplus army horses have been sold in the United Kingdom. The average price realised was thirty five pounds, yielding a total of over two and a half millions of pounds.

An arrangement exists whereby officers and men are enabled to send favourite horses home in order to buy them at auction. A scheme has also been put into operation by which users of draught horses may have them on loan for six years at an annual payment of seven pounds ten shillings, including free veterinary advice and treatment. At the end of six years such horse becomes the absolute property of the lessee.

THE KING'S FUND.

MANCHESTER'S EFFORT.

Manchester is making great efforts to increase its contribution to the King's Fund to a hundred thousand pounds. Half that amount has already been raised.

Manchester is still leading in its subscription to the Fund, Glasgow holding second place.

FOCH'S TRIBUTE TO AUSTRALIANS

Marshal Foch has sent the following message to the soldiers and people of Australia! — "Australian troops have upheld the cause of the Allies with magnificent dash. From start to finish they distinguished themselves by their qualities of endurance and boldness. By their initiative, their fighting spirit and their magnificent ardour they proved themselves to be shock troops of the first order. In the grave hours of 1918, with their British, American and French comrades, they barred the enemy rush. They stopped it and broke it and at the appointed hour drove it far backwards. I am happy to express to Australia the undying memory, which we shall cherish of her incomparable soldiers."

This message is autographed and will be preserved in the Australian war museum.

SHELLSHOCK OR SHELL SHY?

At a clinical and scientific meeting of the British Medical Association which opened yesterday morning Dr. F. W. Mott, the famous pathologist and brain specialist, read a paper on war neurosis.

According to his experience the most serious cases occurred in 1915—1918 when the army was continually on the offensive, although it was out-manned and out-gunned. The term "shell-shock" was an unfortunate one which led to misconception. A great many men who had been returned as suffering from shellshock would have been more appropriately described as "shell shy."

The War had produced no new nervous disease. In ten per cent of shock cases the dominant feature was anger; in ten per cent, fear. In the remaining eighty per cent primitive emotions were fairly evenly represented.

It will shortly become necessary to ration horse flesh at Cologne.

Preparations are being made at Versailles for the reception of the German delegates.

The prohibition against out-door photography has been removed. It is inadvisable, however for civilians to take photographs of military significance.

SILKEN CORD INSTEAD OF HEAVY CHAIN.

FUTURE OF GERMAN COLONIES.

Lord Leverhulme, the great British manufacturer, speaking at the Colonial Institute yesterday, asked what had Germany done to colonise and civilise her overseas possessions before the war. "Native races" he said "were brutally illtreated and reduced to semi-slavery by German rule. We knew that British or French rule and government could be of the greatest advantage to the peoples of these former German colonies and we therefore could no more think of handing them back to Germany than of surrendering a slice of our fair Homelands.

"We had seen that when the Mother Country was threatened with defeat and consequent invasion that not only our self governing colonies but our cousins — that great nation formed the United States of America — flocked to the aid of Great Britain and her allies, but it was not Great Britain that they came solely to defend. It was to maintain the ideals for which we and our Allies had fought.

"In each succeeding century the world will be governed and controlled more by the silken cord of ideals and justice and less and less by the heavy chain of military might."

DISCHARGED SOLDIERS DEMONSTRATE.

Hundreds of discharged sailors and soldiers demonstrated at Middlesbrough yesterday evening as a protest against the action of the Street Committee of the Town Council in refusing to rent the Town Hall for a boxing tournament.

Headed by a band playing patriotic airs the men marched to the Town Hall. A deputation of the men was received and heard by the Council, which subsequently directed the Street Committee to reconsider its decision.

WAR MEDAL RIBAND.

It has been decided to adopt the suggestion made some time since that the colours of the riband for the war commemorative medal shall be orange, white, black and blue. There will be a broad orange stripe in the centre, with narrow stripes of the other colours on either side.

FEEDING THE CIVILIANS.

Five ship loads of potatoes reached Cologne on Wednesday, arriving in time to prevent a really serious shortage.

At first the week's ration will be four lbs, which will be increased only if regular consignments arrive.

Consequent on the low value of the mark the actual cost will be about thirty five marks a hundredweight. The potatoes are actually charged to the German Government, which will fix the price to Cologne. The town itself will bear part of the cost, probably up to one million marks — in order that the potatoes may be retailed at 25 Pfgs. per lb.

It is reported that Cologne has also bought potatoes from Holland.

AMERICAN IMMIGRATION.

MAURETANIA HELD UP.

Two thousand seven hundred war veterans, mostly Americans who had served in the British Army, were virtually held prisoners for twenty four hours by the immigration officials at New York when they arrived on the Mauretania. The officials were unable to decide their status but subsequently allowed them to leave the ship for a camp to await the settlement of the question.

The immigration authorities state that the Mauritania arrived without a manifest or list of passengers and that many of the passengers aboard were not Americans but had enlisted from Canada and the West Indies. All those unable to prove American citizenship must enter under the immigration laws. The Canadians are being sent to Canada.

A semi-official message from Buda-Pesth denies the statement which appeared in a Berlin newspaper to the effect that Beli Kum, the Magyar president of the Soviet, had gone to Munich.

IMPORTANT CHANGES AT BISLEY MEETING.

WAR EXPERIENCE.

There should be some very pretty shooting at Bisley when the National Rifle Association meeting takes place. In the early days of the war we shot alongside many Bisley crack shots but sooner or later they fell victims to their long slow pull and the "snap" of a German sniper using telescopic sights.

Many alterations have been made for the Bisley contest. Long distance shooting, for instance, has been abolished. The King's Cup will be confined to ranges from two hundred to six hundred yards. This is a direct result of war experience with the service short rifle.

Regular soldiers are now eligible to compete in the King's, Queen Mary's, and St. George's competitions, which are thrown open to all His Majesty's Forces, including Colonials.

Among the new competitions in connection with scores made in these three contests will be a Belgian Cup for teams from the Army of the Rhine.

Another most interesting struggle should be forthcoming for an Entente Cordiale Cup, open to teams representing units of armies which served in different theatres of war.

There will also be a cup for teams from the army abroad, and a sniping competition.

GERMAN EDUCATION MYTH.

The British branch of the American University Union in Europe entertained at dinner last night four hundred of the two thousand American university students who formed part of the United States army and who have been detached to study at British universities and institutions. The guests were seated by colleges, of which twenty eight were represented, and a feature of the evening was the songs and yells of those institutions.

Lord Birkenhead, the Lord Chancellor, said he was very hopeful of the ideal which both the King of England and the President of America dearly cherished, that real affection of the heart would count a thousand times more than tradition. He would recommend to every one present not to forget that the little island called Britain had made after all some decisive contribution to the greatest struggle in history. He would not care if it were the last — he did not believe it was the last — but he was sure that if ever again the same appeal were made the same answer would be given by men who were in the van of civilisation.

The American Ambassador, Mr. John Davis, said that whenever a voice was raised against Great Britain their voices should be raised in her defence, for to Great Britain more than all others belonged the imperishable honour of carrying to its successful end this great war for the liberty and freedom of the world.

On the subject of education the Ambassador said that no more successful publication of a myth was ever perpetrated than the legend that education could only be found in Germany.

The day was past when the training of Berlin, Heidelberg and Bonn would be preferred to that of Oxford or Cambridge.

The Ambassador expressed the hope that Americans would imitate the example of Cecil Rhodes in creating scholarships, so that British students could study at American universities. He also hoped that the exchange of British and American professors woud become a regular practice.

RICHMOND HORSE SHOW.

Widespread interest is being aroused by the revival of the Richmond Royal Horse Show. The event, which will be the chief show of the year, is arranged for Friday and Saturday the 4th and 5th July, under the patronage of the King and the Presidency of the Marquis of Cambridge.

Two outstanding and entirely new features will be included. The first is a class for troop horses, confined to horses that have seen military service. For this event the King is presenting a silver cup as first prize.

The second feature will be a driving Marathon on the Friday morning, for horses in double harness, the course being from Hyde Park to Richmond.

RUSSIAN PEACE OFFER

MADE IN GERMANY.

When Mr. Clem Edwards (Lab., Bedwelty) drew attention in the House of Commons yesterday to the offer of peace alleged to have been made by Lenin, a lively discussion ensued, many speakers objecting to any negotiations with the Bolshevists.

Mr. Shortt replied on behalf of the Government. There was no desire, he said, to avoid discussion with Russia but we could not have any truck with a mere gang of bloodthirsty ruffians who are terrorising the pupulation of Russia. We are entitled to tell the Russian people that we will have no dealings with a Government which endangers civilisation. He considered that the whole story of Lenin being ready to negotiate was of German origin, manufactured for the purpose of making believe that the Bolshevists are really peaceable and civilised persons. The Germans were spreading Bolshevism wherever possible, as their only hope, because where it went weakness supervened.

BERLIN REICHSTAG DAMAGE.

A Berlin telegram asserts that so much havoc was wrought in the Reichstag building that its condition today resembles a mixture of "barracks, gin shops and brothels." The damage is estimated at 800,000 marks and will take four months to repair.

ARMY RATIONS.

Despite the classic but somewhat cruel retort of Doctor Samuel Johnson, most of us in the Army of the Rhine see considerable necessity in the continuance of our earthly lives. We are not entirely given over to other-worldliness, and we have more than an academic interest in the quality and quantity of Rations. It has often been said that men can be divided into two classes — those who eat to live and those who live to eat. We make bold to say that very few in our Army can enter the latter, privileged class.

Men need not be materialists, though the blessed word Rations is often on their lips. Indeed, Army life has taught us to eschew the materialistic gospel that man lives by bread alone. If he so lived, he would often live badly. Yes, that is a lesson we have learned in season and out of season. The ancient Greek ideal seems but a dream.

There is no reason why we should not confess that we are keenly interested in the Ration Dump, and the "ways and means of communication," to borrow the phraseology of Sir Eric Geddes, by which modest portions of that Dump are conveyed to us. It is the task of the Army authorities to see that men in all units get good and sufficient food; and that task, performed often in days of stress and difficulty, has, on the whole, been worthily accomplished during the four years and eight months of warfare. But war is over, and there should now be fewer anomalies in the supply of food. England expects every man to—get his rations.

It is a poor gibe to say that the way to a man's heart is through his stomach, but one can retain what truth there is in the gibe and put it in nicer language. One element in human contentment is a sense of well-being, and well-being adds to efficiency. We would bespeak two things from those who are set in authority over us—organization and imagination. Let us say frankly that in organization our Army authorities have achieved wonders, all credit to them; but there are one or two weaknesses in the wonderful system. Some units and ranks have reason to bless the distribution—for organisation is a matter of equitable distribution—some are contented with the distribution, and some suffer from the distribution. Ought there to be these three classes? Again, imagination should play its part in food problems. Can we not hope for a little pleasing variety in the contents of our Ration Dumps Changes are light-some even in articles of proved sustenance.

We write in no mood of angry or captious criticism, and we feel sure that we voice the opinions of many in our Army. It is not open to us in Cologne as it was in France, to eke out rations by the purchase of dainties. It should not be necessary to do so, and we gather from the records of our House of Commons that the food supply of the Army of the Rhine is entirely adequate.

THE MASTERY OF THE AIR.

It was the happy phrase of our King which inspired yesterday's leading article in The Cologne Post. Most undoubtedly the British navy has been our sure shield. But the time has come when without abating our tribute to the Grand Fleet we must increase the strength and sureness of our imperial shield. Men like Oliver Cromwell saw the need of mastering the seas; men like Horatio Nelson achieved it. But mastery of the seas does not now mean what it did. Great Britain has during the last five years lost many of her insular advantages. To be safe from attack she needs to retain mastery of the air. In air raids we have paid a heavy toll of one-and-a-half thousand killed, and three-and-a-half thousand injured; and such untoward raids show the vast importance of an art that has slumbered since the day of Icaros to awaken amazingly in the days of Captain Ball and Baron von Richthofen.

Our national problem is twofold. We must ensure the security of our vast carrying trade; and we must make that trade efficient by utilizing every means of speed that new conditions can furnish. No one may safely prophesy how airships, aeroplanes and flyingboats will affect commercial methods and undertakings. We are not expert in matters of aircraft construction, and details of 600, 1000 and 2000 h. p. engines convey to us little meaning. But we believe strongly that our business men and these are now the days of the "business man" must see to it that in the new era of commercial enterprise we shall lead and not follow. The traditions of our empire, the gallantry and hardihood of our airmen, and the hopes of a brighter morrow—these constitute our claim, and it must not be denied.

OUR GREAT ENEMY — THE FLY.

BY MAJOR J. B. GROGAN, R. A. M. C.

With the coming of warmer weather another "great attack" is impending. Our next greatest enemy after the Hun is the fly: now that the former is rendered harmless, let us start and swat the fly! In seven weeks one female fly can give rise to 432,000 others or more, so by killing the fly early you prevent all these others appearing.

The crop of a fly can contain 16,000,000 germs and this number is exclusive of the innumerable germs that can be carried on the flies hairy legs and sticky feet, so you can see what a dangerous enemy we are up against, for Cholera, Typhoid and Tubercle germs, not to mention many others, have been found to be harboured by the Fly.

The fly is well called a "Winged Sponge"!

The life of a Fly consists of four stages, 1. the Egg; 2. the Maggot; 3. the Chrysalis, and 4. the full grown fly.

These four stages only take 7—14 days in all, which leaves little time for you to get the upper hand.

Many people look upon flies as a harmless nuisance. Nuisance they certainly are, but far from being harmless they are a great danger to your health.

FEEDING AND HABITS.

Let us now study a little more closely the dainty (?) habits of our enemy.

The fly prefers to feed alternately in the latrines and the kitchens! so that any disease germs in the latrines are carried on to the food in the cook house, unless the former are fly-proof and the food always covered and protected.

Another playful little habit the fly has, when resting, is to vomit its contents, by way of amusing itself, till a drop as large as the fly's head is seen at the end of its sucker; when alarmed, this drop, usually swarming with disease germs, falls off on to the food ready for you to eat!

As one grain of faecal matter can contain 16,000,000 germs, you can easily see what the fly will do to your food if it is not properly protected.

REPRODUCTION.

We know that rabbits multiply exceedingly quickly, but in this respect the fly beats the band! A female fly will lay 120 to 150 eggs at a time, and can have five to six batches like these in her life-time.

PREVENTION AND CURE.

Put very briefly, the prevention of the fly trouble may be summarised as follows.

1. Prevent flies breeding
   a) in stable litter and horse dung.
   b) in human excreta.

This is the greatest object to be aimed at, as in this way you kill the eggs at once.

The methods are by incinerating or burning of the litter and dung, or close packing.

2. Prevent flies from obtaining access to human excreta. This can be done by making all latrines fly-proof, and so preventing the flies from laying eggs in the excreta.

3. Protect all food from flies. This is done by keeping food in food-safes and covering all food such as milk, bread, meat biscuits, cheese, jam, sugar etc. which, as they are not cooked before being eaten, are very liable to be fouled by the fly. Cups, plates, mugs, knives and forks must also be under cover.

4. Destroy all the full grown flies possible, by traps or fly papers, etc.

AN AFTERMATH OF WAR.

BY PATRICK WOODWARD.

Now that the war is over, and as we filter back to civilian life, we shall miss the dear old thing and its many quaint customs. I cannot imagine that the greengrocer general will lightly give up the life in which he has gained so many laurels, and there are many of us to whom will cling particles of our army careers collected in these past four years, no doubt finding reminiscences in our butchers' bills and char-lady's grievances.

Mr. Buggins is a staid commercial traveller who has pursued an easy path entirely uninterrupted by competition and the war, and he will beam and murmur words of blessing on the boys as they come back. He never suspects that now he will catch, for the first time, real echoes of the war, until he receives something like the following from his directors:

O. C. Cottons, Puddleton District.

"Your returns for May 1919 show a decrease of thirty per cent. on those of the preceding month and twenty per cent. decrease on those of the same month of the preceding year. Please explain."

So simple and straightforward! But he will not understand that his directors have plagiarised the chits from the Brigade, with that Please explain as concluding words. Maybe he will catch the implied hope that the correspondence should not be allowed to sink into obscurity, and that a reply is even expected.

I am afraid old Buggins may suddenly stumble on this aftermath in his own private letters. Think of him home on one of his week-end surprise visits, settling down to enjoy his belated post-bag, looking forward to hearing of Auntie Kate's cold and of the second litter of John's pigs. Suddenly he sees a strange writing, and perhaps feels a little excited in anticipation of the unknown which has come into his humdrum existence. His hand trembles slightly as he tears the envelope open.

15, Lilac Villas.

To A. Buggins, Esq.

Sir, On Tuesday afternoon at about 14.30 your son was seen throwing stones in the direction of my greenhouse, one end of which was completely wrecked. I estimate the demage at £5. 2s. 7½d. For your information and necessary action.

Faithfully yours,
B. ROKEN-GLASS.

Now if poor old Buggins had been in the army, he would have been able to fence with this kind of thing for the next seven years and could then have pleaded that the debt had become annulled through lapse of time under Vic. 6 cap. ii. a (or whatever the authority is). He might well have replied as follows:

"17, Lilac Villas.

Sir, In reference to the attached: — Please say if married or single.

A. BUGGINS."

This to be followed by some little message to the family (if any) etc., and so it would have gone on with the only disbursing on Buggins' part being the postage; which might have become a little heavy in the fourth year when the correspondence changed from the letter to parcel post. As it is, Buggins will pay up fearful of Roken-Glass taking the matter to court.

I begin to feel sorry for old Buggins, because he will also receive cryptic messages which he will be unable to decipher. Maybe he belongs to the lending library round the corner and having trusted, during war-time, to the tastes of the young lady, temporarily in charge (who satisfied him with fiction of a modernized Cinderella type), he continues to leave it to the owner, now returned from the war. This young librarian has a more robust judgment which Buggins does not so readily appreciate. Buggins writes: —

Dear Sir, Herewith the book you sent me yesterday — "Troy Town." I cannot read such rot. I find it dull and uninteresting and your taste execrable.

Yours truly,
A. BUGGINS.

The laconic librarian having been a clerk at Corps Headquarters, "G" office, during the war, writes: "Refer to Q" on the bottom and returns the note. Of course Buggins changes his library, but the long walk to the new one would never have been necessary but for Wilhelm and his mania.

Poor old Buggins!

Over half a million Yanks were brought to France in ships kindly provided by the Imperial German Government.

There were 12 German ships alone that brought over 370,695 men, and of these the now famous Leviathan and once proud Vaterland easily took the lead with a grand total of 71,527 landed in France in eight trips. The George Washington, which at present occupies a considerable share of the spotlight because of its presidential voyages, was second best, having succeeded in making nine trans-Atlantic troop-laden voyages with 45,000 khaki-clad passengers. The America, the President Grant and the Agamemnon, the last named christened for the ex-Kaiser Wilhelm II himself, followed closely after the George Washington as the heaviest German contributors to the success of the American troop movement France-ward.

The final and complete figures on the number of American troops brought to France and the flags under which they sailed are now available. Great Britain brought over 1,074,374 men; the United States, 898,449; Italy, 61,068; France, 48,691. Total, 2,056,122. Of the entire A.E.F., 40 per cent was routed via Great Britain and 60 per cent disembarked directly at French ports.

Full details of these methods of swatting the fly cannot be given here, but I recommend all who read this article to help their Medical Officers to carry out these and similar measures, and swat the fly now, defeating it just as we did the Hun.

THE BATTALION MOVES.

A TEARFUL TALE.

BY H.M.FF.

"Is this bloomin' war over?" asked Henry James Wiltshire of Six Platoon as he flung his F.M.O. down.

"Wot Wor"? echoed a weary voice from the farther end of the room.

It was more than flesh and blood could stand. Pausing with a lighted match half way to his cigarette, H.J. Wiltshire poured out the vials of his wrath.

"Wot Wor?" he said with scorn. "Wat Wor? Gaw's truth! Yew har young hand hinnersent. Your education 'as been sadly neglected. Course I don't blame yer mother. Likely she didn't want yer, and yew kind o' thrust yerself hon 'er. War? I aint no Ole Bill but I've seen a bit o' war. Were yew at Bullycor' and Wipers and hon the Somme . . . ?" Words failed him and he gasped for breath.

The offender smiled and then slowly began to hum that wistful melody "Old soldiers never die."

Henry James struggled for breath and was in the act of unbuttoning his tunic when a voice called from the door-way' "Tea up!" In a flash he was gone, Old soldiers, it appears, always get there first.

All this hot air was the result of a battalion move. In the old days, when war was in progress, moves were a matter of course, but now the war is over (according to some) moves are somewhat a luxury. You arrive with great ceremony in a village, find yourselves in the best of billets, settle down for duration . . . . Then some genius of organisation takes up his pen and with much labouring of mind moves that from here to there!

The Creator made the world in six days and on the seventh he rested. Not so with us. We work six days, and on the Sabbath we move.

Memory carries me back to "civvy" days, particularly the days on which the family moved. When the last pram was formed up in the rear mother would discover we'd left the piano behind. Father who usually had his mouth full of nails, and was hung round with pictures off the sitting room walls, would suddenly become rude. A noise like the falling of many tin cans would arise forthwith; the children would howl with one accord. The neighbours would assist with advice and the policeman would frequently request us to move on — all with no avail.

A battalion move is organised on similar lines. Have you ever seen the Transport Sergeant weep or the newest recruit fail as if dead? If not, you have not seen a battalion move. Verily, it overcomes the strongest heart!

In the best regulated "mobs" a billeting party usually precedes the battalion. This party is usually selected from among those who suffer from sore feet or some other similar malady which prevents them marching with the troops. Those attached to the "Noble Order of Lead Swinging" are the keenest volunteers. Arrived at the other end, the Officer in charge of billeting chooses the most obscure billets in order to camouflage the presence of troops in the village. The C.Q.M.S. selects the best billet for the C.S.M. Then he remembers the Officers, and having satisfied them, considers that item in the Army, — the Q.R. Tired and sorrowful he wends his way round to the sergeants' mess. Alas! A row of of clients awaits his arrival . . .

"Please Quarter, there ain't no bed in my billet."

"I got ter "Kip" with a brace o' kids in my cubby 'ole."

"Strike me pink if the old wumman ain't locked the door of my show!" Such are the exclamations which greet him.

Woe, woe is the lot of the C.Q.M.S. After much deliberation, the unhappy lot of each man is put in order, and then the O. C. Company requests an immediate interview.

The shades of night fall fast. A piano vamps in the nearest estaminet, a mouth organ wails in a billet and some one in pain raises his voice in song. All is well. We are settling down....

But a vision arises. Somewhere, in a dimly lighted chamber, poring over countless maps, a red-tabbed figure thinks and plots . . . Ah! . . . "Next Sunday . . ."

Wars may come and wars may go, but we move on for ever. Prepare ye not a cricket pitch. It moveth not.

And when your soul yearns for excitement, and your young blood runs hot, wait in patience... "On Sunday the Battalion will move."

AERIAL MAILS ABROAD.

The unit responsible for the carrying of mails by air from Maisoncelle to Cologne is the No. 110 Squadron R.A.F., and during the last three weeks, in spite of almost the worst possible weather conditions, there have only been three days when the weather actually prevented the mails being carried. During this period 465 bags of mails have been brought here, and on only one occasion has there been a forced landing.

Some idea of the weather conditions prevailing may be gathered from the fact that on the majority of days on which the mails were carried from March 1 onwards it was found impossible to continue the training of the homing pigeons attached to the unit. Moreover, as it was necessary to fly through driving rain, specially protected propellers had to be supplied, as the rain so seriously damaged the ordinary type during one journey that they became unsafe for further use.

The average time for all flights for the whole distance is 2h 18min, while the record up to date is 1h. 45min. The machines in use are D.H.A.'s. As the route was a new one to nearly all the pilots engaged, and bearing in mind the extremely adverse weather conditions of this month, we must agree that the performance of No. 110 Squadron is particularly creditable, and the Service have our thanks.

We learn that the Rheinische Zeitung has been suspended, on account of certain articles which appeared recently.

According to a recent army routine order, the Cologne-Paris Express is now a through train.

During the war, through a special fund, 420,000 cigarettes, 1,000oz of tobacco, sweets, meat cubes, papers, and magazines have been sent to local sailors and soldiers by the Victoria Working Men's Club, Kew Gardens.

COMEDIES FOR COLOGNE.

MR. GEORGE GROSSMITH INVITED TO SEND FIRST-CLASS COMPANY.

A scheme is on foot to send West End London musical comedies out to Cologne to entertain the Army of the Rhine.

Mr. George Grossmith, who has been invited to send over a first-class company, informed "The Evening News" that he would certainly do his best.

"I don't want to make money out of the venture," he explained, "but merely to obtain a guarantee from the Army against loss. I am also waiting to hear that good food and accommodation will be assured the members of the company."

If the project goes through the general manager will be Mr. E. H. Kelly. He says he will try and ensure that any ex-service men will form the male part of the cast.

Mr. Kelly is planning a triple bill, to start with—say. "A Pantomime Rehearsal," and two other items. He also hopes to stage "Poached Eggs and Pearls."

Later would come such musical comedies as "Yes, Uncle" and "To-night's the Night."

SURPRISE GIFTS TO COMPANY O.C.

NOTES FROM THE 2/4 DUKE OF WELLINGTON'S REGIMENT.

On Monday Lt.-Colonel P.P. Wilson, D.S.O., of the Durham Light Infantry relinquished command of the 2/4 Duke of Wellington's Regiment, and is succeeded by Lt.-Colonel F. C. Burnett, D.S.O., (Duke of Wellington's Regt.), who till recently commanded a Battalion of the King's.

Lt.-Colonel Wilson, D.S.O., commanded this (2/4 D.o.W.) Battalion for nearly twelve months and led it in the second Battle of the Marne and during the last push.

Officers and men did not fail to see that he departed with their very best wishes for the future and affectionate remembrances of the past. The little village of Erp found photographers, both amateur and professional, very busy on Monday.

The Inter-Company Football League for the "Wilson" Cup still finds "C" Company leading, though on Tuesday they had a stiff tussle with "D" Company, the game resulting in a draw — one goal each.

At a recent concert given by "C" Company, the O.C. Coy., Captain E. N. Blakey, M.C., who anticipates being demobolized shortly was the recipient of several suprise gifts from his Company.

The gifts included a gold-mounted walking stick, a silver wristlet watch, two sets of Razors, and from the concert party a mouth-organ. A keen sportsman and a rattling good fellow Captain Blakey will be greatly missed by the Battalion.

CONCERT AT LENGSDORF.

A very enjoyable concert took place at Lengsdorf on Tuesday evening, which was given by the 141st Field Ambulance Concert Party, ably assisted by the Band of the 1st Northamptonshire Regiment. The rendering of the overture "Maid of the Mountains" by the latter was greatly enjoyed and the sketch entitled "Cure" fairly brought the house down. A duet by Drs. Frenton and Full was also much appreciated. As the girl, Private Bell, late of the Divisional Concert Party, wants some beating. As a whole they are the best seen or heard in the Division so far.

A word of praise is due to the Bandmaster of the 1st Northamptons for the Band's share of the evening's entertainment, also for the way he officiated at the piano during the unavoidable absence of the regular pianist.

"BOTH OF THE CROWD CHEERED".

ARTILLERYMEN'S DIVERTING FOOTBALL MATCH AT OVERATH.

ROLLED AND BUTTERED PITCH.

A correspondent, for whose veracity we cannot vouch, sends us the following:

The following match, played by "B" Battery of the 126th Bde. A.F.W., has apparently escaped the notice of your expert football reporter.

The match was played a fortnight ago on the Battery's billiard-table-like ground at Overath. The pitch claims to possess the finest display of mole-hills in Germany, but for this great match it was rolled, — and buttered also, I should imagine, by the way some of the players slipped about. The match was between the officers and N.C.O's of the battery. The disporters of the merry "Pip" had to call to their assistance their batmen in order to make up the requisite number, which somebody said generally amounts to eleven. The bat men were warned to carry one banderole, one tin of "Blanco" for the knees, a supply of spare "Pips" for their football shirts, and boot-cleaning apparatus for the purpose of re-glossing any of their elegant footwear that might get soiled during the game.

Motley Collection.

The opposition consisted of a motley collection of N.C.O's ranging from the Sergeant-Major down to the lowly Lance-Bombardier. Before commencing they all lined up in column of mob before a camera specially built to stand the strain. The manipulator, I feel sure, must have been a "Mirror" man incog. They all struck professional attitudes, and tried to look as if they were'nt a bit cold. The photographer's request to watch for the "bird" nearly caused a stampede, but at last the deed was done, and they galloped away to the pitch.

The referee was kept busy for a few moments answering such questions as "Do the backs stand behind the goal?" and "I am centre-forward. Where do I stand?" but at last the game started.

Scientific Expositions.

The intricate movements of such a scientific exposition of the noble game are beyond my power to describe, but several extra clever moves deserve an attempt at description. In the first half, after a bout of tricky passing by the officers, an inoffensive Lance-Bombardier had the audacity to rob the O.C. of the ball, and when tackled, — by two of his own side' by the way — he kicked hard, and left the rest to Providence.

Three officers and two batmen tried to intercept the ball with various parts of their anatomy but it eluded them and sped towards the goal. "The goalie" who was getting outside a tin of "Maconachie" at the time, was taken unawares and it bounced (the ball not the "maconachie") into the net.

After this reverse, the officers grew desperate, and threatened their batmen that if they didn't win they would put them back into the lines. This spurred the "idle rich" to almost superhuman efforts. They made a dash for goal, and got there, but somehow the ball had got lost on the way. Both of the crowd cheered. Again and again the freely perspiring batmen, assisted at odd intervals by a few stray subalterns made attacks on the goal, and at last with a shriek of delight a "star" man rushed the ball and the "goalie" into the net.

Unfortunately he had mistaken the goal and scored for the opposition. More cheers from the assembled multitude.

A dashing Sergeant.

Half time sounded soon after, but long before the "idle rich" had recovered their breath, the whistle went for the resumption. A smart piece of work was then done by the sergeant who interviews the mokes when they parade sick. He took the ball up the field, tricked a few spare colonels, tripped up the "goalie" and shot at goal, and hit the corner flag. Nevertheless the score against the "Pips" mounted up, and the "Stripe's" goalie went off to water and feed long before the end of the game as he saw he would not be wanted.

The rest of the gladiatorial contest need not be described as both sides being unused to work were whacked early in the second half. Suffice it to say that the "Stripes" won by 5—0.

When the final whistle went, rumour said that the players asked to play another hour each way, but I can assure my readers that rumour has no more foundation than the one saying that Mr. Churchill was personally conducting a draft to our battery to ensure their not getting mislaid.

13th. King's v 51st. King's Liverpool Regt

This match for the 1st Lancashire Brigade Shield played at Beuel on Tuesday was very fast and some interesting football was witnessed.

The 51st Battn. with a strong wind blowing in their faces were the first to score from a corner kick headed by Sgt. Mc. Spirit into the goal.

The 13th followed soon after, Capt. Carson putting the finishing touch to some pretty midfield play. The teams crossed over at half-time, one goal each.

At the commencement of the second half the teams were fairly even but later the 13th scored from a corner and towards the end of the match pressed considerably, Crowder scoring a final goal.

Sharples and Meredith both played well for the winners whilst Green at inside left, the goal keeper, and Nuttall a tower of strength at back, were the pick of the losing side.

Result 13th King's. 3 goals; 51st King's. 1 goal.

SPORTING SNIPPETS.

Captain Sir Harold Nutting, Bt., Dublin, 17th Lancers, has been elected Master of the North Shropshire Hunt. Sir Harold succeeds Colonel H. H. Heywood-Lonsdale, Shavington, who has been Master for ten years.

On Saturday afternoon Prince Albert will go again to Twickenham, this time to witness a match between teams representative of the Mother Country and of South Africa.

The Prince of Wales will pay an informal visit to the Victoria Working Men's Club, Kew Gardens, tomorrow.

The Northern Section of the Professional Golfers Association's "Victory" Tournament will be played on the Alwoodley Club's course, near Leeds, on April 20th.

The Aberdovey (Merionethshire) Club have appointed L. G. Ross, of the Edgbaston Club, Birmingham, as their new professional, in place of Charles Gadd, who has gone to Ipswich.

The Thames Rowing Club have agreed to the suggestion made by the committee of the Metropolitan Amateur (1919) Regatta that the next race for the Foster Cup should be one of the events to be held at the fixture at Putney on Monday, July 14. A stipulation has, however, been made that the trophy shall be competed for under the usual conditions.

PRINCE OF WALES KICKS OFF.

R. A. F. FOOTBALL MATCH AT STAMFORD BRIDGE.

In brilliant weather the Association football match between the Royal Air Force (South Eastern area) and the R. A. F. (London Command) commenced at one o'clock on Wednesday at Stamford Bridge before 8000 spectators. Among those present were the Prince of Wales and Prince Albert, the former kicking off in the second half.

In the first half the Fulhamite Penn scored, the Army goalkeeper being blinded by the sun and missing an easy shot.

The play generally was poor, many chances being missed.

FINE DISPLAY IN GOAL.

92nd FIELD AMBULANCE v. 103rd FIELD AMBULANCE.

This match was played on the ground of the 103rd Field Ambulance at Troisdorf on Tuesday afternoon, when the opposing teams proved to be very evenly matched, but a strong wind which blew obliquely across the ground rendered accurate football almost an impossibility. After a good deal of mid-field play the visiting forwards broke away, and Pte. Evans succeeded in beating the custodian of the "home" side after 25 minutes play, and half-time arrived with the score 1—0 in favour of the visitors.

Both sides had bad luck in the second-half, especially the home team, and failed to score. The brilliant display in goal by Pte. Houston for the visitors undoubtedly saved his side from disaster.

The visitors were lucky winners, the result being: 92nd Field Ambulance — 1; 103rd Field Ambulance — 0.

THE BURSCHEID LEAGUE.

The 455th (West Riding) Field Coy travelled to "L" Battery R.H.A. on Sunday, when a good clean game of football resulted in a draw, the score very well representing the strength of the representative elevens.

The result of the Burscheid League up to and including Sunday, April 6th, is as follows:

Unit	Played	Won	Lost	Drawn	Total Points
455th Fd. Coy	6	4	—	2	10
497th Fd. Coy	6	3	1	2	8
—L. Battery	6	2	3	1	5
Signals	6	2	3	1	5
510th Fd. Coy	6	2	4	—	4
2nd B.H.Q.	6	1	4	1	3

Inter-Services Rugby Tournament.

NEW-ZEALAND BEATEN BY AUSTRALIA.

In the Inter-Services Rugby Tournament at Bradford on Wednesday, Australia beat New-Zealand by 6 points to 5.

In the first half Thomson and Egan scored for Australia and in the second half Storey for New-Zealand, while Stohr converted. There were 6000 spectators.

153rd LABOUR COMPANY'S WHIST DRIVE.

On Wednesday evening a second Whist Drive was held at the Hdqtrs. of the 3rd Labour Company, Cologne Volkshaus, Severin Strasse, eight prizes being offered, which were secured by:— Sgt. G. Sanders (1st Ladies); Capl. Saylor (1st Gents); Pte. W. Powell (2nd Ladies); Pte. G. Coleman (2nd Gents); Pte. G. F. Swabey (Ladies "Booby"); C. S. M. Wren (Gents "Booby"). The two "Hidden Number" prizes were carried off by: — Pte. Cauch and Pte. S. Richardson.

The first whist drive took place on April 2nd with similar prizes and both evenings having proved very successful it is hoped to hold a drive every Wednesday evening at 6.30.

KEENLY CONTESTED RUGGER MATCH AT SCHLOSS BURG.

52nd DEVONS V 51st BATTALION.

These old rivals met once again in a keenly contested Rugger match played at Schloss Burg, the Headquaters of the 52nd Battalion, on Sunday last.

The visitors drew first blood, Lieut. Radley scoring after a fast run through. This however, was not converted and the home team equalised shortly after, L/Corpl. Bestente scoring close to the touch line. This was converted by Capt. Castle with a magnificent kick. No further score was recorded in the first half, although some very useful work was done for the 52nd Battalion by Lieut. Williams.

On resuming, despite the strenuous efforts of the visitors, the home team forged ahead, Lieut Cairns scoring two brilliant tries, which were not converted. After some hard play, the 52nd added two more tries, unconverted, Lieut. Crisland and Sergeant Pearce getting through. The visitors, although some good individual work was done, failed to score again, and the game finished with the score:

52nd Battalion 17 points; 51st Battalion 3 points.

BRILLIANT TENNIS.

Great Uphill Fight At Queen's Club.

In the second round of the Queen's covered court champion-ships R. V. Thomas (Australia) beat B. I. C. Norton the champion of Johannesburg by 3 sets to love; Major R. O. D. Heath beat Capt. Matthey the tenth best man in America by 3 sets to 2. This was one of the finest singles seen in England since 1914. It was conspicuous for brilliant volleying and passing shots. Heath played a great uphill fight and won the 4th set (8—6).

Gerald Patterson, unextended, beat A. F Yencken the Cambridge tennis halfblue (6—1, 6—0, 6—2).

N. Misu the Rumanian, who recently won the championship of the Riviera, thrice defeating Decugis, beat L. Raymond, South-Africa (6—2, 6—4, 9—7). Colonel Stacey, A. I. F. beat Capt. Clinck (8—6, 6—1, 7—5).

The Hon. F. M. B. Fisher (New Zealand) who had a walk-over should meet Patterson in the fourth round.

The defeat of S. N. Doust and Mrs. McNair in two straight sets by Capt. Ireland and Mrs. Edgington will probably be the greatest surprise of the tournament, especially as Doust led 5—1. in the second set. The winners are reckoned to be a good second class pair, but the losers did not find their is game.

THE BEST BILLETS.

34th M.G.C.'s Interesting Competition At Troisdorf.

NOTABLE DISPLAY AT POWDER FACTORY.

A very interesting competition came to a close last Saturday at the Powder Factory, Troisdorf. It was held by the 34th Battalion Machine Gun Corps — Eastern Division — and was for a Cup presented by the Commanding Officer, Lt.-Col. E. H. Kendrick, D. S. O., for the most efficient and best all-round Company in the Battalion, each Company being allowed a certain number of points for each item, according to efficiency. The items comprising Gun-Drill and Arms Drill, etc., took place a few days previously but the deciding factor was on the above-named day. The items for which points were awarded were as follows: —

I. — Smartest and best Drilled Company
II. — Smartest and best turned out Transport and Personnel.
III. — Cleanest and best kept Billets.

These items caused great enthusiasm throughout the Battalion, and all ranks worked with the greatest vigour during the preceding days. The G.O.C. Division, Maj.-Gen. C. L. Nicholson C.B., C.M.G. kindly consented to judge and to award points, and his decision went to "D" Coy who won by a small margin of points, the other Companies running very closely. Before presenting the Cup to the O.C. "D" Coy., the G.O.C. in his remarks said how very hard it had been to judge and congratulated all Companies on the excellent turnout. He also wished men about to be demobilized the "best of luck".

After the Cup had been presented three lusty cheers were given by the Battalion, which terminated a very successful Competition.

The band of the 2nd Battalion Royal North Lancs Regt., kindly lent by Lt.-Col. T. McBridges was in attendance, and played selections during the judging.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

(With an Occasional Entertainments Note.)

Motor-Cycle Skids.

A correspondent who signs himself "Dispatch-Rider" sends me a hint which he asks might be published for the benefit of other motor-cyclists. I fully agree with the preface to his letter, in which he remarks that while the surface of the majority of German roads are wonderfully flat and smooth for motor traffic, their composition is such that the slightest moisture renders them particularly treacherous to motor cylists. But the hint he sends for lessening the possibilities of side-slips is absolutely contrary to my own experience. "Dispatch Rider" says "when turning a corner, or passing over uneven surface (such as tramlines) on a slippery road, there is much less chance of a slip if the rider allows all his weight to rest on the foot-boards". He has surely got hold of the wrong end of the stick. I haven't the space here to explain the why and the wherefore, but if, after further reflection, he is not convinced that the higher the weight on the machine the less liklihood there is of the wheels slipping from under him, I shall be happy to send him my point of view fully by post, on request.

The 36th C.C.S. Tennis Court.

In blissful ignorance, and without the slightest "malice aforethought," I made a statement in this column a few days ago that has incurred the wrath of one reader and the sarcasm of another. The information I imparted was to the effect that convalescent officers who where at the 36 C.C.S. Hospital, in Cologne, finding they had some difficulty in killing time had hit upon the happy notion of rendering the already existing tennis-court playable by a few alterations and the acquisition of the necessary paraphernalia. The mistake I made, apparently, was in supposing that the said officers had any time to kill. All the precious hours that go to make up the day, my first correspondent points out, are already full of amusement and interest, thanks, chiefly, to the refreshing influence of the doctors and nurses in attendance. There is no such I thing as boredom among the patients in the 36th C.C.S., he adds. The second correspondent asks, "who has been pulling your leg . . .?" To him can only reply that if he knew the identity of my informant, with his invariable sober demeanour, he would realise that that individual is quite incapable of so frivolous an operation.

Hospital Life.

Do I, too, not know the wonderful achievements of the medicos and nurses in our British hospitals in permeating their environs with an atmosphere of cheery comfort and brightness? There are thousands who will agree that under the influence of these people, and of the officials who are responsible for the social side of British hospital life, pains and troubles fade away to proportions of insignificance.

But this doesn't alter the fact that there are moments when the majority of us find ourselves at a bit of a loose end — even in the cheeriest environment — when the introduction of a new pastime (if only from the point of view of novelty) is agreeably accepted. I would like to point out, too, that the words "killing time" and "boredom" are not necessarily synonymous.

Nevertheless and notwithstanding, if my paragraph was so unhappily worded as to offend the obviously very high regard my two correspondents have for the 36th C.C.S., "I 'ereby tender my 'umble apologies."

Düren Diversions.

There is now a welcome addition to the places of entertainment available for the troops at Düren. The Army has taken over the Stadt Theatre in connection with which an attractive programme of future entertainment is in course of preparation. At present, this is in its incipient stage so that it is impossible to give details, but it appears that variety is to be a dominant feature of the performances here. German opera, army and civilian concert parties and band concerts will all find a place on the bill periodically.

Good Friday Amusements.

Elaborate preparations have been made for the entertainment of the troops in Rhineland on Good Friday, in addition to the many football matches that will be played during the morning of that day. In Cologne for instance, there will be many free entertainments at the theatres and picture houses. The two Army Choral Societies will be among the entertainers at the Deutsche Theatre, (as well as the Orchestral Society, if it is ready in time), while the Women's Theatre Company will perform at the Apollo Theatre. Among other attractions will be a programme of sacred music given by the combined orchestras (greatly augmented), from Nos 2 and 3 Cinemas. A complete list of the special entertainments to be given on the great memorial day will appear shortly in our advertising columns.

SERVICES' GOLF TOURNAMENT.

MAJOR DARWIN DEFEATED BY LIEUT. LOCKHART.

In the Inter-Services Golf Tournament at Sandy Lodge on Wednesday the conditions were perfect, and the play of the keenest description.

In the first round Lochhart beat Darwin 2 up and one to play. Both turned square. Lockhart secured the 10th and 11th.

Hope beat Thompson at the 19th, holing a 6 foot putt. Hope took 7 to the 1st, and also lost the second but turned one up, the game being all square at the 17th, which Hope halved with a 5 yard putt. The first match of the second round, Lockhart versus Kaye, was exciting. The former was one down at the turn, squared the 14th, halved the 19th, and lost the 20th.

Lieut. Fawcett (Australia) beat Capt. Crummack (Army) two up; while Glashan beat Sergt Morpeth (New-Zealand) by 3 up and one to play; Lt. Macan (Canada) beat Schunk one up; Hope beat Surgeon-Lieut. Gardiner Hill by 3 up and one to play; Lt. Dejongh (South Africa) beat Capt. Ballinghall (Army) 3-1; Capt. Jameson (Army) beat Lt. Williams (New-Zealand) 4-3; Lt. Brook (Army) beat Major Morrison (Air Force) 7-5.

Eight Competitors are left in — 4 in the British Army; one in the Air Force and one each from Australia, Canada, and S. Africa.

Mounted Paper-Chase.

SIX MILES COURSE ALONG BANKS OF THE RHINE.

By kind permission of Lt. Col. F. C. Aldous, D.S.O. Commanding 32nd Battalion Machine Gun Corps a very exciting and most successful mounted paper-chase was held on Sunday in the vicinity of Bonn, the arrangements for which were carried out by Lt. Woodward.

The "Hounds" numbering about thirty, and consisting of all ranks, met at Rhiendorf. As "hares" Lt. O. B. Swain, and Lt. W. J. Tombe, M. C. proved very "fleet of foot" and quickly covered the course of some six miles running on the outskirts of Bonn, through Dransdorf and Buschdorf, along the banks of the Rhine, and back to Rhiendorf.

There was a good finish, the first three "hounds" home being representatives of "A" Coy of the Battalion.

The beautiful weather added greatly to the success of the chase, and further sport of this character is anticipated for the near future.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Amongst the questions which were discussed in the House of Commons on Tuesday was that dealing with

GERMANY'S NEW PROPAGANDA.

Mr. BOTTOMLEY (Ind., Hackney, S.) asked the Secretary for War whether his attention had been called to a pamphlet, printed in English, which was handed to British prisoners of war when they left the German camps, containing the statement that they entered the old empire of Germany and left the new Republic, the newest and the freest land in the world, and that they saw so little of Germany's arts, sciences, model cities, theatres, schools, industries, social institutions, scenery, and the real soul of her people, akin in so many things to that of Great Britain; and whether he would take steps to see that similar pamphlets were not placed in the hands of the members of the army of occupation.

Mr. CHURCHILL said that he had not previously seen the pamphlet to which the hon. friend had called his attention, but was aware that efforts had been persistently made through both enemy and Bolshevik sources to reach our soldiers with propaganda of various natures. He also added that steps have been taken and will be taken, to prevent the dissemination and counteract the effect of such propaganda.

1914-15 CROSS.

Mr. CHURCHILL has informed Major Waring (C.L., Blaydon), that the 1914-15 Star will rank as a war medal.

MEETING THE CLAIMS OF INDEMNITY.

Mr. A. T. DAVIES (C.U., Lincoln) asked the Prime Minister whether, in view of the fact that an enormous amount of art treasures are stored in the national museums in Berlin, Dresden, Leipzic, and Hamburg, representing many millions, the Government (or its art advisers in this coun-

MILITARY SERVICE BILL.

HOUSE OF LORDS — SECOND READING.

In the House of Lords on Tuesday, the second reading of the Military Service Bill was moved by Viscount Peel. He explained that the bill was purely a provisional measure, and was not to be confused with the establishment of an after-war army. It retained men with the colours until April 30, 1920, but it was hoped that it would not be necessary to retain so large a force with the colours for so long a period. No power was taken in the bill for the calling-up of boys of 18 who otherwise would have been due for service. That in itself showed that there was no intention to set up a permanent system of conscription. The average rate of demobilisation of the Army had slowed down from 38,000 to 12,500 other ranks a day, but it had increased as regards officers by about 200 per day.

Lord BUCKMASTER moved the rejection of the bill, and said that if a promise was made at an election to do something wrong, the offence lay in making the promise and not in breaking it. He did not base his criticism of the measure on the fact that its introduction showed an indifference to electoral promises. Nor did he object merely on the ground that this was a measure of compulsory service. This measure could only be justified on the ground of strong and compelling circumstances, and he had heard little to show that such circumstances had arisen. The bill placed in the hands, not of the Government, but of "a competent authority," it might be the War Office, the Admiralty, or the Air Service, the right to direct that men shall be compelled to remain with the colours up to the limit of 2,650,000, and all that they knew was that it had been suggested that the total number required would be 900,000 men for the Army.

So far as the bill depended for its necessity upon our providing an army of occupation and securing the enforcement of the terms of peace, he was wholly unsatisfied that any such necessity had ever been made out.

"HOW ABOUT THE FLEET."

Earl CURZON said he did not believe that the case Lord Buckmaster had endeavoured to make out would find a responsive echo in any quarter of their lordships' House. (Cheers.) He believed the noble lord spoke for a small minority, consisting of little more than himself, and great as was the weight they attached to his utterances he (Lord Curzon) found his withers unwrung. It was easy to say that an army of 900,000 men was a prodigious force, and that the nation could not require any such contingent of armed forces. Technically speaking we were at war now, though practically we were not. Was the noble lord so sure that the conditions of war might not be revived? He (Lord Curzon) was not. There were clouds hanging over the horizon which might at any moment burst, and he could not accept the statement that there was no justification for the maintenance of such a force. Did anyone propose to withdraw a single regiment from the Army on the Rhine, which was our only guarantee of obtaining justice?

Lord BUCKMASTER: How about the Fleet?

Earl CURZON said there were a good many parts of Europe not accessible to the Navy.

Lord BUCKMASTER: I was referring to the Army on the Rhine.

Earl CURZON said if the noble lord thought trouble was likely to break out in Germany which could be composed by the Fleet without an army of occupation, his view was not shared by any military or naval authority. We could not strip our garrisons in Syria, Palestine, Mesopotamia, or Egypt, and if the noble lord could show them a policy which would enable the Government to withdraw the 40,000 troops in Ireland he would confer a very great favour. The small force of 20,000 men in North Russia would be withdrawn at the earliest possible opportunity.

BRITISH TROOPS WANTED.

Why should it be to the interests of any party or individual to keep a conscript army longer than was required? The majority of the country were against conscription, and it would naturally be the instinct of any Government to revert to normal pre-war conditions. Since the armistice was signed Europe had been, and still remained, in a very troubled state. There were many rival ambitions, many struggling States, many hopes, and many promises. Surprising as it might be, it was remarkable that in almost every corner of Europe, where doubts and difficulties occurred, it was British troops who were asked for because they could be trusted. He thought he had given their lordships substantial reasons for the necessity for this bill.

A CHANCE FOR VOLUNTARY SERVICE.

Earl STANHOPE mentioned that at the General Election the people mistrusted the policy of the "Wee Frees," because they did not feel that that party were prepared to reap the fruits of victory. If the Government had shown more courage they would, he believed, have found less opposition to the bill. One of the causes which had tended to unrest was the stopping of the recruiting of 18-year-old boys. It was unfair that men or boys who happened to be a certain age should be conscripted and held in the Army, and that others who were a few days younger should not be conscripted at all. If exceptions were to be made to this bill the Territorial and Special Reserve were as much entitled to release as were Regular soldiers serving on pre-war attestations. While he did not believe that voluntary service was the best or the only way to get an army, he believed in it getting a chance. What had prejudiced recruiting more than anything else was that the War Office had kept the power to transfer men from one battalion to another without their consent. He strongly supported the bill, being convinced that compulsion was necessary. The Government could not gamble on peace not being long delayed.

The Marquis of SALISBURY thought those who were responsible for the election from the point of view of Coalition seemed rather to have lost their nerve and pledged themselves to all sorts of things which now they probably regretted. The truth was that the country was overwhelmingly in favour of the Coalition because the country wanted a Government which had not only won the war, but could conclude a favourable peace. All the Government had to do was to stand forward and offer to make a favourable peace, and if they had hinted at no pledges they would have been on far stronger ground now. This bill was absolutely necessary in the interests of the country.

Viscount PEEL, replying to points raised in the debate, stated that one of the first duties of the new Army that was being formed would be to release the Territorials who were serving in India.

Lord BUCKMASTER did not press his motion, and the bill was read a second time.

try or in those of the Allies) had attempted to make any inventory of such realisable capital which might be liquidated to meet the claims of indemnity.

Mr. BONAR LAW (by written answer): I shall forward my hon. friend's suggestion to the British Delegation in Paris.

IT IS COLD DOWN HERE!

WITH THE RATIONS.

The civil authorities have expressed a desire that British troops should remain stationed at a little village near Cologne. They say that "the fact of troops leaving the village would give rise to the renewal of the thefts by civilians" which had been carried out extensively before their arrival. The same sentiment was expressed also by the inhabitants of another outlying village when troops evacuated quite recently. I happened to be in the area and actually found tears in some of the maidens' eyes, notwithstanding the fact that the same maidens had been sternly lectured by three important men of the village on the evils of fraternization with the enemy only four months ago.

Surely Tommy is a winsome creature. It would also seem that our "guardian of the peace act" is being performed at other than the large German industrial centres.

* * *

I don't think much of the soldier who, towards midnight of Wednesday-Thursday, stopped a German civilian and demanded his money. The civilian, who was on night duty, is a one-armed man and by law is not allowed to carry firearms. Therefore he had no protection whatever, and it was the trick of a coward to do such a mean thing. Whoever he was, he cannot call himself a true soldier and is a discredit not only to his uniform, but to the nation. If it were possible to trace him you may depend upon it that action would be taken, and I have little doubt that he would receive his full punishment. I hope that all my pals will note this and bring to light any other such cases, for it is up to us to preserve our own good names and to punish those few who are "letting us down."

* * *

Spring is coming upon us in rapturous bounds, and so far as I can see, the soldiers are taking full advantage of the glorious weather. How different, though, do these Germans hail its advent. At noon yesterday I passed seventy-one people in less than three minutes, and of these only two were without overcoats.

One notices the same utter indifference to fresh air and brightness in the hotels. Have you found an hotel yet, the atmosphere of which is not thick with smoke, and odorous? If you have, let me know, for I greatly desire a change.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary, limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—I have read with interest the article in Sunday's issue regarding Conscientious Objectors and would like to say I do not think it echoes the opinion of the majority on this already well-discussed subject.

I think many will join with me in regretting that the authorities are doing so little in order to annul the sentences of those undergoing imprisonment for the sake of conscience. It appears that the only reason for their retention is that it would be unfair to those who are compulsorily retained in the army. Allow me to say that this argument carries no weight inasmuch as no soldier begrudges freedom to those who have suffered for conscience sake. Assuming, however, it is unfair to the retained soldier, why are they releasing men in the Non-Combatant Corps? The soldier thinks more of the man who suffers to the uttermost for that which he believes to be right than for those who joined the N.C.C. The former show something of the soldierlike spirit in their firmness to hold fast to their convictions. The Objectors have had no easy time', as some would imagine, and they have yet to battle against prejudices. Why make their lot harder by retaining them longer? E. V.

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Questions on any subject whatever are invited and will be answered as promptly and as authentically as is possible. — Ed.]

R. J. L.— You make a false accusation against the Rhine Army, and the article referred to was given as home news, not as an order to soldiers out here. Three-fifths of the Rhine Army have shared similar experiences and are entitled to the same respect you claim which, apart from the accusation you make, is a justifiable one.

A. T.— Your matter is being attended to.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We are continually receiving numerous questions which should not come to us at all because they can be dealt with far more easily and quickly with the unit. All matters concerning rate of pay, pensionable service, demobilization, and so on, should be submitted in the usual way to commanders of units. In many cases the Company or Battery C.Q.M.S., knowing all the facts of the case, could give an answer immediately. Why write to us?

Take the question of demobilization for example. In every unit there is someone, generally a Demobilization Officer detailed as such, who has all the facts as his finger ends, or can turn them up from the very latest "Instructions" in two minutes.

He is the proper person to appeal to in all such cases and only needs to be asked.

Sending such queries to us wastes the enquirer's time, wastes our time, and we are so busy with a thousand-and-one other things, and moreover is against all sorts of regulations.

Why call in a third party when the matter is obviously one between two parties who know all the facts of both sides, and for which the Army Council have provided proper facilities.

We are at all times ready and willing to answer general questions, but personal questions should be dealt with in the proper manner.

Will correspondents please note this, and not call upon an overworked staff to do a job quite outside its province, and for which ample machinery has already been provided by the Army authorities.

We are so busy answering general questions, that it will be impossible even to acknowledge the kind of correspondence indicated in the above paragraphs.

PROGRESS OF BOLSHEVISM IN GERMANY

MURMANSK MUTINY QUELLED.

NEW EGYPTIAN MINISTRY.

PRELIMINARY PEACE. FIRST SIGN, THEN ARGUE.

NORTH RUSSIA BOLSHEVIST ACTIVITY.

BIG OFFENSIVE PLANNED.

The latest despatches from North Russia confirm the fact that it was the intention of the Bolshevists to combine a general offensive in Spring with a revolt in the rear of the Allied forces. A secret rising was due to break out at Murmansk on the 23rd. March, but the plans were discovered by General Maynard in time to suppress the movement. It was subsequently discovered that similar movements had been arranged to break out simultaneously at Kandalashka, Kem and Sorka, but the suppression of the main plot at Murmansk succeeded in averting further risings. All reports show further evidence that the Bolshevists are planning a big offensive at an early date. — Reuter.

FIGHTING IN NORTH RUSSIA.

The British North Russia communiqué states that Stredmacheviga was defended on the 5th April by the Liverpools and Yorkshires assisted by a company of the Russian army, while the Russian national army, fighting for the first time, defended Bolsheozerki on the 1st April. In one instance Russian howitzers were withdrawn from the gun pits and reversed at fur hundred yards range against the enemy. Canadians, South Africans and Russians were among the Air Force pilots and observers by whom great assistance was rendered.

SOUTH RUSSIA MENACE.

SEBASTOPOL THREATENED.

Now that Odessa has been evacuated by the Allies the Bolshevists are trying to penetrate into the Crimea. The latest reports received in London state that the Bolshevists have captured Perikop but it is hoped, even if they succeed in over running the whole of the Crimea, that the Allies will be able to maintain control of the naval base at Sebastopol. — Reuter.

ENTHUSIASTIC VOLUNTEER FOR NORTH RUSSIA.

An instance of the enthusiasm with which volunteers are coming forward to join the North Russia Relief Force comes from Wolverhampton. A man wishing for fuller information than could be supplied by the local recuiting office, spent five shillings in telegraphing to the Chief of the Recruiting Staff at London for details of enlistment. The authorities immediately sent a warrant to enable him to proceed to London.

GERMAN STRIKE NEWS

OFFICER TORTURED

The council of workmen has threatened to suppress the Landtag. Ex-president Merges announced at a meeting of strikers that thirty seven great towns of Germany were striking in favour of the Soviet system.

It is expected that a Soviet republic will be proclaimed in Brunswick to morrow. A general strike is still going on and the workmen are arming. The railway station is already prepared against every attack.

All males over seventeen at Dortmund are warned that they may be required for urgent maintenance work in the mines.

Several mines are already suffering great damage through the cessation of pumping and will be ruined unless prompt action is taken.

At Dusseldorf the political general strike is maintained, the workers demanding a minimum rate of 3.50 marks per hour. Street fighting in which young people frequently participate, occurs many times daily. There are numerous barricades in the town. Government troops are suppressing street meetings by driving lorries through the gatherings. Six were killed and twenty-five wounded yesterday, while an officer who was attacked and captured by the mob was tortured to death in a most brutal manner. Soldiers have been stripped of their uniforms and boots.

The Belgian authorities are withholding food from the strikers.

The strike at the Maschinenwerke at Mayence came to a summary end when the strikers were given the alternative of resuming work or being transported to Belgium for the rebuilding of devasted towns.

Würzburg is reported as having been captured by Government troops of the 2nd Army Corps.

The local Soviets at Furth, Amberg and Regensburg have been dissolved.

RUSSIAN PRISONERS IN GERMANY.

The German delegates to the Armistice Commission have urgently requested the Allies to permit the removal to Russia of Russian prisoners of war at present in Germany, on the ground of the increasing disturbances among them and the fear that they will break out of their camps, thereby spreading the Bolshevist danger.

REVOLUTION AND RED RUIN IN GERMANY.

SOVIET BRUNSWICK?

Reports from all parts of Germany grow gloomier every day.

The sitting of the National Assembly was opened yesterday. In a long speech Minister President Scheidemann asked for universal disarmament and described the fight against the Soviet system as a fight for peace. He said: "In a moment when the blockade is going to be raised, hundreds of thousands of hands are idle, which alone are able to produce the payment without which there is not one pound of flour for our wives and our children. By the Munich Revolution it is not the Fatherland which is in danger, nor the Government, but Peace."

South German newspapers contain an assertion that the Entente has declared by wireless to the Government of the German Empire that the Bavarian Soviet Republic will be excluded from the coming peace, and that an Allied commission will be sent to Germany to ensure that no food from the Entente shall be sent to Bavaria.

The bank clerk strikes have already had one serious result.

Yesterday Germany should have paid twenty million marks to the Entente Food Commission, but owing to the bank strike the money could not be paid.

Meanwhile this strike is spreading, Leipzig, Hamburg and Frankfort being the latest centres of disaffection.

Yesterday's sitting of the congress of Councils was very stormy. Great excitement was caused by the presence of delegates from Russian Soviets, who were removed at the end of the sitting in spite of the protests of the Independents. Labour troubles were discussed amid scenes of extraordinary turmoil.

In Berlin 22,000 metal workers voted for a continuation of the strike, against 400 for the resumption of work. From Silesia, Magdeburg, Hannover and Bremen telegrams of sympathy with the strikers have been received.

At Danzig twenty thousand railway employés are on strike. A general strike is announced as the preliminary to a Soviet republic.

In the Ruhr district the strikers number 360000. Excitement runs very high since the arrest of the strike leaders, and the Government troops are frequently maltreated.

BAVARIAN REVOLUTION.

Copenhagen 11th April. Interviewed by the Tageblatt Herr Noske said the military authorities were prepared for all possibil ties. If necessary Munich would be forced by arms to restore order. "We must hit out with all our energy rather than allow the Fatherland to be precipitated into the abyss. If blood is shed it will be on the hands of the Spartacist maniacs."

The Bavarian Government is of the opinion that Bolshevism in Munich will collapse without military action, owing to the cutting off of food and coal supplies. Meanwhile the Government is preparing for a long sojourn at Bamberg. Reuter.

Aviators flew over Munich and dropped leaflets stating that neither food nor coal will be allowed to enter the town, which will be completely isolated and practically besieged.

Civil war is expected to break out at any moment. The Council of Commissaries has been turned out of office and a Communist Government (sic) formed. Nickisch has been removed from the Central Council.

The Russian Bolshevist leader, Lewine has reached Munich.

It is reported that the communist movement in Munich has been helped with Russian money coming through Switzerland.

All the prisoners of war in Bavaria have been liberated. A red army is being organised.

NEW EGYPTIAN MINISTRY.

RELIGIOUS TROUBLE FEARED.

General Allenby reports that the new Ministry was formed on the 9th April under Rushdy Pasha and has been well received.

The provinces are now quiet but there have been some demonstrations by the peasantry, while anti-Armenian disturbances by roughs occurred in parts of Cairo on the 9th. — British Official.

Some apprehension is felt that the trouble in Egypt, which was fomented at the beginning entirely by nationalist sentiment, may take a religious turn and that the native tribes may declare a Holy War against the British Empire. There is reason to believe that the natives may be affected by Turkish propagandists, who are in no way friendly toward Britain. Steps are being taken to deal with this possibility. — Reuter.

The Soviet Government at Buda Pesth has stated that the ideal on which it will govern is the principle that no work shall be done in the interest of individuals but everything must be for the Community, the result being that nobody works at all!

QUESTIONS IN THE COMMONS.

ROSETTE FOR MONS RIBBON.

Replying to a question as to whether the Government intends to make a distinction between the 1914 and 1915 medal ribbons, Mr. Winston Churchill said that it has been decided that to denote service in 1914 the ribbon would be distinguished by a silver rosette similar to that which marks the award of a bar to the D.S.O.

BUT NOT FOR BASE WALLAHS.

Mr. Churchill added that regulations have been submitted for study in Committee which will secure that this rosette will only be given to those men who in 1914 really took part in the fighting. It will not be distributed broadcast among the large masses of men who never got nearer to the front than Havre and such places.

Loud cheers greeted this announcement.

RENDERING AN ACCOUNT.

PREMIER TO SPEAK NEXT WEEK.

The Prime Minister is contemplating a return to London at the beginning of next week in order to make a statement on the Peace treaty in Parliament before the House adjourns for the Easter recess on Wednesday next.

There is no question of making public the terms of the treaty before it has been submitted to Germany and Lloyd George's speech would only take the form of a general statement of how the mandate given him by the country at the elections had been carried out.

PRELIMINARY PEACE.

SIGNATURE FIRST, THEN ARGUMENT.

According to the Petit Journal Mr. Philip Kerr, private secretary to Mr. Lloyd George, says that the work of the Council of Four will be ready soon. The questions concerning the peace with Germany, reparations, indemnities, the frontiers of the Rhine and Poland are settled. Certain minor points have to be dealt with but in a fortnight or three weeks the German delegates will be called to Versailles.

Mr. Lloyd George, said his secretary, is satisfied with the work accomplished.

The German delegates will not be allowed to discuss the territorial stipulations of the preliminary peace. Only after that is signed may they discuss the financial clauses concerning indemnities and reparations.

In the event of their refusing to sign the territorial clauses, their mission will be terminated and the armistice broken. (Havas.)

UNIVERSITY TRAINING FOR EX-SOLDIERS.

The total provision for Universities and Colleges in England, Wales and Scotland in the Year ending 31st March 1920 will be 1,416,000 pounds sterling.

The Board of Education, with the assent of the Treasury, is making substantial provision for University training of ex-service officers and men. Individual grants may be made to candidates in the first place and the value of other grants may vary, according to individual circumstances, from comparatively small sums up to £175 per annum for maintenance, plus fifty pounds for fees.

The scheme applies to officers, warrant and non-commissioned officers and men, provided, of course, that they show suitable educational promise. In the case of candidates married before the 11th November 1918 an allowance towards the maintenance of wives and children may be made.

GERMANS DYE PATENTS.

The Manchester Guardian says that the United States have dealt with the danger of German competition in the newly established dye industry by seizing 4,500 German patents and selling them to an organisation called Chemical Foundations for fifty thousand pounds.

They argue that if the patents can keep out Swiss, French and English dyes they can also be used against the Germans by placing them in the hands of Americans.

American dye manufacturers say that if they can get five years immunity from competition they can hold their own after that.

PRIVATE MEMORIALS ON WAR GRAVES.

In the House of Lords yesterday Lord Balfour of Burleigh called attention to Sir Frederick Kenyon's report to the Imperial War Graves Registration Commission and asked whether, within reasonable restrictions, some latitude could not be allowed to relatives of dead officers and soldiers as to the exact form of memorial to be placed on their graves in France or other theatres of war.

Lord Selborne, Lord Lincolnshire and Lord Meath, who have all lost sons in the war, spoke to the same effect.

Lord Peel promised to communicate the appeal to the Secretary of State for War.

SIR DOUGLAS HAIG'S RHINE DESPATCH

HOW THE WAR WAS WON.

In a long despatch published in the London Gazette, Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig describes the advance of the British forces into Germany and their occupation of the British bridgehead to the East of the Rhine at Cologne.

Apart from this more or less familiar recapitulation, his despatch includes a brief but valuable review of the chief features of military interest in the operations of the British armies on the Western front during Sir Douglas Haig's command.

He emphasises the fact that the war did not follow an unprecedented course and that the end was neither sudden nor should have been unexpected.

The rapid collapse of Germany's military power in the latter half of 1918 was the logical outcome of the fighting which took place throughout the previous two years.

Neither the course of the war nor the valuable military lessons to be drawn from it can properly be comprehended unless the long succession of battles, which began on the Somme in 1916 and ended in November 1918, are considered as forming parts of one great and continuous engagement.

CAVALRY INDISPENSABLE.

In the light of the full experience of the war the decision to preserve the cavalry corps has been completely justified. Sir Douglas quotes instances of the way in which the Cavalry covered the great retirement of 1914, and how they reinforced threatened positions; recalls their great value later in the same year at Ypres, and their magnificent achievements in the operations before Cambrai at the close of 1917 and again during the German offensive of 1918.

Among the remarkable features of the present war Sir Douglas mentions the great number and variety of mechanical contrivances, the development of the air service and the close and complete cooperation which existed between all arms of the Services.

TRIBUTE TO NEW ARMIES.

The despatch contains the highest tribute to the services of the women who served, and to the extraordinary capacities found in the new armies.

AND TO THE "CONTEMPTIBLES."

Referring to the old army, Sir Douglas says:— "On their parts the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the old regular army have risen to the demands made upon them in a manner equally marvellous. Their leaven has pervaded the whole of the mighty force which in four and a half years of war has gathered from all parts of the world round the small highly trained army wherewith we entered the war."

FLYING THE ATLANTIC.

The list of entrants for the Daily Mail £10,000 prize for a flight across the Atlantic now numbers eight, the latest entrant being a pilot for Messrs. Boulton and Paul, air craft makers, of Norwich.

The Handley Page company stated yesterday that Major Tryggve Gran, the Norwegian airman, will be the navigator of the giant machine, with four Rolls Royce engines, which they have entered for the race. Major Gran's great pre-war achievement was his unaided first flight across the North Sea from Cruden Bay, Aberdeenshire, to Norway.

It is probable that one of Major Gran's companions will be Admiral Mark Kerr, who retired last year from the Navy to make way for younger men. He is fifty four years of age, has held a pilot's certificate for five years and has flown frequently in Handley Page machines.

The owners told a Daily Express representative that the Admiral's offer had not yet been "definitely accepted." The pilot of the Handley Page in the transatlantic flight will be Major Albert Brackley, who commanded big Handley Page bombing squadrons in France and was in charge of the bombing operations against Zeebrugge and Ostend.

NURSE CAVELL.

Arrangements are being made, says the Daily Chronicle, for the removal of Nurse Cavell's remains to England and the re-interment will be marked by considerable public ceremonial.

In June it is hoped to place the Nurse Cavell statue in St. Martin's-place, opposite the National Gallery.

AGRICULTURISTS TO BE RECALLED.

Agricultural Comittees in Kent (district of war) have been notified of the decision of the Government that all soldiers at present employed in agriculture who are retainable for service in the armies of occupation under Army Order No. 55, of 1919, will be recalled to military duty.

Soldiers attached to agricultural companies will be withdrawn in a fortnight and returned to their Units.

Dunkirk has ceased to be an English base port.

The budget will be introduced into the House of Commons on the 30th April.

Lady Domville, wife of Sir James Domville R.N., was granted a decree of restitution of conjugal rights in the Courts yesterday.

MILITARY PRISONERS TRY TO ESCAPE.

SHOT IN LONDON.

Two military prisoners, handcuffed together, attempted to escape while being marched, with four other prisoners, also handcuffed in pairs, through the streets of London to Waterloo station. One of the two escorting soldiers, after giving warning, fired his rifle and mortally wounded one of the escaping prisoners, a fifty-year old member of the Labour Corps.

The prisoner and his companion, still handcuffed, were taken to hospital, where the wounded man died before he could be detached from his fellow prisoner.

All six prisoners had been sentenced by Courts Martial in France and were being conveyed to Portland. The soldier who fired has been detained pending an inquiry.

The affair caused great excitement among the women and children in the narrow mean street where the shooting ocurred.

DORA MUST PAY.

A test action brought by De Keyser's Hotel, London, against the Crown was decided in the Court of Appeal yesterday.

The hotel was requisitioned by the Government and the owners claimed payment of rent and compensation for dispossession during the nine months the premises were in occupation by the Crown.

The case for the Crown was that the King is empowered to take the property of subjects for the defence of the realm, without payment.

The Master of the Rolls decided that there can be no prerogative right to seize property for administrative purposes in connection with the defence of the realm, without indemnifying the owners.

The appeal was upheld by a majority.

De Keyser's claimed thirteen thousand five hundred and twenty pounds for occupation alone.

MINERS ACCEPT THE TERMS OFFERED.

There is an accumulating weight of evidence that the result of the miners' ballot will be overwhelmingly in favour of accepting the Sankey Report and the offer of the Government.

The South Wales Miners Federation ballot showed a majority of 104,843 in favour of that course. At no single colliery has a majority been given against.

Another message says that figures representing about one fifth of the total membership show a majority of about ten to one in favour of acceptance.

North Stafford returns so far received are practically unanimous on the point.

HEALTH BILL.

The Ministry of Health Bill passed the third reading in the House of Commons last night without a division.

Government amendments were inserted in the Bill. One provides that the general powers of the Minister of Health should include the initiation and direction of research.

Another sanctions the recommendation of the Standing Committee forthwith to transfer to the Minister the responsibility for medical inspection and treatment of school children.

An assurance was also given that the Government intends to stand by its pledge to reform the Poor Law.

FEEDING OF THE CIVILIANS.

Among the varied selection of comestibles now arriving in Cologne for consumption by the civilian population is the well-known Maconachie. Known by every man of the Expeditionary Force and frequently served up now to the officers and other ranks of the Rhine Army, this food should prove an acceptable addition to the hitherto meagre fare of the Rhineland. It is purchased by them at 3.90 marks, which is about equivalent to the price at home.

PROBABLE TAX ON SPINSTERS.

Mr. Chamberlain, replying to a deputation on income tax reform said that the imposition of a tax on bachelors might involve a tax on spinsters.

While the proposals put forward regarding the taxing of a wife's income might mean an additional shilling on the income tax, he appealed to the deputation to await the result of the Royal Commission of Inquiry into the whole question.

FLEW TO THE HOUSE.

TIME SAVING TRAVELLING.

The distinction of being the first member to fly to the House of Commons falls to General Seely, who yesterday made the trip from Short's works at Rochester to Westminster in a seaplane.

After circling twice over Westminster Bridge the seaplane landed on the Thames outside the Houses of Parliament. A Police boat put off from Westminster pier and members on the terrace were astonished to see General Seely, Under Secretary for Air, in frock coat and tall hat, step out of the passenger's seat and come ashore on a motor launch.

General Seely said the trip had enabled him do work at the Air Ministry in the morning, inspect Short's works at noon and be at the House of Commons by half past four.

OUR NATION'S DEBT OF HONOUR.

Cynics, like poor men, are always with us; and they tell us all too glibly that the British soldier cares only for three things — leave, rations, and pay. But cynics do not dismay us, and we make no apology for the deliberate mention of a matter that should be as vital to the honour of our nation as it is to the well-being of our veterans. We speak of army pensions.

The task of the Ministry of Pensions has been enormous, so great indeed that it is now sisyphean. It is little wonder that many have wistfully watched the disheartening progress of a valiant officialdom. Here, as in other spheres, he who gives quickly gives twice — not perhaps financially, though time is money, but in satisfaction and comfort and redemption of an honoured pledge. Army pensions are in no way a charity. We owe all to the unmeasured heroism of soldiers who have given new meaning to self-sacrifice; and we must see to it that with all expedition our maimed heroes shall have every compensation that a grateful nation can bestow.

It is good news that Sir L. Worthington-Evans, Minister of Pensions, has devised a decentralization scheme which bids fair to speed up the chariot wheels of a hitherto cumbrous mechanism. Two weighty reasons have brought about this scheme — the need of expedition and the need of personal knowledge in the case of each applicant for an army pension. It is obvious to all that when two thousand local committees depend on one Ministry of Pensions and send to it all manner of references, there is very great delay in the satisfaction of even pressing cases. It is also obvious that only in local centres can the claims of wounded soldiers be properly dealt with, for personal knowledge of the soldier and his history is imperative for equity.

Now a nation's memory is notoriously short and the wisest scheme is the most expeditious scheme. Therefore, we trust that the drafted policy of the Minister of Pensions may be carried out with no delay. It is proposed to divide the United Kingdom into thirteen districts — absit omen — in each of which there shall be an administrative unit whit delegated powers. Matters of general policy will of course continue in the hands of the Ministry of Pensions, but a large part of the administrative work will be done locally by the thirteen district, or "regional," advisory Councils each of which is to have a "director" responsible to the Ministry. There will be various branches in each regional office; for example, a registrar's branch dealing with staff and statistics, an organization branch which links up the local committees, an awards branch, a medical services branch, and lastly a finance and audit branch.

The scheme provides for the taking over not only of the medical staff of the Ministry of National Service but of all War Office hospitals in Great Britain. A Commissioner of Medical Service with staff will be appointed for each district, and he will have control of professional work in his area — of ordinary hospital routine and of the "curative employment" or training which is a new and valuable feature of convalescent centres.

The Minister of Pensions reckons that the new scheme will necessitate for its first year a heavier financial expenditure than that of the scheme to be superseded, but he expects that the saving of time, the growing efficiency of administration, and the more equitable award of pensions will counterbalance such expenditure. We trust that the Scheme will prosper and that our debt of honour to honourable men will be redeemed.

THE LEAGUE AND THE CAPITAL.

Were it not for its resting-places and by-paths life would be too strenuous to be easily tolerable. A strain that is severe must be relaxed from time to time. The bow that is always bent loses its spring. Thus digression has its philosophy, a work-a-day philosophy it is true, but a very real one. It is good to get out of the current and lie for a little in the eddy of the stream.

An illustration of this philosophy can be seen even in these momentous days of armistice and conference. In several of our Allied newspapers and magazines the question has been discussed—Which city is to be the capital of the League of Nations? When the Big Four are straining every nerve to finish their labour, when commission after commission are working at unwonted pace, when the nations of the world are waiting with feverish anxiety the gladtidings of peace, the claims of Brussels, Geneva, Versailles, and Constantinople are being calmly weighed in the balances by historians, diplomatists, and essayist's.

It is all to the good, for we believe in this philosophy of digression; and such discussion of rival claims brings us down from the level of our supermen to that of ordinary human beings who nourish intelligible and calculable ambitions. Therefore, we forbear to say — "First establish your League, and its earthly temple will readily appear." Indeed, we can even enter into the play of selecting the unfurnished and tenantless house. Naturally, the question is not one for soldiers, it falls to politicians; and with politics we have no business. But if we are graciously allowed to have our word in the play, we shall choose Brussels.—Brussels that stands at the cross roads of Europe, Brussels that stands for the freedom of small nations, Brussels that stands for a people that found its soul in the sorrows of war.

Yet any place in the wide world would please us, if we could surely know that in it a real, lasting, and noble League would have its capital. Such a League would so grace and consecrate the meanest town in Christendom that in days to come it would be unrivalled by the world's finest cities, rich in hoary tradition and resplendent with material glory. For that capital would mean a new heaven and a new earth.

GERMAN VIEWS ON BOLSHEVISM.

The following article appeared recently in the Kölner Tageblatt.

In a fabulous triumphal march Lenin and Trotzki-a few years ago the unassuming boarders of the Berne and Zurich restaurants-have reached the highest point of power over a population of something like 150,000,000. As dictators, thes are reigning over the ruined Russia in a manner more complete than any Tsar ever did, and by their wireless they call the people of the earth to unite with them in liberating, as they say, the world from the Moloch of political and economical imperialism.

They are not satisfied with the dictatorial position they now hold, for their object is to shatter absolutely the old basis, and create a new one upon which a fresh empire can be built and of which they will be the high priests.

It is only because a colossal seedtime has seized the populations to-day after de terrible sacrifices of war, it is only because in the countries of the vanquished, hunger is still raging, only because work cannot proceed along its regular course on account of lack of materials, that hundreds of thousands of people are sticking to the dazzling phrases, which appear to them the only possibility of salvation from a world wherein life has become almost unbearable. Those are the reasons why they do not realize what is lying behind these phrases-phrases wich raise as a highest principle the general deprivation of rights and which make the state a voracious insatiable monster.

The suppression of marriage, the placing of children as state property, these are the most innocent measures that communism holds necessary for the liberation of the world. As formerly militarism deprived man from his rights and reduced him to a member without will, now the whole of humanity—man, woman, and child—will be deprived of their rights in order that there shall merely be one prominence — the Moloch state itself.

The man who lives not from hand to mouth, the man who, by greater abilities or more activity, in the course of years has dared to save something for his old days, this man is outlawed. Nobody is allowed to possess, because everything belongs to the Moloch state. The communist benefactors of the world have had two years in which to portray their results. And what do they show? They have failed in all parts. Only by mass-murder have they been able to achieve anything.

A COMPARISON—GERMAN EDUCATION AND OUR OWN.

In the first number of this paper I read with great interest an excellent article on the "Question of Tongues" by Lieutenant W. R. Patterson F.R.G.S. Inter alia, I think he undoubtedly hits the nail on the head in his remark that the rapid increase in German trade was to a large extent due to the excellent way in which modern languages were taught in their schools.

I had the advantage some twelve years ago, after leaving one of the best known public-schools in the West of England, of spending fifteen months in a Commercial School in Frankfurt, a/M., where I naturally had a first-rate opportunity of comparing the methods of education adopted. There could, of course, by only one conclusion to arrive at and that was respect for the German system which imparted to a boy knowledge of commercial value in after life. It is more or less a bye-word that an English public-school man leaves school uneducated from a commercial standpoint and I suppose parents are satisfied with the "stamp" given to the boy's character by his associations in those years. Public-schools cater almost entirely for the 'Varsity, the Army, and the professions. Commerce and business find no encouragement from masters who are almost entirely recruited from 'Varsity M.A.'s or B.A.'s and whose forte is Latin and Greek, subjects for which I contend an hour per week each would be ample for the average boy. As it is, Greek and Latin figure more prominently than any other subjects in the school curriculum, French, the language of diplomacy, occupying but three hours a week at the most.

At this juncture, when Britain is about to strain every nerve to re-capture the world's trade, can this be the correct education for her sons? Do we want business brains or embryo 'Varsity dons?

METHODS COMPARED.

Let me give a few examples of the different way various subjects are taught. Take history. This subject I always found extraordinarily dull. Possibly according to modern lights English history of five centuries ago, say, was uninteresting. At all events the homework invariably consisted of a reign or half a reign. Say eight to ten pages of closely written matter, packed with names and places. At the lessons, slips of paper would be distributed round the class and monosyllabic answers in the form of names and dates would be written down, one mark being awarded for each correct answer—in short, encouragment was given to the parrot-life memorising of names, places, and dates, in a certain relative order.

The German system was rather different. A page and a half, say three paragraphs, were given as homework. The next day a name picked more or less at random from the class-list, was selected and the "victim" had to get up, stand before the class and recount in his own language the first of the matter of any one of the paragraphs. An admirable system which, I contend, encourages a boy not only to learn his work with an intelligent interest but also inspires him with the necessary confidence to get up on his hind legs later in life, deliver a speech, or propose a toast, etc.

The intricacies of higher algebra, trigonometry, dynamics, statics, etc., may be full of interest, but the same time occupied in commercial arithmetic and book-keeping would be infinitely better employed. Here is a mental exercise, taught in Germany, of which, I am sure, even the illustrious Mr. Pelman would approve. Write down any four-figure numbers. Multiply it by 2, the result by 3 and so on up to nine. Now start dividing by 2, 3 and so on up to nine, the final division giving you (if your working has been accurate), the original four figure number. The boy (or the man for that matter) who can complete the sum accurately in under two minutes, has already laid the basis of a first-class business mind.

LANGUAGE TEACHING.

Now as to languages. The German method of teaching English and French is noteworthy. Like the Berlitz and other systems at home, the lesson is entirely carried out in that language. Any question arising must be put to the teacher in that language. As a direct consequence I met many German youths who spoke quite tolerably fluent English and French and who had actually never left their native country.

If a German can do this, great Scott, why not a Britisher? Or are we still too arrogant a race to learn a foreign tongue?

So much for that. But now the other side. The German education breaks down entirely as soon as school is over. No pride of physique, no love of sport is manifest: the boy of sixteen and seventeen, as soon as work is over frequently turns his attention to women and drink, both excellent studies (in moderation) in say five years later. Again there is none of the public-school "masonry" which once picked up remains with one through life, none of the unselfishness of the "house before the individual," none of the "play the game" spirit.

Remodel then, I say the school curriculum to something approaching German methods and, with our inimitable public-school spirit we shall turn out veritable supermen.

"YARRL".

THE HAPPIER FUTURE.

REVIVAL OF BRITISH SOCIAL LIFE.

England is making wonderful strides to obliterate the influences of the hideous four-and-a-half years from which we have recently emerged.

During that time, our people across the channel had but very little time to devote to the social pleasures of life, so that from August, 1914, many popular events fell away one by one.

The return to happier times sees the promise of a great revival, although a complete return to pre-war programmes cannot be achieved for at least another year.

Their will be many glad hearts, however, in the knowledge of the inclusion, in the forthcoming fixtures, of the following events:

Covent Garden Opera. Begins May 5.
The Derby, June 4.
Naval and Military Tournament, Olympia, June 26 to July 12.
Ascot week. Begins June 17.
Henley Interim Regatta. July 4 and 5.
Goodwood. Begins July 29.
Ranelagh County Polo week. July.
Hurlingham Polo. 3rd week in May.
Oxford and Cambridge cricket match, Lord's. July 14, 15 and 16.
Wimbledon open lawn tennis tournament. Begins June 23.
Eton and Harrow match, Lord's. July 11 and 12.
Chelsea Flower Show. May 20, 21, and 22.
Motor Show, Olympia. November.

Cowes Regatta, International Horse Show. Isle of Man motor races, and Oxford and Cambridge boat race will not be resumed until next year.

IMPRESSIONS OF A GERMAN VILLAGE.

BY W. L. HUNTER.

For three short days we had been permitted to gaze at the wonders and seeming eccentricities of German city life. We had become accustomed to the expressionless stares of some and the cringing affability of others of a people humbled but hostile still; and had determined to enjoy to the full our hitherto unparalelled opportunities, for recreation and sightseeing.

Alas! "The best laid schemes of mice and men gang oft agley." The outings we had anticipated faded swiftly away long ere the first had matured, for Dame Gossip prophesied an early move. Two days of suspense brought nothing definite, but a further vague report hinted that we were bound for some remote village. I seized upon this last faint gleam of hope as a drowning man would clutch at a floating straw.

Nature has always had for me an attraction akin to magnetism, and the very word "village" suggested a quaint old-fashioned hamlet nestling cosily in the bosom of the Surrey Hills. Visions of thatched cottages, rising here and there in the midst of picturesque gardens full of old-world flowers, rose swiftly before me.

Forgetful that Spring was still with us, I dreamed of honeysuckle and all the sweet-scented flowers of our English hedgerows, which hold an honoured place in the galaxy of Nature's countless charms.

The day of departure came and we marched away with mingled feelings; the knowledge of what we were leaving behind striving to silence the call of the unknown, which bade us try to fathom that which lay beyond.

As we neared our destination, curiosity overcame all else and we strained our eyes in vain to catch a glimpse of our future home. The sun poured down its rays from a cloudless sky but far away on the dim horizon a haze of factory smoke hung low over a parched and sun-dried landscape.

On and on we went till our heavy iron-soled boots rang with regular rhythm on the even cobbles of the main street. Cobbles they certainly were, but, unlike those of our English villages, worn smooth by the incessant tramp of generations of sturdy rustics, they were the counterfeit creation of a modern people striving to emulate the traditions of a deathless race.

The village hostel, too, was there, but in his zeal to reproduce the overhanging eaves, the builder had failed to add those minute touches which stamp our English inn as the genuine product of mediaeval workmanship.

The cottages were whitewashed, it is true, but yet they lacked that element of simplicity which is the hall-mark of rustic life.

A lark rose swiftly from a barren field that lay on the outskirts of the village, and as it soared above it poured forth its song withall the full-throated vigour of a care-free life: one touch of Nature in an artificial frame!

The sun went down behind a gaunt, drab church, the purple twilight gave place to the sombre shades of night, and the moon rode majestically in a starless sky.

The same pale moon indeed, but yet its kindly smile was changed to one of bitter irony, and the breeze stirring gently in the tops of the neighbouring firs seemed to mock the death throes of a shattered "Kultur."

THE ARMISTICE.

AT THE FRONT.

It is over at last, and with thankful emotion
The sore-stricken peoples relinquish the sword,
Expressing the while, with an earnest devotion
Their tribute of thanks to the merciful Lord.

No longer the soldier, uneasily dreaming,
Girt with his arms on the comfortless land,
Shall awake to the mournful, familiar screaming
Foreboding mayhap that his day is at hand.

Still does the ether, insensibly pulsing,
Quiver beneath the intolerant roar
Of the myriad cannon, all nature convulsing,
Whose tones shall be, happily, suffered no more.

The monster in ambush who wickedly launches
Tons of destruction o'er infinite space,
Nestles in peace mid the treacherous branches
Cunningly woven his form to efface.

Left for a spell to their proper resources,
Conscious of ease and a respite from toil,
Puzzled, the patient Artillery horses
Nose at the herb on the beggarly soil.

Now may the moon with impunity cover
Trenches and camps with a vesture of light,
Since nigh in the heaven no enemies hover—
Baleful, implacable creatures of night.

Now may the noble Battalion hero
Pocket his watch, and make light of the time,
Conscious that no irrevocable "zero"
Summons at dawn his devotion sublime

Now from his pinnacled eerie descending
(Loftily perched in the boughs of a tree),
Maskless, his way the "Observer" is wending,
Rid of the thrall of the weary O.P.

Guns may be burnished and ropes can be whitened,
Polished the merry, melodious chains.
Buttons and badges adjusted and brightened.
Banished all trace of the mud-stricken plains.

March! But not into the tumult of battle.
Grey-coated Boches give never a sign.
March! And with orderly jingle and rattle
Eastward away, to the bank of the Rhine!

THE WAR MEDAL.

RIBAND DECIDED UPON.

ORANGE, WHITE, BLACK, AND BLUE.

The Secretary of the War Office has announced that the design of a riband to be worn with a medal commemorative of the present war has been approved. The colours are orange (centre), with white, black, and blue stripes on either side as given in our issue of yesterday. The design of the riband has been registered under the Patents and Designs Act, 1907 (registered No. 665,843), and no person will be allowed to manufacture it or deal in it without the written permission of the Director of Army Contracts (Ministry of Munitions, Caxton House, Tothill-street, S.W. 1).

Officers and soldiers may not wear any war medal riband until an Army Order has been published announcing the grant of the medal.

No ribands of medals commemorative of the war have yet been authorised except those of the 1914 and 1914-15 Stars. An announcement will be made shortly as to the medals to be issued for service during the present war. Every possible step will be taken to provide an adequate supply of the ribands when authorised.

RICHMOND ROYAL HORSE SHOW.

ROYAL AND CIVIC PRIZES.

There has been no International Horse Show for five years and no Richmond Royal show for three years. The revival of the Richmond show on the 4th and 5th July is therefore being anticipated with considerable interest.

Preparations are well advanced, and it is now possible to give a brief resumé of the programme. Eight magnificent Challenge Cups, seven Prize Cups and nearly one hundred cash awards are to be competed for and won.

Two outstanding and entirely new features will be the class for Troop Horses, and a great Driving Marathon for horses in double harness. For the former (confined to horses that have seen military service) His Majesty the King is presenting a beautiful Silver Cup as first prize, the Lord Mayor of London (Sir Horace Marshall) another valuable Silver Cup as second prize, and the R.S.P.C.A. yet another as third prize. The Marathon will be from Hyde Park to Richmond.

"A CHANCE FOR THE REARLIES."

Friday is also to be a great day for the London costers, a Donkey Marathon being organised specially for them. Lord Lonsdale who will judge this class, is defraying the whole cost of the competition with the exception of the first prize which will be a smart new coster's barrow loaded with ripe bananas, a set of new brown donkey harness and a donkey.

There are to be great jumping contests on both days, the value of the prizes reaching some £300. A jumping class for Officers in uniform is among the special attractions. Novelties are promised by Mr. Walter Winans, and other supporters, including a Guideless Trotting Display, an exhibition of Random Driving, and so forth. The band of the Irish Guards in the ring and a string band on the lawn will add to the amenities.

ANOTHER MOUNTED PAPER CHASE.

36th BRIGADE, R.F.A.

A mounted paper chase, arranged by the above Brigade took place on Wednesday. The meet of the "hounds" was some distance outside Merken, and the number present exceeded 80. The "hares" who were represented by Major Claudet (15th Battery) and Corp. Tingle (48th were allowed 15 minutes start, and they certainly made good use of the time allowed to them.

The chase began at 3.45 p.m. and was plain sailing, so to speak, until the wood was reached, when it took on an amusing turn. False tracks had been made by the hares, causing the hounds to work in a circle. Three of the hounds, which were stood outside the wood waiting for snips, caught sight of the hares emerging some distance away, and immediately gave chase, catching them before the course was finished.

It was close upon an hour before some of the hounds found the track. The course exceeded 3 miles in length, and the first three in at the finish were:

B.S.M. Gurner, (D/36 Bty); The Farrier Segt. of D/36 Bty; and B.S.M. Watford (48th Bty.).

COWES YACHTING.

Among the yachts which are being put into commission at Cowes says The Daily Telegraph are Lord Tredegar's Liberty (which was used as a hospital ship during the war), Sir William Portal's Valdora, Mr. M. Grahame White's Ombra (formerly the property of Baron W. von Schroder), and Mr. F. T. Mew's Coral. In addition to the late Sir Maurice Fitzgerald's Julnar, other racing yachts sold to Norway include Sir A. E. Orr-Ewing's Endrick, Mr. H. Marzetti's Irex, Mr. F. F. Tower's Anitra, and Britomart, which is being put into racing trim again for Norwegian regattas. Yachts returned to Cowes from war service include, in addition to Liberty and Ombra, Mr. Julius T. Hirst's Monsoon, Colonel A. Hickman Morgan's Boadicea, Mr. E. Miller Mundy's Narcissus, Sir Wyndham Murray's Cecilia, and Mr. A. S. Bowlby's Vanessa.

BILLIARDS.

Stevenson and Inman continued their match of 15,000 up in London on Wednesday. Inman in the afternoon session improved his position considerably, thanks to a break of 458 and other events of 161, 145, 124 and 130. Stevenson's only effort of note was 242. The interval scores were: Inman (in play), 3,411; Stevenson, 2,183.

INMAN (in play) 3,769
STEVENSON . . . . . 3,235.

WITHOUT A DEFEAT.

BATTERY'S FINE RECORD IN FOOTBALL LEAGUE.

Col., the 14th B.A.C. 525 Coy, R.A.S.C., and the Highland T.M. Battery. Altogether 23 teams competed in the league, which was won this week by B. 312 Battery, R.F.A, without a single defeat.

SAVED BY SOUND DEFENCE.

H.Q., 50th BDE. R F.A, A/51st BDE. R.F.A

This friendly game took place at Wald. Wednesday. The A 51st kicked off but H.Q. were the first to get away and looked like scoring, the ball just missing the upright. A good centre by Jenney enabled Bennett to make a well-timed shot, but the goalkeeper managed to tip it over the bar. The corner kick which was well placed by Sellars nearly gave H.Q., the lead, Bennet just heading outside.

From the goalkick A/51 began to make headway but Orgill and Wilkinson, the H.Q. backs, played well and got the ball away each time. At Half-time there was no score, neither side deserving the lead.

From the kick-off A/51 still continued to press and shortly afterwards the outside left shot at goal. The H.Q. goalkeeper stopped the ball, but it slipped from his hands into the net.

Henceforward the game was in the H.Q. half but Rose who played well in goal undoubtedly saved his side, assisted by the backs Orgill and Wilkinson. The H.Q. halves Blair and Morgan tacked well and prevented A/51 from breaking through but their passes to the forwards lacked sting and consequently no headway was made until Weekley the inside right trapped and passed the ball to Capt. Tyer who beat the inside right and with a well timed pass enabled Weekley to score the equalising goal.

For A/51 the five forwards played well, but were rather feeble in their shooting. The centre and left halves also tackled and cleared well and enabled the forwards to make headway, but their shooting at goal was wild.

For H.Q. 50th Bde. Rose in goal, Orgill and Wilkinson backs were playing at top form and saved their side. The forwards had very little chance in the second-half but Bennett at centre and Capt. Tyer, inside-left, tried hard. The result of the match proves that the H.Q. defence was sound as A/51 undoubtedly had the better team.

SCOTTISH FUSILIERS' NARROW WIN.

Before a good attendance and in fine weather, the 1/4 Royal Scottish Fusiliers and the 2/1 East Lancs. Field Ambulance played a football match at Hilden on Thursday.

For the last part of the first half the Lancs were largely confined to their own half. The Fusiliers' forwards were good, but lacked the finishing touches. At half time there was no score. After the interval, play was more even and finally settled down in the R.A.M.C. half again. Five minutes from time, a cross from Speirs was neatly intercepted by Sgt. Clark who made no mistake. There was no further scoring.

Result:—1/4 Royal Scottish Fusiliers 1; 2/1 East Lancs F.A. 0.

Starting against the wind, the Gunners' forwards soon proved themselves superior, Sgt. Tasker, and Dodsworth scored for the Gunners, while prior to the interval Turner, for the Artillery, scored an easy goal from a break away.

Half time Gunners 2; Artillery 1.

With the wind, the Gunners monopolised the play, and continually bombarded the visitors' goal. Although the Artillery continued to play a good sporting game, goals were added to the Gunners' score by Sergt. Tasker (2) Dodsworth, Cpl. Mathias, and Lt. Chandler.

Result: Gunners, 7; Artillery, 1.

GREAT TENNIS CONTEST.

AUSTRALIAN INTERNATIONAL BEATEN BY SOUTH AFRICAN.

In the Queen's covered court championships played on Thursday (third round) G. H. Dodd, an ex-South African champion, defeated Capt. Pat. O'Hara Wood, the Australian international (6—4, 12—10, 7—5) after a great contest, wherein Dodd's baseline driving was most accurate and consistent. The Australian's volleying was very deep and crisp.

S. N. Doust beat Major R. W. Heath, both Australian internationals (6—4, 7—5, 6—2). The winner played one of his best singles and cross-volleyed very cleverly. Heath who was untrained and who had just arrived from France was unable to play a net game owing to injured feet.

N. N. Misnu, the Rumanian Champion of the Riviera, beat Colonel Stacy, A. I. F. (6—1, 6—3, 6—1); Captain Gerald Patterson (Australian) beat Ed. Fencken, the Cambridge half-blue (6—0, 6—0, 6—4); the Hon. F. M. B. Fisher (New Zealand) beat Masterman (2—6, 6—3, 6—2, 6—2); Lieut. A. E. Beamish beat R. V. Thomas, the Australian International (2—6, 7—5, 7—5, 11—9). This was another great contest, both playing a firstclass driving, volleying game.

Gentlemen's Doubles.

In the Gentlemen's Doubles. S. N. Doust and A. B. Jones (Australia) beat Colonel Mayes Reserve) who won the Davis Cup in 1914 and Mishu (6 — 1, 6 — 2; 6 — 1, 6 — 2.) The pace was fast and the hitting hard and smashing throughout. R. Lysett and R. W. Heath beat Captain Greig and Hadingham (6 — 2, 6 — 2, 6 — 1.)

In the second round of the Gentlemen's Doubles Captain O'Hara Wood (Australian) and G. T. C. Watt beat the South African couple G. H. Dodd and L Raymond (6 — 4, 6 — 3, 6 — 2.) The losers put up a good prolonged fight but the winners' powerful killing of all lobs was a magnificent display of first-class Doubles play.

JAY GOULD AND TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP.

CONDITIONS SPECIFIED.

As stated in "The Cologne Post" of April 5th Mr. Jay Gould on being demobilized is willing to defend his title as the world's tennis champion.

The racquets committee of the club (says a Reuter's telegram) has specified the conditions under which Mr. Gould will play. The match, the best in thirteen sets, will be played during the first three weeks of December on the courts of the Racquet Club. Mr. Gould is willing to play a return match with the accepted challenger at an agreed-upon date within a year of the first match, either in England or in Philadelphia. Mr. Gould said he would give preference to George F. Covey, former professional champion of England, whom he defeated for the world's championship in Philadelphia in March, 1914. At that time there was an understanding that a return match would be played in England.

AIR FORCE AT SPORT.

Members of the R.A.F. have been particulary active in the sportsfields lately and, judging by many phases of sport indulged in, they evidently believe that "variety is the spice of life".

An exciting cross-country run by the 2nd Bde resulted in L.A.C. Frost, 59 Squadron arriving home first, followed by Corpl. Bradley, 18th Squadron, second, and A.C. Pearson, 8th Balloon Coy., third.

The second half opened well for the Gunners, who, taking advantage of the wind, soon scored. After this the Machine Gunners had all the play and scored another 3 goals.

At a meeting of Tonbridge Cricket Club, Tom Pawley, manager of the Kent county team, was elected hon. secretary for the fortieth year in succession. At the same meeting it was stated that the nursery for the Kent team will be removed to Canterbury, where the colts will have more facilities for practice than at Tonbridge.

CRIQUI KNOCKED OUT.

"TOMMY" NOBLE SUCCESSFUL IN 19th ROUND AT HOLBORN STADIUM.

FRENCHMAN SUCCUMBS TO LEFT PUNCH.

A 20-rounds boxing contest took place at the Holborn Stadium on Thursday evening, when Tommy Noble, the bantam-weight champion knocked out Eugene Criqui, France, in the 19th round.

It was a dull bout, consisting mostly of clinching and in-fighting.

Criqui went weak in his left leg and in the 19th round went down from a left punch.

As he rose, Noble, with a swift hooked left knocked him out. Criqui won each of his last twenty-two fights.

JEM MACE'S TROPHIES.

TO BE COMPETED FOR AT DIFFERENT WEIGHTS.

The many trophies won by Jem Mace have been collected by Mr. J.N. Smith, of Manchester, and will be put up for competition at different weights this summer (says The Times). It is hoped by means of these competitions to discover some new boxers of promise, especially from among men returning from the Army, who will be given opportunities in these competitions to meet men already prominent in the ring.

Among the trophies are the silver belt emblematic of the Championship of England, the belt presented to Mace in 1866 by the Illustrated Sporting News, and the belt presented to him in America in 1870.

Jem Mace, who was the champion of England from 1861 until 1872, was, comparatively, a light weight, whose style has been considered better even than that of Sayers, and has always been looked upon as one of the greatest fighters of all time. He was the last of the great prize fighters.

The final sees a meeting of two of the longest drivers in the competition, Kaye being dashing and Hope, cool and tenacious.

"SANDY" HERD IN GREAT FORM.

The Banstead Downs course was at full stretch on Wednesday, and provided an exacting test of golf when the thirty-six holes competition arranged by Mr. George Sutton, of Beckenham, in aid of the St. Duestan's Hostel for Blinded Sailors and Soldiers, took place.

Twenty prominent professionals took part in the competition, including the ex-champions, Alex Herd and Jack White. Herd was in great form, and with a 79 in the morning and 77 in the afternoon, returned the best total of 156.

The Millwall Club have secured the transfer of James Broad, the Oldham Athletic player, who has been scoring so freely for Greenock Morton in the Scotish League. He will assist Millwall in their forthcoming holiday matches, and will be a regular member of the Southern League Club's team next season.

The Mother Country team on Wednesday evening, at Newcastle, beat Northumberland by 4 goals and 3 tries to 1 penalty goal. Northumberland put up a fair fight in the opening half, but against a penalty goal by Smallwood for the County, Pickles obtained two tries for the visitors, one of which Cumberlege converted. On resuming the Mother Country overran their opponents. Lawless, Brunton, Harrison (2), and Laing scored tries, and three of them Brown improved. The Mother Country thus won by 29 points to 3.

Among the Easter Monday Sports there will be a particularly attractive Association football match played at Burnden Park, Bolton, the proceeds of which will be devoted to the Y.M.C.A. Campaign Fund. The teams will be composed of the leading professional footballers.

The New Zealanders reserve team beat Cross Keys on Wednesday in a very good Rugby game at Cross Keys, near Newport, by a penalty goal and a try to nothing—6 points to 0. About 2,000 people watched the game.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

An Objection to Boxing.

There has been a great to do at Middlesbrough because the Streets Committee of the Town Council there refused to grant the use of the Town Hall for the purpose of a boxing tournament. A contingent of discharged soldiers and sailors marched, with a band at their head, to the Council offices and, as a result of a conversation between a deputation which was subsequently received, and the officials, the Council decided to reconsider their decision.

Now that boxing has taken such a firm hold of the interests of all classes, and in view of the many deserving causes that have benefited, to the extent of many golden coins from the proceeds of this form of entertainment, the argument that the sensibilities of a small section of the community would be shocked by the holding of a tournament at the Middlesbrough Town Hall go very light in the scale compared with the reasons in favour of the renting of the hall for the purpose indicated.

Proposed Amateur Dramatic Society.

Lieut. E. S. Percy who, in the Army Amusements Office, is responsible for the theatrical side of local entertainments, is ambitious to start an amateur dramatic society in Cologne. Many soldiers will remember the extraordinary success that attended his efforts at Havre during the war, when he gathered together a company of first-rate amateur artistes and produced such difficult works as those from the pens of Galsworthy, Shaw and Bennett. In those days "full house" was the usual order of things, a fact which is sufficient testimony to the popularity of the heavier type of entertainment among the troops, as a change from the excellent light material of which there is quite a large quantity. Mr. Percy would like to get in touch with anyone who even thinks he can act in order that he may get on with the business without delay. More of this anon.

A Fishy Story.

The story comes from a small village near Bonn (it is not on the map, but it is within a stone's throw, almost, of Bremig) of three men who went a-fishing in the river. Armed with improvised fishing-rods, lines, and a large quantity of worms the three enthusiasts sat on the bank and baited and re-baited their lines patiently for two hours. At the end of that time, having caught nothing more exciting than several bunches of weeds, the disappointed fishermen were about to return whence they came, when one of their number suddenly espied three rods set on the opposite bank of the river. In a very few seconds the lines were hauled in, and, lo, and behold! on the end of each was a real live fish. In great glee, the catch was taken back and provided (in addition to a tasty snack), the topic of conversation for the evening. It was not until the next morning that the fishermen heard that the C. O. was really responsible for the "catch." He had gone to infinite trouble to secure the three small fish and with them was going for bigger things, in the shape of pike! I hope this is not the first intimation he has of the fate of his bait.

The Düren Officers' Club.

The many officers stationed in and about Düren are beginning to get a little impatient at the protracted delay in the fulfilment of the promised arrival of the new club. It is now over three weeks since the 6th Corps Club officials packed up their belongings and hied them (with all appurtenances) into Cologne, but the 4th Corps, whose Headquarters are in the town, does not appear to be falling over itself in an urgent effort to scramble into the vacant shoes.

Quoit-Tennis.

Anent the little paragraph that appeared under this heading yesterday, a correspondent writes that his great liking for the game probably saved his life. He had arranged to dine in a particular officers' mess in France last summer, but his indulgence in the pastime of quoit-tennis caused him to turn up at the appointed dug-out half-an-hour late. When he did arrive, it was to find that five minutes earlier a shell had burst directly on the roof of the underground dining-room, killing all the occupants except one, who was badly wounded.

Boisterous Baseball.

With so many Americans at Coblentz, it is fairly safe to prophesy that the town will witness very many games of baseball during the coming summer, and since the necessity for perfect turf is not so pressing as is the case with cricket or tennis, it is not improbable that the great Yankee game will spread farther afield. If baseball does take firm root here and flourishes to any great extent among the English troops, the game will undoubtedly be taken over to England and given an additional "boost" to that already bestowed upon it by the Americans over there Swimming Prospects.

In a few days it is hoped that arrangements will be completed for taking over the swimming baths at Cologne for three days a week for the use of the Army. This acquisition is likely to be immensely popular, and there should be a few gains on the programme of future events before you can say "Jack Robinson" (or any other name, for the matter of that). In the meantime, there is nothing to prevent officers and other ranks from attending the baths at any time. "Yer pays yer money, and yer takes yer choice" between Turkish, swimming, shower or slipper baths.

Forthcoming Duren Concerts.

The Highland Division are making arrangements to run a series of concerts at the Stadt-Theatre, Duren, every Tuesday. There is a sad lack of entertainment in Duren at the present time, and the sooner the ball gets rolling, the better will the large number of troops stationed there, be pleased. In the meantime, the organisers of the concerts are on the look out for first rate English vocalists, instrumetalists and other artistes, with the idea of making variety (as well as excellence) the key-note of the performances

THE RAMBLER.

The frequent appearance of English motor-busses in the streets of Bonn and other large German towns gives the Native "furiously to think," as the French would say. They are amazed that such topheavy looking vehicles are able to maintain the perpendicular.

NOW WAR PIGEONS TURN.

Nearly all pigeons and pigeon men of France have been demobilized, with the exception of those selected for the Army of Occupation.

Some 9 000 to 10,000 birds that had served their country well had to be disposed of. They would have been a drug on the English market if they had been sent home, and the cost of the transaction would probably have been more than the birds would have realised. They have therefore been sold at Courtrai, Lille, and other places in France and Belgium, and the proceeds of sale divided among charitable institutions of the three countries, as this was the wish of the owners who gave the birds to the country for the war.

It is interesting to note the work that has been done by our bird fanciers in Great Britain and Ireland. The Daily Mail states that these men gave on an average 20,000 pigeons a year during the war. If they had been needed 50,000 could easily have been got from our finest and best strains. Some of these youngsters would have fetched £5 each with pedigrees, but no pedigrees were supplied.

In the battle of Messines 1,200 pigeons with 600 messages were used, and not a single message miscarried.

The Germans were most thorough in connection with their pigeon service. They made a splendidly finished message-carrier with a red seal at the top. From time to time we captured German pigeons in the trenches but could not use them to send messages as we had no similar holders. Carter, the medal maker of Birmingham, who made thousands of little discs to put on a pigeon's leg, imitated the well-made German holder so perfectly that it was impossible to tell those he made from the captured original.

RELEASE OF CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS.

STERN ATTITUDE OF PRISON AUTHORITIES.

The following were released from Pentonville Prison on Tuesday in accordance with the Government's decision to discharge "soldiers of various classes" who have been convicted under the Army Act: W. Russell Frayling, R. A. Clatting, H. Goitein, A. Griffiths, Isaac Hall, A. Creech Jones, A. Lazinsky, N. McLeod, B. Priestman, Harris Pelz, H. J. Soar, W. Soar, F. A. Stillwell, S. L. Wright, E. H. Wilson.

In an interview, Mr. Frayling, a C. O. who has served a total of twenty eight months' imprisonment made the following remark with reference to the attitude of the prison authorities.

"It was said that conscientious objectors who had served two years were to be released." If an ordinary offender sentenced to two years' imprisonment behaves himself he gets four months remission, and there is a notice in the cells stating that men may get one-sixth remission for good conduct, but we are told that conscientious objectors must do the full two years.

"Fifteen of us came out of Pentonville to-day, and I have been on the 'phone to the Home Office. They tell me that objectors must do the full term. A day or two ago two men were released from Pentonville and returned to their units They have both done more than 24 months' imprisonment, but they were told they must be court-martialled and sent back to Pentonville before they can be released from there as conscientious objectors. Of course, they have been court-martialled before.

"There are some 30 C.O.s still in Pentonville, and quite 15 of them have served 20 months or more. Among them are men who have never had a single day's punishment."

Another conscientious objector released yesterday was Mr. A. Fenner Brockway, formerly editor of the "Labour Leader," who has been in custody since November, 1916.

It is reported that the Home Secretary intends to lay the report of Mr. Albion Richardson, M. P., on the treatment of conscientious objectors at Wandsworth Prison on the table of the House, with a view to its publication.

SINN FEIN EXPENSES.

At a meeting of Ard Fheis, the governing body of Sinn Fein, held at the Mansion House, Dublin on Thursday. Mr. Nebitt, treasurer, stated that up to the present they had carried on the work of the Ard Fheis without having received either German gold or American dollars. They had no promise of any money coming from any other source at present. The total raised throughout Ireland to fight their recent elections must have come to £50,000 a figure eloquently testifying to the loyalty of the people.

TWO MORE K.C.s.

Mr. Arthur G. Roby and Mr. Evan E. Charteris have been made K.C.s, Mr. Roby to take precedence after Mr. S. H. Emanuel, and Mr. Charteris after Mr. C. E. Dyer.

Bath will not reinstate Mr. H. R. Wilkinson, formerly headmaster of the City Art School, who was a conscientious objector to service.

GOVERNMENT STORES.

NEW DISPERSAL BOARD.

In the House of Commons on Wednesday Mr. Atkey (C. U., Notts, Central) asked the Leader of the House the approximate value of property to be released by the Government Surplus Property Disposal Board, and whether, in view of the immense sum at stake, he would consider the desirability of inviting the voluntary co-operation of additional independent commercial men in order that the Government might be assured of realising the greatest possible amount in disposing of its property.

Mr. Kellaway (Deputy Minister of Munitions), in replying said the Disposal Board only disposes of Government property when it has been declared by other Government Departments to be surplus to their requirements. Whilst a considerable amount of material has already been passed to the Board for disposal, this represents only a proportion of what will ultimately become surplus. It is, therefore, impossible at present to give even an approximate estimate of the property which the Board will have for disposal. The members of the Board, with their commercial status and experience, are:

Chairman, Mr. F. G. KELLAWAY, M. P., Deputy Minister of Munitions; Deputy Chairman, Sir HOWARD FRANK, head of the firm of Messrs. Knight, Frank, and Butley, auctioneers, surveyors, and estate agents; Mr. DAVID CORRIE, of Messrs. Lake and Currie, Ltd., mining engineers. Sir ROBERT CONNELL, senior partner in Messrs. Lowden, Connell, and Co., shipowners, Liverpool: Major-General Sir A. CROFTON ATKINS, Late Director of Supplies and Transport at the War Office; Mr. ALEXANDER WALKER, head of the firm of Messrs. John Walker and Sons, distillers, Kilmarnock; Sir SYDNEY H. HENN, director of Messrs. Forster and Sons Ltd., and of the Horseley Bridge and Engineering Company; and Mr. D. NEYLAN, late Director of Finance at the War Office.

The only members of the Board receiving a salary from the Ministry of Munitions at the present time are the chairman, who receives his salary as Deputy Minister and Parliamentary Secretary, General Crofton Atkins, and Mr. D. Neylan. In the case of the last two members the salaries at present being paid are £1,200 and £1,500 respectively, salaries they were receiving from the War Office, from which department they have been transferred.

A decision has not yet been taken as to whether any other members of the Board shall be paid. The work of the selling departments is dealt with by eighteen controllers, each of whom has the assistance of an Advisory Committee of independent commercial men experienced in dealing with the class of material coming under their direction.

ALIENS RESTRICTION BILL.

Mr. L. LYLE (C. U., Stratford) asked the Home Secretary whether, on the declaration of peace, alien enemy immigration into this country could, if not controlled, be at once resumed; and whether, in these circumstances, the Government would ensure the passage of the Aliens Restriction Bill at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. SHORTT, in replying, said that the powers under which the entrance of aliens into the United Kingdom has been controlled during the war are limited to times of war, or of imminent national danger, or great emergency. In the Aliens Restriction Bill I am asking for similar powers for use at any time during the next two years, and it is the intention of the Government to ensure the passing of that measure into law without any avoidable delay.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

WEDNESDAY.

CASEMENT BRIGADE.

Lord WILLOUGHBY DE BROKE asked the Under-Secretary for War whether any of the men who joined the so-called Casement Brigade in Germany had been repatriated, and whether any action had been taken with regard to them, and, if so, of what nature. He said that the men who were particularly anxious to know what happened to the Casement Brigade, were those who stood firm and refused to yield to the inducements held out to them to desert their cause and join forces with the enemy. He had been informed that on repatriation those men who had given way had not been dealt with at all, and this had created a considerable amount of feeling. He was told that some three or five of the men had been arrested and dealt with, while of the remainder, to the number of about thirteen, no notice had been taken at all. It was unfair to those who did stand firm that these men had not been marked out for special treatment.

Viscount PEEL said he took note of there being dissatisfaction amongst those who stood firm. All he could say was that the case of the other men was now under consideration. The Government was looking into the whole matter very carefully. As it might be regarded as subjudice the noble lord would see the impolicy of pressing his rather potent question.

MARCH OF OVERSEAS TROOPS.

Lord DENMAN asked if there would be a march through London of Dominion and Colonial troops who had served in the war.

Viscount PEEL said the answer was "Yes." It had been decided that there should be a triumphal march of Overseas troops through London, but the details were complicated, and were now being worked out. He was, therefore, not in a position to announce the precise date.

Earl STANHOPE suggested that complete units should take part in the march. Each battalion should march as it marched in France, with the whole of its paraphernalia, and occasionally in different order, such as battle order and marching order. That would interest the people, and teach them something of what an Army really was.

Viscount HARCOURT hoped that this triumphal march would include representatives of the troops from the Crown Colonies, many of whom were coloured men, in order that they might share in the tribute of this country. He trusted no time would be lost, as day by day thousands of Australians and Canadians were returning to their homes, and were being deprived of their share of the appreciation which this country desired to convey to them.

Viscount PEEL replied that the Government were fully aware of the difficulties which delay involved. They would see that he had used the words "Overseas troops," which had a wider meaning than the words of the question.

END OF THE VINDICTIVE.

It is reported that the Vindictive has broken in halves at Zeebrugge during salvage operations, and will now have to be blown up. Thus the hope that the famous ship, which on two occasions, at Ostend and Zeebrugge, did such splendid work under the command of Captain Carpenter, V.C., might be refloated and brought back to England, is probably doomed to disappointment.

WITH THE RATIONS.

On Wednesday I went to hear a "Meister-Konzert" in the Stollwerckhaus, having been convinced that this was to be one of the great concerts of the season so far as the Germans were concerned. Naturally, I expected something great from such a performance, and perhaps I should have realized that but for a certain mismanagement on the part of the organizers. The Stollwerckhaus is a large building, divided into two parts by a wooden partition. In the larger portion there was this German concert, whilst at the same time a performance was being given in the other portion by our English artistes. A wooden partition is a very poor barrier against sound, and the effect yesterday was too vile to mention. The nearest approch to any such effect was when I heard, some time ago, an angry dog whining at a screeching gramaphone reproduction. In addition to the clashing of these two musical parties there was the additional intermittent thud of a skittle ball in the basement. Some soldiers were evidently trying to find relief in a game at nine-pins.

Needless to say I was not the only person to leave the building disgusted long before either performance had reached a conclusion.

* * * *

A faint whisper round the town is that we are to have a club for the soldiers, run on similar lines to the Officers' Club. What a boon this will be to us who wish to spend the afternoon sight-seeing. The clubs in existence now are ideal things, so I am told, but these do not cater for the individual who merely "drops in for the day." The Y.M.C.A., Church Army Hut, and other kindred associations, help us wonderfully, but what we should like is a good "square meal," to keep us in trim throughout the day, and on till the morrow's breakfast. One very soon becomes "fed-up" with German pastry and their sweet delicacies—sweet nothingnesses, I call them—and wine. Many of the Germans seem to make lunch, tea, and dinner of these and even appear to thrive on them, judging from their corpulent figures, but not so the Englisman.

The officers' club appears to be a huge success judging from the numbers which seem to make use of it, and I doubt not that a club for the other ranks would prove equally, if not more, successful.

* * * *

I overheard a peculiar argument amongst some soldiers the other evening. These lads could not agree as to who wrote Shakespeare's works, though none of them suggested Bacon. I will not display their ignorance of our greatest poet by mentioning those names which they gave, but one bright spark suggested that they should write to Conan Doyle and ask him to get in touch with the real author by means of that mysterious aid, spirtualism. The Germans, I believe, might have informed them of the author, for one hears that they claim some right to his works.

TO ALL CORRESPONDENTS.

The Editor wishes to emphasise the fact that any correspondence sent to him should bear name, rank, and unit of the sender. Also many sports and amusements contributions are being received which do not give any dates whatever. These are, naturally, useless, as all readers first of all wish to know when the occurrence, whatever it may be, happened.

Will contributors please bear this in mind.

MOVING CINEMAS etc.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir, — I have followed with interest the comments in your paper upon the amusements in Cologne, and beg to draw the attention of those concerned to the recurrence of that war-time and faulty practice of concentrating all amusements in one small area.

Now, in the Bridgehead there are a few hundred square miles of occupied Territory and distributed over them are thousands of troops, yet only within a few miles of Cologne Cathedral can anything like a decent "show" be seen?

In this district, Hilden-Ohligs-Benrath, with its thousands of troops, no suitable entertainments are provided for the evenings, yet in Cologne are innumerable cinemas and concert parties in addition to the Opera. Cannot this system of concentration be dropped, so as to let the men who are not continually in Cologne have a chance of seeing these shows, instead of being able merely to read about them, as at present?

I would suggest that one suitable hall be reserved in each town and all these concert parties and cinemas be organized into travelling companies, giving a week's performance at each place.

This would necessitate a reduction in the number of entertainments in Cologne but a dozen would not be missed from all those advertised and un-advertised, and the action would be appreciated by all the men of those few old B.E.F. divisions which still remain here. T.

[It must be pointed out that many Brigade and Divisional concert parties already do travel from place to place.—Ed.]

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We are continually receiving numerous questions which should not come to us at all because they can be dealt with far more easily and quickly with the unit. All matters concerning rate of pay, pensionable service, demobilization, and so on, should be submitted in the usual way to commanders of units. In many cases the Company or Battery C.Q.M.S., knowing all the facts of the case, could give an answer immediately. Why write to us?

Take the question of demobilization for example In every unit there is someone, generally a Demobilization Officer detailed as such, who has all the facts as his finger ends, or can turn them up from the very latest "Instructions" in two minutes.

He is the proper person to appeal to in all such cases and only needs to be asked.

Sending such queries to us wastes the enquirer's time, wastes our time, and we are so busy with a thousand-and-one other things, and moreover is against all sorts of regulations.

Why call in a third party when the matter is obviously one between two parties who know all the facts of both sides, and for which the Army Council have provided proper facilities.

We are at all times ready and willing to answer general questions, but personal questions should be dealt with in the proper manner.

Will correspondents please note this, and not call upon an overworked staff to do a job quite outside its province, and for which ample machinery has already been provided by the Army authorities.

We are so busy answering general questions, that it will be impossible even to acknowledge the kind of correspondence indicated in the above paragraphs.

14,000 A DAY OUT OF ARMY.

Mr. Churchill on Tuesday said that demobilisation is proceeding at the rate of about 13,000 or 14,000 a day; only a few hundred thousand now remain to be demobilised.

In reply to Major Entwistle, who asked whether it is a fact that numerous complaints are being received by parents from their sons in the Army of the Rhine about inadequate rations. Mr. Winston Churchill stated that two complaints had been received at the War Office recently and had been referred to the Commander in Chief for enquiry and report. Ample supplies have been distributed to the troops of the Rhine Army and there should be no shortage.

LONDONERS FOR NORTH RUSSIA RELIEF

REGIMENTAL COLOURS PROBLEM

BRICKLAYER AS PRIME MINISTER

GENERAL PLUMER INVESTS AMERICAN OFFICERS

LONDONERS FOR RUSSIA.

An enthusiastic send off was given to the first company of London Infantry troops who volunteered for the North Russia Relief Force when they started from Whitehall yesterday morning for Park Royal to wait orders for transport.

The troops looked in splendid health and certainly were in excellent spirits. They were loudly cheered by the crowd of men who were waiting to enrol.

In his remarks about North Russia, Mr. Churchill said, at the Aldwych club, that our men in North Russia will be properly supported and relieved faithfully (cheers). The Premier has given him the fullest authority to take whatever measures the General Staff think necessary to relieve all our forces there and in so far as it is physically possible we shall take whatever measures are required.

RECRUITING CONTINUES BRISK.

Recruiting is still proceeding in a most satisfactory manner. The staff at Scotland Yard has had to be greatly increased and is employed until ten o'clock every night in order to keep up with the clerical work.

SOUTH RUSSIA.

The Allies evacuated 25,000 refugees before leaving Odessa. The Russian volunteer army is retiring in disorder before the Bolshevist advance in the Crimea.

The French, who have been reinforced, are ordered to hold Sebastopol. — Reuter.

INVESTITURE OF AMERICAN OFFICERS.

An investiture of American officers was held by General Sir Herbert Plumer G. C. B. etc. the Second Army Commander, at Cologne yesterday.

The function was held in the open air and the weather left something to be desired. The scene was nevertheless a brilliant one. Three sides of a square were formed by the 76th Brigade, Northern division, under the command of Brig.-Gen. Metcalfe.

Among those present were Major Gen. E. M. Lewis, of the American army, who recently received the K. C. M. G., Gen. Sir A. Hoding Gen. Sir A. A. Chichester, Gen. C. J. Daverell, and Brig.-Gen. E. M. Tandy.

General Plumer made a short speech referring to the bond existent between the British and American armies and peoples.

After the ceremony the troops marched past.

The following were the recipients of honours:

K.C.B. General Dickman.
K.C.M.G.; Maj.-Gen. Bell, Maj.-Gen. Lassiter, Maj.-Gen. Hines, Maj.-Gen. Muir.
C.B.; Brig.-Gen. Craig, Brig.-Gen. Smith.
C.M.G.; Col. Montgomery, Col. Biddle, Col. Coleman, Col. Conger, Col. Wooten, Lt.-Col. Stebbins.
D.S.O.; Col. Williams.
M.C.; Lt. Ekdahl.

WHISKY PROFITEERING.

DISTILLERS TO DEAL DIRECT,

The principal whisky distillers are proposing to deal direct with retailers. This course is being adopted in consequence of a strong suspicion that supplies have been, and are being held up by middlemen speculators.

Travellers will be dispensed with, and a central office will be established through which all supplies will be distributed.

MEN WHO HELPED TO WIN.

One of the most interesting passages in Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig's latest dispatch reveals the fact that Brigadier Generals have included a schoolmaster, a taxicab driver, a lawyer and an ex-Sergeant Major, while a Cambridge college cook, an insurance clerk and a police inspector proved efficient general staff officers.

CANADIAN CAMP RIOTS.

TRIAL ANNOUNCED.

It is expected that the trial of the men concerned in the riot at Kinmel Camp will begin in about a week.

Major General Sir H. E. Burstall will be President of the Court Martial, which will be held at Liverpool.

CANADA'S WAR EXPENDITURE.

Sir Thomas White, Minister of Finance, stated in the House of Commons at Ottawa that Canada's war expenditure to the end of March 1920 would reach a total of 1,574,000,000 dollars.

The estimated war expenditure during the [illegible] would be 298,000,000 dollars, of which [illegible] would be spent overseas. Reuter.

SITUATION IN EGYPT.

Cairo. — The following communiqué was issued on the 5th April. No fresh disorders are reported from the provinces. Cairo is quiet today. Owing to the destruction of railway stations and signalling apparatus, it will be long before the railways can cope with normal passenger and goods traffic.

Cairo, 5th April. — Since the issue of yesterday's communiqué it is reported that a hostile crowd attacked a patrol in the Seida Zenab quarter yesterday morning. The patrol was obliged to fire and a boy among the crowd was unfortunately killed. The railway towards Assuan has been restored.

Cairo, 8th April. — Several regrettable incidents, probably due to misunder standings, occurred during scenes of popular excitement in Cairo and Alexandria last night. — Reuter.

Reuter learns that the statements to the effect that in recent disturbances in Egypt religious bias has been evident, and is causing anxiety, is not borne out in any way by telegrams received from official sources at Cairo. All evidence in fact tends to show that the contrary is the case.

Egypt. — General Allenby reports that Cairo is outwardly quieter but some disturbances still occur in the poorer quarters, chiefly of hooligans showing animosity against Armenians and Greeks. The new Ministers are in conference with representatives of the Government employées, who recently struck. The state railways have resumed work, excepting men in the workshops. Provinces are reported quiet. Official.

REGIMENTAL COLOURS PROBLEM.

NO ROOM FOR FRESH HONOURS.

It has been suggested that each regiment in the army should now be granted a third colour in order to make room for the emblazonment of honours gained in the war. The colours of some of the famous old regiments of the British Army are already so full of battle names, dating back to 1680 (Tangier) and 1695 (Namur) that it will be a problem how to find space for the names which must be recorded for many a fierce engagement of the present war.

BAVARIAN REVOLUTIONS.

Almost the whole of Bavaria supports the Hoffmann Government.

Within the last few days three different bodies have been claiming to be the authority. There is the regular government of which Hoffmann is Premier; the Soviet at Munich, and the Communist Government which dissolved the Soviet because of its "mild" opinions.

The Communists and Soviet have now combined forces, although the arrest of Toller, leader of the Central Soviet, by the Communists, and his liberation later in the day, is characteristic of the confusion which exists.

In the midst of the turmoil a bricklayer named Klotz has installed himself as Prime Minister of the Communist regime.

A revolutionary tribunal has been organised and numerous trial have been held in public.

Würtemberg has declared its readiness to send troops against the Soviet republic.

GERMAN STRIKE NEWS.

In the Oberbilk suburb of Dusseldorf the Spartacists entrenched themselves. Government troops attacked them, using artillery. There are many killed and wounded. The railway station is closed.

The Spartacists at Schweinfurt have been ordered by the Government troops to surrender their leaders within twelve hours, otherwise they will be attacked.

HIGH PRICE FOR A MULE.

Three thousand of the five thousand odd Army mules in England are for sale, but so far the prices realised are somewhat disappointing, reaching the average of eighteen pounds only.

For a dappled grey beauty, however, a well known racehorse owner recently paid one hundred guineas.

"UNEXAMPLED FURY OF PEACE'.

Speaking as a guest of the Aldwich Club, Mr. Winston Churchill said: "We are now in the hush before the storm, An oppressive silence broods over Fleet Street before Peace bursts upon it with unexampled fury".

NO PROHIBITION FOR CANADA.

Early returns from Montreal of the referendum indicate that there will be a big majority against prohibition.

LEAGUE OF BRITISH NATIONS.

TRIANGLE OF TRADE.

Lord Milner, Secretary of State for the Colonies, made an important speech yesterday on our relations with our self-governing Dominions and on Imperial development after the war. Lord Milner said that at long last we are waking up, not only to the present importance of our Empire, but to its almost boundless potentialities of future growth. The relations of the self-governing Dominions with the Mother Country had for years past been undergoing a great transformation which was now almost complete. They are no longer colonies, but Nations, intensely conscious of their nationhood. They had played in this war as big a part as any but the greatest powers, and they were certainly entitled to look forward to a future in which they would themselves be great powers. Yet they all desire — and this is our unparalleled good fortune — to remain within the Empire. If that desire is fulfilled the world will see for the first time the permanent association of a number of great powers under a single head. It would be, and in fact it is already, a League of Nations and it possesses a moral unity which that greater league, if it come into existence, has still to acquire. The ties which bind together members of the British League of Nations are no work of artifice. They are of natural growth.

MORAL UNITY OF EMPIRE.

He sincerely hoped that the practice of Dominion Ministers sitting side by side with British Ministers to deal with all matters which were of common concern would never come to an end. Everyone who wishes to see a continuance of the British League of Nations must desire that the Dominons have a real share in the conduct of matters which affect them as much as ourselves, such as foreign policy, defence, inter-imperial trade and communications It is equally true that no machinery whatsoever will avail unless we preserve moral unity of Empire. We must cultivate a wider patriotism and sense of our common citizenship in this superstate by every means in our power.

FAMILY INTERESTS FIRST.

On the question of preference Lord Milner said it had been too much regarded as being merely a matter of tariffs. Every part of the Empire should decide for itself to have as much or as little tariff as it pleases, but it is only right and natural that tariffs should fall more lightly upon Empire goods than upon foreign goods. That is the view taken by the Dominions and by every country in the Dominions and by every country in the world which has oversea possesions, including more especially the United States. We are a family of nations and in all our policy and dealings the interests of the family should come first.

"I want to see the resources of every part of the Empire, in so far as they are not needed for the development of that part, devoted, not exclusively, but first and foremost, to build up the strength and prosperity of all the other parts. I feel that about emigration, investment of capital and a score of other questions with which I have daily to deal."

THE TRIANGLE OF TRADE.

Referring to the necessity of Colonial development Lord Milner said "the one thing which terrifies me as I look ahead is the possibility of restriction of credit. Speaking broadly the civilised world is short—very short—just now of things which it most urgently requires. As a whole it has no lack either of food or raw material or productive power. Thus we have all the requisites for a period of intense industrial activity. It can only come if those great countries which still stand upright and whose industrial equipment is unimpaired by war adopt a bold and generous policy, and go to the assistance of countries whose industrial activity has been crippled or completely paralysed by it.

The room for expansion is simply enormous Here comes in what I may call the triangle of trade. If we are not able wholly to pay our creditors by goods supplied to them by ourselves we may yet be able to pay them by goods supplied from countries which are indebted to us because we have invested money in their development."

FLYING THE ATLANTIC.

WEATHER PERMITTING.

St. John's Newfoundland. — Major Hawker, in his Sopwith aeroplane, made a successful trial flight this afternoon. He was in the air for half an hour at a height of four thousand feet, attaining a speed of a hundred miles an hour.

The aeroplane will be inspected to-morrow by the Governor of Newfoundland, and Major Hawker will make his attempt as soon as the weather permits.

The weather conditions in Newfoundland will probably delay the start, which was expected to take place next week.

The worst ice blockade known for sixty years has greatly delayed preparations for the transatlantic flight. Major Hawker and Commander Mackenzie Grieve, with a two seater biplane, could not be landed at St. Johns owing to the harbour being blocked. It was found necessary to unload them on to an ice-floe, whence they have been taken off by a small coasting steamer,

Four mechanics who had left England thirteen days in advance of the pilots, spent eight days jammed in the ice in the Gulf of St. Laurence while crossing from Nova Scotia to Newfoundland.

The aerodrome prepared by the Sopwith advance party is a quagmire, following the melting of snow which fell recently. It is unlikely that the flight will be attempted for another fortnight.

BONAR LAW'S SECRETARY MARRIED.

Mr. John Davidson, private secretary to Mr. Bonar Law, was married yesterday, his bride being Miss Joan Dickinson, daughter of the Rt. Hon. Sir Willoughby Dickinson.

FOUR YEARS' FIGHTING IN MESOPOTAMIA.

RECORD OF GALLANTRY.

In his dispatch on the concluding stages of the fighting in Mesopotamia, General Sir W. Marshall, commanding the expeditionary force, says that the actual captures since the beginning of the campaign, which lasted just four years, amounted to forty five thousand five hundred prisoners and two hundred and fifty guns together with vast quantities of war material of all descriptions.

"These results have been achieved in a country destitute of shade in summer and impassable, owing to floods, in wet weather. They are a lasting record of gallantry and endurance of the officers and men, both British and Indian, who have fought uncomplainingly in spite of heat, sickness, rain and discomfort for four years in Mesopotamia. No general has ever been more loyally served."

A JUST PEACE AND A LASTING PEACE.

ALSO SOMETHING TO GRUMBLE ABOUT

Speaking yesterday afternoon Mr. Winston Churchill said that in a few weeks or possibly less we should know what were the terms which the Allies had agreed to impose on the enemy.

"Any agreement that is reached by the very experienced and able heads met together in Paris," he said, "must be comprehensive and general. It must therefore be judged as a whole and not as a part. The difficulties and complexities of their job are unexampled. How can this problem be solved to universal satisfaction? Nobody, is going to get all they want; nobody ought to get all they want; everybody must expect something to grumble about. It is not a game of grab that we are playing but a question of peace; of a peace that shall be a just peace and a lasting peace. If this is achieved individual disappointment will be forgotten in general joy. If it is not achieved a paper triumph of any country for the time being would be of no use at all. Therefore I say that the work on which the Peace Conference is engaged must be judged as a whole and not upon this point or that."

Mr. Churchill added that what Britain wanted was a peace that would not be a feeling of triumph but a peace of solid structure on broad and lasting foundations.

SUPER TANKS TOO LATE.

SHORTAGE OF GERMANS.

Some interesting information was revealed last night at the Savoy, the occasion being a dinner held by the members of the Anglo-American Commission which was specially formed to assemble mammoth tanks at a huge factory in France.

This factory was not completed until just before the armistice, and only one tank, said to be the finest in the world, was completed in time.

The Chairman. Lt. Col. Sir Albert G. Stern, in proposing the health of Lt. Col. James A. Drain, head of the American Commission, said that had the war gone on the factory would have turned out three hundred of these super tanks monthly. They were built to economise lives in the war, which meant economy of labour in peace.

General Seely, Minister for the Air, who responded for the guests, said that tanks had helped in the first degree to win the war. Mr. Winston Churchill, Secretary of State for War, said it was quite true that the war ended before the full results of tank enterprise could be attained. But for the shortage of Germans the tank would have won even greater fame in the world.

Mr. Churchill agreed that the biggest thing that had come out of the war was unity of action, which was arrived at under the stress and peril of Armageddon.

GERMAN GOVERNMENT AND PRESS.

WAKING UP.

The Minister of Finance made some interesting allusions to the Press in a speech delivered to the National Assembly. They are chiefly interesting by reason of the fact that the present terrible conditions obtaining in practically the whole of unoccupied Germany are not due solely to reaction after a four year war which resulted in a crushing defeat, but are the result of finding out the truth, the bitter truth about many things, which was deliberately withheld from the people. It was not the fault of the Press but of the Government, which is now reaping its terrible harvest.

"The actual Government" said the Minister, "will appreciate better the value and power of the Press. No Government is possible which does not take into account the creation of public opinion. But the Press must realise that power brings responsibility. In the new Germany, where the power of the Press has so enormously increased, the Press must do its duty with a greater sense of responsibility. Writers must be politicians as well as journalists. An article may be very good from the journalistic point of view but pernicious and dangerous from a political aspect."

By all of which it would seem that the Government, having untied the muzzle of the German Press, is doubtful, even yet, of the wisdom of removing it.

FATAL ATTEMPT TO ESCAPE FROM CUSTODY.

DATE OF INQUIRY.

The inquest on the military prisoner who was shot while endeavouring to escape from the custody of the escort at Waterloo station has been fixed for Monday. A man who witnessed the occurrence said to a press representative. "As the escort came to the corner of the street the private opened the breech of his rifle and a cartridge fell out. The Corporal in charge of the escort exclaimed. For Christ's sake don't fire'. When the escort reached the next corner, the private who had previously opened the breech of his rifle fired at the fugitives."

HULL BY-ELECTION.

UNIONISTS LOSE THE SEAT.

The result of the Central Hull by-election, necessitated by the death of Sir Mark Sykes, was a gain for the Independent Liberals. The voting was: Commander J. M. Kenworthy, Independent Liberal 8616, Lord Eustace Percy, Coalition Unionist, 7699.

The figures at the general election in December were Sir Mark Sykes, Coalition Unionist, 13,805, Rev. R. M. Kedward, Liberal, 3434.

The result caused a great sensation in the House of Commons and throughout the country Liberals are delirious with joy. A turnover of eleven thousand two hundred and eight votes in what has been always a Conservative stronghold is generally admitted to be unprecedented in electioneering annals, especially following so soon after one of the most decisive general elections on record. The new member, Commander J. M. Kenworthy, is the son and heir of Lord Strabolgi, whose title was called out of abeyance in 1916. He was a strong candidate. his war record in fighting submarines and distinction of being the champion boxer of the Navy appealed to the fisnermen electorate but it was his "no conscription" cry and his demand for immediate removal of restrictions on commerce which chiefly weighed with the port, which is suffering great difficulties in the restoration of normal trade, especially with Scandinavia and the Baltic.

The Times describes the result as a political portent and says it is now absolutely clear that the country is determined to redress the balance of the general election and declares that very few Unionist seats can be accounted safe.

Mr. Winston Churchill, referring to the result in the course of a speech given at a luncheon in London said that Hull was not so appreciative of the Government's labour as he could have wished, but reaction was natural and even healthy. The Government would not however be deflected from its aim to revive the prosperity of the country.

Mr. Asquith, addressing a banquet of Independent Liberals in London described the last two by-elections as significant of rapid and thoroughgoing repentance and that of Hull in particular as an unusually quick Nemesis.

The newly elected member, who is an Asquithian Liberal, appeared during the banquet and was most enthusiastically received.

Posters giving the result were prominently displayed, adding considerably to the gaiety of the banqueters.

LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE.

WAITING FOR THE BUDGET.

Altough a smaller volume of business was transacted in gilt-edged securities, attributable to the forthcoming budget statement, the tone remains satisfactory. French loans weakened owing to an adverse movement in the rate of exchange. Oils show outstanding strength and activity, notably the leading issues. Minings continue to harden under the lead of colonial base metal descriptions. Industrials possess some good features, especially textile shares, on improving trade conditions.

BRITISH WAR MUSIC.

Mr. Isidore De Lara gives some remarkable figures as to the work done on behalf of British music in concerts associated with his name.

During the war he gave one thousand two hundred concerts, one hundred and seventy of them being all-British. Two hundred and sixty six works by native composers were produced. The last twelve of the all-British concerts actually paid their way.

THE BRITISH LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

Scientific invention has reached such a pitch of excellence that now the world's distances are belittled and the sorrows of isolation assuaged. If proof of this is demanded, it can be found in the pages of to-day's Cologne Post. Lord Milner's great speech of yesterday can be read by us on the banks of the Rhine as soon as by our comrades on the banks of the Thames, and it is our privilege to speak of it undisturbed by the opinions of our contemporaries, uninfluenced by the party cries of their readers.

"Wake up, England!" we remember the words as if they had been spoken yesterday. England has awaked—in sorrow certainly, but just as certainly in strength and resolution. Lord Milner has most properly described the awakening. Whether or not it is true, as Seeley once said, that Great Britain "seems to have conquered and peopled half the nations of the world in a fit of absent-mindedness," it is certainly true that our eyes are open and our minds alert to the imperial ideal and its vast potentiality. The future can not be as the past, for have not our self-governing colonies, our Crown colonies, and our protectorates cemented in self-sacrifice the bonds of brotherhood? It was Turgot, that political philosopher of rare insight and acumen, who likened colonies to ripe fruit which only clings to the tree till full maturity is gained and then falls to the ground. It is due to him to remember that he prophesied the secession of our American colonies, but these days of war have given the lie to his metaphor as they have falsified the psychology of our enemies. England's extremity has been the noble opportunity of her colonies. These are colonies no longer. They are nations, nations with a real, conscious spirit of intense nationality; and it is their will that they should seek and save their souls within the Empire that bore them. What does this mean? It means, as Lord Milner shrewdly declares, that whilst men of all countries are canvassing the ideal of a League of Nations the British Empire has already achieved it in her colonies—a League not of artificial but of natural growth, a League possessed of a moral unity that is lifegiving.

Now there is an obvious and pertinent criticism that might be advanced against the thesis of Lord Milner's speech. If we focus our vision on our own happy family of nations, are we not making more difficult the formation of a larger and more useful family of nations? Are we not in danger of the dread disease of provincialism? In a word, granted that we and our colonies stand shoulder to shoulder in a firm and mutually profitable unity, does our very success not jeopardize the hopes of a greater League wherein no nation however strong shall have predominance? Such a criticism may have its point, and it certainly spells a warning. There must be nothing unbrotherly in the development of our Empire: that way lies danger. But if the development is guided by sure, strong, and statesmanlike hands, there can be little danger. None will ever forget that we had Allies who fought with us as closely as did our brothers from overseas, and none will ever decree that they shall be penalized in their legitimate aspirations.

There is a Scots' proverb which lays it down that a child must "creep before it gangs," and in that truism we see a clue. It seems to us that our task as an Empire is to show to the world a working model of a real league. Let us put the matter in homely fashion. We say to the nations: you are wondering how diverse peoples, living in far-distant parts of the world, cherishing each its own ideals, possessing each its own traditions, moulding each its own policy, can come together and keep together and work together; here we have a league which proves that such a unity is not a chimerical Utopia but is actually in being; here is hope, here is direction for the world's desire — a League of Nations. If there is substance in our argument, what follows? Surely it follows that the better, the more workable, the stronger our Empire can be made, the more it will help in the new era of brotherhood. What matters it if in that era our colonies seem less bound to us as they carve out their own national fortunes? The bonds that are surest are the bonds that are invisible.

We welcome, therefore, the ideal which Lord Milner outlines in his great speech. We, also, "want to see the resources of every part of Empire, in so far as they are not needed for development of that part, devoted not exclusively but first and foremost to build up the strength and prosperity of all other parts." The loyalty of the Dominions demands that anachronisms of administration shall be swept away, and our own self-interest demands that even in peacetime we shall have the help of those who wisely lead Colonial opinion. Colonial development is necessary for a world that is well-nigh bankrupt; and Lord Milner's happy phrase "the triangle of trade," points the way to economic salvation. There is a wise reticence in his discussion of preferential trading, and we carefully emulate his reticence. The greatest good of the greatest number must be for our Empire a leading principle of procedure, and our policy must lead the way to a world policy of nations in partnership. At present we are an imperium in imperio of peoples; and our imperium, happy in its past, is the augury of a wider and happier future.

DAWN.

IN THE ARMY OF THE RHINE.

As first the shadows slowly changed to grey,
Till through my window I could see the hills
Outlined against the sky, and, cooled with chills
Of dawn, the elm trees shivered as the day
Stole in: then suddenly the air was rent
By a wild chorus of the waking birds,
Who by the growing daylight had been stirred,
Singing in joy and praise of the event.
The day had come. I rose and breathed the air,
The first deep draught the glorious dawn distilled,
And watched the crimson streak extend its sway.
Then thought I of those fields so stripped and bare
Where silent crosses point where they were killed
Who raised for us the curtain of the day.

ESQUIRE DUKES.

TRAMWAY ACCIDENT.

A very nasty accident occured on April 9th near the Agger Bridge, Siegburg, when a private of the Bedfordshires attempted to board a tram whilst in motion. The man missed his footing and fell down beside the wheels of the last carriage which passed over him, completely severing the left leg just above the knee, and taking a large piece of bone out of the left hip. He was at once removed to hospital. It is understood his condition is very serious. The German tram is a much more difficult vehicle to board with safety than its English counterpart, and thie warning of this incident should be taken to heart, as it is not the first time that mishaps of this sort have occurred.

MARCH OF THE DEAD.

With reference to the letter which appeared in yesterday's issue we can now say that the poem will be recited at the Apollo Theatre, Schildergasse by Desmond Kelly of the "Clinics Costume Comedy Company," during the coming week.

QUESTION TIME.

OR UNCLE ARTHUR'S LETTER BOX.

PART II.

All questions by correspondents answered with promptitude, special attention being paid to those concerning demobilisation.

WORRIED — Q. I am a demobilization officer and find it very hard in demobilizing people to satisfy everybody's claims. What ought I to do?
A. Charity begins at home. Need I say more?

SUSSEX — Q. Which is the right way to eat beans? With a knife and fork, or with a knife alone?
A. The best people inhale them through a straw.

WAR BABY — Q. Since writing to you last week. I think I have found out what demobilization really is. Is it a flower?
A. Yes. Demobilization is a very rare growth indeed. Sown late in November, it is reputed to attain terrific results by the following summer, though it does not flower for two or three years. Some say that it is not a flower at all, merely a "plant," but this is not true. If a large number of "slips" are taken early in December, with luck a good result may be obtained from one of them.

UBIQUE — Q. Can one earn money without working for it?
A. The answer to this question is unavoidably held over pending earnest enquiries.

LOONY — Q. Are dachshunds supposed to be brave? fired a revolver at one the other day, and it never turned a hair.
A. Perhaps you missed it. Anyhow, it's nothing to write home about; I fired a revolver behind an orange this morning and it only looked round. (Ed. Help! Vater!)

BEDFORD — Q. What is the best way to open a ferret's cage without getting bitten?
A. Take an oyster knife and lever up the top; cover the occupant with pepper and vinegar, taking care to hold it by the beard in the left hand; then proceed in the ordinary way.

WAHN — Q. What is the best way to open an oyster?
A. Insert the hand very carefully and grasp it by the loose fur at the back of the neck; then withdraw the hand, taking care to keep out of reach of its sharp teeth.

ED. COL. POST — Q. Will the contributor of this article please send his name in to the News Editor?
A. It's no good. I've just been trying to borrow some myself.

"UBIQUE"

THE ELEVENTH COMMANDMENT.

THOU SHALT NOT FRATERNISE.

BY W. BARTHOLOMEW.

We were seated around the table in our billet at the corner of .... Strasse drinking in the words of wisdom uttered by Shorty.

Shorty had a grievance, and was taking no pains to conceal it. He nearly always had a grievance and he nearly always let everyone else know it; but in this case we felt that his grievance was ours and consequently we were more sympathetic than usual.

He said it was perfectly beastly and idiotic and unreasonable (translated to nearest equivalent in milder English). It reminded him of a celebrated advertisment for a certain brand of tinned tiddlers, "So near and yet so far."

To have a pretty girl give you the "glad" and not be able to retaliate was downright rudeness, he said. We agreed.

At this juncture "Waxey" showed symptoms of a desire for speech. He tilted back his chair, expanded his chest, took his cigarette out of his mouth and smiled broadly upon us in a benevolent "i-see-you-don't-know-how-to-go-about-it" sort of way.

It appeared he had fallen a victim to the charms of a damsel he had met in the Park. He had followed her home and discovered that her parents kept a small tobacco shop at the corner of ..... Strasse, and that his divinity sometimes assisted behind the counter. The rest was plain sailing, he said airily, you just went in and-er-bought things. I sniggered! I had been with him on one occasion when he had gone in and-er-bought things, and it struck me that it was anything but "plain sailing."

In defence of my broad smile I had to explain to the assembly that on a certain memorable occasion Waxey had taken me to see "his girl."

We had first ascertained by a prolonged stare into the window that she was behind the counter, and had then strolled carelessly into the shop. I had waited for Waxey to open a conversation.

After a lingering smile (calculated to inspire the damsel with a fervid admiration for his charms) he had enquired the price of a pipe that was lying in a glass-fronted cupboard behind the counter. She smiled at him for a moment and then softly murmured "Nicht verstehen."

It had ended by Waxey jabbing in the direction of the cupboard and saying "Pipe — pipe, how much?" Oh it was quite plain sailing.

Still, that was not the point I was reminded. The point was that if we could speak to them in any old language we were not allowed to, which (said General Opinion) was very unfair and decidedly galling.

There were countless pretty girls on hand to flirt with and we were metaphorically tied hand and foot.

At this point in the discussion the Orderly Corporal entered with the mail bag and the cheering news "there is nothing for you."

We looked at each other gloomily for a few minutes.

What were our best girls in England doing? Were they "fraternizing?"

EXTRACTS FROM THE LETTERS OF A PRODIGAL SON.

"BY HUSKY."

ON LOVE AND SPRING.

Life, if lived uneventfully, is a monotonous existence from the cradle to the grave. A merciful Providence, however, has invented various happenings in our life-times in order to break the monotony of it all. Such things as love, bankruptcy, battle, murder, and sudden death come into our lives occasionally and tend to buck our ideas up considerably though the two last can only happen tous once.

Spring has come, and the announcement often meets the eye to the effect that "In the Spring the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of Love!" That is a quotation which is brought to my notice in well nigh every paper I've seen during the last month or so. I have no reason to doubt the oft repeated statement, as I know perfectly well that the "loony" effects of Springtime have dragged many a good man to the altar by the scruff of his neck, so to speak, before he has been able to realise what really hit him. Love hits you unawares, and once it has put the strangle-hold on you it is a tin of pork and beans to a mishandled battery rissole that you've got to give in.

"In the Spring the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of Love!" I aw am sure of it! I am no longer young. I've been young long enough, — but my memory carries me back to the days when Spring was the same to me as it is now to those whose hearts are young and pulsing "full pelt" with the vein of youth.

In my days of long ago I have felt that skittish feeling of Spring, the feeling that compels little lambkins to gambol gymnastically and the giddy goats to perform evolution's like traditional cats on realistically-heated bricks.

Yea! I remember how, with great tenderness of heart, I used to look (in vain) for the first violet among the fag-ends, match-sticks and grey grass of Camberwell Green of memory sweet. It was there, 'neath a sickly sycamore tree, that I was first bewildered and beguiled by a maiden's charms. Her name was Polly Aliflopp, and the golden hair was hanging down her back. She was twelve, I was thirteen, and we both attended the same old school by the Green. She was fair to look upon, but, alas, her heart was fickle for, after I had spent my weekly school-money on toffee-apples for her dear sweet sake, she gave me the elbow, and cut me dead. But, bless you, she ate the apples first.

To resume. The Spring has come and the young green things are sprouting in the soft warm rays of the April sun. There are other young things, not necessarily "green," who are also in the Springtime of their lives.

As I sit here ruminating over the vagaries of Spring-time I can see the birds playing "Catch me, kiss me," in the little village churchyard across the road, and the constant chirping and twittering is a pleasant accompaniment to my random thoughts. Even the lowing of the calm-eyed oxen as they wearily wend their way homeward from freshly ploughed fields seems to me like the sound of great amens at the close of a perfect day.

Yes, the day is closing, the shadows are lengthening at the sun departs westward — to give light unto those who are in darkness over in the United States. From the small church comes the sweet singing of little German children and, as I live! — over there, in the shadow of the old church porch, a pair of lovers are sharing a last year's apple and, incidentally, giving me the pip.

O, Spring, here is thy sting! The season, the hour, the lovers, all remind me that I am far from home and am abiding in a land of strangers. In this season the lilac and hawthorne are all in bloom by Dulwich Lanes, and the flower-girls are selling fragant violets at the pavement by Sam Isaac's Fried Fish Emporium in the Old Kent Road. At this hour, in the same classic cause-way are all the pub-doors widely open; and the celebrated Rye at Peckham is the trysting place of hundreds, nightly, in the sweet Spring-time.

And the thought comes to my mind as I close my window against the chilly evening air that, after all, there is nothing half so sweet in life as Love's young dream.

PHILATELIC NOTES.

A quantity of unused Belgian stamps, particularly the large parcels-post issue, are on sale in Cologne at a considerably below-face value. These are part of the Hun booty from Belgium.

A few varieties of the War Stamps of the Allies have reached the Cologne dealers. They are chiefly the French issues for Dahomey and Congo, overprinted Togo, but a few British West-Indian are also on sale. The prices are higher than in England.

£3,500 was realised for a single stamp; the only copy kown to exist of the 5 cents, black on bluish-grey issued at the Post-Office, Alexandria, Virginia U.S.A. in 1846. This specimen was discovered in 1907, and of the same print on buff or brownish paper four examples are known.

The rarest stamp does not always realise the highest price. Of many stamps only one copy is kown, and prices range from £25 to £1250 according to dealers' catalogues, which do not quote prices for many rare stamps, that do not come into the market.

Low prices only should be paid for stamps bearing a "Gefälligkeitsstempel" or accommodation post-mark.

These are either remainders cancelled by the authorities of petty states and sold to dealers, or are privately cancelled with a stolen or faked office-stamp.

One set of Hungarian stamps is cancelled with a date 919 Jan. 31, the first figure of the year missing.

LIMPERICH PRESENTATION.

ARTILLERY MAJOR MADE RECIPIENT OF GOLD WATCH.

A happy gathering of the D 168 Battery took place in the Gymnasium Hall on Wednesday when the whole of the N.C.O.'s and men under B.S.M. Green including the reinforcements who have lately joined the unit, turned up smiling and with lungs well aired to give a fitting send off the their Major, who is shortly to be demobilized. Major Poole, who succeeded Major Tweedie as far back as June 1917, has had a brilliant and successful career throughout the compaign. When in action he was fearless and ever ready to surpress the onslaughts which have been directed against the "Don's" at various times. In the great advance made by the fourth Army, when the Canal Bank a Belle Eglise had been taken, the Major had a narrow escape being burnied in a dag-out for some hours with many of the Battery snaring the same fate.

In the field of sport he is ever ready to assist in the welfare and merriment of his men. The presentation was accompanied by happy little speeches. B.S.M. Green said:

"Sir, the Baitery have assembled for no other purpose this afternoon than to show the high esteem in which they hold you, and to show their appreciation for all you have done for them as their Commanding Officer. I have been asked by the N.C.O.'s and men to present you with this gold watch and Silver Cigarette case as a gift of remembrance which with all good wishes, we hope you will accept" (loud cheers).

Major Poole, who was somewhat moved, thanked them all, saying it had always been a great pleasure to be a B.C. with such men as he had had. He would always look upon the Officers, N.C.O.'s and Men of "B" Battery as old "pals". He hoped to meet them in England in connection with the activities of "Old Pal" associations which would probably be formed in due course. The Major was accorded three hearty cheers.

Immediately afterwards "A" and "B" Companies played the "Dons" at Football, a pleasant game, in ideal weather resulting in the "Dons" favour by 2—1.

"MATTHEW'S PASSION" AT GÜRZENICH HALL.

On Thursday and Friday next one of the best concerts which can be heard will be held at the Gürzenich Hall, Cologne. "Matthew's Passion" by Bach will be performed by the Town Orchestra with Mr. Abendroth, director of the Conservatorium as conductor. There will be a great demand for tickets, which are sold at Neubner's Library in the Hohe Strasse.

Notable Football Record.

185 SIEGE BATTERY PLAY 41 GAMES AND WIN 38.

The following record for Association Football should be of interest to our readers: —

185 Siege Battery R.G.A.

Plyd.	Won	Lost	Drawn	Goals for	Goals agst.
41	38	1	2	170	15

In view of this record, the above mentioned Battery would be glad of a challenge for a game with any unit in the Army of the Rhine which is not in too great excess of a battery strength (220).

93rd BRIGADE R.G.A. v. 6th BRIGADE R.G.A.

On Thursday afternoon at Mühlheim the above teams played a football match. The opening exchanges were largely in favour of the 93rd, and it looked as though it was to be a fight of their attack against the 6th defence. Goss scored a tame goal from a pass by Green and the 93rd led by this goal at half-time.

Early in the second half Green went through the home defence to add another goal for the 93rd. The game seemed safe for them when in a break-away the 6th's centre scored a fine goal from long range. This, however, only proved to show how good the 93rd forwards could be, Tully added a third goal on time: —

Final: — 93rd Brigade R.G.A. 3, 6th Brigade R.G.A. 1.

For the 93rd Mead had a day off, only handling on about three occasions. Yule and James were sturdy backs, while Kenyon was far and away the best half. The forwards were all good, with Staker the proved opportunist.

BONN ASSOCIATION FOOTBALL COMPETITION.

The semi-finals in this competition were played off on Wednesday and resulted in a win for the 121st Heavy Battery and 195th Siege Battery, respectively.

These two Batteries met for the final yesterday in the Hofgarten, Bonn, but the result had not come to hand when we went to press.

RAILWAY SETTLEMENT.

There was a further conference at the Board of Trade recently between the negotiating Committee of the National Union of Railwaymen and the Locomotive Engineers and the Railway Executive to clear up the outstanding points in the recent agreement. Sir Auckland Geddes presided in the absence, through illnes of Sir A. Stanley. One of the most important questions discussed was the standardisation of wages and conditions of service, which involves the position of the shopmen, of whom there are 100,000 not affected by the agreement. Other matters dealt with, it is reported, were those of payment for night work and overtime. Mr. J. H. Thomas stated later that the negotiations will be resumed to-day and probably to-morrow.

TO FOOTBALL MATCH BY 'PLANE.

STARS AND STRIPES.

1/4th CHESHIRES. OFFICERS v. SERGEANTS.

The renown of the 1/4th Bn. Cheshire as a sporting battalion is evidently spreading far and wide, for among the spectators at the football match at Heisel between the officers and sergeants of the Battery, was a visitor from the clouds. It is not every Battalion whose spectators 'plane over to watch the match, but then, it is not every Battalion who can provide such interest for their spectators, and Friday's match was no exception to the general rule. Though by far the inferior team the officers won by 4 goals to 3. but the game was by no means as uninteresting as the score suggests.

Immediately after the kick off there was a fine exhibition of passing between the officers' forwards, who pressed towards the sergeants' goal, and were repelled with equal vigour.

Then some very clever and tricky work was done by the half-backs and forwards of the sergeants' team, but all their clever foot and head work was marred by their wretched shooting, which without any doubt, lost them the game. At this period our aerial visitors were observed descending towards the field, and all interest was taken off the game for a few minutes while the airmen skimmed over the goal-post and landed gracefully behind the line.

Fast and Furious.

The game at this period was too fast and furious to lack interest, and the spectators were soon taking a keen interest in the game, and especially in the splendid combination work exhibited by Lt. Lloyd and 2nd Lt. Bottam. The sergeants' backs, however, saw that these two enterprising officers did not go too far and the ball was soon sent up field, to be pounced upon by the sergeants' forwards, who whisked it into the goal-mouth, but were thwarted in their efforts to put it through by the clever work of 2nd Lt. Agerty in goal. The ball was not absolutely cleared, and shortly afterwards Sgt. Wakefield sent in a beautiful shot, which the "goalie" punched out. The ball however was immediately pounced upon by Sgt. Brookes, who with lightning speed, put it between the sticks.

But the Sergeants' goal=keeper was allowed no rest and some beautiful shots were sent in, one particularly by 2 Lt. Shaw, of which Lieut. Mayall took advantage and scored, though he almost walked into the goal to do so.

The play then became fast and furious, and eventually Mr. Mayall scored his third goal making the final score: —

Officers . . . 4; Sergeants . . . 3.

WELSH RUGGERITES.

OFFICERS v. THE "REST" OF BATTALION.

A much debated argument as to whether the officers or the "Rest" of the Welsh were the better Ruggerites was finally settled on Thursday evening at Sechten, when a splendidly contested game ended in a narrow win for the officers by two tries to one.

The officers were the first to draw blood, and a brilliant handling movement saw Lt. Buckland cross wide out. This properly woke the "Rest" up, and their forwards overwhelmed their lighter opponents. From a fierce rush in the Officers 25 Cpl. J.M. Reese qualised.

The next score came from a piece of opportunism on the part of Lt. Hammond, who intercepted a pass and put Lt. Buckland over with the winning try. The officers proved too fleet and clever behind the scrum but this was counterbalanced in the pack where the "Rest" scrummaged far more soundly and always controlled the ball.

Final score:— Officers 2 Tries (6 points); "Rest" One Try (3 points).

BRILLIANT GOAL KEEPING.

The 2/4th Duke of Wellington Regt. and "Q" Battery R.H.A. played a football match at Erp on Tuesday, when a keenly contested game resulted in a draw, each side scoring one goal.

The game disclosed a brilliant exhibition of goal-keeping by the Battery's goal-keeper.

92ND FIELD AMBULANCE WHIST DRIVE.

The 92nd Field Ambulance held their usual weekly whist Drive on Friday night in the recreation room at Friedrich Wilhelmhütte, and a most enjoyable evening was spent. The following were the successful players: — 1st prize, Pte.R.Smith, R.A.S.(MT); 2nd prize, Pte.E.C.Weller, R.A.M.C.; 3rd prize, Pte.W.Hinchy, R.A.M.C.; Hidden No. (119), Pte.R.Flynn, R.A.M.C.; Booby prize, Pte. G.S.Abbs, R.A.M.C.

The prizes were presented to the winners by the Commanding Officer, Major R.W.P.Jackson, M.C., R.A.M.C.

5th M.G. v. 25th M.G. BATTALION.

A very interesting and keenly contested match was witnessed by a good crowd on Tuesday, between the above teams at SIEGLAR. The ground was very fast, which, with a very strong wind, made the ball very lively. The 5th M.G. Battn won the toss and playing with the wind soon began to press. The 25th Bn. were forced to concede a corner from which McKenna just failed to score, hitting the cross bar with a hard drive. The 25th Bn. were penned in their own half, but their goalkeeper played a great game repeatedly saving shots from all angles, the 5th doing everything but score.

Early in the second half the 25th broke away and the right back miskicking, the centre forward ran through and netted the only goal of the match.

The 5th continued to press until the last but failed to score. Play was fast throughout and some fine headwork was displayed by both teams.

LUCKY ENGINEERS.

The 92nd Field Ambulance and the 565 A.T. Coy., R.E. played a football match at Friedrich Wilhelmshütte on Thursday. A good crowd of spectators were provided with an excellent game, and the Engineers were lucky to win the match by the odd goal in 5.

Final score:

565 A.T. Coy. 3; 92nd Fld. Amb. 2.

LORD HOPE VICTORIOUS.

CAPTAIN KAYE DEFEATED AT 37th GREEN.

The active Service Golf Tournament was concluded at Sandy Lodge on Friday, when Lord Hope beat Captain Kaye at the 37th green. The morning was overcast but fine. The following are details of the match: —

Hope won the first hole (5/6) but lost the second (5/4) by putting badly. The third was halved in a good four. Kaye took the next two holes. The tenth was holed with a four yards, putt, the players then being square.

The eleventh was halved in 5. Kaye again led the thirteenth, where his opponent's approach was weak. Hope found the ditch at the fifteenth, and became two down. Kaye missed a foot put for a half at the sixteenth. Taking three putts at the seventeenth green, Hope lost the hole. At the home hole, with a half in four, the first round resulted: — Kaye two holes up.

Kaye went round in 81, Hope in 84.

Beautiful Mashie Shot.

At the 19th, Hope reached the green in three with a beautiful mashie shot. Kaye replied with a grand approach and halved in 5. At the 20th Kaye bunkered and took 2 to recover, Hope winning in 4 to 6. Kaye at the turn (27th hole) won 4 to 5, then being 4 up. Scores: Kaye 38; Hope 40;

On the homeward journey the first three holes were halved. At the 33th Hope won by 4 to 3, the scores then being Kaye 43; Hope 38; At the 37th, Hope reached the green with a long cleek and perfect pitch. Kaye took his brassey for the second drive, and had an easy loft for the green, but an unfortunate socket into a bunker left Hope the winner of one of the most exciting finishes on record.

ENGLISH COUNTY CRICKET.

PROSPECTS FOR COMING SEASON.

It has been decided definitely to revive the Clifton Cricket Festival this year in the last week of August, the matches being with the Australians, Old Cliftonians, and Somerset. The match with Somerset will be in addition to the County Championship matches. Bristol's financial effort for the county club is now very little short of £3,000.

The county professionals have been posted as follows: — Ellis and Parker to Clifton College, Mills and Huggins to Cheltenham College, Dipper to Gloucester, and Smith to Bristol.

SOMERSETSHIRE COUNTY CLUB.

The Somerset County Club will have a available this season most of their 1914 players. Chidgey will keep wicket, and it is hoped that Bridges will be able to play. Captain E. S. M. Poyntz, although unable to captain the team owing to military duties, will play, and other amateurs available will be Mr. A. D. Rippon, Mr. A. E. Rippon, Mr. J. C. White, Captain J. C. W. McBryan, Mr. B. D. Hylton-Stewart, Mr. F. C. Marshall, Mr. B. L. Bisgood, and Mr. J. D. Harcombe. A number of promising colts will play in the trial games.

LEICESTERSHIRE COUNTY CRICKET.

LEICESTERSHIRE COUNTY CLUB.

At the annual meeting of the Leicestershire County Club, held at Leicester, Admiral Beatty was unanimously elected president. Matches have been arranged out and home with Derbyshire, Gloucestershire, Lancashire, Northamptonshire, Notts, Warwickshire, and Yorkshire, and also a match with the Australian Imperial Forces team. The prospects for the coming season are considered very bright.

1/4th ROYAL SCOTTISH FUSILIERS V. 11th ROYAL SCOTS.

The above-mentioned teams played a football match at Hilden on Thursday before a good attendance. The first half was very evenly contested and resulted in no scoring.

At the restart the 11th R.S. pressed persistently and their efforts were rewarded with a goal, Mackie heading the ball into the net. Good work by the Fusiliers' backs kept the ball well forward giving the forwards plenty of scope. Ultimately a cross by Harris was turned to excellent advantage by Goldie whe scored with a beautiful shot. Later Smith tested the R.S. Custodian who could only partly clear the shot, Capt. Corrigan rushing it through. The Fusiliers pressed hard up to the finish.

Result: — R.Sc. Fus, ... 2
11th Royal Scots . 1.

The first trials for pointers and setters will be resumed this Spring over the Hon.E.G. Pretyman's Estate, Orwell Park, Ipswich, for the first meeting of the Kennel Club and International Gun Dog League which have joined hands.

"MOKES" AT A MEET.

TRAILS LOST AND FOUND AT 36th BRIGADE PAPER-CHASE.

A CONAN DOYLE TOUCH.

There was a field of 100 on Wednesday when the 36th Brigade R.F.A., Light Division, held a very successful paper-chase. The meet was at Mariaweiler and the weather most favourable for the game — sunny, with a cool breeze.

The hares had 15 minutes' start and then the trail was picked up outside the village. From the village we had a short gallop to the edge of a wood after which the trail was lost.

There was a two minutes' hurried search of the locality, and then two farm-labourers, working in the field, were bombarded with every language in the world but German. However we managed to grasp the fact that 150 metres through the wood there was a cart track, and sure enough when we reached the said track there was the elusive paper.

Four Cross Tracks.

The track led up hill and the paper was easy to follow until we came to four cross tracks with a trail leading up each one. On one track the paper was obviously old stuff from a former chase. Then one of the hounds dismounted and with a Conan Doyle touch examined the date portion of the torn newspapers (No! not copies of "The Cologne Post", which all got "demobbed", to England after a day's active service), and reported the two other trails new.

As the majority of hounds had taken the track to the left we determind to follow suit and after a 15 minutes' gallop down hill through the firs the paper again came to a stop. Here we all separated and a 20 minutes' search was made in all directions.

No one for a minute thought the hares had doubled back on their own tracks. Eventually some one struck the idea and off we went again. The delay had given the animals a good rest and we reached the top of the hill again in good style.

Hares Spotted.

One great feature of the afternoon was the splendid running of some mules. There was a laugh when "mokes" turned up at the meet, but the long-eared chums so much abused in "The Cologne Post" took their revenge for the insult by flying past their scoffers at every gallop.

On behalf of the 71st Bty., I would like to thank the organiser for a glorious afternoon's sport, but may I suggest that at future chases tracks with old trails should be studiously avoided by the hares because too many false trails are very tiring for the animals.

CHASER.

FEARSOME TENNIS AT QUEEN'S CLUB.

COVERED COURT SEMI-FINALS.

Some interesting tennis was provided on Friday, when competitions in the Queen's Covered Court Championship were continued.

In the Gentlemen's Singles (third round) Capt. W. Washburn, America, beat Mr. S. N. Doust, Australian, 2/6, 7/5, 1/6, 6 0. According to a Reuter telegram, the encounter was a fearsome one, wherein Doust led throughout until the American got the first game in the 5th set, after which he kept his opponent at the back of the court, his powerful serving and diagonal vollying being features of the game.

Mr. Gerald Patterson, Australia, beat the Hon. F.M.B. Fisher, New Zeeland, 7/5, 6/2, 6/3. Mr. Fisher led 5/4 — 40/30 in the first set, but afterwards, the winner gave a brilliant exhibition of hard hitting.

Mr. Patterson thus becomes a semi-finalist, and will meet Mr. R.E. Beamish, who qualified by beating Mr. G.H. Todd, ex-South African Champion. 4/6, 7/5, 6/3, 6/3.

The other semi-finalists are: Washburn v P.M. Davson. Patterson is generally expected to meet the holder, M.J.G. Ritchie.

The finalists in the Ladies singles are: Mrs. Lambert, Mrs. Chambers, Miss Ryan and Miss Holman.

In the Men's double, Capt. Gharawood, Australia, and Mr. J.T.C. Watt beat the brothers Yencken, Cambridge. 6/3, 6/4, 6/1.

Mr. A.B. Jones, Australia, is at present unable to take part in the Championship, owing to indisposition.

M. G.'S AT SPORT.

3rd. BATTALION'S VERSATILITY.

Following the move to Riehl Barracks sport seems to have claimed considerable attention from the Gunners. Six friendly football matches in three days have provided a hundred odd men with aching limbs and a desire for more. A Company Competition commenced yesterday and proceeds daily whilst other interesting matches are provided when Officers meet Sergeants; Corporals attack privates; Officers and sergeants meet the Battalion team and last but not least, the 4th Division Draft met the remainder of the 3rd Battalion. The decision of this latter match is quite open.

On Wednesday next a Novices' Boxing Tournament will be held in the Dining Hall. Teams of six will be matched. Each man entering the ring obtains 1 point and the winner takes 2 points Fights are one round only. The "Apostle of Physical Jerks" is reputed to completely understand the noble art, and there is plenty of material to work upon in the Battalion.

An Officer with an arithmetical tendency has demonstrated the possibility of creating three tennis-courts on a portion of the Battalion "square" which will in no way interfere with football matches or the smart Army Corps guard which is being furnished.

Cricket, Swimming gala, athletic meeting and cross-country running are subjects chalked up for early consideration.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

(With an Occasional Entertainments Note.)

Carnival at Coblenz.

Everyone is hugely tickled by the poster that now decorates the hoardings in all occupied Germany, announcing the bumper three-days carnival to be held at Coblenz shortly, by our American cousins. As a comprehensive portrayal of the many bright attractions that go to make up the show, the poster is a masterpiece of genuine humour, eleverly drawn. The printers, too, have achieved wonders in their admirable reproduction, in three colours. If the function itself is half as creditable as is the agency adopted for its announcement, it is bound to meet with generous support and complete approbation.

Summer Sports.

The Army Headquarters and Troops Sports Committee is still very busy arranging a programme of warm weather sports. Its members foregathered in solemn conclave once again yesterday evening and discussed (among other subjects!) cricket, boxing, tennis, boating, athletics and cross-country running. Suggestions (useful and otherwise) were forthcoming in large numbers, but the only definite decision arrived at was an agreement as to the composition of the sub-committees to represent each arm of the Service. It was agreed that names of suitable candidates for seats on the sub-committees should be invited from units.

A Rhine Rowing Restriction.

Unless you have the swimming abilities of a Captain Webb or a Miss Finney, your prospects of skimming over the sparkling wavelets of the Rhine are mighty remote. Somebody has ruled that before you may hire a rowing boat, you must first go through the trivial formality of swimming 200 yards against the current. Two hundred yards, mark you! Years and years ago — before the war, in fact — I was in the happy position of being able to have many an early morning dip in the Thames. That experience taught me that it would require the efforts of a very strong swimmer indeed to negotiate two hundred yards even of that river, the current of which is considerably slower than that of the Rhine. Surely the test is too severe. I submit that a man who could propel himself one hundred yards up-stream in the Rhine would be sufficiently capable of looking after himself if, by some unhappy chance, he became immersed.

Somnolent Siegburg.

Practically everyone I have met who hails from Siegburg, remarks upon the bracing atmosphere of Cologne. It seems extraordinary that there should be such a marked difference in the climatic conditions of two towns situated at no great distance from each other and yet, only last evening further evidence was forthcoming that such is the case. I was discussing the inevitable subject of sports with a friend of mine whose station is at Siegburg, and he bore out previous reports of the drowsiness that seems to overcome everyone whose duty necessitated a more or less permanent abode in the neighbourhood of that busy little town. A football match, played at Siegburg, he said, was one of the most severe tests of endurance he could recommend.

Whether the circulation of these reports is part of a carefully designed conspiracy to influence an early move from this none too attractive station, on the part of certain of our Rhine watchers, I cannot, of course, say, but it is a fact that the mere writing of this paragraph is rendering the stifling of persistent yawns a most difficult proceeding.

Recreation Room Requirements.

Here is a bit of good news for those harassed people who are in charge of recreation rooms. There is a bunch of stuff, in the way of indoor games (chess, house, ludo, snakes and ladders and dominoes among them), that is waiting for somebody to ask for it. The number of these are limited so that it must be a case of "first come, first served." If any institution is badly off for games of the kind mentioned, the individual in charge should make aplication for the remedy to the superintendent P. and R.T. Cologne.

"Housey — 'ousey."

The mention of the game of house prompts me to point out that this popular pastime is not a new game, especially invented for the Army since the war, as a number of people might suppose. The game itself is as old as the hills, but a new title has recently given it a new lease of popularity. The crews of old sailing ships that sailed the deep blue sea many years ago played a game, the rules of which were identical. But in those days it was known as "Lotto" and maintained that name until, I believe, 1914.

THE RAMBLER.

DESCENDANT OF KINGS.

The romance of a throne is recalled by the death of Rugby's oldest solicitor. Theodore Marc Wratislaw, aged 88. He was for 46 years clerk for the Rugby Council.

The family are descended from the Kings of Bohemia and Hungary, the founders of Prague, Breslau, and Cracow. Deceased's father, the late William Ferdinand, Count Wratislaw, fled to England in 1770, having participated in the Czech rising, and became French master at Rugby School.

"ROYAL IRISH KARELIANS."

RUSSIAN WAACS.

The "Red Finn Legion," about 1,500 strong, whose recent tendency to insubordination has been checked, is stationed round Kandalashka, the port of the White Sea, on the Murman railway. It is commanded, says Reuter, by a Canadian colonel, whose powerful personality and strong will have built them up into a valuable body of troops. They have their own native officers, who are in turn controlled by British officers on the colonel's staff. For the last year they have been patrolling the Finnish frontier, along which we have a succession of outposts.

The Karelians, always known as the "Royal Irish Karelians" from the fact that their commanding officer is a colonel in the Royal Irish, are quartered around Kem, far south of Kandalaksha, and muster about 4,000. At the end of last year recruiting in Karelia was so keen that it was actually found necessary to refuse volunteers.

Karelian "W.A.A.C.s" are engaged in transport and fatigue duties. Two of these women were poling a boat up a river with supplies for a distant outpost when another canoe with three men aboard dashed out from an inlet with the intention of seizing the rations.

The two women stood up in their boat and laid about with their poles until all three of their aggressors were either killed or drowned. This deed was officially recognised by General Maynard, who awarded each of the girls the Military Medal.

Dressed in regulation khaki, with an Irish shamrock (cut out from Maconochie tins) as their badge, the regiment presents a fine appearance on parade.

IMPRESIONS FROM GERMANY.

CONSEQUENCES OF MUNICH UPHEAVAL.

The following is an extract from a recent issue of the Kölner Tageblatt.

"The Bavarian Revolution has given birth to great anxiety in all the political circles of Northern Germany. The results for Bavaria, for the late German empire, and for our already desperate international position are obvious. Well-do-do families arrive in great number from Southern Germany in Berlin bringing just what they can save of their fortune. In the last few days the emigration of lower-class people from Bavaria has been indeed great.

Amongst the peasants, only the most radical elements are supporting the new revolution, the others will keep aside resentfully and starve the new eccentric Munich. Their intention to become separated from old Bavaria, if things look too bad, has appeared so obviously in the last few weeks that the Munich dictators may not hope any more to keep together the separatist partes. The saddest consequence of the Soviet dictature is the threatening civil war. Loud and free people excite to pogroms against the Jews and the Bourgeoisie in Munich streets.

Will the new commissaries of the people find it possible to keep in hand the human beast left free? They are themselves speaking an official language, which whips up the passions and excites the parties against each other. They spoke in their proclamation of the Berlin Cabinet as of a contemptible government. They use the actual dissension to stir up the cicatrix of German internal discord with the Bavarian dislike for everything Prussian. A sad and dangerous game!

On the other hand the other German states are weakened in an irreparable manner by Bavaria's jump in the dark. If we suppose that the actual Berlin Congress of Councils would lead to a similar communist experiment and to the fall of the democratic government, the new dictators of Berlin and Munich could not reach an agreement so quickly as the apparatus which has familiarized itself with the work. They could not work together as it is so necessary to do in this most dangerous hour for Germany.

And there lies the damnation and the unexpiable fault of the Bavarian revolutionaries, who dishonour and weaken Germany, in a moment when she should summon up the rest of her confederative strength. Do the Munich Soviets believe that the Foreign Countries will accept with polite toleration which the bolshevist make up of Bavaria? The close neighbours of Bavaria, Switzerland, and Bohemia, will they not anxiously move off and take measures against contamination?

And the Entente? Will the Entente consider the Soviet Republic of Bavaria as stipulated at Spa, Treves and Rotterdam? Will they still expect Bavarian Representatives at Versailles? Is the solidary responsibility of Bavaria for all obligations with Germany takes over at the peace signature, still remaining? Do the Munich Soviet government believe that, allied with Moscow and Budapest, they will be able to tame down the Entente by bolshevist threatenings? Will it not be the contrary, and will not the Entente, according to the old principle, divide ut imperes, put their knife on the breasts of every single German state? The Bavarian Revolution has not only broken the interior German order, as far as there was ohne, but it has put in question all the international agreements of the time of the armistice, all the food providing contracts, and the Peace itself.

We are standing in front of an abyss; no, we are already falling, and only a gracious fate, perhaps a benevolent humour of the adversary, or the fear to be dragged along the same way, can save us.

BOLSHEVISM IN HUNGARY.

According to news received from Budapest by the le Journal, all the news sent to the world by the Hungarian news agencies are false.

The famous alleged wireless conversation between Bela Kun and Lenin never happened, these being invented by Bela Kun, whose real name is Moritz Kohn.

The liberty of the Press has been suppressed and revolutionary tribunals have been organised. Three Bolshevist judges are sitting who know nothing about law. Denunciation is flourishing at Budapest. The Soviets have requisitioned without indemnity all private property, including jewellery, objects of art, and precious pictures. In many cases these objects have been sold a few hours later by the agents of the Government. The bank counts have been sequestrated.

Three classes have been formed in the population.

1.—Mental workers salary yearly 36.000 crowns maximum.
2.—Industrial and merchants salary 24,000 crowns maximum.
3.—Workmen salary 16,000 crowns minimum.

And yet the Government has not the faintest idea how to raise the money.

The doctors have been nationalised and are considered as Government officials. A public office has been created where the people who have need of a doctor can apply. The persons on the list already number 37,000.

Political violence is manifest everywhere, and 160 arrests have been made. Pater Lolok, Superior of the Order of the Lazarists has been shot, because a Russian rifle was found at his house.

LUDENDORFF AND WELLINGTON.

FROM THE DEMOKRATICHE ZEITUNG.

The behaviour of Marshall Ludendorff in the last few years and until the last few days, reminds one of a British answer to such a behaviour.

The British general, Duke of Wellington once tried to use his military glory and services to bend the constitution of the British nation. He was then told: "Duke of Wellington, Victor in Spain, Victor at Waterloo, thou wilt never be victor of the British nation."

PALM SUNDAY TRADITION.

The British Authorities have granted permission for the Germans to hold their usual procession to day. This procession is called the "Roemer fahrt," and constitutes an old tradition with the people of Cologne.

In Rome, under Constantine the Great, the Christians who hitherto had hid themselves in the catacombs, on Palm Sunday made a procession to the seven main churches of Rome, to thank God for the peace given to them at last.

This tradition was taken up by the people of Cologne. In honour of the apostles, twelve men are elected to walk with the procession, and these men must be both poor and old. On the following Thursday they go to the Cathedral to have their feet washed, afterwards being provided with a modest lunch and three marks.

During the French Occupation this custom ceased to exist but has been since revived.

The procession will leave the Cathedral at 1.30 p.m., to which place it will return after a tour through the streets of the town.

THE GERMAN COLONIES.

At the Paris Conference the discussion as to the disposal of Germany's former Colonies did not proceed without disclosing considerable divergence of views between America and the two great colonizing nations, France and Britain.

Britain's centuries of success as a colonizing power entitled her to speak with every authority and eventually a satisfactory provisional arrangement was decided upon.

The proof of Germany's brutal illtreatment of the native races under her control, the conditions of semi-slavery to which German rule had reduced them, was sufficient to obtain a unanimous decision against their being returned to their former misrulers. Speaking at the Colonial Institute last week, Lord Leverhulme, the great British manufacturer, in referring to this decision pointed the moral of the German defeat, the overthrow of militarism as introducing the prospect of a new era in which government would control "more and more by the silken cord of ideals and justice and less and less by the heavy chain of military might."

We are all idealists at times but at the present moment the public in general in all allied countries naturally places the attainment of a sound preliminary peace before ideals regarding colonization of native countries, which seem to them to be too far away to have any bearing on the immediate or even distant future of their own lives.

It has been declared that one of the reasons why Germany may not in future govern native races, is the fear that she may train them into a huge military force for the purposes of attaining the objects which she has just failed to achieve.

We seem to remember that this theory was first advanced by General Smuts, but whatever may be its modicum of truth, it does not make a direct and immediate appeal to peoples tired of war, fretting to resume their peaceful occupations, and assured by their Governments that the League of Nations will make war impossible.

There is nevertheless, a far greater reason why the Allied peoples should, in view of the approaching economic competition, refuse under any conditions to allow Germany the control of any race outside her own.

The majority of people in the world are of the working classes, and to the working classes in the future, will belong the power of giving to the peoples of the world, the "equality of opportunity" which is the basis of all social law. On them will depend the successful upbuilding of the industries of each country in fair and honest competition with one another.

But what do we mean by fair and honest competition? There are two main factors in international trade competition; cost of raw material and cost of manufacture, the latter mainly based on the standard of wages paid. Both these points interest us in connection with the future of the German Colonies.

Black labour is employed by all countries possessing colonies, but any single country which is willing and intends to exploit the native population of its colonies as slave-labour, not only infringes the social laws demanded as the minimum human right for all civilised countries, and countries under the control of civilised nations, but offers a direct threat to the main principles of trade unionism.

To look further. A country that is willing to exploit slave labour in order to produce raw material at a less cost than its competitors, will not hesitate to carry the economic argument so far as to undermine the foundations of trade unionism by employing cheap black labour for manufacturing purposes at a scale which will close every factory employing labour at a fair minimum wage.

The importance to the working man and every trade unionist is manifest.

The retention of the late colonies by Germany would in the inevitable economic struggle for supremacy, constitute as great a menace to the ideals of trade unionism as was Prussian Militarism to the Peace of the World.

GERMAN AND RUSSIAN SPARTACISTS.

The Daily Chronicle correspondent learns from an absolutely reliable source that a formal secret treaty of alliance exists between the German Spartacists and Russian Bolshevists. It was concluded on January the 5th between Liebknecht and Radek. The act of signing took place in the room occupied by Rosa Luxemburg. By it Lenin undertook to recognise Liebknecht as president of the German Soviet republic; to furnish important funds and agents for Spartacist propaganda; order the Soviet armies to take the offensive and cross the German frontier; to support simultaneous Spartacist risings in Berlin. Liebknecht pledged himself to establish a Soviet government in Germany immediately upon his advent to power; to observe faithfully and to put into practice all the teachings of Lenin's doctrines; raise a Red Army of five hundred thousand men to be placed under the supreme command of the Commissary for War at Moscow.

The Murder of Liebknehht and Rosa Luxemburg, which occurred soon after the signing of the treaty, disarranged the concerted plan.

The existence of the treaty is known to the German government.

It is assumed that Ebert's government, in order to intimidate the Entente, is even toying with the idea of ratifiying it. It is said that this strange document was produced during the recent negotiations between Count Brockdorff Rantzau, the Foreign Minister and the Independent Socialists.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary, limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompamed by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

LIVERPOOL DOCK HORSES.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir. — Could you spare me a small space in your paper to allow us if possible to have an argument settled which has been raised time after time in our mess.

We have several corporals here who come from Liverpool, and they state that on the docks there, one horse will draw seven tons ten cwt. on a trolly weighing two tons ten cwts.

Many of us who have been among some of the best horses in England don't believe it, so if any of your readers could give it the lie or otherwise we should be very grateful just to have the matter settled. They also state that one horse does one or two journeys every day.

If you will publish this in your paper we shall esteem it a favour.

"DEERHOUND, GREYHOUND, PINCHER."

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—Seeing your advertisement in The Cologne Post of 6th April for "Deerhound, Greyhound, or Pincher," I beg to state that I am in possession of one of the latter-named dogs. I could forward dozens of testimonials from soldiers whose rations from time to time have been stolen by this fine specimen of the canine tribe. Having considered the matter of value with co.-owners of this dog, I am instructed to say that we are prepared to subscribe and give a present of fifty marks with the dog. Terms non returnable.

Hoping to receive reply which will save the dog from being kicked to death. C.R.

OFFICERS' CLUB, POPERINGHE.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—Might I make a correction in the statement appearing in your issue of April 9th, with reference to the employment of W.A.A.C.s at the Officers' Club, Poperinghe. The girls were Belgian, mostly natives of Pop, but I quite agree as to their suberb behaviour under shell fire and particularly on one or two bad bombing nights I have in mind. Possibly the fact that they spoke English very well may have deceived the Lieutenant. J.

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor could like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Questions are invited and will be answered as promptly and as authentically as is possible. — Ed.]

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We are continually receiving numerous questions which should not come to us at all because they can be dealt with far more easily and quickly with the unit. All matters concerning rate of pay, pensionable service, demobilization, and so on, should be submitted in the usual way to commanders of units. In many cases the Company or Battery C.Q.M.S., knowing all the facts of the case could give an answer immediately. Why write to us?

Take the question of demobilization for example. In every unit there is someone, generally a Demobilization Officer detailed as such, who has all the facts as his finger ends, or can turn them up from the very latest "Instructions" in two minutes.

He is the proper person to appeal to in all such cases and only needs to be asked.

Sending such queries to us wastes the enquirer's time, wastes our time, and we are so busy with a thousand-and-one other things, and moreover is against all sorts of regulations.

Why call in a third party when the matter is obviously one between two parties who know all the facts of both sides, and for which the Army Council have provided proper facilities.

We are at all times ready and willing to answer general questions, but personal questions should be dealt with in the proper manner.

Will correspondents please note this, and not call upon an overworked staff to do a job quite outside its province, and for which ample machinery has already been provided by the Army authorities.

We are so busy answering general questions, that it will be impossible even to acknowledge the kind of correspondence indicated in the above paragraphs.

FURTHER SERIOUS OUTBREAKS IN EGYPT

ARMENIANS MASSACRED

SAXON WAR MINISTER MURDERED

ENGLAND'S STERN WARNING TO AUSTRIA

SITUATION IN EGYPT.

ARMENIAN MASSACRES.

Cairo 7th April. Remarkable scenes are following General Allenby's proclamation announcing the decision to release four deported Nationalist leaders. A particularly striking feature is the presence of Egyptian women in gaily bedecked motors, clapping hands and waving flags from the windows. The behaviour of the crowds leaves nothing to be desired and in many instances British officers were cheered. Reuter.

Cairo 9th April. A communiqué states that in the course of the demonstrations on the 7th the crew of a motor lorry, which was attacked, were obliged to fire, causing some casualties. On the same night, during disturbances near Shepheard's Hotel, shots were exchanged, two being killed and four wounded. On the afternoon of the 8th April a British officer who was peacefully endeavouring to quell a disturbance was maltreated but was rescued. Firing ensued, several being killed and wounded. The mob also murdered two British soldiers in Abdin-square. The situation has hitherto been controlled without repressive measures, but the communiqué concluded with a grave warning. Reuter.

Reuter's correspondent, describing the scenes, says that a remarkable change in the attitude of the crowd has occurred during the past three days. The demonstrators on the 7th April were chiefly swayed by joyousness. In many cases British officers were cheered. There were many amusing scenes. A band ensconced itself on the roof of one tram, while Arab dancing girls performed on the top of another. The town resembled a circus more than anything else.

The scenes on the 8th were even more extraordinary. Continuous processions took place amid incessant cheering. The native attitude became aggressively exultant in the belief that the British occupation was ending. In some cases British officers and soldiers were jeered at and spat upon.

Hostile demonstrations developed on the 9 th. The mob endeavoured to barricade the approaches to the entrance of Abdin-square. A few machine-gun bursts dispersed them and armoured cars were held ready for action. The number of the casualties is unknown. Order was generally restored an hour later but pickets were posted and mounted patrols rode through the streets. Later in the day shops reopened.

Cairo, 10th April. Thirteen Nationalist leaders, including three Copts, are leaving for Marseilles to morrow. The leaders were interviewed by Reuter's correspondent who states that their departure will greatly calm the passions of the people. The leaders spoke in the highest terms of praise of General Allenby.

Cairo, 11th April. Many Armenians were massacred during the rioting on Wednesday and Thursday. The number of victims has not yet been established, but on the 10th fifteen bodies were taken from houses in Abdin-square alone by members of the Ambulance Corps. Many terror-stricken Armenians took refuge in the European suburb of Heliopolis, whereupon the local policemen and watchmen abandoned their posts, apparently shirking the responsibility.

The military in Cairo up to the evening of the 10th had collected two thousand five hundred Armenians. They were lodged in various buildings under military protection. Reuter.

Cairo, 13th April. Serious rioting has taken place during the past three days in Cairo, the mob chiefly attacking Armenians, of whom they killed thirty-eight and seriously injured a hundred. All Armenians are now under military protection. Collisions between the troops and the mob resulted in numerous casualties among the rioters. Twenty-two civilians were killed and forty seven taken to the hospital, a large proportion of the casualties being due to outrages by the mob. Five British soldiers, including two unarmed Indians, have been murdered. The mob attacked the troops at Alexandria and were fired upon, seventeen being killed and many wounded. Order was finally restored. Reuter.

NORTH RUSSIA RELIEF FORCE.

BRIGADE COMMANDERS.

It is announced by the War Office that the first brigade of the North Russia Relief Force will be commanded by Brig.-Gen.G.W.St. George Grogan V.C., C.M.G., D.S.O., the Worcester Regiment, and the second Brigade by Brig.-Gen.L.W. de V. Sadleir Jackson, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., 9th Lancers.

ENGLAND'S WARNING TO AUSTRIA.

A Vienna telegram dated April 13th states that the British military representative, Mr. Cunningham, informed the Foreign Secretary, Herr Bauer, yesterday that he was authorised by the British Government to declare officially and expressly that imports of goods, including food stuffs and raw materials, would immediately be entirely stopped if disturbances of order occurred in German-Austria.

Replying to a question, Mr. Cunningham said that the British Government's reason for this drastic step is the interest which the Allied Powers have in undisturbed utilisation of the lines of communication which pass through German-Austrian territory to friendly Allied new states.

SAXON WAR MINISTER MURDERED.

Dresden wounded soldiers receiving treatment at Dresden hospitals congregated outside the Saxon War Ministry, on Saturday, and sent a deputation to interview the War Minister in order to lodge a protest against inadequate pay. Upon the Minister's refusal to grant an interview the crowd stormed the entrance and Government troops who were summoned to the scene refused to attack the wounded men.

Machine gun fire was opened on the Ministry. The demonstrators subsequently forced their way into the building and dragged the Minister into the street. After maltreating him they hurled him from a bridge into the Elbe, frustrating his efforts to swim ashore by firing at him with rifles. The Minister was drowned.—Reuter.

The official version of the murder of the Saxon War Minister Heuring says that an imprudent young soldier who was employed in the Ministry as an orderly threw without orders and on his own initiative two live hand grenades into the light well of the building. A rumour arose that Heuring had given orders to throw hand grenades. The rumour however, was absolutely without foundation, as the Minister and those with him were just as startled by the explosion as were others and had first to find out its cause. Nevertheless, on the strength of this false rumour, the Minister was murdered in a brutal manner.

After the occurence three uniformed men pushed their way into the building, declaring they were members of the Red Soldiers League. One had only a defective knowledge of German, which proves, according to the official statement, that the entire occurrence was influenced by Russian agents.—Reuter.

Many troops are now being despatched to Dresden with the object of speedily and definitely restoring law and order there. — Reuter.

Dresden 12th April. A state of siege has been proclaimed. The entire Saxon Ministry has issued an announcement stigmatising the murder of Heuring as bestial and necessitating sharp measures on behalf of the Government.

Later. — The Ministry has promised a deputation of soldiers that all their demands would be granted. — Reuter.

TURKISH GOVERNOR HANGED.

Constantinople, 12th April. At the trial concerning the Armenian massacres Governor Kemal was sentenced to death and was publicly hanged at Stamboul. Ex commander of gendarmerie Jozghad was sentenced to fifteen years imprisonment. Reuter.

GERMAN REVOLUTIONS.

Weimar, 13th April. The Munich Soviet Government has been overthrown by the garrison. The Bavarian Government has sent Deputy Vogel to Munich invested with supreme authority. All Soviet decrees are annulled.—Reuter. Copenhagen.

The communist Levien is said to have gone to Switzerland, taking with him State funds to the amount of two million marks. Sixteen communist leaders have been arrested.

It is not unlikely that the seat of Government will be permanently removed from Munich, probably to Ansbach.

GERMAN STRIKE NEWS.

In the Ruhr district the strikes are subsiding Another twenty thousand miners resumed work yesterday.

The strike at Krupp's is practically at an end.

At Dusseldorf, Government troops stormed the barricades of the Spartacists and took fifty-three prisoners.

Martial law has been proclaimed at Danzig.

WHEN THIEVES FALL OUT.

A Stockholm telegram says that the Soviets of Voronesh and Kursk are practically in a state of war as the result of the Voronesh Soviet paying Kursk for wheat in alleged forged credit notes. A cordon is established along the frontier.

The Central Government has evinced great concern in this quarrel, since it embarrasses military operations. A commissary has been sent from Moscow to arbitrate.—Reuter.

(Veronesh, or Veronej, is a province of 2500 square miles lying about 300 miles to the S.E. of Moscow. Kursk has an area of 18 000 square miles, and lies to the West of Veronesh.)

POLAND AND DANZIG.

Berlin, 11th April. The Thorn correspondent of the Berlin Tageblatt says that the bitterness of the Poles at the Allies decision not to land Haller's army at Danzig has risen to the highest pitch. Busts of the emperors Frederick the Great and William have been smashed. In a proclamation to the Polish peoples the Council says that the Poles will not allow Danzig to be snatched from them, because otherwise resistance to German and Bolshevist assault is impossible. Reuter.

In consequence of the depreciation of the mark, Vorwaerts estimates that Germany lost eight hundred million sterling during the last ten years.

BRITISH COMPETITORS READY TO FLY ATLANTIC.

WAITING FOR THE WEATHER.

St. Johns, Newfoundland, 11th April. The Governor of Newfoundland, numerous Cabinet ministers and a number of naval and military officers inspected the Sopwith aeroplane this afternoon. It is unlikely that any attempt at the transatlantic flight will be made before Monday afternoon.

The Martinsyde machine was landed today. Major Morgan, the pilot, claims that he can be ready in two or three days time but the general opinion is that he will require a week in which to tune his machine up to first class condition. Reuter.

St. Johns, Newfoundland, 12th April. It was announced that Hawker will start the trans-Atlantic flight at six this evening but the flight was postponed at the last moment, as weather conditions have become worse. Reuter.

It was still raining at St. John's at noon on Sunday and a dense fog prevailed. The flight has therefore been again postponed. Reuter.

New York. The American naval seaplane N.C 2, which is participating in the trans-Atlantic flight has passed a successful test. The authorities are maintaining the strictest secrecy about the details. Two sister ships are also expected to be ready shortly for the flight, which the authorities hope to be ready to attempt in three or four weeks time. Their plan is to traverse the Atlantic within twenty four hours, the machines maintaining wireless communication with destroyers throught the route. Reuter.

St. Johns, Newfoundland, 13th April. Afternoon weather condition are unfavourable. Transatlantic flight postponed till to morrow. Reuter.

Limerick. Unless the weather conditions materially alter Major Wood will be unable to start his flight for Newfoundland on Tuesday owing to a westerly gale. Everything is ready at the starting place. This is two miles outside the city but most of the Limerick people will be unable to witness the start owing to the city being under martial law, and in order to leave the city a passport is necessary. Reuter.

In London tremendous interest centres in the flight. At the Royal Aero Club yesterday afternoon it was stated that the starting hour from Newfoundland is somewhat limited as the time chosen must give aviators a fair chance of landing at Brooklands in daylight.

Throughout the day the possibilities of an immediate start were subject to the keenest speculation in all circles as it is considered of the utmost importance that Major Hawker should make an immediate start if a British airman is to have the credit of making the first trans-Atlantic crossing, because the most exciting competition of skilled American flyers is anticipated, the American seaplane project being regarded as a particularly formidable one. The sporting element is increased by the fact that another English entrant is at practically the same stage of preparedness as Hawker, to wit, the Martynside machine, piloted by Lt. Raynham and Capt. Morgan, which is ready to start at any moment.

A New York telegram says it is reported that the American seaplanes will start the trans-Atlantic flight on Tuesday. Reuter.

PEACE CELEBRATIONS IN LONDON.

RECORD FIREWORK DISPLAY.

Great preparations are afoot for the celebration of Peace. In London these will include the largest firework display on record. It is stated that one of the new fireworks invented gives so penetrating a light that when it was demonstrated before a House of Commons Committee from a distance of a mile away from the River, the Fire Brigade mistook the reflection from it for a big fire and engines dashed up from all directions.

It is proposed to have five or six displays in say, Hyde Park, Battersea Park, Hampstead Heath, Victoria Park etc, and to make all displays of similar interest so that people would remain in their own areas. The matter is understood to be in the hands of the War Cabinet Committee on Peace Celebrations.

M. P.'S ULTIMATUM.

Mr. H.H.Maddock, the Coalition Unionist member for the Nuneaton division of Warwickshire, has announced that as he won the seat on the strength of pledges made by Mr. Lloyd George, he will cease to be a supporter of the Government if those pledges are not incorporated in the Peace terms. The specific items are that the utmost reparation will be exacted from Germany and that the ex-Kaiser will be punished.

LONDON AIR RAID CASUALTIES.

The full official report of the London Fire Brigade with reference to twenty-five air raids between 31st. May 1915 and 19th May 1918, has just been issued. It records that 859 bombs were incendiary. There were 373 persons killed and 1105 injured, many of whom subsequently died. The heaviest casualties were inflicted during the daylight raid on the 13th June 1917, when thirty nine bombs were dropped, 108 persons being killed and 228 injured. The next worst raid was the last, on the 19th May 1918.

EXTENSION OF HOURS.

From today the hours between which civilians are allowed to be out of doors have been extended. Free traffic time (freie Verkehrszeit) is from 4 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Reuter learns that two members of the Dutch Commission which has been in England with reference to an air service between England and Holland were, by arrangement with the Air Ministry, flown back from Felixstowe to Amsterdam, the trip occupying one hour and thirty three minutes.

EX-SOLDIERS EMPHATIC DEMANDS.

INCREASE OF GRATUITIES.

At a big meeting of ex-soldiers held at Brighton yesterday a resolution was carried entering an emphatic protest of ex-service men and women citizens of Brighton and Hove against what they termed the niggardly manner in which the Government had rewarded its fighting forces generally, and warning the Government that unless the amount of the war gratuity is amended it must inevitably tend towards serious dissatisfaction.

Another resolution demanded that the service gratuity be increased to a minimum of twenty pounds for the first year's service and one pound per month for every succeeding month, without any deduction of any sort, and irrespective of rank, home service or overseas service; increase of pensions and gratuities in accordance with the standard set up by the Colonies and America, and efficient demobilisation with good technical training.

A third resolution urged the extreme desirability of amalgamating the four organisations now existing into one body in furtherance of these objects.

One of the speakers in favour of this movement was Lt. General Sir Edward Bethune.

ROYAL MARINES FLAG HONOURED.

Upwards of five thousand spectators assembled round the parade ground at the Royal Marine Barracks, Chatham, yesterday morning to witness the presentation of the Divisional Headquarters flag of the Royal Marine Brigade (Royal Naval Division) to the Chatham Division.

The presentation was made by Major General Mullaly, comandant of the district. This flag had been with the Brigade to Antwerp and Gallipoli and back to France. General Mullaly referred to the part taken by the Royal Marines in the war and expressed the hope that the flag would be an incentive to further glorious service.

RAISED THE NEWPORT BANTAMS.

Lt. Col. Pope D.S.O. has died at the Queen Alexandra military hospital as the result of disease contracted while on active service.

The deceased officer obtained his majority in 1913. In April 1915 he was given the task of raising the 12th (Service) Battn. of the South Wales Borderers, with the temporary rank of Lt. Col. His battalion, known as the Newport Bantams, took part in the Somme offensive.

ROYAL MILITARY TOURNAMENT TO BE REVIVED.

After an interval of five years the Royal Naval and Military tournament is to be resumed. It will start on June 28th and continue until July 12th, at Olympia. A feature this year will be the extension of the title to include the Royal Air Force. The principal section of the programme will be a demonstration by troops of the methods of attack used on the Western front.

MIRROR AS DROP CURTAIN.

Mr. Albert De Courville intends to introduce at the Little Theatre a mirror drop curtain wherein all parts of the house will be visible to the audience. It is not yet known whether this gigantic mirror can be made in one piece. Amusing developments are anticipated.

AMERICA'S FINANCIAL RESOURCES.

The Controller of Currency announces that the resources of the national banks amounted on the 4th March to 20,017,000,000 dollars, an amount which exceeds by 353,000,000 dollars the greatest resources hitherto held.

SUSSEX SCHOOL BURNT.

East-Field House, a boys preparatory school at Ditchling, Sussex, was destroyed by fire on Sunday. All the boys had left for the holidays. An army officer who was visiting the school was cut off in his bedroom and only escaped by climbing down the ivy on the walls.

WEIGHED TWENTY-EIGHT STONE.

A large crowd attended the funeral of Jonathan Swann, the Leyland giant, who weighed twenty eight stone. Twelve men were required to lower the coffin. The body was conveyed to the cemetery on a motorwagon, no hearse large enough being available. The coffin weighed half a ton and the interment occupied ninety minutes.

TWELVE INCH GUN FELLOWSHIP.

NO AMERICAN DELUSIONS.

Admiral Sims, on his return from Europe, speaks in the highest praise of British and American naval co-operation. As a result he says it is now inconceivable to any American sailor that any occasion could arise when British sailors needing good fellowship, whether of the two fisted or the twelve inch gun variety should find it necessary to have to go without.

"The American Navy has no delusions as to who won the war. But for the British fleet not even the European allied armies would have had the ghost of a show from the start," said the Admiral.

The Prince of Wales, who has been "slumming" recently with Queen Mary, yesterday visited the Kew Working Men's Club, chatting for a considerable time with trade unionists.

Lady Victoria Primrose, widow of the Hon. Neil Primrose, who was killed in Palestine, has become engaged to Capt. Bullock, Scots Guards, who is attached to the British Embassy at Paris.

PRIME MINISTER AND HIS PLEDGES.

INDEMNITIES AND POSSIBILITIES.

In connection with the Prime Minister's reply to the telegram from three hundred and seventy members of Parliament respecting indemnities, Mr. Claude Lowther has addressed a telegram to Mr. Lloyd George saying that the members' message was framed in no spirit of disloyalty. The telegram continues:

"We fully recognise that your pledges were restricted to obtaining from Germany a sum commensurate with her ability to pay, but may I make clear this fact; that whatever contribution it is decided the enemy countries can pay today, it shall only be accepted as payment on account, and that means and date of further contributions will be devised when law and order is restored and when the potential assets of Germany can more easily be gauged. Such assurance would allay all anxiety in the House and all disquietude in the country."

Mr. Lloyd George replied that the experts, while estimating the amount of the indemnity that Germany can pay at the outset, "will take full account of further possibilities."

ACCEPTING THE SANKEY REPORT.

OVERWHELMING VOTE IN FAVOUR

As the figures of the ballot are revealed, it becomes increasingly apparent that the vast majority of the miners were ready from the outset loyally to abide by the findings of the Sankey report and to accept the terms offered by the Government.

Everywhere the desire for industrial peace is manifest. The final ballot in Derbyshire shows 36,559 in favour, 3,020 against. Not a single colliery returned a majority against. In Lancashire, the Cheshire Miners Federation shows 56,154 for, 12,090 against. Northumberland gives 30,489 for, 2 855 against.

Other figures are:—South Wales, 142,556 for acceptance, 19,429 against; North Wales, 11,874 for, 872 against; North Staffordshire 18,744 for, 3,020 against; Nottinghamshire 27,783 for, 1,499 against; Stirlingshire 6,411 for, 923 against.

The figures for South Wales are the more remarkable as the local leaders advised the men to vote against the award.

Reuter learns that unless complications arise over such questions as Conscription and the Government policy in Russia, the general labour situation mey be described as settling down. The clearing up process in the negotiations of the three great organisations forming 'the triple alliance' is now in active operation, and the expected acceptance of the Government terms at the Miners Conference at Southport should bring industrial peace.

NORFOLK REGIMENT BACK FROM KUT.

A small number of men of the 2nd. Batt. Norfolk Regiment who were with General Townshend in Hut arrived at Norwich on Friday night and received a great welcome. The men looked bronzed and well. Owing to the lateness of the hour the main welcome was held on Saturday. The men left Kut just before it was invested, helped to recapture it and then went on to Baghdad.

COMPENSATION FOR DISABLED SOLDIERS.

The Manchester Guardian learns that the Home Office is now actively engaged in carrying out the recommendations contained in the recent report of the Committee on compensation for disabled soldiers, sailors and airmen under the Workmen's Compensation Act. The leading insurance companies have agreed not to increase premiums as the result of the employment of disabled men, and have also agreed not to make any claim against the Government for the cost of the extra risks until 1922.

STRENUOUS TIME FOR MUSIC HALL STARS.

Moss Empires are negotiating with an aircraft company for the supply of a machine to carry a pilot and two passengers. It will be put into service on the Moss tour throughout Britain, and will enable stars to appear, for instance, at Birmingham, Nottingham and Sheffield on the same night.

MUNITION WORKERS THREATEN PROCEEDINGS.

At a meeting held at Edmonton, unemployed munition workers demanded payment of a seven and a half per cent bonus as from January 1918, and threatened in the event of satisfaction not being obtained, to take legal proceedings against Government departments. Six thousand workers are affected.

EX-KAISER AT AMERONGEN.

Amerongen 12th April. Extraordinary precautions are now taken to protect the ex-Kaiser's life and much stricter surveillance is exercised.

Admission cards to the castle grounds are now valid only until ten o'clock at night, after which hour persons desiring to enter the grounds must give the password.

The ex-Kaiser, who has now grown a full beard, takes occasional walks with his wife in the castle grounds. The ex-Crown Prince's private secretary spent three days at the castle last week. Reuter.

The King has approved the appointment of Sir Ivor Maxse to be G.O.C. Northern Command.

A LABOUR MAGNA CARTA.

"We have, therefore, provided for conferences of States, employers and workers to be held in the light of day, to be representative of all concerned, and to be armed with the fullest possible information." These words are taken from a speech of Mr. Barnes, delivered at a plenary session of the Peace Conference, and they foreshadow a brighter day in the industrial world. Mr. Barnes has issued his report on international labour and with it two drafts, one of which is a scheme of suggested organization, the other a table of resulutions for insertion in or publication with the Peace Treaty. He makes large claims for his Commitee; but if Mr. Gompers, Mr. Barnes, and their fellows have succeeded in the "creation and mobilization of humane public opinion", then indeed their claims will be acknowledged by a grateful world. The Labour Charter approved by the Peace delegates at the end of last week is at one and the same time a happy first-fruit of the Versailles Conference and an earnest of the League of Nations for which the civilized world is yearning. It is noticeable that the scheme of labour conferences is intimately bound up with the fate of this League of Nations. Its boundaries are those of the League, and it furnishes definite work-a-day duties to the League. The consequences are that world co-operation is assured for industrial regeneration, and democracy is made happy in the knowledge that the League has a very real interest in such regeneration. Although Washington has been selected as the site of the first conference it is laid down that the annual conferences will be held at the capital of the League of Nations, which we learn is to be Geneva and not Brussels. The personnel of these conferences is to consist of four delegates from each State, of whom two represent the State, one the employers, and one the workmen respectively.

Naturally, the real difficulty comes when the question is asked — How are the decisions of the Labour Conferences to be enforced? Mr. Barnes's answer is that reliance is placed on full inquiry and frank publicity, and that the last resort will be an appeal to the League of Nations. It is unwise to meet difficulty half-way, and we believe that publicity solves many troubles. The ventilation of grievance is often its dissipation. Already the international character of labour is recognized, for labour's problems are problems all the world over; and the very width of labour interests should help towards sympathetic, peaceful, and effective handling of them. It is of good omen that men like M. Colliard, and M. Vandervelde, Signor Barzilai and Lord Sinha have given the scheme their unstinted blessing. In their view "the inclusion of the Labour Charter in the League of Nations would be one of the most powerful factors in bringing back to the world a reign of peace."

Many of weak faith have feared that the conclusion of wor would be the beginning of another war, a war on the battlefields of labour and trade. We believe in a fairer future, and we look hopefully at this Magna Carta. Versailles deserves well, for it has not despaired of the republic of Labour. We are not Roman senators, but we give a Roman tribute.

AN EDUCATIONAL REGIME.

M. Shklovsky, whom many will know better as "Dioneo", gives an interesting account of education in Russia under the Bolshevist regime in his recent book, Russia under the Bolshevists. He is a bold man who would undertake to define in detail what Bolshevism exactly is and pretends to be, though one can say generally that it appears to be government of the people by the proletariat and for the proletariat. What interests us is that the Bolshevists recognize the needs of education, and with a logic for which we have some respect they are settling educational problems in consonance with their political ideals. The results are somewhat curious, and will arouse in spectators varied emotions of wrath, scorn, amusement, or envy. Mere worldly matters of finance are of little account in a nation that has by its waywardness lost all its monetary bearings. But academic perspective seems also to be vanishing. Dioneo narrates some experiments in university appointments and procedure that startle us into open-eyed amazement. When the post of inspector of a certain Technological Institute was vacant, it was gaily filled by the porter. In our undergraduate days we had a lively and high regard for the College porter whose omniscience in the matter of faces and tactfulness in that of personalities was an unfailing source of respect, but we confess that we never imagined him as the proud innabitant of a Senior Common Room, to mention no higher seat of the mighty. It is said that Oxford has become a changed place in recent years, but we cling to the belief that even on the Isis there are limitations to the academic promotion of porters. Again, we read of a cook, a Bolshevist cook persumably, who was made headmistress of Higher Classes for women, a heroine and stalwart of feminism. Truly Bolshevism has put down the mighty from their seats and exalted the lowly and meek.

One is not surprised that soon certificates of matriculation were declared unnecessary. This may have come as a boon and a blessing to men but some minor difficulties speedily arose. In Dioneo's words: "The professors were at a loss how to lecture on higher mathematics to students ignorant of the multiplication table, or how to explain spectral analysis to persons who could hardly read. Then the Bolshevists decided that there was no necessity for the professor to have a diploma either. It was only necessary that he should be a supporter of the Bolshevist platform . . . Celebrated professors were obliged to leave the universities which they had made famous."

Surely no nation can long suffer such a mockery of ideals.

"WAUGH".

IT MIGHT HAVE BEEN!

BY S. G. S.

This is the true, sad story of a heart-broken man. If you have tears, prepare to shed them now; then read this. If you are on the lookout for something to laugh over, you'd be better advised to read a leading article in the "Daily News"; for you will find nothing funny about my story. Although the thing happened ages ago, when there was a war going on somewhere on this side of the Channel I haven't got over it yet.

Canteen lobster, when consumed in large quantities, never did agree with me; which is probably why I was feeling considerably depressed that day I was doing the traffic control at the cross-roads not more than two hundred and fifty miles north — or south, I forget which — of Arras. Indeed I was rapidly growing more and more convinced that the life of an M.M.P. was not really mine; that I ought to have enlisted in the Pay Corps, or else stayed at home to mind the baby, whilst the wife went off "a-Waac-ing."

My thoughts about life generally were very bitter. I was seriously contemplating sending in my resignation from the Army when I heard a voice that caused me to pull myself together.

"What oh, old man", said a genial voice; and I turned to find the Sergeant-Major standing before me, his hand extended and his eyes full of kindness.

I pulled myself up to attention, in a very smart, soldier-like manner, for the S.M. was a demon fordiscipline. But he merely poked me playfully in the ribs and chuckled. I gasped.

"How do you do, sir?" I said.

"Got a parcel from home eh? said the' Major. "Good! So've I. I was going to ask you to come into my "bivvy" tonight, and help me eat it; but we mustn't be greedy these days, eh? So I know you wont mind, seeing you have one of your own, if I ask Lance-Corporal Johnson to come in instead?"

The traffic became a trifle heavy shortly after the Sergeant-Major left me; but nobody gave any trouble-there was no double banking, everybody kept to his proper side of the road; and a spirit of cheerfulness and good-feeling prevailed everywhere. I continued to smoke whilst I carried out my duties, all so beautifully easy, now that everybody in the world seemed willing to be good-natured. I remember wishing that Fritz, over there to the east of me, could be imbued with the same feeling of good-fellowship that appeared to have got hold of everybody else, when, as I returned the cheery hand-wave of an R.A.S.C. horse-transport officer, I became aware that somebody was standing alongside of me. It was my skipper, the D.A.P.M.

Whatever turns I'd had before this afternoon, this was far the worst. I nearly fainted as I realised that I had my cap on the back of my head and several buttons of my tunic undone, and that a half-burnt cigarette was dangling from my lower lip.

I tried to do two things at once — salute, and button myself up. The only thing I managed to do was to discard the cigarette, which, unfortunately, as I spat it away, fell right into the heavy fur collar of the D.A.P.M.'s British warm still glowing.

Then I realized that there was the same saintly expression about the skipper's face that was in everybody else's. I made a sweep at my officer's fur collar, knocked that burning cigarette away into the mud of the road, then stood to attention again, seeing myself reduced to the ranks tomorrow, and doing F.P. No. 1 for years ahead. For I thought I knew my skipper.

"Hard luck!" said the D.A.P.M. looking at the cigarette-end. "I'm afraid it's spoilt now. Never mind, Dunn. Have one of mine instead. They're not so bad."

I tried to glance round at his shoulder-blades. As I could see no signs of wings sprouting, I had to force myself to the belief that such things are not worn these days in heaven. I took an Abdullah. The D.A.P.M. struck a match, cupped his hands, and held the light out to me. I lit up.

"You look a bit worried, my boy," he said.

"I am, sir," I replied.

"No bad news from home?" he asked anxiously.

"No, sir; but I 'm afraid the missus and kids will be upset when they learn I've died," I said, with a sigh.

He stared at me.

"You're ill," he stated. "The strain has been too much for you." He was right; it had. "Well, look here. You've got to go off-duty at once. Understand? I can't have my men overdoing it. Get right back to headquarters, tell Sergeant Hicks to come out here to relieve you, and I'll carry on here for you till he comes along. But wait a minute." He tugged at the sling of a heavy-looking haversack. Freeing it, he handed it to me. Something clinked nicely inside.

"Beer," he chuckled. "Take that with you, and have a good time, And don't go to that horrible bivvy of yours. Go to my billet, and makeyourself at home. I shan't want the bed to-night. My batman will fix you up with clean pyjamas and a bath. Now, just simply rush, old bean. You lonk done up, absolutely."

Beer! Billet! Bath! I hadn't know one of those three wonderful things for months.

"Y-yes, sir" I said. "Great Scott! Good afternoon, sir, Good beer I mean bye-sir. Ha, ha, ha!"

Then I went to Divisional Headquarters, entered the skipper's palatial billet, and was met there by his batman. This young man showed no surprise when I told him what I had come for. Very soon I was lying between clean sheets, in clean sleeping gear, trying to make something out of the happenings of that strange afternoon. The only things besides the bed and the pyjamas that were real to me were the parcel of mince-pies and the haversackful of beer.

"Might as well have 'em while I've got the sense left to enjoy' em," I muttered, reaching down for the haversack.

It must have been the bending down that finished me off — . .

My hand didn't even reach the beer before I felt a heavy thump in the ribs. I sat up with a start, and my head came into contact with cold, wet, clammy canvas. Drops of water were falling down the back of my neck.

By the uncertain light of a candle, held by my pal Hanson, I saw that, somehow, I was in my leaky old bivvy again. Outside the rain was coming down in torrents, and the wind was trying its best to tear the bivouac shelter loose from its pegs.

"Where's that beer?" I asked groping.

"Got some beer?" asked Hanson eagerly.

Then the whole truth came to me. I sank back.

"Here!" admonished Hanson. "You can't do that. You've got to get up and out quick, too. The New Zealand Division's going up, and passing through our area. So you can make up your mind to three hours of it. And beastly night for the job. What about that beer, though?"

I laughed a croaking laugh, and pulled myself together. My heart was broken, but I would bear my disappointment like a man.

"There is no beer," I said. "I didn't even get hat before I woke up. Oh, crumbs! But wouldn't it all have been lovely if it had been true?"

"PRODIGALITIES."

"LUCK AND LEAVE."

BY HUSKY.

What is luck? I do not possess a dictionary so can only surmise that luck is a kind of circumstance qualified by the prefixes good, bad, or indifferent, as the case may be. We oll possess luck of some kind. Our lucks are either good, bad, or indifferent. Mine is bad.

If you do not know what bad luck is then let me give you an instance right here. From August 8th to November 6th, last year, it was one long continuous performance for the old circus of which I am a member. On November 7th I proceeded down the line en route to England for fourteen days leave. I arrived home on Sunday afternoon at tea-time.

The next morning I had a "cockney's delight," i.e, breakfast in bed, consisting of a succulent bloater, tea, and bread and butter, — followed by a perusal of the Daily Mirror. I then fell asleep again only to be awakened at 11 o'clock by the sounds of hooters, and a banging in the sky.

I thought it might be only an air-raid so I prepared to sleep again. However, it was not to be, for my mother came into the room exclaiming,

"Get up, Alfred, the war is over!"

"Oh," said I, "why? when? how? Waffor?"

"The armistice is signed, Alfie dear, and now that the war is over you had better get up and look for some work!" replied mother soothingly.

Mothers, on the whole, are decidedly practical. Here was I, a strong young fellow who had done nothing for the last three and half years but loaf about on the Continent with 5.75, 60-pounders, and 6 inch "Hows!" Humping a thousand 100-pounder shells every night, more or less, or else playing around with a muddy drag rope fixed to four and a half tons of gun. The irony of it!

And now my profession had gone. The war was over. No more nerve-racking gun-duels with "Fritz". No more banging and crashing. Finished was the horror and glory of it all, and — — —

Hallo! What was this happening to me. I was feeling queer, — hot, aching, and feverish. Later, when mother came up to the bedroom to see if I had risen she noticed at once that I was ill, and after a few questions she announced.

"Alfie, dear, you've got the "flu"! "We've all had it in this house. Five men and two soldiers were buried from this street last week!

The doctor was sent for, and in spite of all his skill, — or because of his lack of it — and my mothers kind nursing, England nearly lost one of her most promising sons. That's me!

One day, after I had been in bed for over a month, I was sufficiently well to get up and take notice and was consuming the soft cream-like roe of a North Sea bloater when a knock came upon the street door.

It is nothing unusual for policemen to knock at doors in our street, and it was quite like old times to see a grim-faced policeman walk into our humble kitchen.

"Good morning, gendarme," said I to the policeman.

"Good morning, Is your name Dripping?"

"It is," I replied "And what about it? Have you brought your meat card?"

"I've come to take you back with me to the police station," replied Bobby. "You have been reported to Scotland Yard as an absentee from your battery."

So, that was it!

Anyhow, the doctor who had been attending me, came in on his morning visit just then and, in a short time things were explained to the policeman. I discovered next day that I had transgressed by not complying with a certain "King's Regulation" regarding procedure to be taken by soldiers when ill on leave.

After a good deal of rigmarole, and a few days, grace for convalescence, I was forgiven and sent back to my battery to assist in winding up the Ingersollic time-piece mentioned in a certain national anthem. And my luck is still out! I was too late for my rum issue to-night through writing this spasm. What a life!

IMPORTATION OF FOODSTUFFS

The Allies have decided to allow the German authorities to distribute the food which they purchase from the Allies in accordance with the German rationing scale. This scale differentiates between classes of recipients more minutely than the British system did; distinct scales being laid down for young children, old men, manual labourers, etc. Out of the foodstuffs handed over to the German Government, provision according to the German scale will have to be made for the inhabitants of the Occupied Area. The Allied Military authorities have, however, laid down a ration scale which they will use for supplementing the rations provided out of the stocks supplied to the German Government for the Occupied Area. In distributing the rations, the stocks of food in the country will be taken into consideration. The foods supplied must vary according to the stocks available and the necessities of the inhabitants. For instance, to-day potatoes are the necessity of the moment. If the new potatoes come in well, the import of potatoes will be reduced and beans or some other vegetable will be substituted. The supply will be subject to some fluctuations according to circumstances. The distribution in each of the Occupied Zones will be under the supervision of the Military authorities in that Zone. There may at first be some delay in the distribution to outlying districts but as the system gets into working order it is hoped to remedy any defects of transport. The British authorities are determined to take every step in their power to ensure not only the efficiency of the rationing but the equality of distribution. Already barges are making their way up the Rhine and discharging their cargoes in large numbers.

SUSAN.

Suzanne was just a troop horse in the Light [Dragoons of France,
She served throughout the great retreat, she [served in the advance,
But they fed her very badly, and they rode her [very fast,
So Suzanne's condition failed her and Suzanne [was sold and cast.

An Englishman espied her, a grey old man and [thrifty —
He bought her battered carcase, through an [agent, for "two-fifty,"
And being versed in horses, he turned her out [to graze
And the agent charged him seven francs for [every seven days.

So Susan joined the B. E. F. and served them [very well
She took her turn at Arras, the Canal Bank, [and Vermelles,
She never failed to do her job from Abbeville [to Peronne,
And you'll find her still on duty at Guard Relief [in Bonn.

1/4th CHESHIRES' CINEMA.

'IDDY UMDUPTIES" CONCERT PARTY APPLAUDED AT HERSEL.

Most Battalions possess a concert-party of their own, but very few can claim to possess a cinema. Such is the case however, with the 1/4th Battalion Cheshire Regiment, and the Meeanee Cinema run by them at Hersel is all that could be desired in the entertainment line. The theatre itself, with its splendid seating accommodation and well-appointed stage, is admirably suited either as a cinema or music-hall, and, in addition to the splendid pictures (which by the way are changed thrice weekly), 2nd Lt. Jacques, the Educational and Entertainments officer of the 1/4th, is doing his utmost to secure concert parties.

The first of what we hope will be a series of visits of the "Iddy Umpties" concert-party took place this week, and proved "some" show; the "turns" well merited the thunderous applause which greeted them.

Scorning to rest content with the success which has already crowned his efforts, Lieut. Jacques is at present superintending the erection of a bar inside the theatre for the sale of drinks, chocolate and cigarettes, and making every effort to get together a good orchestra.

Though belonging absolutely to the 1/4th Cheshire Regiment the Meeanee Cinema is open to all troops, and, so far, no complaints have been made about the fare provided.

ARMY CHORISTERS' SURPRISE PERFORMANCE.

The Rhine Army Choral Society was honoured on Saturday by an invitation from the Army Commander to give a concert in his mess. The performance turned out to be thoroughly successful, the programme being well selected and the pieces admirably rendered. Capt. W. L. Greenlees, Scots Guards, was the soloist and Captain G. E. Sykes, East Riding R.G.A., conducted the choir and accompanied the items with his customary precision and delicacy.

At the conclusion of dinner the General thanked the choir for their efforts and autographed each member's programme.

PRESENTATION TO R.F.A. MAJOR.

An interesting ceremony took place at Siegburg on Tuesday night when "C" Battery, 152 Bde., R. F. A., presented Major Farr, M. C. with a rose bowl on the occasion of his departure to England, and as a token of the esteem and regard in which he is held by everyone. Major Farr, in acknowledging the gift, touched briefly on the doings of the battery during the last 4 years, and the splendid record gained by them; and in a very touching reference proposed a toast to all fallen comrades, this being given in a silent tribute. Sgt. Garrard suitably replied on behalf of the N. C. O.'s and men. An impromtu "smoker" afterwards took place at which many fine items were rendered. The Major was accorded a great send-off the next morning on his departure from Siegburg station.

RHINE ARMY VOCAL SOCIETY.

CONCERT IN AID OF R.E.WAR MEMORIAL FUND.

On Sunday afternoon, another admirable Concert was given in the Deutsches Theatre, under the direction of Captain G.E. Sykes, R.A.(T), for the benefit of the Royal Engineers War Memorial Fund. The Army Commander again shewed his appreciation by his presence at the Concert.

A good programme was saddened by the absence of Captain W.L. Greenlees, 2nd. Bn. Scots Guards, who sang with a voice of rare charm and sweetness at the concert on the previous Sunday. A welcome and extremely popular innovation was the inclusion in the "Rhine Army Vocal Society" of several Nursing Sisters.

The concerted numbers were rendered with all the finish, the masterful technique, and the musical melody which are associated with the Rhine Army Choral and Vocal Societies from their first appearances. Sapper Herbert Thorpe and Lieut. Lowe were received with an appreciation, enthusiastic and deserved, both in their solos and duets, and Sapper Baker made happy melody on his violin.

A good and pleasant concert provided 900 marks towards the excellent cause for which it was given.

RHINELAND GAMES.

Gas Rattles Enliven Half-Time Interval.

A football match was played on Thursday on the former's ground at Borr in fine weather and before a good attendance.

Briggs, Thompson and Brown were frequently tested but proved to be a safe trio. A pretty fast half finished with no score. The supporters of the home team were very busy with gas rattles etc. during the interval as everything seemed in favour of the field men. This proved to be the case as they had much the best of the play and twenty minutes after resuming Watson scored with a sharp low drive. The horsemen tried hard for the equalizer but always found the home defence safe. The field ran out winners of a good game which was contested right through in fine spirit by both teams.

Final score:—

112 Battery R.F.A. . . . 1; A/16 R.H.A. . . . 0.

"NICE AND DIRTY."

"A" COY; 3rd M.G.C. v. ROYAL SCOTS' BAND AT RIEHL.

The Band of the Royal Scots, boasting at least one Scotsman — a very fiery person of about 18 hands — on Saturday returned to the scene of their musical efforts, dressed in wonderful blue and white football jerseys, to try their luck with "A" Company, 3rd Batt. M.G. Corps.

Despite a strenuous week for everyone, the game was fast—too fast for the referee in his trench-coat—and rain made the ball difficult to judge. Perhaps this explained the apparently soft goal secured by the Company after three minutes' play, but only sympathy for the Scots could have caused "Jock" Buckley to put through his own goal, a moment later.

At half-time the score stood: one all, and the goalkeeper of the zebra shirt was well camouflaged in mud whilst at least six other players were "nice and dirty".

Soon after the resumption, "A" Company took charge of the game, and Corporal Lapsley seemed far from fading away. In the absence of linesmen, the game occasionally wandered into other counties, but even Russell got tired of these excursions, and the gunners made for goal successfully, three more times.

At this stage the referee had conversation with an "influential party" on the line, about rations for the visitors. The Scots so improved after this that a goal was put on from a free kick, and when brot, kase, confiture and beurre actually appeared on the scene, yet another goal was added. The whistle left the gunners with 4 goals, and the Scotsmen to gang awa' to their feed wi' three.

BEST COMPANY CUP COMPETITION. FINAL.

B COY, 9TH. SCOTTISH RIFLES v. 90TH FIELD COY, R.E.

This match was decided at Hilden on Tuesday it being the third replay, and there was a large number of spectators, including the Divisional General, commanding the Lowland Division and Brigadier-General Girdwood, 28th Infantry Brigade

Teams- 9th Scottish Rifles:- Kennedy, Campbell, Lawrie; Crosson, Haddow, Levey, Arkwright, Mathieson, Hutcheson, Chalmers and Scott.

90th Field Coy:- Stewart, Tapper, Wolf, Whyte, Bridges, Sharp, England, Randall, Peters, Lyall and Mc Donald.

In the first half Mc. Donald several times looked dangerous, and kept the Rifles goalkeeper busy. Hutcheson then broke away and almost scored with a well-directed shot.

Later Chalmers gave Hutcheson his chance and the latter scored with a hard shot from close range. Shortly afterwards he netted a second goal:-

Half-time:- B Coy; 9th S.R. . . . 2 goals; 90th R.E. . . . 0.

The R.E's pressed well in the opening stages of the second half, play being subsequently confined to mid field.

Final results:-

B Coy, 9th S.R. . . . 2 goals; 90th R.E. . . . 0.

At the finish of the match the Divisional General complimented the teams on their football, and said it was much above the average of Company football.

The cup for the winning team had not arrived but he presented to the 90th R.E.'s a smaller cup, as finalists in the Competition.

The Cup for the winning team will be handed over at on early date.

488 v 481 SIEGE BATTERY R.G.A.

This match wat played on Thursday on the former's ground at Ippendorf near Bonn, and resulted in a win in favour of the 488- by 4—0,

About 15 minutes from the kick off good combination between the 488. forwards gave Timms the outside left the opportunity of sending across a good centre, which, however, went begging. Half time arrived with no score.

The second half opened with 488 pressing strongly and about ten-minutes from start, Timms scored from a centre by Frampton. Soon after Frampton was fouled, and had to be carried off, taking no further part in the game. Although only having ten men the 488 continued to press and from another centre by Timms, Harvey scored a good goal. The third goal was scored by Eveson from a corner forced by the left wing. Good play between Smith, Watson, Eveson and Timms resulted in the latter putting in a centre from which Eveson scored the last goal.

1/7th v. 9th CHESHIRE REGT.

The above match took place on the former's ground at Bornheim on Saturday afternoon. The play was very fast and furious, and in the first few minutes the home centre-forward, Poole, shot wide from close range. After 15 minutes play the visitors broke away and registered the first goal. The 7th continued to press and were awarded two penalties in rapid succession both of which Poole failed to convert. The visitors led at the interval by the odd goal.

On resumption the play continued to be very fast, Poole registering the opening goal for the 7th which he followed up a few minutes later by a second lovely goal.

The home side continued to monopolize the game and Baskerville registered the third goal. A few minutes from time Poole scored the fourth and last goal of the match with a fine shot from 20 yards range.

Final score: — 1/7 Cheshire Regt. 4; 9th Cheshire Regt. 1.

KEEN SPORT IN LIBLAR TOURNAMENT.

A 10,000 DOLLARS GUARANTEE.

In connection with the comprehensive campaign of sports which is being conducted by the 5th Bn. K.O.Y.L.I. at Liblar, the first bouts of a boxing tournament were decided on Friday. The contests yiseleded some good fights and many promising pugilists were "discovered."

In the light-heavy weight competition, Sgt. Wilkinson ("C") and L/Cpl. Garforth ("C") met, and although the former had considerable advantage in reach Garforth won on points. Pte. Holdsworth "C," put up a disappointing show against Sgt. Faulkner "D" in the middle weight competition. He was hopelessly outclassed and the referee stopped the fight on humane grounds and awarded the bout to Sgt. Faulkner. There was a large number of entrées in the light weight competition. Pte. Coopland and Cpl. Dimmock fought three sparkling rounds, the decision going to the N.C.O.

Pte. Embleton ("C") made a plucky show against Sgt. Wood "C" and L/Cpl. Ball "C" took a lot of punishment from Pte. Blacke ("B"), the last mentioned in each bout being declared winner. The meeting between Pt. Hopkinson ("C") and Pte. Lovesay ("B") provided some interesting fighting. Both took their gruelling well, but Lovesay won on points. Pte. Jones "C" and Pte. Thomson ("B") met in the feather weight competition, Thompson winning quite comfortably.

A "discovery" in the "Bantam" bouts, was the form of Pte. Dickinson, "A," who had little difficulty in disposing of Pte. Perry, "C," although the latter by no means shaped as a novice.

Pte. Ausell ("C") had things all his own way in his bout with Pte. Longstaffe ("C").

The following are the points gained by companies in the contests: — A 2; B. 11, C 27; D. 4.

Officials: Referee, Lt.-Col. F. H. Peter, D.S.O. M.C.; Time-keeper: Lt. Ladentcher; judges; Capt. H. Barker, M.C. and second G. Dews.

WILLARD V. DEMPSEY

A Reuter's New York telegram states that Willard has deposited in the Bank of Chicago the sum of 10,000 dollars which he will forfeit should he fail to appear in a championship bout with Jack Dempsey.

DING-DONG BOXING AT LÜLSDORF.

A very interesting boxing dispay was given at Lülsdorf on Thursday evening when some clever sport was witnessed. Four rounds between Bombardier Grenville and Driver Gothard was the opening item and the former boxer, having weight and science in his favour, soon wore down his opponent and deservedly gained the award on points.

Drivers Jackson and Woolgar had a hard set to and made things brisk in ding-dong style. Woolgar fought with a peculiar but effective swinging style and gained the verdict.

The bout between drivers Cooper and Hayles was the tit-bit of the evening, and some clever science was seen in every round. Cooper won by a narrow margin. Drivers Glover and Kirk put up a fine display and Kirk, though lacking in weight, had plenty of pluck and was the winner. This match was loudly applauded.

An exhibition bout between Drivers Birdwhistle and Barnes was watched with interest. Speed and ring craft are Birdwhistle's specialities and this display was valuable to those who are keen to know just "how it should be done". This boxer is anxious to have a "scrap" with any 9-stone lad and won't be averse to conceding a few pounds in weight.

Captain G. H. Mc Ewan D.C.M., R.F.A., proved a very efficient referee.

RUGBY TOURNAMENTS.

CANADA BEATEN BY ROYAL AIR FORCE.

In the inter-Service Rugby Tournament at Leicester on Saturday, before 3000 spectators, the Royal Air Force defeated Canada by 11—3 in a fast keen game. Both sides missed easy chances during the first half and at the interval the score was 0—0. In the second half the R.A.F. gained the ascendancy.

MOTHER COUNTRY DEFEATS SOUTH AFRICA.

At Twickenham on Saturday, before 12,000 spectators including Princes Albert and Henry, the Mother Country defeated South Africa by 21—12 in the Inter-Service Tournament. The Mother Country opened brilliantly, Sloan, Cullen and Usher scoring during the first 15 minutes. Towards the interval, when the score was 16—4, the South Africans played spiritedly though their handling was faulty. For them Harris and Mellish scored. The South Africans finished strongly but could not wipe off the arrears.

LANCASHIRE DIVISIONAL R.A.M.C. v. 53rd MANCHESTER'S.

The Lancashire Divisional R.A.M.C. team accepted the challenge of the 53rd Manchester Regt., and the game was played at Villeh on the ground of the 90th Field Ambulance on Friday before a good crowd. The spectators were treated to a good game and the R.A.M.C. jusified their confidence by running out easy winners by 4 goals to one. The goals were scored by:— Pte F.R. Evans. (2); Pte E. Evans (1) and Pte Byrne (1) for the R.A.M.C. Pte Chadwick scored the only goal for the Manchester's.

Final score:—

R.A.M.C. . . . 4; 53rd Manchesters . . . 1.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

Another out-door Game.

In the Editor's "Letter-Box" column is published a letter containing an outline of a game that seems to possess distinctly promising possibilities. With the football and hockey seasons so rapidly nearing their end, and in view of the limited amount of cricket and tennis that will be possible, owing to lack of suitable grounds, anything in the nature of a new phase of summer sport should be welcomed. The letter referred to does not go very deeply into details, but the broad outline given forms a sufficient basis upon which to build rules to suit local circumstances. If the Recreational Trainning Staff were to arrange a sample game of "Hockla" (How would that title suit?) so that we could all see exactly what the game looked like when actually being played, some indication could be formed at once as to its chances of popularity. There are many other little-known games that might be demonstrated, also, from which the most suitable could be selected for more or less general adoption.

And still another one.

For instance "Hand-Golf" was discribed to me a day or two ago by the inventor. The first big advantage that struck me about this game was that is can be played on any old ground; undulating (a word our rifle experts love!) or otherwise. The course is marked out very similarly to that of golf, the "holes", however, being above the ground level, bounded by sandbags. Clubs and expensive balls are quite an unnecessary luxury in connection with the game, which is played with dummy Mills bombs (sorry, I mean hand grenades) propelled in the old familiar way. An important rule of the game, apparently is that should a player land his bomb within a previously marked out radius of 25 feet of a hole, he must go back to the edge of that area for his next throw. The object of this rule is fairly obvious. Scoring is the same as in golf. So, you people who honour me by reading these notes, have a cut at the game and let me know how you like it.

A Couple of Challenges.

Challenges are flying about in all directions now-a-days. A sporting correspondent, who sends along a boxing item published elsewhere in this page, tells us that a Driver Birdwhistle invites any nine- stone (or even a little heavier) boxer to have a cut at him. Judging from the numerous bloods who have come to light since we finished with the all absorbing business of bullet firing I doubt not that this invitation will quickly be accepted.

A Welsh Wrestler's Offer.

C.S.M.I. Jenkins sends along an intimation of his willingness to wrestle any member of the Army of "Oc", "catch as catch can" style, at 9st. 9lbs. Sergeant-Major Jenkins, who, I believe, is an exponent of wrestling above the ordinary average, belongs to "D" Company, 51st Bn., The Welsh Regiment.

When notifications are being sent round of any match that may be forthcoming as a result of this challenge, I hope the "Cologne Post" will not be forgotten.

England v. Scotland in Germany.

After making some very nice referencs to the Cologne Post, a writer in the Edinburgh Evening News proceeds as follows:

"Its inception suggests further developments, particularly the topical one to-day that two international football teams be sent to tour the occuppied zone. Only the man who has served in the Army can fully appreciate how the prospect of a series of England v. Scotland games, played by thoroughly representative sides, would be gladly received. The Army overseas has had concert parties innumerable sent out to it, and it even rejoiced in a boxing tour by Billy Wells of some fortunate battalions in France, but its football has always hitherto been found among its own ranks. Conditions now, however make a tour from this country possible, and it would be a happy inspiration to send out, on the close of the present season, a couple of teams composed of the most popular footballers of Scotland and England to settle their international grievances before men who include in their midst some of the keenest football followers in the world. We pass the idea over to the Football Associations concerned as a happy means of getting rid of their accumulated profits, or to the Sports Council of the Army, ever keen to encourage a new suggestion which has the fostering of the sporting spirit of the troops as its incentive."

This suggestion will be hailed with the greatest satisfaction by all lovers of football in German occupied territory, but whoever (if anybody) undertakes the job, he will have to be pretty slick to get in before the season ends.

THE RAMBLER.

HIGHLAND DIVISION ARTILLERY LEAGUE.

310th BRIGADE R.F.A. — HEADQUARTERS v. "C" BATTERY.

A league match took place on Thursday, at Gemund, under ideal weather conditions and was witnessed by a huge crowd of spectators.

From the kick-off, the game proved to be very fast. Headquarters commanded the ball, and with clever and intricate passing, scored their first goal after a splendid centre from the right wing.

A good game followed, with Headquarters always on the aggressive, but from a break-away Mathewman equalised. Play continued to be fast and time and again Headquarters forward line proved too good for the "C" Battery defence. "Hands," in the goal mouth gave Headquarters a penalty, taken by Johnson, who scored.

The second half opened with brisk play on both sides. Johnson secured the ball, and with some splendid footwork, ran through and scored. This roused "C" Battery, who after a fine piece of play scored. The game continued with good play on both sides, Headquarters after some neat passing scored their fourth goal from a centre by Gilchrist. Result: Headquarters 4; "C" Battery 2.

The New York State Assembly has passed a Bill permitting local authorities to decide whether they want professional baseball on Sundays after 2 p.m., says a New York cable to the Paris Daily Mail. The Bill has already passed the Senate, and now goes to Governor Smith for his signature, which he has promised to affix.

CABINET'S CRISIS IN GERMANY.

The resignation of Schiffer, minister of finances, was expected to crea e a crisis in the Berlin cabinet. In the Köni che Zeitung of Saturday we find the following remarks:

"The rats are leaving the sinking ship. Schiffer has realized that Scheidemann's policy is leading to national bankruptcy .for he has been constantly granting rises of salary when the first necessity should be "less salary, more work"!

"Schiffer himself declared to a representative of the Allgemeine Zeitung: "My resignation is only caused by personal motives. I do not want the foreign countries to overestimate the political importance of the situation created by my resignation. The firmness of the cabinet is not at all endangered and the situation of our finances is far from being hopeless! There is no reason for despair."

Erzberger and Gotheim were mentioned as successors, but it seems almost certain that Dernburg will be the future Minister of Finances, his place in turn being taken by Gothein.

AMERICAN DEMOBILIZERS.

The Star and Stripes, the official newspaper of the A.E.F. states that whether they have been in France long enough to earn a service chevron or not, officers and soldiers of the A.E.F. will be able to take home a substantial testimonial of their services in France.

That testimonial will be a diploma to be given by the French Government, which has just made known its wish to give a souvenir of their stay in France to all returning officers and enlisted men in the A.E.F. On each diploma will be inscribed the name of the man who receives it.

The French Government will supply the diplomas to the commanding officers of the ports of embarkation, who will arrange to have them inscribed with the names and military ranks of the men who are going aboard the boats, says Embarkation Instructions 19, Hq., S.O.S.

BENEFITS OF EDUCATIONAL SCHEME.

The following is a copy of a letter distributed to units of the Southern Division. It is specially noteworthy in that it portrays what may be the result of any enterprise in connection with the Army Educational Scheme.

"The attached copy of a letter received by the D.G.O. 29th Division (now Southern Division) is forwarded for the information of all ranks: it is of considerable interest as being an example of the great beneficial possibilities of the Army Education Scheme, to those who really take the trouble to avail themselves of the opportunities it affords and who really mean to get on.

About the middle of January 1919 the Div. Gas Officer, Capt. S. Spero (in civil life a dentist with a considerable practice), organized and contiucted, on his own initiative, a class in Dental Mechanics in Berg Gladbach, at which some 22 dtudents attended. Capt. Spero in the initial nstance provided all the necessary material and sools from his own private sources in England: the A.D.M.S. 29th Division afforded every assistance, and eventually the school received considerable support from 2nd Army H.Q., who, in addition, recognized it by giving it a large amount of work to do in connection with the dental repairs, etc., of the Army of the Rhine.

The results speak for themselves; especially as it is understood that at least six of the other students demobilized during March are in similar jobs to Pte. Thompson; with two exceptions, none of the twenty odd students had any previous experience.

Capt. Spero was assisted at his school by a Sergeant who had 12 years, experience in the trade.

Sir:— I know you would like to know how I am getting on. Well, sir, I called at the Dental Depot in Liverpool, and I was told to call on Mr. Robinson L.D.S., and he asked me to make a partial upper case, and when I finished it, he said it was very good and told me to start on Monday, and here I am earning £2—12—6 per week. I am, sir, very grateful for your instructions as I had no trade before the war, and sold papers for a living, and now I am right away in a thundering good job.

Now sir, the Dental Depot said they had lots of jobs for dental mechanics, and if any of the boys on the School care to come over here, they will be O.K. and if they call on me I can take them round.

Best respects
Sir, your humble servant,
(Sgd.) J. Thompson.

THE SCRAMBLE OF RECRUITS FOR RUSSIA.

Those demobilized soldiers who cannot settle down to civilian routine are making good the opportunities afforded for re-enlistment in the Russian forces.

Inquiries among the volunteers show various reasons for re-enlistment. The love of soldiering, the appeal of comrades who are in danger at Archangel, and general dissatisfaction with civilian life at the present time are among the reasons given.

One volunteer was a major in a Highland regiment who has the D.S.O., the M.C. with two bars, and two South African medals. His great desire is to win the Victoria Cross. "It sounds curious," he said, "but I like fighting. Fighting is my profession."

A private who was demobilized a month ago said: "It is only when you leave the Army that you realise what you miss. Good companionship and no worry. I am tired of being a civilian. Everything is expensive and work is scarce." He confessed that the conditions of pay, the same as for the Army of Occupation, had appealed to him.

A sapper rejoining as a private in the infantry stated that he had seen service in Gallipoli, France, Egypt, and Italy. "Unless I went to Russia," he said, "I should not consider that I had seen the thing through."

Another anxious person who had already tasted all that war can give, spent 6/3d. on a telegram, so keen was he to obtain access to Army life again.

Women are still volunteering for service as V.A.D.s and members of Q.M.A.A.C., but no women are required.

GERMAN SECRET DISCOVERED.

The secret of the German process for manufacturing artificial mother of pearl has been discovered by Mr. Dew, a Fellow of the Royal Society of Arts. The material is in great demand for the manufacture of fancy buttons, dress trimmings, etc. Mr. Dew has been engaged in his researches during the whole war period, and after suffering many disappointments has at last been successful.

DISABLED OFFICERS' PENSIONS.

It is announced by the Pensions Ministry that, in order to prevent hardships to officers, steps have been taken to provide that a first payment on account of disability retired pay, which is issued monthly in arrears, shall be made whenever possible a month after the officer's discharge.

In order to prevent hardship, officers whose retired pay is likely to be renewed are advised to apply for medical examination five weeks (instead of three weeks) before their retired pay will lapse.

SIR E. GEDDES AND HIS STAFF.

It is announced that no appointments in the Ministry of Ways and Communications can be made or promised until the Ministry is approved. Sir Eric Geddes does not anticipate that his requirements of staff will go beyond a few highly technical experts in transport matters and a clerical staff, together with those officers of existing Government Departments whose functions may be transferred to the new Ministry.

At the request of Sir Eric, the directors of the N. E. R. Company have again lent the services of Mr. R. F. Dunnell, their secretary and solicitor, in connection with the organization of the secretarial and legal department of the new Ministry.

AMERICAN ARMY TESTS.

The American War Department is putting into effect at Army camps a system of determining the abilities of discharged soldiers to fill specialized jobs. The plan follows the tests by which the Army selected during the war troops for many branches of special service.

The new ability test will be entirely voluntary, but troops who pass will be recommended for high position and important clerical and executive posts throughout the country.

DRAUGHTS' TOURNAMENT.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir. — I am taking the liberty of writing these few lines, asking if it is possible to hold a Draugts Tournament in the Rhine Army. I have been taking a great interest in the game for the last few months, and as it is a very popular, amongst the soldiers I would be pleased to hear of a tournament being held for the "Champion of the Rhine Army." I am sure there must be a few expert players on the Rhine who would aid a lot in having a tournament, if it was only brought to their notice.

I read with pleasure the "stunt" a certain R. A. M. C. sergeant undertakes to do and I wouldn't mind being one of the opponents. I hope you will bring this suggestion to the notice of readers of The Cologne Post so that anyone interested in it may write. H.

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary, limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

NEW GAME FOR ENTHUSIASTS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir. — A young officer from your part of the world tells me you value suggestions for games. About thirty-five years ago, whilst in India, I started a game which might commend itself to you — a sort of cross between hockey and lacrosse. It is played with old lawn tennis rackets and an old lawn tennis ball. The size of ground can vary between that of a football field and that of a lawn tennis court, or can be smaller in hot weather than in cold, when running is more desirable. Similarly the distance between goal posts can be regulated according to taste.

At the time to which I refer, ladies joined in, and were the forwards playing hockey amongst themselves, whilst the men were behind the scrimmage and picked up the ball on their racket, running with it, as in Lacrosse, passing it, throwing it in the air, and catching it again, when "tackled." The ball was either hit or thrown from the racket through the goal.

The game can of course equally well be played with men only and the charm of it is that old rackets and balls are everywhere available, whereas hockey sticks and balls are not always obtainable; and hockey is a more stereotyped and serious pastime.

I put forward the idea for what it is worth.

HOW ARCHANGEL ATTACKS WERE REPULSED

ANTI-BOLSHEVIST MOVEMENT IN RUSSIA

GERMANY'S PROBABLE INDEMNITY

LUNATIC MEMBERS OF BAVARIAN SOVIETS

FIGHTING IN NORTH RUSSIA

CAPTURES FROM BOLSHEVISTS.

The following information has been received from the General Officer commanding at Murmansk concerning the small offensive operation carried out by Allied troops under his command.

It was learnt that two small attacks carried out by the enemy on the 7th April on our posts south of Segeja (a town on the railway three-hundred and sixty miles from Murmansk) were merely preliminary reconnaissances to larger operations.

The main operation was to be the capture by the Bolshevist garrison of the post at Urosozero, twenty miles south of Segeja, the strength of which was about two hundred and fifty.

Accordingly, in order to forestall these operations, General Maynard rapidly moved up a small force of about one hundred and fifty consisting chefly of Russians and Slavo-British legionaries, with a small proportion of Allied troops.

Urosozero was attacked en the eleventh. The attack was completely sucessful and the enemy's losses heavy in comparision with the strength of the garrison, including fifty killed, twentyfive unwounded and ten wounded prisoners.

In addition we captured two three-inch guns, one machine gun, one hundred pairs of skis, fourteen cases of new carbines and large quantities of ammunition, including seven thousand shells.

Our losses were one killed and two wounded.

After the attack patrols were pushed out further to the South and bridges were destroyed.

ATTACKS ON ARCHANGEL FRONT.

The war office announces that a Bolshevist attack in the Shredmeerenga area of the Archangel front was launched in great force last Saturday after artillery preparation which lasted throughout the night.

It was completely repulsed and the enemy lost about four hundred men killed and wounded and a number of machine guns. The main attack, directed against Shredmeerenga was made by some two thousand three hundred men, exclusive of reserves, in three waves. The first was to reconnoitre in force and the second, supported by the third, was to capture the village from the south and west. Hostile artillery fire was heavier than usual.

The object of the attack was to break through to the Dvina and cut off our southernmost troops on this river. On the Vaga and Dvina fronts only slight artillery activity has taken place.

A detachment of the Slav-British legion raided a Bolshevist position at Bolsheozerk on Wednesday. They destroyed a blockhouse, killed the garrison and captured nine prisoners, including an officer, and two machine guns.

On Thursday morning a detachment of the Russian national army made a successful raid at Kadish.

HOW TO SETTLE HOUSING PROBLEMS.

THE BOLSHEVIST WAY.

Buda-Pesth, 10th April. The revolutionary government is taking further drastic steps towards settling the housing problem. It has decided to expel from the city all foreign "vagabonds and profiteers," especially ex-Galicians, and to confiscate all premises suitable for dwellings. The number affected by the expulsion order is about 200,000.—Reuter.

CAPITAL OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

The League of Nations Committee has selected Geneva as the capital of the League by twelve votes against seven given to Brussels.

France, Belgium, China, Portugal and Czechoslovaki voted for Brussels; Great Britain, America, Italy, Japan, Serbia, Greece, Rumania and Brazil for Geneva.

President Wilson spoke eloquently of the reasons which he considered made Geneva desirable for the capital. He is reported as having said that the League of Nations had not been originated out of hate and enmity. Its seat ought to be removed from souvenirs of the great conflict and be located in a neutral country. Switzerland had maintained perfect impartiality during the war. Its character was also enhanced by the circumstance that three races made up the Swiss nation. He also was in favour of the seat of the League being at a city which was not a capital and was thus removed from political influences.

PROBABLE RESIGNATION OF SCHEIDEMANN.

It is considered likely that Scheidemann, the German Prime Minister, will shortly resign owing to differences of opinion with his colleagues. He greatly favours the creation of a State Tribunal, but the proposition does not commend itself to the members.

Dr. Dernburg, his probable successor, has framed a scheme which will act as a brake on ultra-socialism.

ANTI-BOLSHEVIST MOVEMENT IN RUSSIA.

A telegram from Petrograd says there are indications that a pronounced anti-Bolshevist movement is now on foot. The Russian papers there state that definite signs of unity have been shown in anti-Bolshevist demonstrations in various parts of the country. At Samara and Starropol there have been risings of a particularly sanguinary character. The Bolshevist commission for combating anti-revolutionary movements has admitted the increasing strength of this movement, in which even the peasants are taking part.

Plans for cutting off all transport of provisions to Petrograd and Moscow and for blowing up the railway bridges have recently been discovered.

The Commissaries have been obliged to appease the workmen by increasing the bread ration at Moscow as well as by raising wages fifty per cent. — Reuter.

Samara is a large town on the Volga, 650 miles S. E. of Moscow. The district, before the war, contained large colonies of Germans, to the number of at least 100,000, who were chiefly engaged in agriculture.

Starropol (or Stavropol) lies 700 miles S. W. of Samara on the northern slopes of the Caucasus.

BAVARIAN REVOLUTION.

The situation at Munich is very obscure, and there are many contradictory reports. The city is isolated, the railway, telegraph and telephone systems having been severed.

Apparently the Soviet is hopeful of getting food and coal via Switzerland and Italy, but as to the means of transport there is no indication.

Fighting in the streets continues. According to a Berlin paper the Communists on the evening before the Government troops deposed them, had decided to expropriate all private houses and to make all women over a certain age common property.

Another newspaper states that they had agreed to form an alliance with Russia and Hungary to make war on Prussia.

The corpse of the late Saxon War Minister, Neuring, has not yet been recovered from the river Elbe.

A Bamberg telegram to the Kölnische Volkszeitung announces that the Spartacists have regained control of the town. The proletariat has been armed and a Red army of ten thousand men formed. Fifty dead were counted in the streets and more than sixty wounded have been taken to hospital.

Augsburg has capitulated in consequence of an ultimatum sent by Hoffmann to the effect that the town would be completely isolated until relations with the Munich Soviet were repudiated, the censorship of letters and newspapers abolished, hostages liberated and municipal authorities re-instated.

Forty thousand persons heard the terms of the ultimatum and voted by an enormous majority for its acceptance. The Soldiers and Workmen's Council, however, accepted the decision on the grounds that the time for a Soviet was not yet come, but they would bide their time.

Schweinfurt, Lohr and Aschaffenburg have followed the example of Augsburg.

LUNATIC MEMBERS OF BAVARIAN SOVIETS.

Writing in a review called the Suddeutsche Monatshefte an University professor named Cossmann declares it to be a fact well-known to many medical men that several of the leaders of the third Munich revolution are mentally deranged.

He declares that Lewien has secondary syphilis of the brain and that it is an open secret in official circles.

Lippe, Soviet Minister for foreign affairs has been twice incarcerated in a lunatic asylum for megalomania.

One of the Soviet leaders at Augsburg, Rothenfelder, is in like condition. According to Voraerts he escaped from a clinic at Cologne, the professor of which diagnosed him as being unable to think clearly or to act reasonably. At that time he belonged to the Clerical party and had literary associations with Handel-Mazetti. Later he developed a great hatred of England. Now he is a Spartacist!

GERMAN STRIKE NEWS.

At Düsseldorf the Spartacists have repeatedly attacked the railway station, which is stoutly defended by Government troops. Artillery is still being considerably used.

It is possible that the clerks in Cologne will come out on strike. They have gone far beyond their original demands. A meeting is announced for 8 a.m. on Wednesday at the Gürzenich at which a decision will be made.

There are actually a few clerks on strike but if it becomes general ten thousand clerks will be involved.

The strike at Danzig has collapsed.

The miners strike in the Ruhr district can be considered as ended. The majority of the men are already back at work.

The British have occupied Trebizond, the Black Sea port of Asia Minor.

A second vessel has been chartered by the Spanish Government to deport another three hundred Russian undesirables to Odessa.

TO IMPROVE CHURCH SERVICES.

EXTRAORDINARY SUGGESTIONS.

Unexpected replies have been received to an appeal made to the worshippers at Saint James' Church, Bermondsey, for suggestions, no matter how frank, as to making Sunday Evening Services more popular.

Eleven correspondents advocated the reservation of the back part of the church for smokers; one wanted Carlyle and Ruskin substituted for the old Testament lesson and one frankly advocated turning the Church into a Cinema, saying "A hearty laugh at Charlie Chaplin does more good than any pi-jaw."

COAL CRISIS IN AUSTRALIA.

Melbourne. The coalowners have agreed to increase miners wages by twenty two and a half per cent, the Commonwealth Government simultaneously sanctioning an increase in the price of coal.

The Premier of New South Wales has objected to the agreement and points out that it will cost New South Wales a hundred thousand pounds annually.

Mr. Watt, the acting Commonwealth Premier, however, says that the coal shortage is extremely grave and that the action of New South Wales may result in the most serious dislocation of industry which has ever occurred in Australia.

TWO SUMMER TIMES IN CANADA.

The Canadian railway commission has decided not to interfere with the action of the railways in advancing the time one hour.

NATIONAL INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE.

GOVERNMENT LEGISLATION AWAITED.

Employers and workers are awaiting with great interest the announcement by the Government of its plans and policy to give legislative effect to the proposals adopted at the National Industrial Conference.

The Prime Minister has promised prompt consideration by the Cabinet and it is generally believed that Bills will be brought before Parliament at no distant date providing for the reforms already outlined.

PROBABLE AMOUNT OF GERMANY'S INDEMNITY.

FORECAST OF PEACE TERMS.

Although the general outline of the peace terms has been drawn up there are one or two points on which there is not yet a complete agreement, notably in regard to what should be included in reparation. Practically however it has been decided, according to the Times, to fix the total sum payable by Germany at between ten thousand million and twelve thousand million pounds, the payment of which will be spread over about fifty years. First payments will be asked for in gold and goods and later payments will include a large proportion of marks.

The question of Germany's western frontier seems to have been settled by the plan of complete de-militarisation of the left bank and of a large zone on the right bank of the Rhine, with guarantees to France from the League of Nations and perhaps from a military alliance.

France is to be entitled to work the Saar coalfields until her own coalfields, destroyed by the Germans, have again become productive. This period will probably be fixed provisionally at fifteen years. During this time the valley will be administered under a mandate of the League of Nations, with French police control, and measures will be adopted enabling France to exploit the coalfields to the full. At the end of fifteen years the inhabitants will be asked to express by plebiscite their wishes as to nationality.

The Times Paris correspondent adds "Danzig will be given her status as a free city in close customs union with Poland and steps will be taken to ensure that the port will be devoted to Poland's needs. The League of Nations will have a controlling influence, but the city will enjoy free sovereignty.

"Agreement has also been reached with regard to punishment for breaches of law during the war. Offenders will be tried according to their different crimes by national und international tribunals.

"A special tribunal, consisting of one representative of each of the five great powers, will be formed to try those heads of States who are accused of criminal responsibilities.

"This presumably means that some steps will have to be taken to endeavour to obtain the attendance of the Ex-Kaiser at the proceedings."

The League of Nations Covenant has been revised and the text, which contains twenty six articles, will be made public in the course of a few days. Wireless.

WHAT GERMANY INTENDED TO TAKE.

Such details of the Peace terms as are given above are "intelligent anticipation." Before the full terms are revealed it is well to recall what Germany's intentions were in 1914.

Herr Erzberger, the head of the German Armistice Commission, and plentipotentiary at Spa, pleaded for a "Peace of Justice."

In 1914 this same Erzberger wrote a memorandum which brought him letters of thanks from Bethmann - Hollweg, the Chancellor, General Falkenhayn, Chief of General Staff, (now a fugitive), General von Moltke and Admiral Tirpitz.

This is what he demanded:—

That Germany's victory should be so assured that the Empire's military supremacy on the continent should be assured for all time. His minimum demands for the conclusion of peace were that Belgium must in no circumstances preserve her present status, that Germany must retain her military supremacy over that country as well as over the entire French coast as far as Boulogne, including Dunkirk and Calais, also possession of the Channel Islands.

As regards France the claims of the German industry on certain mineral regions must receive consideration. France must dismantle her fortresses. The Russian colossus must be split up and the Baltic provinces be joined to Prussia or converted into independent states under German hegemony. Russia must be cut off from both the Baltic and the Black seas. Great provinces in Central Africa must be founded, stretching from Dar es Salam (German East Africa) across Duaila to Senegal. German war expenditure must be recovered to the full capacity of each country. Besides large immediate payments Germany must aim at obtaining instalments spread over a number of years. War indemnities must produce full compensation for direct war expenditure and war damages.

The Imperial debt for the army, fleet and colonies must be extinguished. A requisite sum must be obtained for the founding of a big Imperial pensions fund, a large fund for the establishment of German cable and wireless stations; finally a fund from which the Kaiser could make grants to victorious generals and successful statesmen.

Thus Erzberger's requirements according to schedule.

Other notorious Germans were also among the false prophets.

COUNCILLOR AS SCAVENGER.

Mr. H. L. Ford, a member of the Tenby Corporation and a county councillor, took a scavenger's broom and swept one of the principal streets of the town on Saturday, as all the scavengers are on strike.

His Majesty the King, who is Colonel-in-Chief of the Royal Regiment of Artillery, has signified his intention to be present at the memorial service for those members of the regiment who were killed during the war. The service will be held at St. Paul's Cathedral on 23rd. April, St. George's Day.

Ellen Terry returned to the stage on Saturday night, playing the Nurse to Doris Keane's Juliet and Basil Sydney's Romeo on the first production at the Lyric Theatre of "Romeo and Juliet."

It is estimated that nearly twelve thousand young ladies are awaiting presentation at Court.

UNFAVOURABLE ATLANTIC WEATHER.

CHOOSING THE RIGHT MOMENT.

The Air Ministry has issued a statement saying that in attempting to fly the Atlantic, competitors for the Daily Mail prize are engaging in no light venture.

Skilled as are the pilots and navigators and good as all the machines undoubtedly are, success will to a great extent depend on the choice of a moment when weather conditions are favourable.

In their choice the pilot and navigator must rely almost entirely on weather forecasts.

For this purpose not only are daily weather reports being obtained from many meteorological stations bordering on the Atlantic but the evidence of past years, bare and inconclusive as it is, is being utilised in helping to estimate the possibilities of a successful flight on any given day.

The information available is still very scanty, and though every effort has been made to secure the maximum degree of accuracy in weather forecasts, they cannot be accepted as being infallible.

A close study has been made of daily and monthly wind and weather charts of the Atlantic, which have been compiled from large numbers of observations from ships. These charts show that although there are generally considerable disturbances they keep more or less to certain fairly well defined areas and tracks. These vary according to the period of the year, but the average winds for many months are, with an occasional exception, repeated yearly.

In comparing the prospects of competitors flying in each direction it is pointed out that during about fifty days of the year only would winds favour a machine travelling westward and that the chances for a machine proceeding from Newfoundland to Ireland are therefore considerably better than for one flying from Ireland to Newfoundland.

MAKING THE NEW MAP.

Stockholm. A Swedish publishing company has decided to produce a large world atlas as soon as the Peace Congress has definitely fixed the new frontiers.

The work will be carried out by Swedish geographic and military experts, and the entire net profits will be handed over to the Red Cross. This effort is regarded as quite a new departure, Germany having hitherto enjoyed practically a monopoly in the atlas trade.

RURAL WORKERS MINIMUM WAGE.

At the National Conference of the agricultural labourers and rural workers union held in London the chairman moved a resolution that the conference, while accepting the settlement reached by the Agricultural Wages Board, most emphatically declares that the minimum wages fixed are still inadequate, and instructs the executive to press for a national minimum wage of fifty shillings for a six day working week of forty-four hours all the year round.

An amendment was adopted by a large majority that the conference refuse to accept the settlement as permanent, and demand that the Government be warned that the present low standard of wages is the main factor in driving the people off the land.

ORGANISING NATIONAL FESTIVALS.

A meeting to inaugurate a League of Arts for national and civic ceremony was held at His Majesty's Theatre on Sunday afternoon. Among other objects the League is aiming to bring art and public life into contact and to preserve national and civic traditions. The League intends to organize recurring festivals in which the whole of the community can take part.

One of its first acts will be to organize a tribute to the British Mercantile Marine.

Sir Frank Bensow, who presided, said that the men of the Mercantile Marine will be welcomed on the Thames on the 19th July. The bank will be lined by singers and the embankments decorated in such a fashion as the Thames has never yet witnessed.

CAFÉS AND EXTENSION OF HOURS.

Although the hour for civilians to be in their homes has been extended to ten o'clock it must not be assumed that cafés may remain open longer. They must still be closed by 8.30 p.m. (20.30 military time.)

OPERA TO COMMENCE LATER.

Taking advantage of the extension of time, the performances at the opera and Cologne theatres will be timed to begin an hour later than has hitherto been the case.

AMERICAN STUDENTS IN ENGLAND.

A number of American soldier students have arrived for the opening Spring term at Manchester University, including twenty-four officers, thirty-four non-commissioned officers and twelve other ranks. All have been on active service in France.

They intend to form two baseball teams during their stay at Manchester.

H.M. Queen Mary has sent a letter of sympathy to the parents of Sgt. Andrew Jones, who after serving throughout the war, has died of pneumonia in France. Sgt. Jones was chauffeur to Sir Arthur Sloggett, Director General of the Army Medical Service and drove the Queen's car on her visit to France during the war. In her letter the Queen says she remembers Jones well.

ECONOMIC CONDITIONS IN GERMANY.

The Central Powers of Europe, by their insistence upon war in August 1914, let loose upon the whole continent a surfeit of troubles. They have by no means escaped their share, and Germany, whose material progress in the last three decades through the completeness of her organization had caused general wonder, is today enduring a state of self inflicted industrial disorganization which paralyses her powers of production almost as completely — though probably this condition will not last so long — as the deliberate destruction of the French machinery at Lille and Roubaix, and the flooding of the French coal mines has paralysed the industrial activity of Northern France.

There are four principal factors contributing to the present situation — the depreciation in the value of her currency in exchange, the want of raw material and food, and political and industrial unrest.

Before the war the worth of the mark and of the shilling were generally the same. The former felt in value as the war proceeded, but its fall was not so evident to the population, as it is and will be, since during that time Germany had to trust to her own resources, and her trade with the outside world was restricted to Neutral Countries and the goods which these countries could pass through to her. Further, she still possessed her old organization and also, almost to the end, cherished, and inspired in many quarters, the belief that she might obtain a peace which would enable her to start manufacturing again under conditions advantageous to her, as compared with England, to whose mercantile fleet and marine she had dealt heavy blows, and France whose industrial machinery she had looted. Her debt too, it must be remembered, was less than ours. So long, therefore she had a fair amount of credit, and the mark fell, pretty smartly it is true, but not to the depths to which the rout of the early Autumn of 1918 and the subsequent "debacle" have ultimately brought it.

With the mark standing at half its full value, a German purchasing goods in France, England or America has obviously to pay double price for everything he buys. And if the German trading community were to go to the outside world, as purchasers, offering this depreciated currency, not only would the mark fall still further in value, but, as far as raw materials formed part of her purchases, the articles produced from the raw materials purchased could not be sold abroad except at a heavy loss. And manufactured goods which are saleable abroad she must have in order to pay for the goods she imports.

Yet Germany must have food and raw material if she is to revive her credit and raise the value of her currency. She must have them to enable her to employ and pay her workpeople. The problem of food has been temporarily met by utilizing the solid assets which the state possesses, but the relief can be but temporary unless an undepreciated medium of exchange can be called in aid to supplement her flagging resources. For the purchase of raw material is of equal importance for her, for the continual outbursts of trouble, fomented for political end, no doubt, but finding their best occasion in industrial conditions, will continue to lower her power of production.

How is the exchange to be altered so that Germany may be able to obtain the necessaries for her industry on workable terms?

The answer is not easy to find. Perhaps the creation of a special preferential currency secured by a charge on the more solid and available assets of the country might be one means of giving her a start. The assets charged would be such that the countries supplying her needs should be able to assume control of them, if, and when, necessary. Such for instance would be harbour dues, mercantile shipping and customs, besides the productive areas in or near the occupied territory. The control would have to be extended to the currency itself so that it should only be used for specific purposes, such as war debt and payment in exchange for imports. There seems to be no reason why a nation should not issue a kind of Prior Lien Debenture, though she may have to continue the process known as "watering" her shares in regard to the unfortunate shareholders — the German people. For it must be remembered that the constant increases of wages which we read of are ultimately of no advantage to the recipients so long as they merely result in further depreciating the value of the coin (medium is more correct) in which they are paid. Equally harmful are the constant issues of paper money — another kind of "water."

THE STAGE AND ITS FUTURE.

There may be some doubt as to the propriety of loving our enemies, but there can be no doubt as to the propriety of learning from them. Today we would speak to those of our readers who are prepared to learn. No pilgrim in Cologne can afford to neglect the Opera House. He may or may not be impressed by the artistic nature of the edifice, but in it he must see a well-equipped, comfortable, and commodious building wherein citizens can indulge in the delights of renowned operas. Such operas have an undoubted influence on the development of human life in its artistic and musical aspects; they cheer and educate and uplift us — in a word, they stand for recreation in its truest sense. Municipalities, like that of Cologne, have recognised this truth; and they take care that they shall have under their direct control the selection, rendering, and purveyance of opera and drama. A civic policy of this kind is not a by-product of militarism; it is a simple matter of good sense,

To many of us it seems that we may well learn a lesson from the Opera House. It is true that here and there in England we have had attempts to give drama a worthier place in our national life. Years ago Sir F. R. Benson did great service in many provincial towns by interesting public-minded citizens in the revival of Shakespearian plays; for a considerable time the Birmingham Repertory Theatre has proved the need and the popularity of its ideals: and who can forget the struggles of the "Old Vic." which is even now holding its Birthday Shakespeare season? But we need more than gallant and isolated ventures in art; and surely the time for reform is due. These are days of nazionalization, and it were well that monopoly in the exploitation of the stage should be taken out of the hands of private adventurers, who too often take short views of a nation's pleasures, and securely placed in the keeping of responsible bodies of men and women who will see to it that public taste, morals, and enjoyment are what they should be. The most common evil of nationalization is bureaucracy, but bureaucracy would have short shrift in stage management. Nepotism might well mean the revival of Roman thumb-play.

"Where, influenced by the rabble's bloody will,
With thumbs bent back, they popularly kill."

What reasons are advanced against public control of the stage? They come from two classes of people. There are, firstly, those who see in the theatre not good but evil, and would gladly prohibit the stage and all its works. Then there are those who believe that they can feel the pulse of society and know best what society wants and cater best for these wants. They are individualists and, in the proper sense of the word, artistic adventurers, competing with each other for the popularity of their entertainments, content to give only what they think is desired. To the former class we say that it is futile to leave out of reckoning a human instinct for artistry in scene and sound, an instinct which can be so satisfied that moral and even spiritual ideals shall be preserved. To the latter class we say that it is not good to base the whole production of opera and drama on the law of supply and demand, that the criterion of public taste has at times been shaped in unworthy fashion, and that it would even be to the advantage of the professional class of stage-managers if there were alongside of them public bodies of men and women who viewed music and art as helps to the attainment of civic virtue. The real danger of competition for popularity in the theatre and music hall world is that, while professing to give the public only what it wants, stage managers are too often suggesting to the public what it would be pleasurable to want. They begin by meeting the demands of the people; they end in moulding these demands.

Why should we fear to take our courage in both hands? We are standing at the threshold of a new era. Let us advocate in our own land a firmer grasp of all musical and artistic entertainment; let us go further and advocate municipal enterprise in the production of good and wholesome art. Then we shall have a leaven that will leaven the whole lump; then we shall have some control over the incitement of our finest emotions; then we shall gladly and without inward perturbation worship at the shrines of Thespis and Terpsichore.

MY DAWG.

His working and Christian name is Paddy. About two years ago, he strolled into the mess, or what we fondly imagined looked like one. To him I immediately transferred both my attentions and a juicy steak, and we became quite friendly. Afterwards I secured his affections with a piece of string. He had no collar, but a few days later another little doggie slipped a real beauty into my pocket.

Everyone, especially the men, liked my new pet. Often a gallant sapper, whose luck had been out on the sick parade, would get on the right side of the dog previous to getting on the right side of me. Paddy knew all the points of the play, but, if impressed, would suggest that with a little manly assistance, the rats under the wood-pile would receive all necessary attention. And both would get a day off.

The first time he saw himself in a mirror, he promptly started a rough house, but soon found food for reflection. Shortly afterwards he brought along the Sergeant Major's dog, a big, husky brute, and his worst enemy, who immediately started a suicide stunt. Paddy then jumped in and made a three-handed game of it, and sorced a decided victory. The S.M. took the matter to heart, and on my next leave-warrant I was a day short, and did not discover it until afterwards. Now Paddy sits for hours before the glass practising new evolutions with his whiskers and tail.

He has seen plenty of trench warfare, too. One night he returned from No Man's Land in such a hurry, and beat it for the back country, that we suspected dirty work. Gas came over at dawn.

We used him in the mines for listening. He would lie with his ear to the ground, and his back bristles would point in the direction of enemy workings.

It is marvellous how he distinguishes the different badges of rank. He betokens respect by keeping a discreet distance from Sam Brownes, perhaps because of their usual close association with canes. He licks his lips if he sees anybody with the Machonochie (MC) up. Onc I saw him blush when a batman said "Sir" to a sergeant.

He watches my wrist of he wants to know the time, and anticipates my daily movements by the boots I wear. His eyes dance with delight if I slip into a pair of pumps.

Paddy is mad on motor-bikes. It is a "triumph" of canine intelligence how he knows the different makes. He follows me for miles and, when in traffic, rushes ahead and makes a noise like a Klaxon yawn. If tired he jumps on behind, unless it is very cold, when he squeezes into the lamp and closes the shade. And he knows the efficacy of petrol in the removal of grease from his coat.

Once I was swimming in a canal leaving my clothes on the tow-path. Seeing a car approaching, he removed them to a place of greater safety, and then went off without informing me of its location.

He wanders far from home, and jumps lorries on the way back. First he spots our divisional mark, and running behind make a noise like a busted rear spring. The driver stops for investigation, and the rest is easy.

He can count, too. If he sees thirteen preparing to sit down to dinner he gets highly excited. He is assured of a pew then. His manners are excellent, particularly with peas.

During last summer we were with a colonial corps, and they did their best to pinch him. I guess he was about the only thing they ever failed to get away with.

Yes, some little dawg is Paddy.

TOOTLES.

Y.M.C.A. (CENTRAL HALLS).

On Monday, 14th April, Professor Adkin delivered a lecture on "The Balkan Tangle" to a large and appreciative audience at the Central Halls, 44, Friesenstrasse. Many know how valuable have been the services of the lecturer not only in England but in France and Belgium, and we are glad that so many of our soldiers heard him discuss with his accustomed skill the riddles of Eastern Europe.

At the conclusion of Professor Adkins's lecture an interesting ceremony took place. Dr. Francis introduced Major Bles, the Town Major of Cologne, who officially opened the Central Y.M.C.A. Annexe. which is to be used as a Canteen and Recreation Hall. Major Bles is a man of wonderful versatility, and it was no surprise to us when he acquitted himself well in this pleasing ceremony. He is not only a lecturer whose lectures have run into amazing numbers and have done much to keep at high level the moral of our men; not only a music and art critic, but he is a follower of the Thespian art and delighted his audience by the recitation of a poem of Rudyard Kipling. In his characteristic speech, fearless as of yore, he enlarged on the dangers of an unwise fraternization. we wish all success to this addition to the Friesenstrasse suite of Halls, for no institution has excelled the Y.M.C.A. in zealous care for the needs of our soldiers in days either of war or peace.

51st BATT. THE HAMPSHIRE REGIMENT.

WONDERS OF WERMELSKIRCHEN.

BY PETER PAN.

Of course we have not been in Germany very long. and it is only now that we are awakening to the fact that our old Life as a Graduated Battalion is a thing of the past, and that we have been born anew as a real Regiment.

The pangs of our new birth have not been altogether unpleasant, for they have brought with them so much that is new and interesting that they themselves are well nigh forgotten

Our journey from Colchester to Wermelskirchen was in itself a thing wrought with wonder, a veritable later day oddessy.

First off all perhaps, the name of our small town rather overawed us to our unaccustomed tongues and ears, and appeared in itself an unsurmountable barrier to further understandings of this Country. Next the placid behaviour of the inhabitants surprised us. We saw moustached and bearded and bristly Prussians all around us and the interest they showed in us was to take off their hats to our officers with a politeness that we thought was most commendable till we learnt that it was compulsory.

While we were still straining our minds eye to get the perspective of this new existence another and more intimate wonder dawned upon us.

We learnt at first disbelievingly and later with a sense of relief like that Sinbad must have experienced when he at last succeeded in dropping the "Old Man of the Sea," that the old syllabus of training for Graduated Battalions which had ridden us cruelly for a year past, was dead. It was about this time that the first inkling of the reality of our new existence as a fighting unit came upon us. We began to realise that we were no longer despised A IV toy soldiers, who might one day grow into something better.

We awoke gradually to the fact that we had grown and were men.

The next revelation came to us in natural sequence; we found that we were not only a mob of young vigorous men, but a Battalion. A Battalion — a living organization with a young and vigorous spirit of its own.

Our name and our badge suddenly changed their meaning for us, and we began to view our new surroundings not as bewildered individuals but as members of a proud community. Thus our new soul has been born in us and thus have we launched out on our new career as a Battalion.

The events of our life have not been very many, nor have they been unusually exciting.

We have been inspected twice, once by our Divisional Commander and once by our Corps Commander Lieut.-Gen. Sir Claud Jacobs K.C.B., K.C.M.G. who we were told was pleased with us. We felt rather triumphant over our distinguished General's praise, for we had worked hard to make a good show at the inspection, and each man of us as we stood steady at the "Present," knew that he had done, and was doing his share for the honour of the Regiment.

After the General had inspected us individually, and spoken a few words to our officers, we marched passed him, with a swing which must have told something of our satisfaction at his approval. So much for the immediate past and the present, the future shines before us and we have planned a series of triumphs in every branch of our lives here that is to fill that future with glory.

We make no apology that we are egoistical, for we are young, and youth is the great lawful egoist. Also our egoism is not that of the individual, we are egoist as a Unit, as a Battalion, a young and lusty Battalion.

This is the first raising of our voice on the Rhine, presently we hope and expect that our name and our voice will be known in all the Rhineland.

Avê Fortunas Future.

THE EPISTLES O' PETER BIRSE.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—"God bless me, fat's this I see" — nae rhyme intended Sir, lat me assure ye — bit fan I opened my "Post" this mornin' an' scanned the headlines, ma' een restit on "The Epistles o' Peter Birse Junior". Weel, weel, says I, that cow's a': Peter Birse Junior" losh I never heard o' him. Fa's he? I kenn't Peter Birse, Senior (by his chronicles) bit am damn't if ever I ken't he had a son, bit fan the stork brocht him, Kirsty had been prood, nae doot. Kirsty ye see, wis apparently this wee laddie's mither. A'weel, lat that flea stick tae tn' wa' — nae reference, of course, tae P. B. Junior.

Noo I was aye o' the opeenion that "John Cow", the pleasant host of the famous Hadden Street Pub. at the corner o' the Street far the Imperial Hotel is, wis the writer o' the Peter Birse chronicles in the "Bonaccord", but I maun be wrang. Never mind — the sicht o' the Peter Birse heading wis gweed enough for me, it gaed thro' ma bleed like a skirl o' the pipes.

An' I min' o' the sketch artist — the tailleur mannie, wha' cald himsel' "Mc. Gurk". Oh! lochs aye I min' them a, an' mony a lauch I had at auld Peter's Niskies, 'speechly at flittin' time. He wis aye in a pickle o' trouble an Kirsty aye ragin'.

Speakin aboot German. Dae ye notice there's lots o' the wirds o' German the same as our Aiberdeen-Doric. We maen hae taech't the Bosche in the auld days, I think, their language.

Peter Birse, Senior was a wonderfu' chiel and help't to popularise the "Bonccord" paperie in the auld days. Hooever, dinna start blawin the Scotties' trumpet. The Pipes can speak for themsel's — "Scotland for ever". "Aiberdeen an' twal miles roon and far are ye" an, Jerry ken't that, and focht shy o' the kilts fan he could.

Aye the dear ault kilt frichtened them, as it did in mony battles in the ancient times.

"The Deil's aye kind tae his ain", aye min' that's the wye I'm oot here noo, an' I'm an auld man though I look young. Whan my King and Country — God bless them — called for me, there, like a true Scot, I wis, stannin' in the queue at attention, waitin' my enrolment. Weel dae ye ken, they dumped me in the Lancashire Fusiliers. Och, the irony o't.

Ye speak aboot the Dome here bit dae ye think ma laddie it can touch oor Mairschal College. Na, Na, ma' wee man, naethin'like it. Far ever did ye see a better biggin than oor Granite College? Steeples are naethin' built o' sandstone. Still, mind ye, I grant ye Cöln is a nice place in the passin', bit gie me Aiberdeen. Nae place can beat it.

'Am sorry ma time is leemitit an, I canna write mair, bit fan a' saw the headlines o' the article I had tae lat ye ken there wis an auld acquantance o' P. B. Seniors in the toon.

"Should auld acquantance be forgot". I'm sendin' yer paperie tae some freens at hame, wha' will be delighted tae read the Epistles.

Wi apologies for troublin' ye,

I am, Yours, etc. H.H.B.H., Lieut.

A Rhineland Jazz Band.

"POET AND PEASANT" SUBMITTED AT EVINGHOVEN.

The first Jazz Band in Germany (Rhineland), writes a correspondent, performed on Saturday evening at A. Co's Billet, 2nd Battery, M.G.C., in Evinghoven, and was the concluding item of a splendid programme that lasted 25 minutes. It provided a big surprise for the "civies" and quite set the small village on fire.

The Jazz Band numbered four:—Bandmaster Cashel, Cornet Virtuoso, Sgt. Beasley, Pianist, Cpl. Rochefort, Phono-fiddle, and Chris-Chris. Comedian, with the drums and effects. We had all the noises you could imagine from a dust-bin lid to a machonachie tin!

The act was opened with "Poet and Peasant" in grand style, at the finish of which there was a terrific noise heard on the drum and symbols, and the comedian marched down amongst the audience. The artistes on the stage asked him what he meant by interrupting the show, and who was he? His reply was "Jazz"! Eventually they invited him on to the stage where he played in rag-time, "Ragging the Dog" and "Don't Blame Me", in which the comdian was well supported by Chris.

Following that came the "Air Raid" which was unique in every detail, even to the aeroplane flying across the stage. Next was an old simple melody rendered in excellent harmony, and then a cornet solo "Triple Tongue Polka," which brought the house down. A little more comedy and then "The India Rag," an ideal Jazz number to finish the act. The audience seemed loath to let this little party leave the stage, and they obliged with the "Stars and Stripes" march as an encore.

Farewell To Demobb'd.

52nd BEDFORD SERGEANTS' WHIST DRIVE AND "SMOKER".

On Thursday last a most successful Whist Drive and "Smoker" was held in the Sergeants' Mess of the 52nd Bedfords. The evening's enjoyment was primarily arranged to bid farewell to the members of the Mess who were proceeding to Cologne on the following day for demobilization. Sgt. Marks and Barker were the 1st and 2nd prize winners respectively. Sgt. Read gained the sealed and Sgt. Hilsden the "booby" prizes.

At the interval R.S.M. Walker in a few well-chosen words said how sorry they were to lose their friends, who had under all circumstances proved themselves efficient W.O.'s, and Sgts.

On behalf of the "Demobb'd" party, which included Sgts. Bedford, Barker, Spain, and Billing from the Mess, R.Q.M.S. Capon in appropiate words stated that though he would not attempt to deny that they were pleased at the near prospect of "Civies" once more, yet that feeling was tempered with a sense of sadness. One could not spend some years in the Army without forming friendships, which it was hard in the moment of freedom to sever.

A very successful concert followed to which C.Q.M.S. Versey, R.Q.M.S. Capon, Sgt. Flood, C.Q.M.S. Scales, Sgt. Drummer Bowgett, Sgt. Michell, Sgt. Barrett, and Sgt. Barker all contributed towards the evening's enjoyment. R.S.M. Walker proved himself an efficient M.C. and a tactful chairman.

THE "ROYALS" CONCERT PARTY.

If the performance given at Neunkirchen on Saturday is any criterion, the future of the "Royals", (the newly formed concert party, of the 6th (S) Bn. R.W.K. Regt.) is assured.

The programme was well selected and arranged. Captain Douglas Stern is an untiring worker and is to be congratulated on his very fine rendering of "The Floral Dance." Lieut. Hartfield also greatly pleased the audience with "Down the Vale." "The Lute Player" sung by Lce./Cpl. Handley was another well rendered number, while this artiste also sang duets with Pte. Bryant. Ptes Jack and Aylen were responsible for "Garden of Happiness" and "Twilight Bring You", both artistes having to give encore numbers. Sergt. Heath provided a great deal of merriment, while Pte. Beebee, a female impersonstor sang "Priceless Percy" and "Helen of Troy" with success. Opl. Harry Benjamin worked hard as business and stage manager, his civil experience being a great asset. Pte. Bryant officiated at the piano, and was alos responsible for some good humorous numbers. The "Royals" are sure of a welcome wherever they may give performances.

CROSS-COUNTRY RUNNING AT WAHN.

The final run of the 51st Royal Sussex Inter-Platoon cross country championship was held on Friday and for the third time No. 9 Platoon, "Y" Coy, were successful, thus easily winning the championship. The distance covered was just over five miles and was done in remarkably good time by the first man home, Pte. W. J. Reade, his time being 26 minutes. There was a field of about 350 runners.

The names of the runners in the order of finishing, of the winning platoon were: Ptes, Reade, C. L. Hall, T. P. L. Hamblin, C. G. Tappy, W. R. Howard, A. J. Dalton, S. Walker, L. C. Weeks, Ptes. D. W. Lyne, G. A. Bailey, R. C. Sweeting, M. G. K. Leech, T. E. Rose, C. E. Watkinson, and A. W. Payton.

The result of the championship is as follows.

I. No. 9 Platoon "Y" Coy, — 43 Points
II. No. 10 Platoon "Y" Coy, — 25 "
III. No. 8 Platoon "Y" Coy, — 22 "

NEARING THE END: FOOTBALL'S LAST SPURT.

9-0 VICTORY.

QUARTERMASTERS IN TIP-TOP SCORING FORM.

23rd v. 7th MIDDLESEX REGT.

Demobilisation and reorganisation have until last week prevented the 23rd Battalion from raising a representative side, but on Wednesday at Hoffnungsthal an eleven was selected te meet the 7th Battalion from Overath, and although perhaps the Territorials were unable to place their best team in the field, still the 23rd gave ample demonstration of the fact that they possess a side capable of holding their own with any Battalion, team in the Rhine Army.

The result of the match was a 9—0 victory for the 23rd, which throughout played brilliant football.

Goals were scored by Q.M.S. Scott (4), C.Q.M.S. Rogers (3), Cpl. Creasey and Lt. Harrison, and the home forwards gave a clever exhibition throughout. Scott and Rogers were a particularly forceful pair of forwards and were a constant source of anxiety to the opposing defence. So well did the half-backs play that Lieut. Aiton and C.Q.M.S. Fogg at full-back had a minimum amount of work although both players were always safe. Lt. Pickle, in goal was never seriously threatened.

52nd Bn. BEDFORDS v. A.S.C. DIVISIONAL TRAIN, TROISDORF.

At Siegburg on Saturday the 52nd Bedfords by superior football defeated the A.S.C. by 4 goals to nil.

With a strong wind behind them the Bedfords immediately assumed the aggressive, and after Lieut. Simpson had tested the goalkeeper with a "scorcher", Pte. Gigli opened the Bedford scoring by taking a short pass from Lieut. Woodham, and deftly placiug in into the corner of the net. A few moments later from a penalty Lieut. Woodham scored the second goal. Maintaining the pressure the Bedfords' forwards gave the A.S.C. defence no rest and from a corner Sgt. Blackwell headed the ball home well out of the goal-keeper's reach.

On the resumption, the A.S.C. showed to much greater advantage with a strong wind behind them. Lieut. Beresford for the Bedfords on two occasions when danger threatened shewed splendid courage in dashing out and clearing in an exceptionally clever and daring style. In the closing stages of the game, from a break away Sgt. Blackwell, kicking past the backs, and leading them in the race for possession, tested the goal keeper with a shot which he only partially succeeded in clearing and as defenders and attackers rushed up, Pte. Gigli by a clever shot just tipped the ball over the heads of the intervening defence into the net. The remainder of the game saw the Bedfords maintaining their superiority and Pte. Gigli, Lieut, Woodham, Sgt. Blackwell and Lieut. Simpson tested the goalkeeper in succession without avail.

For the winners the return of Lieut. Woodham to centre half was a source of strength in defence and attack, while with Lieut. Beresford in goal, this department should no longer be the Achilles heel of the team. Lieut. Machin seemed to be ubiquitious and played a brillant game from first to last. The A.S.C. are to be congratulated upon putting up a plucky fight against what proved to be on the days' play a superior side.

McLEAN CHALLENGE CUP.

H.Q./50 v. C.50.

This League game was played on the Ritter Strasse ground, Solingen, on Saturday. It was of some importance as, unless C/50 won the game, they would be out of the running for the championship. H.Q. who only had a weak team out, lost the toss, and played against wind and rain. From the kick-off C.50 pressed strongly as a result of all-round play and forced no less than 3 corners within the first 5 minutes. The H.Q., defence was hard put to it to keep their goal intact but rose splendidly to the occasion. Miller in goal was repeatedly tested and had to go down full length in the mud to save his charge. C.50 continued to exert pressure right up to half-time, but a heroic defence was maintained and the teams crossed over without a score.

In the second half play ranged from one end to the other, with C.50 always a shade the better team. Eventually, 4 minutes from time, Hobbs secured close in from a mis-kick and put in an unsavable shot. That was the limit of the score, however, and C./50 won by one goal to nil.

On the run of the game they deserved to win, but the H.Q. defence gave them a hard run for it and performed wonders. Miller in goal was a jewel. Both Capt Tyer and Orgill at back did well; Morgan and Weekley at half were good, the latter playing his best game of the season. Forward, Sellars was the only one to keep his feet. For C.50, Hunter at back played a fine game, whilst 2/Lt Lee at half was pretty nearly the best man on the field.

BONN ASSOCIATION FINAL.

121st H.Q. v 195 Siege Battery R.G.A.

121st H.Q. and 195 Siege Batteries, both of 29th Brigade R. G. A, by winning the semi-finals on Wednesday last, kept the final in the Brigade. This match, the last of the season which was played on the Hofgarten, Bonn, on Saturday resulted in a win for the "Heavies" by one goal to nil. The play during the first half was fast and very even, neither side scoring.

Early in the second half the Siege pressed hard but failed to get a shot past the "Heavies" goal-keeper, who played an excellent game; after this, the "Heavies," forwards, combining well together and supported by an exceptionally good line of half-backs. made repeated attempts to score. Mathias at outside right for the "Heavies" put in excellent shot for goal, but this was well served by the goalkeeper. He again followed up with a good run and centred, from which, after a scramble in front of goal, Deacon scored. This was the only goal scored during the match.

The match throughout was fast and keen, the "Heavies" gaining the advantage on their opponents byplaying a better combined game. The Siege defence was very sound.

"D" COY V. HQ. 32ND. M.G.C.

A vigorous match was witnessed by a large crowd at Obercassel on Friday when "D" Coy. of the 32nd. Bn. M. G. C. met the H. Q. At half-time "D" Coy. were leading by one goal but twenty minutes after the commencement of the second half MacCarthy scored for the visitors who continued to press, Hartle scoring a second goal. Ten minutes from time Smith of the home team "netted the sphere", and five minutes later H.Q. were awarded a penalty but failed to score.

A BURST BALL.

32nd Battalion M.G.C. V. 12th King's Own.

On the football ground at Wagnerstrasse last week, a very interesting and enthusiastic match between the above two battalions, was played before a considerable number of spectators, both Battalions putting their strongest teams forward. After 20 minutes Pte. Webster of the 32nd Batt. scored the first goal by a well judged shot at a range of about 30 yards. The first half ended with the M.G.C. winning by one goal to nil.

The second half opened with a fine display of energy on both sides, but after five minutes play the game stopped for about 10 minutes owing to the ball bursting, and a second one, unfortunately, not being at hand.

Soon after the restart Pte. Scott, the 32nd M.G.C. centre forward, added another goal to the score.

The match ended leaving the M.G.C. victorious by 2 goals to nil.

The referee was Pte. S. Bennett of A Coy., 32nd Bn. M.G.C., who directed the match very ably and fairly, giving full statisfaction to both teams.

DESULTORY SNIPING.

A. v. C. COY., 3rd M.G.C.

"A" Company met "C" Company 3rd Bn., MGC. on Monday in the first of the company fights for supremacy in the football competition. The better team won. The loser's goalkeeper displayed nervousness throughout te game. Quite early "A" forwards showed a liking for their opponents' goal area and a lance-jack, with a knowledge of mules, shot from a rebound off the goalkeeper.

At times there seemed more than eleven "all blues" playing and "C" company's right back is still recuperating. There was some desultory sniping by "C" before half-time, but shots were never on the target. Hard work was done by the defence but there were weak places and the winning team played on them. In their ranks back amongst the "heavies," their O/C Company displayed excellent judgment and a hefty boot generally arrived in time and without unnecessary work. Half-time: "A" 1. "C" nil.

On resumption a perfect barrage fell upon "C"'s defence. The latter played up much better in response. L/Cpl. Carpenter and Cpl. Lapsley Russel for the winners played well, and Lt. Winchcombe, Sgt. Rowe, and Sillett for the losers. In the concluding minutes callers of all kinds arrived at "C"'s goal-mouth and one of them put the ball between the newly painted posts.

Result: — "A" 2. "C" nil.

509 LONDON FIELD COY. V. 18th FIELD AMBULANCE.

The return match between the above Coy's team and the 18th Field Ambulance was played at Weilerswist on Saturday, and a very keenly contested game ended with the R.E.'s running out winners by 1—0. The R.E.'s were no doubt the better balanced team. The goal that won them the match was scored in the first half and was the result of some very neat passing between Costello, Hope, and Ferguson, who finished the movement with a fine cross shot which gave the ambulance "goalie" no chance.

LANCASHIRE DIVL. SIGNAL COY FOOTBALL MATCHES.

Married v. Single Men.

This match was played at Bonn on Wednesday afternoon when the teams proved to be very evenly matched. After a good deal of midfield play the Single men broke away, and Lt. Mutch was allowed to shoot from close in.

On resuming, the goal-keeper of the Married side dealt with a few nasty shots which he saved in masterly style, and much credit is due to him for saving his side from further defeat.

Result- Single . . 1; Married . . Nil.

Officers v. N. C. O's.

A most interesting game was played at Bonn on Friday between the Officers and the N.C.O's of the Lancs. Div. Signal Coy. Early in the game Capt. Luck had hard lines with a left foot drive. Shortly afterwards Capt. Ransford had an open goal, but drove over the bar. Play settled in midfield and half-time arrived with no score.

On resuming, the N.C.O's broke away but were repulsed by Major Michelmore who was playing a brilliant defence. This put the Officers on the attack and Capt. Ransford shot hard for goal and Cpl. Peters in attempting to clear put the ball through his own goal. The N.C.O's seemed to find their feet after this and broke away, the ball coming out to the right wing wh ch Cpl. Molyneux picked up, and scored a brilliant goal. About five minutes afterwards this same player scored with a shot similar to the first one. With fully five minutes to go Capt. Ransford again scored with a slow shot, thus causing a drawn game of two goals each.

"MANY NOSES WILL BLEED."

3RD.M.G.CORPS. BOXING TOURNAMENT TO-NIGHT.

To-night Lt. Col. Cranston, D.S.O. commanding the Battalion, acts as referee at a Novices' Boxing Tournament. The popular hour of 5 p.m (1700 hrs.) has been selected so that the usual "promenading" may not be interfered with. About twenty couples will shake hands and fight, and many noses will bleed for the first time in the cause of boxing. This will be followed by a few exhibition fights by seasoned boxers.

MILITARY CROSS WITH THREE BARS.

PRESENTATIONS TO 5th K.O.Y.L.I. OFFICERS.

VALEDICTORY DINNER.

The 5th Bn. K.O.Y.L.I. have parted with unfeigned regret with Major Thos. Shearman, D.S.O., and Capt. Percy Bentley M.C., two officers who gained the respect of all ranks by their geniality, their fairness and, above all, by their efficiency. One would hesitate to enlarge on their services were it not for the fact that when the history of the Batt. comes to be written it will be found that their names must justly appear in every phase.

In 1906 Maj. Shearman was a private in the West-Riding (Volunteer) Field Ambulance. In 1913 he was promoted Capt. and was under canvass at Redcar when war broke out. Capt. Shearman's work during the arduous time of mobilisation was invaluable, and in April 1915 he, in command of "C" Company — a company in which Sergt. Calvert was eventually to have the honour of winning a V.C. — landed in France with the 49th Division.

On 1st Nov. 1917, he was promoted a Lt.-Col. and commanded the 1/5th Bn. He retained command until Feb. 1918, when the Bn. was amalgamated with the 2/5th and transferred to the 62nd Div. He then became 2nd in command to Lt.-Col. J.H. Peter, D.S.O. M.C., the present commanding Officer. Since that date Major Shearman, as he then became, has been in every action with the Batt., and on the 18th of October, 1918, he was gazetted with a well merited and heartily acclaimed D.S.O. for gallantry at Havrincourt. He also received 'mentions" in May and Nov. 1918.

Capt. F. Percy Bentley.

Capt. Percy Bentley, who greatly distinguished himself by winning the Military Cross four times, came to France with the Batt. in April 1915, and was wounded at the end of the same month. Returning to the Battalion in June he was appointed Adjutant, which post he filled until his demobilisation. His A/Captaincy is dated 10th June 1915 and the rank was made substantive on the 1st June 1916. He was wounded at Ypres on Oct. 20th, 1917, but came back to the Batt. in Feb. 1918.

Capt. Bentley gained the first M.C. for gallantry during the operations on the Somme, and his three bars were won for conspicuously good work in the "shows" at Bucquoy, on the Marne, and at Havricourt in 1918.

Appreciative references to both of these officers were made at a valedictory dinner given at Bn. H.Q., and the sentiments then expressed are certainly shared by the whole of the Battalion who have come into contact with Major Shearman and Capt. Bentley.

MOUNTED GYMKHANA AT WAHN.

A Mounted Gymkhana was held at Wahn on Saturday by the 113th Army Brigade, R.F.A. under the Presidency of Lieut Col, A.G. Arbuthnot, C.M G, D.S.O, R.F.A.

In spite of inclement weather, all the events went off very well, and were all keenly contested.

"The Wrestling on Horseback" provided some great fun when it was found that all the "B" Battery had been defeated and "A" Battery were so keen that they were wrestling amongst themselves.

The Jumping, both by Officers and other ranks, was of especial merit and revealed some quite unsuspected talent amongst the other ranks.

The Totalisator was well patronised throughout and was ably run by the Adjutant, Captain Hooper, R.F.A.

Great credit is due to the organisers and to those officiating for the able way in which they carried out their duties in spite of trying climatic conditions.

RESULTS:

Wrestling on Horseback: "A" Battery.
N.C.O's Jumping: "Corpl Clegg" "A" Battery.

AMATEUR ATHLETICS.

SPORTS ASSOCIATION AND EX-SERVICE COMPETITORS.

At the annual meeting of in the Amateur Athletic Association held in London the question was discussed of the re-qualification of athletes who competed for money prizes in competitions open only to his Majesty's forces, and others who competed in unregistered events, and who had been serving their country in connection with the war. The meeting was unanimously in favour of their being permitted to run at meetings held under Amateur Athletic Association laws, while others who may have erred against amateur laws from ignorance or necessity will have their case specially and sympathically considered with a view to reinstatement on application.

70 v 25 S.B. (R.G.A.)

The above teams met on the former's ground in Cologne on Monday. The 25th were the first to attack and soon realized that they were up against a stubborn defence. Continual pressure, however, resulted in a goal after 20 minutes play. Battery 25's inside right received the ball from Leigh and after cleverly tricking both backs succeeded in shooting past the "goalie" with a rising shot.

Apart from spasmodic "breakaway" the home team were kept continually in theirown area and the interval arrived with the 25 S.B. leading one goal to nil.

In the second half the home teams were unfortunate in having two or three of their players temporarily hurt and a quarter of an hour from time Hitchcliffe the 70 th's clever left-half back had to guit the game altogether through injury. It was during his absence that the 25th obtained their last goal which made them winners by two goals to nil.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

BY "METEOR".

Wednesday, April 16th., 1919.

Surface wind westerly 25 to 30 m. p. h., squally. Cloudy with brighter intervals. Some slight showers probable. Visibility good. Moderate temperature.

RIVAL "ROYALS" STRUGGLE AT TROISDORF.

On Saturday, the 565 A. T. Coy R.E's had as opponents the 34th (M.T.) R.A.S.C. Since the Corps League was completed the former had not lost a match and the Service came with great hopes of lowering the "Linnets" colours. Despite the fact that the weather was far from being conducive to good football, each side gave a good display. The R.E's were always the better side and fully deserved their victory of 2 goals to nil.

The outstanding features of the game were the displays of Moore (left back) and Richardson (centre half) of the 565, and Cole (right half) of the M.T's. All worked like Trojans to frustrate the attack of their opponents and assist in the attack of their own front line.

INTER-COMPANY RUGGER COMPETITION.

85TH R.G.A. V. LANCASHIRE DIV. R.A.M.C.

The play in this match which took place at the Cölnstr. Bonn, was of a fast description during the opening half with the "Medicals" doing most of the pressing. Byrne got going on the left wing and finally centred beautifully, leaving Braish nothing to do but place the ball out of the reach of the Artillery custodian. Nelson and Leyburn were prominent in both attack and defence for the R.A.M.C. Score at interval:—Lanc. Div. R.A.M.C. I Goal; 84th R.G.A. Nil.

The play in the second half slackened considerably as the pace set in the first half was telling on the players. The Artillery made determined efforts to get on level terms, but Howarth was rock-like in defence and saved his side on several occasions. Brown made several spirited sprints on the right wing and one of these resulted in a second point for the "Medicals."

Stung by this revoerse the Artillery set about wiping out the deficit but they were met by a stubborn defence though on one occasion they were dangerously near to obtaining their objective, Howarth being injured in averting disaster.

The R.G.A. kept up the pressing but they generally finished weakly to promising movements. No further scoring resulted.

The final score was therefore:—

Lancs. Div. R.A.M.C. . . . 2; 84th R.G.A. . . . 0.

HOCKEY.

VI. CORPS. H.Q. v 2ND. ROYAL SCOTS (CADRE).

On the Stadtwald Hockey Ground on Friday, a very enjoyable match, was played on an excellent pitch. The VI. Corps team has been suffering from changes due to demobilization, while their opponents have played several matches with the same team, and this was reflected by the play. Goals were scored for the winners by Sgt. Groves (2), C.Q.M.S. Logan (2), Major Harvey (1), Lt. Wood MC. (1), and Cpl. Burke (1).

Result: 2nd. Royal Scots, 7 goals; VI. Corps. H.Q, 1 goal.

The previous matches of the 2nd. Royal Scots team have resulted in wins for them as follows: 51st. Bn. D.L.Q. 3—0; 11th. Bn. The Royal Scots, at Reihl, 5—2; 11th, Bn. Royal Scots, at Haan, 4—1.

575 COY R.A.S.C. v. K.R.R.

This local "Derby" was played on the latter team's enclosure last Wednesday in fine weather before a good crowd. "Blood was drawn" during the first five minutes by the "Commos" the home defence having been caught napping. Play was of a very fast description and some neat touches were visible on both sides. The Rifles were penned in their own quarters for some minutes. and the "goalie" was applauded for some really fine work, between the "sticks". Eventually the home side broke away and equalised. This was the state of affairs at the interval.

The Rifles had now the aid of the wind and were not long in troubling the "Commos" defence, but the latter proved equal to all calls. Shortly after this the "Commos" broke clean away and had the goal at their mercy, but to the disgust of their supporters the chance was mulled. This inspired the Rifles and they rushed away to the opposite end, where they managed to increase the score. This success livened things up a little for some time, and play was of a more even description. The home side proved the smarter team and eventually ran out winners by the score:-

9th DURHAMS v. 5th CAMERONS.

Played at Riehl, Cologne, on Saturday. In a previous game, the Camerons got home by the odd goal in three. Play was confined mostly to the home end, but the Durham defence stood the test well, though they had one or two lucky escapes. Dodds made no mistake with a penalty kick awarded to the Camerons. The Durhams put more life into their work after this reverse and gave the visiting goalkeeper an anxious time for a few minutes.

In the second half, Scott had a try which just skimmed the bar. Shortly after Stevenson from a pass by Conway, scored with a low drive. During a hot bombardment, the Durhams were awarded a penalty for "hands". Stevenson scored from it.

Result: 9th D.L.I., 2; 5th Camerons, 1.

INTER-ALLIED SPORTS.

WILSON TROPHY FOR LEADING COUNTRY.

The sports programme of the Inter-Allied games, the finals of which will be held at Joinville-le-Pont, near Paris, in June is being exhausted rapidly, and increasing enthusiasm is being shown.

President Woodrow Wilson has offered, a handsome trophy which will go to the nation s oring the greatest number of points; Gen. John J. Pershing has offered a prize for the winning team in the musketry competition, and it is understood that other trophies will soon be forthcoming from other prominent persons.

The President s gift is a bronze statue representing "Jason and the Golden Fleece," designe by De Lansen and awarded a prize at Rome.

Its symbolism is appropiate in that it represents the victory of the leader of the Argonaut over the dragon and the return of the victor with the golden fleece. The application of this symbolism to present conditions can readily be made, and the statue seems admirably, for presentation by President Wilson as the championship trophy for the games.

It will bear the following inscription:

Track and Field Championship
Inter-Allied Games
Paris—1919
Presented by President Wilson

Rules under which the games are to be conducted and details of the programme have just been annouced. There will be no official summary of the contests issued by the Games Commitee as the meet progresses to fasten on any nation competing a military athletic championship, but the winning nation in each branch of sport will be recognized as champion in that particular sport.

Twenty-four different events are listed in the programme, and competitions will be conducted in all of them in which entries are made by two or more nations.

In all round-robin and elimination tournaments where more than two teams are entered, one match will determine the winner.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

THE NATIONAL FESTIVAL.

SOCIALIST TROUBLES.

The socialist party have a great desire to inaugurate a national festivity for the 1st May, but considerable opposition is being experienced from the middle class parties. The Kölnische Volkszeitung the organ of the centre party, declared revently that "it is impossible for them as also for the middle class parties to give their consent to this idea of making the 1st May a day for the national festival. This day is a symbol of socialism and constitutes a holiday for socialists. It is a day on which they set everything else aside in order to demonstrate their views to the whole world. Can the middle class, which is the direct adversary of socialism, consider as its own such a festival? We have nothing to say against the creation of a national festival but let us choose another day. The 1st May can not be taken in consideration by us at all."

APPEAL OF THE SOCIALIST PARTY.

Berlin 4th April.

"Workmen, workwomen in town and country! The 1st May was made the demonstratton day of the whole working class of all the countries by the International Con ress of Socialists and Trade-Unions in Paris in the year of the century-feast of the French Revolution. On this day in the whole world the working people should meet to demand the 8 hours'day.

"In Germany, also, this aim has been reached, for after the Revolution, the Socialist Government considered it one of its first duties to establish the 8-hours-day law. In addition the rights of coalition hawe been assured.

"With the victory of democracy and the 8-hour-day law—that for which the working-classes of other countries are still fighting—much has been achieved.

"After the revolution, the socialist government considered it as their duty to create by law the 8-hours day.

"Let us, therefore, also on the 1st May this year demonstrate our own socialist ideals by organising mass demonstrations with tally with the serious character of this dreadful epoch. To celebrate festivals is not our duty, whilst millions of people are without work on account of the war and the ghost of hunger is at large in the country.

"But the 1st May was also a day of protest against war and militarism. After this most terrible of wars a repetition will be impossible for a long time in Europe, and in order that it shall become impossible for ever, let us demonstrate on the 1st of May.

"Therefore the people who wish to secure a perpetual peace, must raise their voices for the League of Nations on this day. The stronger that is, the more the foreign countries will realize that the old-serving Germany is destroyed for ever and that the German people are ready to see that peace will never be disturbed again.

"In addition, the people must also make it clearly understood that the German Republic is not merely a temporary appearance and that Socialism in Germany will march on without being stoppend.

"In order that this may be made clearly manifest work must stop on the 1st of May. It must be shown to the rulers of yesterday, that the working classes will not tolerate any going-back. They are definite in their policy of completing the political conquests of the Revolution and in securing for themselvet a decisive influenze on the economic life.

You workers all, in town and country, mobilize in this sense for the review of troops on the coming 1st May."

RHINE PLEASURE TRIPS.

PROPOSED ARRANGEMENTS.

A Second Army memorandum of recent issue gives a detailed account of the arrangements for forthcoming trips on the Rhine.

Below are several of the points mentioned.

It is proposed to use two steamers for pleasure trips up the Rhine, one starting from Cologne and the other from Bonn. These steamers are the "Schiller" and the "Elberfeld" and have accomodation for approximately 800 to 900 passengers.

It is hoped that later two smaller steamers will also be available for this purpose.

Steamers are allotted to Formations as follows:—

Starting from:	Cologne:	Bonn:
Monday	II Corps	IV Corps
Tuesday	II Corps	X Corps
Wednesday	—	X Corps
Thursday	IV Corps	—
Friday	VI Corps	IX Corps
Saturday	VI Corps	IX Corps.

As these steamers may be required at short notice for the movement of troops between Rotterdam and Cologne etc. they are liable to be cancelled at very short notice. In the event of this being necessary it will be done direct by the D.D.I.W.T.

A minimum of 400 men will be taken on each trip, and boats will not proceed with a smaller number. Applications for allotment of smaller steamers will be submitted to Army Haedquarters and treated as special cases if necessary.

In the event of personnel for demobilization etc. being held up in the Cologne Concentration Camp, the O.C. Camp may apply direct to D.D.I.W.T. on the chance of a boat being available for a day's trip.

Formations concerned will make all arrangements for rations. There are two field cookers on each boat for cooking mens food, and cooking facilities also exist for Officers. Units however have to supply plates, cutlery, etc.

VISCOUNT DILLON AND WAR MEMORIALS.

VILLAGE TABLETS.

Viscount Dillon, a member of the Royal Commission on Historical Monuments, has made interesting remarks on the methods that should be adopted in order to perpetuate the many glorious deeds of the present war.

He says that he would like to see outside every village church a tablet recording the names of those who served, and especially of those who fell.

"As we have many religions persuasions," he writes, "I prefer the exterior of the village church, where all who pass may read, to the interior where only the Church of England soldiers and their friends would see the record.

"Such tablets should be within the reach pecuniarily of any village however small, but where the funds contributed for such a memorial are in excess of the cost of the tablet or shrine, I would suggest that instead of building a hospital or reading room the nearest large hospital should receive the overflow of she pious stream. Buildings cost much money from the architect's design (qualified by the county council requirements), the heavy cost now of erection, and lastly the maintenance, if the memorial should be more than a passing effort.

"As I have elsewhere urged, the large existing county hospitals in good working order should benefit by an increase to their funds, rather than the new erection of a building which has not the strength of endurance such as the existing institutions."

HELP FOR FARMS IN FLANDERS.

WORK OF THE AGRICULTURAL RELIEF COMMITEE.

According to an article in the Observer, thirty one villages of western Flanders in the neighbourhood of the battle zone have now been provided with live stock by the Agricultural Relief of Allies Committee, which was inaugurated by the Royal Agricultural Society. The Belgian Government have furnished the committee with details showing how the 300 dairy shorthorn cattle recently sent have been placed in the hands of small peasant farmers in the vicinity of Dixmude, Ypres, Menin and Cortemarck.

It was laid down by the committee that only those peasants who are destitute of means and therefore quite unable to re-stock their holdings should be the recipients of relief, and among these the number of head of cattle possessed individually before the war was taken as ensuring that only the small man was assisted. No one was to be entitled to receive a heifer who in pre-war days had more than ten head of stock. By this means the most urgent and deserving cases among those returning to their holdings were discovered.

Each recipient was required to sign an undertaking to keep each animal for at least three years. Twenty pedigree bulls were sent by the committee, and these were entrusted to farmers who had previously secured prizes for stock-rearing, and since the females are to be mated only with these bulls the purity of the progeny will be safeguarded.

Soon after their arrival at Antwerp the cattle were placed in trucks and forwarded to three distributing centres—Ostend, Menin, and Cortemarck.

The committee have received many letters of thanks from the burgomasters of the communes, all of which emphasise the great value of help in so practical a form. Writing in English, the burgomaster of Gheluwe says:—"This present is for us not only a mighty relief, but still more a proof of the friendship of our powerful and noble Allies, and a certain pledge of the aid they will lend to the restoration of our country devastated by a common enemy."

A further consignment of life stock for western Flanders leaves during the next few days.

LANGUAGE TEACHING.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— This is a national questin of the utmost importance and I trust your article on the above subject in your issue of 15th inst., has not passed unnoticed.

In peace-time my love of languages constrained me to sacrifice a good situation in order to cross the Channel which I considered was the best way to acquire a practical knowledge of modern languages, more particularly French and German. All I had to back me up was my own perseverance and a nest-egg I had saved in Blighty. Several years' residence on the Continent cost me a great deal of inconvenience, effort, money, and study, but after the struggle I was able to pass off anywhere as an Englishman, Frenchman, or Cerman, and I felt at home everywhere.

Some teachers say that you can learn a foreign language in a few hours but this is absolutic nonsense, no matter how talented the pupil or the teacher may be, or how up-to-date the method adopted.

The Berlitz method is very good but it has its disadvantages, and there are better and speedier methods. A teacher ought to be able to turn out in one year at least one hundred pupils with a splendid knowledge of the language taught and a knowledge far superior to that ever attained even after many years' tuition by our old-fashioned Blighty methods, which usually neglect the ear and the tongue of the pupil who ought to be taught first of all to understand and to speak. Reading and writing, after all, are secondary matters and ought to follow the training of the ear and the tonque which in many cases are neglected altogether.

May I point out that there are, inter alia, four things that I love very much; namely—music, languages, teaching, and my home in Blighty. But here are two significant facts:

1. As a teacher I can find no situation in Blighty at any price.
2. On the continent my pay as a teacher is anything from 10/-to £ 1 per hour (that was before the war).

Will you believe me then when I say:

1. That I reside permanently on the Continent against my will.
2. That in Blighty the love of money is infinitely greater than the thirst for knowledge and
3. That the position will ultimately prove to be serious and ought to be tackled immediately and earnestly by the guardians of our nations welfare, namely, the government.

Lover of Languages.

FREE TRAVELLING FOR M.P's.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—I notice your correspondent "Verb. Sap." in his letter on this subject makes a very great mistake in saying that M.P.'s receive not less than £400 p.a. Now I would like to point out that an M.P. only receives his salary from the day he is sworn i. e. takes his seat. Now none of the members elected on 28th Dezember last will receive anything like £400 by 28th December this year. I think Parliament opened on February 11th so that a member lost about forty-five days pay during the period of waiting to take his seat and if he was unfortunate enough to be crowded out at the swearing-in on the first day, he lost a further day's pay. I think M.P's. should receive a free pass to travel on on the railways of the United Kingdom. I know one Labour member who had to resign his situation on being nominated. His salary then was £180 a year. This season ticket costs £66 a year. He has to keep his home going in the provinces aud to take lodgings in London. The latter cost him bed and breakfast £1.13 a week. His correspondenc last month cost him £5.7 in stamps. Now the day is long past when the membership should be confined to wealthy men. The Labourmen in the House are absolutely necessary and the pity is that there are not more of them. Free travelling on the railway would be great boon to the poorer members (who are not confined to the Labour Party). I know of one member who has given up lunch when in London as he cannot affort it. I wonder how your correspondent "Verb. Sap." would like to have to do that when he is in London.

A.C.

WHO ARE "THE GUNNERS"?

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—We notice that in your report of the football match between 1st Battalion M.G.C. and "B" Battery 104th Brigade R.H.A. you refer to the M.G.C. as "Gunners" as opposed to the R.H.A as "Artillery."

May we draw attention to the fact that The Royal Regiment has always been referred to colloquially as "The Gunners."

Without wishing to cast any aspersion on the M.G.C. we feel it is hardly right that our old sobriquet should be usurped by another regiment; they can surely think of a title of themselves.

When the Prime Minister addresses the House of Commons he will be able to report that more satisfactory progress has been made with the Peace negotiations thar seemed possible a few days ago but it is not yet expected that he will be able to go into any details.

GENERAL ROBERTSON DUE THIS WEEK.

General Sir William Robertson, who vacated the command of the Home forces yesterday, will leave London on Good Friday to take over command of the Army of the Rhine, with Headquarters at Cologne.

Sir Douglas Haig took up his quarters at the Horse Guards yesterday as Field Marshal Commanding in Chief in Great Britain.

GARRISON AT ARCHANGEL.

CANADIAN ARCTIC EXPERTS.

Reuter learns authoritatively that about six hundred Canadian troops are serving with the present force in North Russia. The detachment, which consists of Field Artillery Batteries of the Sixteenth Brigade Canadian Field Artillery, in all about five hundred men, with administrative staff and a number of officers, are men experienced in Arctic conditions.

The Canadians on the Murmansk front under Col. Leskie D.S.O. include many old Klondyke men and the whole detachment, officers, non-commissioned officers and men alike, has had many years experience in Canada of the hardships of life in an Arctic climate and are therefore eminently fitted to instruct other troops, who are naturally totally unused to such climatic conditions.

It is chiefly for these instructional purposes that General Maynard has been using the Canadians under his command.

NORTH RUSSIA RELIEF FORCE

MEN WHO ARE WANTED.

A special badge has now been approved for this force. This badge, after the style of the divisional distinguishing marks used in France, is to be a white star on a blue ground, 3in. square, and will be worn on the upper part of the sleeve.

Recruiting for the relief force is proceeding well. Keenness is shown by the fact that numerous officers have volunteered as privates rather than forego the opportunity of serving in the force. Hundreds of men have joined from all parts of the United Kingdom, but London holds the lead.

Any men with machine-gun experience will be considered for the Machine Gun Corps, which will not be confined to men who have previously served in the corps. Men trained as drivers are wanted for this corps. Mechanical transport drivers are required for the Royal Army Service Corps unit proceeding to Russia. A certain number of men will be accepted as well as R.F.A. men, as a mountain battery may possibly form part of the force.

All recruits for the North Russian Relief Force who arrive at the collecting depôts up to to-day April 17, are being granted four days' leave—Good Friday to Easter Monday inclusive—and every endeavour will be made to grant similar leave to all others as soon as they are clothed. The above points, of course, only apply to men in the British Isles at the present time.

WEST SIBERIA FREE FROM BOLSHEVISM.

An Omsk telegram dated the 3rd April states that the Kalchaks offensive is developing successfully. A complete factory and several hundred armoured wagons containing machine guns were captured near Larahou.

Another telegram says that the whole of West Siberia is now reported free from Boshevism and that the Kalchaks Government is being stabilised. Reuter.

TRAITORS REPATRIATED.

According to a statement by the Secretary of State for War, thirty-three men belonging to the so called Casement Brigade have been repatriated, in addition to the two who figured in the Casement trial.

Their case is under Government consideration.

SEDITIOUS DISTURBANCES IN INDIA.

BANK MANAGERS BURNT.

The Viceroy of India reports that grave disorders occurred in India on the 10th and 11th April when protests were made against the Rowlatt anti-Sedition Bills.

The chief centres of disturbance were Amritsar in the Punjab and Ahmedabad in the Bombay Presidency.

Government buildings were burnt and the telegraph wires cut. At Amritsar three bank managers were burnt to death. Troops were called in and the mobs fired on. There was loss of life on both sides.

The latest report states that order has been restored. Reuter.

DEMOBILISATION SUSPENDED IN EGYPT AND INDIA.

On Tuesday in the House of Commons, during a discussion on some House of Lords amendments to the Military Service Bill, Mr. Winston Churchill renewed his assurance that the Territorials in the East would be relieved at the earliest possible moment. He was working night and day to that end and hoped that nine out of ten of them would be brought home as soon as climatic conditions in the Red Sea permitted, even though voluntary recruiting had dropped from a thousand per day to a hundred per day, a most lamentable falling off.

Mr. Churchill subsequently announced that owing to recent events demobilisation has been suspended in Egypt and India.

In the House of Commons Brig.-Gen. Page Croft (N. P. Bournemouth) affirmed that numerous demobilized officers and men are suffering serious losses owing to the long delays in their repatriation to India and the East. Montagu replied that the India Office is responsible only for the repatriation of Indian Army reserve officers. He was unaware of any delay in such cases and he had received no complaints. He would investigate any case communicated to him.

BAVARIAN REVOLUTION.

Munich is entirely in the power of the Spartacists but the Government troops have been reinforced and are now bombarding the Spartacists' stronghold, the railway station. Other Bavarian reinforcements are proceeding to Munich, The Spartacists have arrested most members of the Central Council. Street fighting is increasing and there are many civilian victims.

The battle between the Government troops and the Spartacists for the possession of the railway station ended in the complete defeat of the former. Railway communication between Berlin and Munich is suspended.

Dr. Levine has been proclaimed head of the Communist Government.

GERMAN STRIKE NEWS.

About four thousand clerks, employed by fifty firms, are on strike at Cologne.

Negotiations between the military authorities and the strikers at Dusseldorf bid fair to be successful.

At Landsberg the garrison is striking as a protest against the reduction of their pay to pre-war rate.

At Heilsberg the women demonstrated as a protest against the shortage of eggs. So violent was their behaviour that martial law had to be proclaimed.

GRATUITIES AND INTERRUPTIONS.

In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. W.T. Wilson (Lab., West Houghton) moved that the present pensions and gratuities awarded to ex-soldiers or their dependents is inadequate and ought to be increased.

Sir Worthington Evans, replying to the debate, emphasised the fairness of the method of relying on the medical evidence regarding men's disability. He said that since the Estimates were presented the Pensions Bill had been increased by three millions. The Ministry had received two hundred and twenty thousand claims from discharged men, eleven per cent of which were from men demobilised since the armistice.

The motion was withdrawn.

WOMEN INTERRUPT.

In the course of the debate on this motion two women in the strangers gallery commenced shouting to members "You murderers! You unsettled the last war. You are landing the people and workers into another war".

They were immediately seized and hustled out of the gallery, shouting all the time. Another woman shouted "Long live Soviets." She was requested to retire and did so quietly.

The women were subsequently identified as Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, Mrs. Cole and Mrs. Stephenson.

They were all released.

The maintenance of the armies of occupation has cost to date four hundred and thirty six million marks.

ILL TREATED KUT PRISONERS

TURKISH GENERAL CAPTURED

The Times Constantinople Correspondent says that Halil Pasha, ex-Commander of the Turkish Army in Mesopotamia, and Avni Bey, ex-Governor-General of the province of Angora, in Asia Minor, were surprised and captured on the 3rd April.

Halil, who has evaded arrest by the Turkish Government for over two months, is accused of Armenian atrocities.

His surrender was further demanded by the British Government on the ground that he is believed to have been responsible for the ill-treatment of the British and Indian prisoners of war who were taken at Kut.

AWARDS TO WAR INVENTORS.

INCENDIARY TRACER BULLET.

At the first sitting of the Royal Commission on awards to inventors Mr. J. F. Buckingham, of Coventry, who invented the incendiary tracer bullet, claimed thirty thousand pounds, being fifteen per cent on the value of twenty-six million bullets accepted by the Government.

It was stated that the profit of making these bullets to date was only five thousand pounds, minus excess profits duty, his capital being six thousand.

Mr. Buckingham also went to France and instructed the French how to manufacture the bullets and there had been a tentative arrangement regarding his reward from the French Government the outcome of which was one hundred and twenty pounds.

The Commission, whihh deliberated in private, will announce its decision to-morrow.

Two guinea half-hour flights in giant aeroplanes are among the attractions offered to the public during the Easter holidays.

ANTICIPATING THE BUDGET.

Among trade speculations on the coming Budget a belief prevails among distillers that the industry duty on spirits will be raised from thirty to forty shillings per proof gallon. Provisional plans are being made to stop profiteering.

The abolition of grocers' licenses is spoken of, but it is extremely unlikely that this will be done.

GIPSY SMITH DEMOBILIZED.

Captain Gipsy Smith, Northumberland Fusiliers, who has just been demobilized, sailed yesterday from Liverpool to fulfil preaching engagements in New York, Montreal, Chicago, Philadelphia and St Louis.

He hopes to return in August to conduct a great evangelistic mission in Great Britain.

When war broke out he was about to leave Liverpool for a preaching tour in the United States. He forthwith took his luggage off the boat and joined Lovat's Scouts as a private, subsequently obtaining a commission. He was badly smashed on the Somme in July 1916, but recovering, again volunteered for the front and was in the midst of the fighting until the armistice.

Gipsy Smith is of pure Romany blood and was born in a gipsy tent.

RATION BOOKS ABOLISHED.

No new ration books will be issued after 3rd May and it is hoped that rationing will have ceased by the beginning of July.

The announcement that from today the unrestricted sale of meat pies, sandwiches and cooked meats is allowed without coupons, has relieved Easter holiday makers of much anxiety.

AMERICAN WAR CASUALTIES.

General March, Chief of Staff to the American Army says that the American casualties in the Argonne fighting were 18.3 per cent, which was much below that of some of the battles in the American civil war. For instance, at Whiloh the casualties were 24 per cent, at Gettysburg 20 per cent and at Chicaquoga 23 per cent.

The General also states that uniforms and badges of fifty different British regiments were worn by 2,300 of the American troops, who returned to the United States aboard the Mauretania. All these men had enlisted in the British service in the early days of the war.

CIVILIANS TO FLY AGAIN.

In the House of Commons on Tuesday, the Minister for Air, Brig.-Gen. Seely, said that the restrictions which prohibit any but military aviators flying will be removed at the end of this month. Civilians will be permitted to fly as from 1st. May.

PRIVATE—LIEUT-COLONEL—PHYSICAL INSTRUCTOR.

The physical instructor at Gillingham Technical Schools has resumed his duties. He joined the army as a private and retired as Lieutenant Colonel H.J. Selby, Royal Scots.

Tuesday's Gazette contained the following announcement under the heading "Memorandum." Capt. (Temp. Major) the Prince of Wales from Grenadier Guards, to be Colonel, dated 15th April 1919.

The Daily News says there is every likelihood that Clara Butt will appear in Grand Opera at Covent Garden.

Mr. Will Thorn, the well-known Labour leader, declares that there must soon be another general election.

The Shell Transport Company is increasing its capital by eight million sterling to twenty three million sterling.

SHOT WHILE TRYING TO ESCAPE.

INQUIRY OPENED.

Great public interest was evinced in the coroner's inquiry which opened on Monday on the R.A.S.C. private named Savage, who was shot by a member of the escort at Waterloo Road last Thursday while he was endeavouring to escape from custody.

The coroner asked the jury to consider whether the escort had reasonable grounds for thinking that there was no other method of preventing the escape. If so the killing was justifiable but otherwise it would be their duty to return a verdict of manslaughter.

L.-Cpl. Debues, aged 32, of the 16th Bn. the London Regiment, said that on the 10th April he and three riflemen were escorting six prisoners from France to Portland. On the way to Waterloo he repeatedly warned Savage and another prisoner named Kitching, who were handcuffed together, not to walk so fast.

When about to turn to the left he received a blow from Savage, who endeavoured to trip him. He stumbled and Savage and Kitching bolted. He and Clark (the soldier who fired the shot) were in full marching order and the prisoners out-distanced them. He repeatedly shouted "Stop! or I fire."

When they had got still further away he said to Clark, "Whe shall have to bring them down" and told him to load and aim low.

Clark fired once when the men were about 70 yards away.

He was anxious, because he had left four other prisoners in the custody of only two men.

The medical evidence showed that the bullet had gone completely through the left shoulder.

Pte. Clark, aged 19, of the 2 16th Bn. the London Regiment, made a statement as to firing the shot. He said he suffered from V.D.H. (valvular disease of the heart) and could not run fast. He bore out the evidence given by L.-Cpl. Debeus.

Asked by the coroner why he was selected for escort duty if he suffered from valvular disease of the heart, witness said he was really going home on leave and was doing escort duty on the way.

Pte. Kitching, aged 20, 11th Royal Scots, said he was one of a party of prisoners from No. 5 military prison at Calais. Savage had been sentenced to ten years penal servitude (subsequently reduced to five years) for desertion. Witness' own sentence was one of three years. It was Savage who proposed making a dash for liberty.

Kitching confirmed the evidence given by the escorts and said that he and Savage could have out-distanced them.

The inquiry was adjourned until 23rd. April.

A large crowd which assembled outside the coroner's court made a demonstration as the escort left the building after the proceedings.

OVERSEAS PROHIBITION.

SERVICE VOTE WILL DECIDE.

Wellington. The latest prohibition referendum returns show 226,239 votes for the continuance of licensing and 238,799 for prohibition. It is expected however that the 16,000 soldier and sailor votes still outstanding will reverse this verdict. Reuter.

Owing to the Quebec province having voted for the retention of licenses for the sale of wine and beer the Dominion Government will probably reconsider its attitude towards prohibition and introduce legislation allowing any province to permit such sale. Reuter.

NO MORE GOVERNMENT ALE.

Shortly after the introduction of the budget on 30th April, the so-called Government ale will disappear. It will be replaced by a better quality of liquor.

The average specific gravity which is now 1030 will be increased te 1040. Before the introduction of brewing restrictions in 1915 the average specific gravity was 1050 in Great Britain and 1060 in Ireland, so even the new beer at 1040 will be much weaker than pre-war beer. However it is anticipated that brewers will be able to produce a palatable beverage. It is admitted that Government ale has not been a success.

If the present controlled prices are maintained the new beer can be sold at sixpence per pint in public bars and at sevenpence in other parts of licensed premises.

It is anticipated, in the event of the budget increasing the excise duty on spirits, that distillers will press for permission to increase the retail price of whisky beyond the present price of nine shillings per bottle.

SUICIDE OF A K.C.

At the inquiry into the cause of the death of Mr. A. J. Walter, the well-known King's Counsel, witnesses testified that he jumped in front of an inner circle train, which was pulling into Euston Road station.

Deceased had complained of pains in the head. The jury returned a verdict of suicide during temporary insanity.

BEER OR BREAD?

Five hundred men and women employed in the export bottling trade have been thrown out of work at Liverpool owing to the refusal of the dockers to handle spirits and beer for export while there is a shortage in England.

The bottlers on Saturday distributed pamphlets to the dockers as they were leaving work which stated "with you it is a question of a few more pints of inferior beer; with us it is a question of food for our families. Which is it to be — beer or bread?"

LANSDOWNE ESTATE TO BE SOLD.

The sale by auction is announced of 1,363 acres of the Lansdowne estate which includes Bath racecourse, the Lansdowne golf club house and part of the links.

ATLANTIC WEATHER STILL UNFAVOURABLE.

TWO COMPETITORS READY.

St. John's, Newfoundland. 15th April. The weather to-day still makes Hawker's departure impossible and the drizzling rain has turned the ground before his hangar into a quagmire.

Meanwhile Raynham continues to hurry forward the assembling of his own machine and hopes to be able to take the air simultaneously with Hawker. It is believed that if the elements delay Hawker for two more days Raynham will be on an equal footing for the honour of starting the race.

Despite the sodden ground Hawker yesterday was disposed to begin the attempt, but altered his plans when warnings were received of the presence of low pressure rain squalls in mid Atlantic.

Raynham declared that he proposed making the passage like any workaday flight. The Martinsyde machine could fly for twenty-five hours at the rate of a hundred miles an hour and it is expected that the pilot will make direct for Ireland, proceeding thence to Brooklands, completing the whole journey in twenty hours.

Raynham said that they would carry food for twenty-four hours as well as lifebelts, although they might well leave the belts behind because they would be of no use in an emergency.

Capt. Morgan, Raynham's navigator, will lay the course, using a sextant on the stars by night and the sun by day.

Communication between his observer and Raynham will be both written and by tube. — Reuter.

The Martinsyde machine is somewhat smaller than the Sopwith and has no boat, so if any mishap befall the occupants their fate is sealed. They are in excellent spirits and quite confident of success.—Reuter.

HUGE RED CROSS EXPENDITURE.

ECONOMICAL MANAGEMENT.

During the last year of the war the British Red Cross Society spent over 7,243,281 pounds, a phenomenal figure. The income for this period exceeded the expenditure by £ 182,000.

Management expenses amounted to only three pence in the pound of income.

The increase of expenditure over previous years was largely due to the large number of food parcels sent to prisoners of war, stores supplied to regiments, and grants to regimental committees.

50,000 FOR CHARITIES.

Lady Webb, wife of Lt.-Col. Sir Henry Webb, formerly member of Parliament for the Forest of Dean, left £82,660 of which £50,000 will be devoted to charities.

Several legacies in the will are "in accordance with the wishes of my son, Lieutenant Webb, of the Welsh Guards, killed in action during this great war."

FIRE AT NEWCASTLE SHIPYARD.

A destructive fire broke out yesterday at the Armstrong Whitworth shipyard at Newcastle on Tyne. Flames broke out in the electrical fitting shop and rigging store, in close proximity to other buildings and a ship in course of construction, but by strenuous effort the fire was confined to its original location.

The damage amounts to several thousands of pounds.

PASSIVE STRIKE AT LIMERICK.

The entire business and commercial life of Limerick is at a standstill as the result of a general strike in protest against the town being proclaimed a special military area.

There is no disorder but civilian movement is possible only by permission of the strike committee.

A similar situation obtains at Cork, which has also been proclaimed a military area.

SMALL HOLDINGS FOR EX-SOLDIERS.

The Land Settlement Bill passed its second reading in the House of Commons yesterday.

Its purpose is to give effect to the Government's promise of small holdings for ex-soldiers, who will have priority, together with women who have been working full time on the land for six months.

Twenty thousand acres have already been purchased and provision is made for loans to assist in stocking the holdings.

MORE HOTELS GIVEN UP.

The Secretary to the Air Ministry announces that the Adelphi Hotel, which was occupied by a portion of the Air Ministry, and Covent Garden Hotel, which was the Headquarters of the South-eastern Area of the Royal Air Force, have been given up and are no longer occupied by Air Ministry and Air Force personnel.

LONDON STOCK EXCHANGE.

Although business diminishes as the holidays draw near, a good tone prevailed on the London Stock Exchange yesterday. Trading in Oils however continued on a large scale and there were some active features in Industrials. Government issues were firm but Indians receded a little on receipt of the news of the disturbances in the Punjab and Bombay. Argentine securities hardened, the labour situation at Buenos Ayres being said to be improving.

The Blue Cross Fund has opened the Charlton Kennels at Shooters-Hill for quarantining dogs belonging to soldiers and sailors who are unable to pay the usual fees.

THE PASSING OF MILITARISM.

Four years ago to-day British soldiers with indomitable courage of body and of soul were fighting a sullen and bloody battle. They won their battle, they kept untarnished their escutcheons, but many fell to fight no more. Opposite the 17th April, 1915, future annalists will write a laconic sentence that shall be more glorious than an epitaph "British soldiers took Hill 60 at heavy cost." It is good that the Army of the Rhine should at times take a backward and comprehending look. There is sorrow in the vision, for we mourn the brave men who are not; yet there is hallowed pride in the sacrifice of the lealhearted who counted all but loss that they might win freedom and righteouness. Westminster Abbey is no longer our Valhalla: it is to be found where lie our happy warriors. Yes, it is good to have our quiet times when we may worship at the shrine of patriostism that counted not the cost and wears for ever its crown of glory. From our worship we go forth again into the world nerved and succoured and inspired.

Yet we must also look forward. Victory has attended our arms, and victory brings Peace. We have fought in vain, if the dread spectre of militarism is not laid low. Nothing less noble than honourable and enduring peace can solace hearts that are sore with the wounds of strife. Will our readers pardon an illustration and a lesson? They are taken from the tasks of youth, tasks to which distance lends its inevitable enchantment. Many must remember how the pages of Virgil's Aeneid, that book of heroes and heroic fights, claimed laborious days and a scholastic attention that was not always willing. Yet as knowledge of strange words grew we learned to follow the fortunes of Aneas and his fellows with subdued interest. We had in the classic tale food for our likes and dislikes, our admiration and our loathing. Were we not puzzled by Virgil's rough dealing with the handsome and warlike Turnus?

Mr. Warde Fowler has just published the last of his trilogy of Virgilian studies, and his commentary on the twelfth book of the Aeneid casts new light on many a difficulty. It is a study that is intimately related to our times, though it is the acme of experts cholarship. Virgil had his philosophy of history. For him Aeneas stood out as the representative of loyalty, fair-dealing, and righteousness, the creed of social and civic welfare; whilst Turnus betokened impulse, selfishness, and violence. The lesson, in Mr. Warde Fowler's words, is that violentia, with its delusions and pretences is not to prevail, and that justitia and fides are still to be the foundation-stones of our civilization."

What is militarism? It is the Virgilian violentia that brought ruin to its ill-starred champion. The end of our world warfare, we trust, is the end of militarism. The world must be made safe for democracy. That must be our rallyng cry. May it never be "a pulpit formula, a platform lie"! The nations of the world can not, and will not, go on in the old way of jealousy, strife, and bloody battle. Armed neutralities must be relegated securely to the limbo of dead forgotten things. It is time we all emerged into the summer atmosphere of peace and gladness. The League of Nations that is being welded into shape at the Versailles Conference must be as the portal of a new kingdom that shall satisfy the yearnings of stricken souls and gladden the hearts of men who have not lost hope of better things.

Hill 60 was conquered on 17th April 1915; today our leaders are conquering another hill, the Hill Difficulty, and when they reach its summit they shall proclaim the victory of honourable peace, a peace which shall satisfy the claims of justice and righteousness and mercy. We look to them and we do not look in vain.

PHOTOGRAPHY.

Lieut. W. R. PATTERSON, F.R.G.S., etc.

Probably more photographic apparatus has been sold in occupied Germany during the period of occupation than over any other period of similar duration. The Briton has, it seems, conceived the idea that such apparatus is cheap in all respects. With regard to its intrinsic value, this has been possibly the case. Both men and officers have purchased cameras of all descriptions. But I fear that many of them are wasting money and time because they do not fully appreciate the light power and the strength of the lenses.

I do not intend to consider the case of toy apparatus but of those which run into some hundreds of marks. A newcomer without previous photographic experience buys a camera and immediately proceeds to take snapshots. Here and there he flashes his shutter, often possessing no previous experience and without thought to time-values. This is a very important point. If one purchases a camera with an "Anastigmat" lens, one must remember that the light-power is stronger than that of the lenses in cheaper instruments. With a really good lens one may take a snapshot on a dull day, and the more open a scene is, so much the better will be the result. In such a case, the diaphragm must be wide open and the "Aufnahme" (exposure) must be a slow one.

It behoves one always to study this question of light in order to obtain the best possible results. With a strong lens, a 4.5 for instance, one might take a snapshot in open country on a not too dull day at fairly high speed. If on the same day and under the same climatic conditions we wished to take a snapshot in a street or other public place, the speed must necessarily be slower. Why is this? Because buildings on either hand impede the passage of light from the sky. The more light that one can obtain from above, so much the better will prove the resulting picture.

Always study your surroundings and endeavour to judge the strength of the light that is falling upon your object. Consider also the artistic value of the picture you are about to take, otherwise you may lose interest in the wonderful science of photography.

Let me append a few additional hints! In the height of summer with bright sunshine and a clear sky you may, according to the power of your camera, work at the highest speed. But remember always to have the sun over you, behind you, or on either side of you, but never facing the lens. You should never attempt a snapshot indoors. A figure study even by a bright window would need an exposure of from half a second upwards. The exposure must depend naturally upon the amount of light which the object receives from without. This is all a matter of practice combined with commonsense. If you wish to photograph a still object containing minute detail you may close your diaphragm a little, but the exposure must be longer. You may also narrow the aperture of your diaphragm in very fine weather whilst taking comparatively slow snapshots. I have a camera that gives me a thousandth of a second. I should only use this speed for a light coloured, moving object against a dark background or vice versa.

Now, in taking a photograph of a fast-moving thing, remember always to follow its flight with the camera. By this means, your object will be always in focus. It does not matter if the background is slightly blurred. Study your instrument therefore, and the value of the power of light.

"ON SEA AND ON LAND."

MR. TOM WING AT WERMELSKIRCHEN.

"Thank God we've got a Navy" is a war-born phrase which we have heard under all sorts of unusual conditions, and on divers strange occasions during the last five years. It is a phrase of many moods; a phrase to be adopted easily to the feeling of the moment. Satire, despair, triumph, and real thanksgiving, have, each in turn, found utterance in it.

Most of us can remember some occasion when things were going wrong; when a General had made unfelicitous remarks during his inspection of us; or when that much greater person the Sergeant-Major had taken too deep an interest in our lives; when in utter disgust for ourselves all things military we muttered "Thank God we've got a Navy."

Then, again, when it was wet and cold, and the rum and rations were lost on the way, we felt severely-treated mortals indeed as we sat on our chilly fire-steps, contemplating the hungry hours to come. "Rotten war, mate, aint it?" said one disappointed veteran to another. "Yus, for us poor blighters, but thank God we've got a Navy," came the answer dictated by a bitter heart and an empty stomach. The phrase grew to such universal use that it became almost a parrot cry, and as is always the case with parrot cries, it lost much of its original force and meaning. Yet through all its curious career and its many moods, it remained unaltered in itself.

Perhaps a real sentiment was hidden away somewhere behind it. Perhaps in some of his many moods, as he launched the little phrase, Thomas Atkins did really give thanks for the Empire of the Sea that the Navy was securing for him. It is possible that all unwittingly he realized how the great forces of the Nation are interdepedent, and that the War Machine is essentially amphibious.

Whatever may be the truth of the matter we have all heard the phrase and each one of us has thought, now and again, of the Great Sea Power that made possible our efforts on land.

The mission of the Navy in the War has been written about and spoken about by a vast number of people, but by few more ably than by Mr. Tom Wing who is at present lecturing to the troops on the Rhine.

He has some excellent lantern slides to illustrate his lecture, and he has much good personal experience to carry conviction with his words. When he spoke at Wermelskirchen quite recently, he left with at least one of his hearers a clearer and more vivid impression of the work of our Sister Service in conjunction with our own, than all the pen and ink strategists of the daily press have been able to convey in five long years. He described clearly and briefly something of the work that the Navy has accomplished in the effort for victory, and his hearers were able to see and appreciate some part of the new glory that the War has added to the already glorious Senior Service.

Mr. Tom Wing is worth hearing even though sometimes his lectures are treated as parades.

His audiences learn much that is new to them, and see many things in a new and more generous light. It may be said, that for the most part, they come away with a conviction of gratitude in their minds. "Thank God we had a Navy."

OLD HARROVIAN DINNER.

It has been suggested that an Old Harrovian Dinner should be held in the near future. Will all O.H's. send their names and addresses to the Editor of "The Cologne Post", without delay? Envelopes to be marked clearly "Old Harrovian." Further arrangements will be announced later.

THE EPISTLES OF PETER BIRSE, JUNIOR.

A Professor of Languages.

Dear Maister Editor,

Feelin' a bit seedy the ither nicht, an' sufferin' frae an unholy attack o' the teethake, I resolv'd tae hie me tae a Palace o' Backus i' the Hoho Strassy, an' regail musel wi' some speeritual refreshment. Lord Haldane o' Cloanden, Auchterarder, deem'd the Faitherland his speeritual name, but that was in anty-belium days, fan the beveridges were plentifu', an' leeshinsin' legislashun less strick. Enterin' a spashius room blazin' wi' myriads o' lichts, an' dazzlin' wi' the beauty o' coontless Frowlines an' their mutton-chopp'd beaus, I oarder'd a "Kümmel," as to the manner boarn.

The spruce-lookin' waiter look'd at me disjeskitly, and murmured the cursed word "Verboten!" Every German, a'm thinkin', maun drink in that a'fu' word wi' his mither's milk. It's as common as topcoats i' the Hoho Strassy, as plentifu' as bonny lasses i' the tramway-trains. There was naething for it therefor but tae bury m' deegnity, an' order a fite wine like a common or gairden soshialist.

At the end o' my sederunt, by which time I manag'd tae get ootside half-a-dozen fite wines, wi' the naitral result that the glitterin'-ee'd weemen, wi' their big expanse o' heavin' boosums, lookit bonnier than ever, the lichts dazzl'd mair resplendidly, an' better than a', my teethake was gone — gone, as Hans Breitmann says,

Like de summer cloudlet,
Dat floats on de mountain's prow.

Licht o' hert, an' jovial o' speerits, I made for the massive portals o' that sybarrite abode, which wos open'd grandeeloquently by a Kaiser-tash'd "Jerry" o' magneeficent build an' baronial aspeck. He micht only have been a Battalion rinner on the Hulloch front in days gune-by, or maybe a cook's mate in some cooshie back-area on the Rhine, but here he was the sinosure o' every female 'ee, aye, an' mony a masculine 'ee as weel. Fat wid Maister Harrod or Maister Selfridge no gie tae hae him for a commishunair at their front-door in London? As my grandmither wid hae said had she been preevileg'd tae see him, "He wid make a bonny corp."

Nae sinner ha I reach'd the ootside air than my teethake begood agin, an' waur than ever. Daily, as awld Peter us'd tae say tae his kitchen-leemies at Printfield — he had a new ane ilka sax month — "Man was made tae mourn an' espeshally the Birses." I tholl'd the pain for a time wi' charackteristick stoisism, eventually makin' up my min' tae see a German dentist.

At lenght I reach'd the Professor's door in fear an' tremlin' an' wi' great timeedity press'd the electrick knob abune the Professor's name. There must hae been ower muckle timeedity, for naebody answer'd an' I rang agin. In the twinklin' o' an 'ee an auldish ummen appear'd o' the noose-keeper type, an' begood tae spue out German I cud mak naitner heid nor tail o'.

"Professor" I got in edgewyes. "Compry Professor?"

Professor An' Asseestant.

Makin' a moshun, meanin me tae enter, she trail'd me up the stair tae the second or third flat.

The umman open'd a door o' fat I presum'd wid be the surgery or the operatin' theyater or fatever they ca'd an I howp'd wi' a my sowl that I wasna' bein' usherd' into a private saw-mill or butcher's backshop.

Before me at a table sat an auld, wizen' o' carl o' saxty or seventy winters wi' a lang flowin' buird o' the Abraham variety, an' a pair o' blue-colured specs on his protrudin' nib.

Close by, paradin' up an' doon on the teeger's skin in front o' the fire, was anither astrologer-lookin' craiter o' a seemiler aspeck. In the one han' he had fat I took tae be a cuttin' fre a noospaper; his ither han' was shint his back.

Noo the ane wid relieve himsel' o' a torrent o' German, an' noo the ither wid reply wi' a seemilar torrent.

In the harang the only wirds I cud mak' oot were "Volapuk," "Esperanta," "Volapuk," "Esperanta" or something like that.

Foo did I feel, an' fat did I say, ye're dootless speerin'.

Weel, sir, I was quiverin' like a laif — I never shook sae muckle aither at Suicide Corner or in Whiz-Bang Avenu. As the sang says, I only 'stopp'd, an' look'd, an' lissen'd." As for speakin', my tung was compleetly and hopelessly paralees'd. Fortinately they took nae a bit o' notice o' me, never even gae me sae much as a glance.

Wi' m' 'een rivetit on them, I watch'd their every movement, fearin' ilka meenit hat ane or the ither o'. them wid whisk me aff tae a back — chaumer, switch on a green licht, throw me like a bairn's hippen into a tiltit chair an' deeslocate my jaw wi' some mysteerious instrument o' tortur'.

Cauld Clammy Sweat.

Frankly, an' candidly, I hat fat the Froggies ca' a "mal cart dure". Ilka meenit I fancied was m' last, an' a cauld, clammy sweat begood tae come ower me. Even Wullie, the Potsdam butcher, "the electro — plated Napoleon" as Father Vaughan justly ca's im, has never in his meenits o' deepest angwish in the ignobel solitude o' his Dutch retrait, expeerienced half the fairsom' mortificashun that I had tae thohle in that chaumer o' meestery. If a trap = door had open'd an' swallowed me up, kilt an' a'thing I widna been surprees'd. Nor, for the maitter o' that, wid the ugly — lookin' crockodeel hingin' fae the ruif upset me ony mair had it crawl'd doon an' made an evenin' meal o' me. Speak aboot a Pisgah view o' pailestine. Yon lads wi' their eerie contrapshuns, blue lichts an' demoraleesin' scientific smells hae gotten a view o Sawten an' his fiery reejuns.

For a' that I ken, I micht hae been stan' in there yet like a gaikit gowk, but for a certain thing that happen'd. In appawrentiy a moment o' uncontrollabel pashun, ane o' the mageeshuns flung a moospaper cuttin' up in the air. It flutter'd to the fleer close to my feet, prent — side up. Mercifu' heavens! Fat dae ye think I saw in michty big type? — — — The Epistles of Peter Birse Junior! It was my lest week's epeesil!

I cud smell rocks aheid, as an Irishman wid say, so I boltit for the door, rush'd doon the stairs at auchty miles an oor, an' ran tae my billet as fest as my legs wid ca irry me.

Since then I've been makin' judeeshious enqueeries an' fin' that I must hae rung the wrang bell. At the same address, accordin' tae the Coloan Direktory, there hangs oot a Professor o' Dentistry as weel as a Professor o' Philology — — the ane aboon the ither. I suppose the latter an' his assestant, pair things, had trocht in their Germanic wisdom they had discover'd a brand new langwidge! In ony case I think I'm lucky tae escape in the menner an' at the time I did.

Fat think ye, Yersel?

Yours respeckfully,
Peter Birse, Junior.

AT THE "BLUE MONKEY."

EXCITING SKITTLES MATCH BETWEEN "DRABIES" AND "LIMBER JIMS."

The lads of the 2/1. Warwick R.H.A. were entertained to an exciting skittles match at the "Blue Monkey" tavern, Hitdorf on Saturday.

The match was the outcome of a challenge thrown out by "D" Sub Section "Drabies" to the left Section "Limber Jims."

The Drabs had fancied their chances for a long while at this most ancient game. The wheel driver of "D" Sub Section in pre war days was considered a "past master" at the game. At 14—15 before a large crowd, Driver Letts sent up the first ball, amid cheering from the "Drabies" supporters. Gnr. Mills followed. This player was most consistent and performed tricks with the ball that seemed almost impossible.

Drivers Ross, Deeley, Sharp very ably supported their Captain. Gnr. Mills was supported by Bdr. Clifford, the famous left hand "skittler," and winner of many honours in Birmingham, Gunner Freeman from Plumstead and Bdr. Ellis.

Excitement ran very high throughout the game. At one time it looked as of the "Drabies" would win, but the play was always cool (of course the Gunners are always cool). Time was called with the "Limber Jims" winning with a score of 212 against 197. Loud cheers greeted the verdict.

Bdr. Hopkins (the Battery's famous outside right) very ably fulfilled the duty of Umpire.

Driver Drake was tre scorer. "Harry the groom" was "setter up."

The first match in every respect was a huge success. The "Limber Jims" of the "shining left" will have to look to their laurels, as it is rumoured that other teams are training hard to meet them. Hitdorf may yet become famous in the Great War.

"PRONGS" CONCERT PARTY.

At the Richersaal, Schlebusch on Tuesday an excellent concert was given by the "Prongs" Concert Party (92nd Brigade R.G.A.). The tit-bit of the evening was the sketch "A Yorkshire Lad in London" in which the inimitable comedian, Jimmy Robinson, was seen to great advantage.

It would be a difficult matter to distinguish especially any artistes in this party as the whole production was the acme of perfection in concerte and individual items.

We understand that "The Prongs" are open for future engagements. Anyone desiring a good entertainment should write to 2nd Lt. C.D. Livesey, 129th Siege Battery, R.G.A.

51st v. 53rd Northumberland Fusiliers.

Played at Sulz on Saturday on the 31st Battn's ground.

The home team won the toss and the visitors kicking off immediately pressed but withou result. After this the home team with the win in their favour carried the play into their opponents half and repeatedly attacked. after about fifteen minutes play Serjeant Mole securing a pass from Oxley scored with a fast high shot. Immediately afterwards, Serjeant Martin, after a brilliant run down the right wing, centred smartly to Corporal Spencer, who scored with a fast low shot. After the interval, no scoring took place on either side.

The home defence was sound throughout the game, the half back line being especially good. Sergeant Mole was the best of a good forward line. For the visitors Lt. Rose in goal, 2nd. Lt. Coppick and Pte. F. Airey, the backs, and Pte. G. Airey, at right half, were very good throughout the game.

Davson's Inspired Play.

BRILLIANT SIDELINE DRIVING AT QUEEN'S CLUB.

At the Queen's Club lawn tennis covered courts championship on Monday Mrs. Lambert Chambers beat Miss Holman 6—3; 6—3 in the Ladies' Single challenge round.

In the Gentlemen's single final P. M. Davson beat G. L. Patterson, Australia, 8—6; 6—3; 6—2, and meets Ritchie in the challenge round. Davson played an inspired game defeating the Australian volleyer by perfect sideline driving and phenomenally accurate lobbing.

In third round, Men's Doubles Lycett and Heath (Australia) beat Doust and A. B. Jones, Australia 8—6; 6—3; 6—2; Lycett and Heath subsequently defeated Capt. Pat O'Hara Wood, Australia, and G.T.C. Watt 6—0; 6—1; 7—5.

TRIAL RUGBY GAME.

Despite a drizzle of rain and a great deal of mud, the 51st Hampshire Regt. played a trial Rugby game at Wermelskirchen. The object of the game was to select a Battalion team for the matches of the future. Two full sides turned out and a good game ensued, ending in a victory for Capt. Pillean's side by 6 points to nil. The play throughout was keen and in many cases energy and enthusiasm had to make up for a lack of the highest skill.

The forwards on both sides seemed rather at a loss as to what to do with the ball when it was out of the scrum. The halves, notably Col. Irwich and Hallard, showed a good knowledge of the game and in time they should make a "tour de force" in the team.

The three-quarters were irregular and on the slippery ground were unable to show their pace to the best advantage. The best of them were Lieut. Goadby and Sergt. Spire. With practice it should be possible to form quite a good three-quarter line Lold Crock.

A. versus C. Coy; 32nd M.G.C.

The above match was played on Saturday on C's ground Köln Strasse, Bonn. A Company won the toss, and played against the wind. After 5 Minutes play L Cpl. Ritchie scored the first goal for A Company, and shortly after C. Company, scored from a corner, leaving the score at half-time:

A Company 1 goal; C Company 1 goal.

After the interval A Company had all the play, but were very unlucky in front of the goal. Shortly before time C. Company broke through and scored another goal, the game finishing leaving C. Company the winners by two goals to one.

Anton played a most excellent game at back, and Webster at centre half also did some extremely good work.

At a meeting of the Jockey Club, Lord Durham was appointed Steward to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mr. Larnach.

A Curious Goal.

1ST M.G.C. V. 51ST WELSH REGT.

The above mentioned teams played a football match at Mechenheim on Saturday. With a strong wind the 51st Welsh soon attacked and scored a curious goal in the first two minutes. Cpl. Davis for the Gunners volleyed the ball on to Sgt. Hay (Welsh) and it rebounded through the Gunners' goal, placing Sgt. Hay hors-de-combat. The Welsh continued to press and Lieut. Hare with a strong drive narrowly missed adding to the score.

A fine movement by Burrows, Mc. Cullum, and Sgt. Tasker took the play to the Welsh goal and Cpl. Matthias with an open goal failed to equalize. At half time the score was: — 51st Welsh 1; 1st M.G.C. 0.

On resuming the Gunners had the most of the play, but the good defence of the Welsh backs presented any score until 15 minutes from time when a fine dribbse by Sgt. Tasker enabled Canning to equalize. Soon after good tootwork by Warhurst gave the Gunners the lead through Canning, while close on time Sgt. Tasker with a hot drive added the third for the Gunners.

Result: — Gunners 3; Welsh 1.

DIVISIONAL FOOTBALL COMPETITION: 1st ROUND.

1/5th BORDER RGT. v. 13th K.L.R.

These teams met on the ground of the former at Cologne Road, Bonn, on Thursday. King's were weakened by the enforced absence of Captain Carson through injury. Borders won the toss and started with the sun and a slight wind in their favour. Borders pressed, Lightfoot saving well. From a corner Williams scored. Waddaker broke trough, his final shot rebounding from the upright with the goalkeeper beaten. As a result of a combined movement on the part of the Borders forward line Baxter scored a second. King's livened up after this rererse and constant pressure ended with Waddaker scoring with a strong shot. The game continued on fast lines until half-time with Borders 2 goals, 13th King's 1 goal.

Resuming, Williams at once broke through, his final shot being blocked by Massik. A pretty bit of passing by the Borders forwards led to Murphy shooting strongly, Lightfoot only partially clearing, Williams scoring from the rebound. Not to be denied King's again pressed and Crowder scored. The game continued on fast lines till the final whistle Borders running out victors by the odd goal in five.

Comments:—A fast interesting game all through. For the winners Patterson and Dixon at half, and Hayes at full back played strongly. Hayes was a tower of strength at centre half for the King's whilst Lt. Potter and Meredith also shaped well.

17th v. 153 Labour Company.

This match was played on Saturday at Kalk. The first half was very evenly contested the forwards being held in check by the defence of the 153. Just before the whistle sounded for the interval a fine bit of footwork by the 17th resulted in Holt scoring the first goal.

In the second-half the 17th forwards showed fine combination and after ten minutes Holt scored a second goal. Farley, making a fine centre, brought hopes to his side, and Hickman placed the ball into the net.

Holt, Drayton, and Aitken were the outstanding players for the winners, the last named being specially noticed for his fine footwork and judgment. Want, Smart and Dowley, were the backbone of the 153rd.

Result; 17th Labour Co. ; 153rd Labour Co. 1.

111th Battery v. 112 Battery R. F. A.

These teams met on the latter's ground at Borr in dull weather. The visitors won the toss and had the advantage of a strong wind but up to the interval there was no score.

On resuming, the home team quickly took the offensive and both teams were playing splendid football. Lt. Munday made a smart run and forced a corner. This was accurately placed by Petrie, the old Aberdonian. Parkinson got his head to it and had it in the net in no time. The visitors tried hard for the equalizer, but could make no headway against the home defence. Lieut. Munday ended a brilliant individual effort with a magnificient drive which the custodian failed to hold. Ten minutes later the same player again increased the lead, the home team running out winners;

Result: 112th Battery 3; 111th Battery 0.

HENLEY REGATTA.

GERMAN AND HUNGARIAN CREWS DEBARRED.

At the meeting of the stewards of Henley Royal Regatta to consider the arrangements for the "Victory" Regatta, Henley, July 4 and 5, a resolution was unanimously passed that the agreements under Rule 4 made by the committee of management with the Deutscher Ruder Verband and with the Association of Hungarian Rowing Clubs should be cancelled. As a result of this resolution German and Hungarian crews and scullers will be debarred from competing at Henley in future.

BOXING CONTESTS.

At the National Sporting Club London on Monday evening Chris Langdon, Swansea, and Tom Gardner, Smethwick, boxed a fifteen rounds contest the result being a draw.

Another fifteen rounds contests between Seaman Hayes, Hoxton, and Fred Jacks, Aldgate, had the same result, although the general impression was that Jacks won. A feature of Monday's programme was the return match (twenty rounds) between the prominent welterweights Eddie Shevlin, American Navy, and Fred Newberry, Limehouse. The bout went the full distance and was well contested, there being scarcely a clinch throughout. Shevlin showed advantage from the start, although Newberry made a fine effort. At the close Shevlin received the award.

The brothers A.D., W.H., and J.S. Denton, Boswell, Hayward, Walden, C.N. Woolley, and possibly Seymour are available for this year's Northants cricket team. Lord Lilford has been re-elected president.

MULES ON TOUCH LINE.

3rd. M.G.'s INTER-COMPANY FOOTBALL MATCH.

A PICTURESQUE "GOALIE".

"B" Coy. met "D" in the 3rd. Battalion M.G. Corps Football Competition on Tuesday afternoon and shared points. The "goalie" for the former company made the hit of the afternoon by turning up in a sort of fancy waistcoat jersey. The game was well contested throughout and the score of 2 all correctly indicates the game.

"B"'s supporters coaxed their forwards towards goal and at one time some one shouted "RIGHT IN! Jock" but Jock couldn't. A moment after they were holding their breath when five whizz-bangs passed across their own goal mouth without a foot to touch the ball. Play was up and down the pitch and nearly towards half-time Neale scored, off the "goalie". Harrison for "B" almost secured a corner with his aerial gymnastics. HALF-time:—"D" 1. "B" nil.

Play was uneventful for the first part of the second half, although a linesman waved a dirty white handkerchief quite a lot in the course of his duty. At last Taylor shot for "D" and a certain player who sadly needs attention from the company barber did a tango in delight. Meanwhile Lea at outside right for "D" was particularly noticeable for good work: as also Lyle who earned golden opinions. In "B" one could see many good men notably Corporal Cummings. Bell was good but did not finish well. During a dull portion of the game the usual entertainment was provided by straying mules.

A quarter of an hour from the finish a change came over the game. From a pass by the Mess Corporal, Cummings secured a beauty for "B". One more run, the last, was made for "D" and Taylor shot straight at the fancy waistcoat. During the concluding minutes "B" bombarded and from a corner Corporal Cummings headed to COX who in turn headed through the right top corner, after the "goalie" had his fingers at the ball.

GOLFING TIPS.

HOW TO REDUCE THE NUMBER OF ERRATIC SHOTS.

In studying golf notes or hints that well known axiom, "What is one man's meat is another man's poison," should be remembered. The fact of one player improving his game by paying a little special attention to some detail in his stroke, does not necessarily mean that if all other players pay attention to the same thing it will improve their play as well. Almost every golfer has some little peculiarity during the playing of a stroke, which although advantageous to his style of play would be detrimental to the next man's.

Thus, so to speak, it is up to every player to find the points of least resistance for his own style of play. For example he has some pronounced fault which he finds he has great difficulty in getting rid of. By concentrating on this one thing he sees his game deteriorating all round. He should try to discover for himself some little action, the performance of which would be a counter against his main fault. He should also try to obtain a knowledge of his movements when he makes a good stroke. Thus if he has some standard of comparison he will find his bad shots getting fewer and farther between.

DRAUGHTS AND CHESS.

R.A.M.C. SERGEANT PLAYS 22 GAMES AND WINS 19.

An interesting Draughts and Chess competition took place on Friday night in the Kasino, Friedrich Wilhelmshütte, when Sgt. M. Yates R.A.M.C. of the 92nd Field Ambulance played 13 games at Draughts, and 9 at Chess simultaneously. Before play commenced Sgt. Yates announced the conditions, which were as follows:

(1) No player had to make a move until he (Sgt. Yates) was at the board to see the move made.
(2) He would forfeit a Queen's rook to his opponents at Chess.
(3) He would give 5 marks to any player who won his game.

A start was made at 6.20 pm. and from then onwards the Sergeant was kept going, and some fine moves were witnessed by a good crowd of spectators.

Pte. G. Tatum (Chess) and Pte. J. W. Waite (Draught) were the first players in their respective games to have to acknowledge the superiority of Sgt. Yates.

After 75 minutes' play Pte. L. Ball, who had been playing a fine game, was successful, thus defeating the hopes of Sgt. Yates.

Special mention must be made of the fine play of Ptes. F. R. Kennerley, H. Lupton, and F. Marsh at chess, and Pte. G. V. Tunstall, T. H. Whitney, and G. Barnes at draughts.

Pte. Kennerley, the last surviving chess player, was the second to lower the colour of Sgt. Yates.

The end of the competition was in sight and only one player was left who was proving troublesome. The last person left in the competition was Sgt. W. Williams (draughts) who favoured by a mistake on the part of Sgt. Yates early in the game, managed to make a draw. Thus the end of what proved to be an interesting evening was:—

Sgt. Yates played simultaneously:
9 games at Chess .. Won 7 and lost 2;
13 games at Draughts Won 12 and drew 1.

Sporting Snippets.

Young as the racing season is (says a writer in "Observer") clerks of courses are almost at their wits' ends in the endeavour to devise events for the older horses calculated to attract an adequate number of entries.

A well-known North of England trainer, Melton Vasey, has just been demobilised after over four years' service with the colours.

It is announced that the Bath Racecourse, including the stone-built grand stand, luncheon hall, Pressroom, as well as the county stand, weighing-rooms, &c., comprising in all nearly sixty acres, will be submitted to auction at Bath in the spring.

The brothers A.D., W.H., and J.S. Denton, Boswell, Hayward, Walden, C.N. Woolley, and possibly Seymour are available for this year's Northants cricket team. Lord Lilford has been re-elected president.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

BY "METEOR".

Thursday, April 17th., 1919.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

(With an Occasional Entertainments Note.)

Would-be Choristers.

Certain would-be members of the Rhine Army Choral Society are showing displeasure at the fact that every prospective member is asked to undergo a very elementary test. Why anyone should complain at the imposition of so reasonable a condition it is difficult to understand. A chain is no stronger than its weakest link. Just as surely the attainments of a choral society are conditioned by the ability of its lowest sight-reader.

Capt. Cooke's Departure.

The departure of Capt. H.S.C. Cooke from the E.F.C. Officers' Club, Cologne, of which institution he has been in charge since it opened in January last, is very much regretted by his very large number of friends. He left Cologne last week for France. On Friday evening, Capt. Cooke was the guest at a private dinner given by a few of his intimates in the club, after which there were several brief, but happily-worded speeches.

An American's Anxiety.

Saturday was a great day for the American Army, a number of British decorations being bestowed on its members by General Plumer, at Cologne. One of the "lesser lights" to be decorated, exhibited the greatest agitation for some hours prior to the event and rumour hath it that he had several rehearsals in the privacy of his own room in order that the ceremony should not suffer by reason of any mistake on his part, at any rate. The matter of getting to the place of assembly apparently caused him a little fluttering of the heart also, for he arranged with three distinct people to convey him from his hotel to the meeting place.

Consequently, three cars turned up at one and the same time to carry him to his place of honour. And then, to crown all, he joined a party of his American friends in another car!

ADJUTANT-FOOTBALLER.

The caricature above is of Capt. and Adjutant Carson, of the 13th Bn. King's Liverpool Regt. He has been a regular player this season for the Bn. team and, as many goal-keepers who have played against him can testify, he is a deadly shot.

International Football in Germany.

The suggestion of a writer in the Edinburgh Evening News, quoted in this column a couple of days ago, regarding the visit of two international football teams to Germany, has caused a good deal of discussion among members of the Rhine Army. I have spoken to several of the officers closely associated with our sports organisations and they have all agreed that to send international teams over here from England would not be at all popular. An officer, who has much to do with our indoor entertainments, opines that there is a tendency to over-do the sending over from England of people to supply various forms of amusement for the Army of "Oc". The Army of the Rhine, he thinks, should be absolutely self-contained in the matter of amusement, with, perhaps, the exception of lady entertainers.

Another Rhine Army sports administrator reminds us that the lack of accommodation for spectators on any ground in Germany and the difficulty of transport renders the idea absolutely impracticable. As a counter suggestion he considers that the international element of those already in Germany should be developed by picking teams representative of England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales to play against each other.

Trip up the Rhine.

The arrangements for the provision of trips up the Rhine, by steamer have been completed and definite days are allotted to the various formations in occupied territory.

Applications for tickets, which are free gratis and for nothing, should be made to the 2nd Army Amusement Officer at Cologne.

As things are at present, it is impossible to provide facilities for feeding on board the steamers, so that it is important that one should remember to take his "unconsumed portion of the days ration" in his pocket.

Cologne Gymnasium.

Those people who are in the habit of producing an appetite by means of performing weird evolutions on the parallel and horizontal bars in the gymnasium at Cologne will have to find some other means of excercise to-morrow and on Saturday. The Gymnasium has had a fairly busy time lately and the need of a duster is beginning to make itself apparent, in consequence. The officials have decided, therefore, to close the hall for to-morrow and Saturday with the object of performing a little spring cleaning act.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR AIR TRIP.

Below, are given the official figures of the Sopwith "Atlantic" which will shortly attempt the trys across the Great Ocean.

Speed	118 m.p.h.
Speed at 10,000ft.	105 m.p.h.
Maximum endurance	31 hours
Weight	6,150lb.
Useful weight (other than engines and structure)	3,320lb.
Height attainable	13,000ft.
Horse power	350

The "Atlantic" is a single-engine machine. The engine is placed in the nose of the machine and drives a four-bladed tractor screw. The engine is a Rolls-Royce of 350 hp., and weighs 847lb. dry.

Its pilot and navigator will wear patent suits, which are unsinkable in water and are extraordinarily warm. No electrical heating apparatus will be used.

Should the "Atlantic" be forced to descend on the water, the airmen will use a wood and canvas collapsible boat, forming the upper side of the body of the aeroplane. The aeroplane will remain afloat long enough for the boat to be launched. Rations, paddles, and flares to attract shipping are all carried in the boat.

If the engine fails, or should any other mishap occur making it impossible to continue the flight, the aeroplane will remain in the air 12 minutes, gliding down at an angle of one in six from the height of 10,000ft. at which the flight will be made.

CORRESPONDENCE IN A STRANGE LIGHT.

THE COST OF 4s. 1d.

The Daily Mail in a recent issue, publishes an interesting example of the laborious and peculiar methods adopted in some of our Government departments. The correspondence mentioned relates to an account for 4s. 1d. for stamps used by an official during May, June, July, and August of last year. The account is still unpaid.

Already ten Minutes have been written concerning the matter, the first on September 5, 1918. The third Minute decided on the character of the branch from which the account came, and three more passed between officials before a suggestion was made as to how the money might be paid.

The seventh Minute saw the papers in the hands of a man who had tried on three previous occasions to get rid of them. This time he kept the documents for six months. His department then forwarded them to a finance department, which hastily sent them elsewhere. The recipients kept the papers 18 days and then despatched them to an official who had left the Government service some months before.

The papers now lie in a provincial town not far from the place where the expenses were incurred. The documents—except that names and departments are altered—are as follows:

MINISTRY OF .....

Account of petty cash expenditure for the period ending Aug. 31/18.

I hereby certify that the undermentioned expenses have been actually and necessarily incurred by me in the execution of my public duties, that the prices charged are fair and reasonable and that the ..... department is liable for same.

Particulars of Payment.	Amount Paid.
Postage stamps (used during May, June, July, and August).	4s. 1d.

Mr. Jones to Mr. Smith (A.B.C.) (5/9/18): As we have made no payments for this branch, I presume you will see to it.

Mr. Smith to Mr. Browne: Can you say, please, whether D.E.F. have yet taken over this branch, and if so, from what date?

D.E.F. 1, signature illegible, to Mr. Smith (10/9/18): This is a supply branch. Please see Gen. Memorandum 110.

Mr. Smith to G.H.I. (11/9/18): Do you require this statement of expenditure in regard to this supply branch? If not, can you suggest which department would deal with it?

G.H.I. to Mr. Smith (11/9/18): I do not know how similar expenses in connection with other supply branches are dealt with. We have no knowledge of such, but it is suggested that the A.S.S. of the—district be asked to pay. You had, however, better consult D.E.F. 1/2.

Mr. Smith to D.E.F. 1/2 (18/9/18): Please see statement of expenditure in connection with this supply branch. Do you know who should deal with same? You will see what G.H. 1 suggest.

D.E.F. 1/2 to Mr. Smith (24/9/18): This is apparently for I J. 3 or 6.

A.B.C. 1 to Director, I. J. 3 (13/3/19): Please see the attached account for postage stamps amounting to 4s. 1d. This is apparently a matter for you to deal with.

A.B.C.X. to Mr. Tomkins, Baron's House: Payment of petty expenses is not made by this Finance section. Perhaps this matter could be settled by the ..... Area superintendent.

Mr. Tomkins to Mr. Gordon, Superintendent ..... Area (31/3/19): For your attention, please.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

THE NATIONAL FESTIVAL.

In yesterday's issue there appeared the proclamation of the Socialist party in connection with the controversy of appointing the 1st May a day for national festivity. It was mentioned that the Socialist party of Germany has a strong desire that this festivity should become a permanent institution on May Day, and that on this day all work should cease. This year, so they argue, is an appropriate one for the inauguration of this festival, as a great opportunity will be afforded the people of Germany to voice their opinions and manifestly show that they are in accord with the formation of the League of Nations, and that they have a desire to crush militarism and war completely.

Centre Party Opposition.

The Vorwärts speaking about the murder of the Saxon War Minister says:

"The Tragedy of Dresden shows that the whole future of socialism depends on the ability of the Government to create order in the Empire".

The Kölnische Volkszeitung commenting on that sentence adds:

"The future of Socialism! Is this more important than the future of the fatherland? One might be led to think so when it is announced that long sittings of the cabinet take place to debate whether the 1st of May and the 9th November shall be declared National festivals."

"In Munich, in Brunswick, in Dresden, in Düsseldorf, Revolution is raging and the Government find time to discuss about the 1st May and the 9th November!"

In another place the same paper remarks that:

"We think that there will be plenty of time for the national festival when we have again the moral right to celebrate a feast." When the time comes that we may enjoy ourselves again, when we have reached shore again, then only will we be able to celebrate as a national festival a day in which we see, not as a party but as a nation, the symbol of our salvation from the most terrible distress. We say Salvation — because there will be no opportunity then for a victory celebration."

Majority for the May-Day Festival.

Despite this opposition we find that the National Assembly has decided to give this day to socialist festivities. From the Kölnische Zeitung we learn that "the majority thus gained was the direct result of a veil being placed on the clear and honest proposition of the Government by the Democratic Party. They had made a compromise with the Socialists, and in this compromise it asserts that a general festival is introduced which is consecrated to the ideals of peace and the League of Nations and of the international protection of workmen."

The number of votes for the compromise was double that against, whilst some of the Assembly did not vote at all.

The President's Message.

Prior to the Easter vacation, Herr Ebert, president of the German Republic, sent a message to the National Assembly, which was delivered by Scheidemann, the Prime Minister.

In the message the President says that "it will be impossible to obtain peace whilst sections of our own people persevere in a disturbance which threatens to annihilate our already depressed political and economical life.

"Much harm has been done to the German people during the four years of war, therefore it is our first duty, to understand, to help and to make things better. But the urgent wish of the masses for humanity and realisation of human worthiness is no excuse for a hand full of leading agitators who try to disturb the building up of the German Republic.

"New Germany must be built up on the lines of energetic and organic development. A durable influence on the development of the State-life will be given to parties interested in the economical and social problems. The latter problem especially, has been the theme of long examination by the government. New Germany cannot be created by a radical jump in the dark. The Bolshevik dictature of the minority of the proletariate would certainly ruin in a few months the industrial state Germany. Of course, we must comply with justified economical demands of workmen, employed and officials; the government will always receive and try to meet those demands. But senseless political strikes merely doom the destiny of the workmen and their families, and only lead to complete distress. Therefore the vital point of the future of our people is to oppose with all our strength these endeavours, and to take energetic measures against acts of violence made by terrorist elements.

"A quick peace with the other countries, on the basis of mutual understanding and of the League of Nations, is for us a question of life or death. But our salvation from ruin lies as much on the necessity of peace and work within our own country.

"Therefore in these serious hours I address our German people in all classes and ranks with the urgent entreaty to give up this self laceration, Carry a victory over yourselves, open your eyes in front of the abyss, go to work! And you, Deputies of our people, I request you, wherever you go during the vacation, act everywhere for Peace and Work! Our Fatherland, our new Germany, must not perish!" (Great applause.)

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary, limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

LIVERPOOL DOCK HORSES.

In our issue of Sunday, April 13, we published a letter on the above subject, in which we asked for a verification of its contents from outside sources. Numerous replies have reached us, and from these we unhesitatingly endorse the statements made by the corporals. It is impossible to publish all the letters, but two are given below which may help to convince those who argued in the negative. These are the last letters dealing with this subject which will be published. — Ed.

Sir.— Ref. the letter addressed to you on the Liverpool Dock Horses. As an experienced carter and pre-war member of the "Mersey Quay and Railway Carters Union" I fully endorse your correspondent's letter. I have seen and also loaded carts on the docks, many a time a wagon weighing two tons five hundred weights containing seven tons of material, and journeyed same on granite sets a distance of two miles, making the journey twice a day, this being what they call "one horse work." A regular load on the docks in Liverpool you may see any day in the week is thirty bales of American cotton, the average weight being 600 lbs per bale, to draft from single-horse work to team work of two horses. I have seen nine and ten tons on a three ton wagon as a usual load; so hoping this may help to lighten the argument, and being at the same time a native of Liverpool I think will help to solve the problem of the Corporals' Mess.

Artillery Driver H.D.

Sir.— The loads allowed by the "Liverpool Cartowners' Association" are as follows:— Float or Pony Wagon, one ton ten cwt.; one-horse Wagon, six tons; team Wagon, ten tons. The tare of the vehicle is not included in these figures.

To load seven tons on a one-horse wagon would therefore be illegal but I have known many instances of this weight and over being drawn by one horse and the owner prosecuted.

I have had many a heated argument over this same theme, but should your correspondents desire official information they can obtain same from any member of the "Liverpool Cartowners' Association." I may add that the Liverpool dock roads are fairly level although there are the usual ruts and breakages to contend with, and on wet days a very greasy surface.

With regard to the number of journeys made, that depends entirely on the owner; but in the usual run of things two journeys a day was by no means a high average. With the shortage of horses I venture to say that three journeys a day would be accomplished taking the average distance from railway to steamer as half a mile.

The Sergeants' Mess.

"HOUSE."

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir. — I should like to draw attention to the paragraph on the game of "House" appearing in Sunday's "COLOGNE POST".

I think, that if THE RAMBLER cares to make enquiries, he will find out that, amongst soldiers, the name 'HOUSE' was used prior to the war, although LOTTO was the name used elsewhere.

It is the only game that is officially permitted to be played for money in the Army.

W.B.A.

LODGE OF FREEMASONS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— Shortly after the occupation of Jerusalem, a military Lodge of Freemasons was instituted there, and as a craftsman I should like to know whether there is anything of a similar nature for the soldiers of the Rhine Army. If you are aware of any such Lodge I should esteem it a favour if you could put me in touch with it.

H.E.S.

(Anyone having knowledge of such an institution please inform the Editor.)

Answers to Correspondents.

[The flow of correspondence, since the Cologne Post was instituted, has been enormous, and the Editor would like to point out that only a certain number of the innumerable questions can be answered in each issue. Should any inquirer find that his question has not yet been answered, he can have the assurance that it will receive attention in due course, and the answer will appear accordingly. Many questions have been received which could be answered much easier by the Adjutant of the unit concerned, and all such cases which affect the unit commander must be taken to him and not sent here. — Ed.]

R.C.H.—So far as we are aware he can, although it would be grossly unfair.

E.J.—Look at last paragraph in to-day's article on Russian Relief Force. Anything given there only applies to soldiers and ex-soldiers at home.

Wind up.—Couldn't you find a pleasant retort for them? The sole reason is that we hope to keep them in that state from which, evidently, they think you are suffering.

One year man.—Your matter is already being dealt with.

Phil.—We have a weekly article on the subject of "Philately," in which before long you will find your answer.

W.D.—Apply through your Adjutant. See answer to "E.J."

G.M.—The war medal will not be given to any who came out after the signing of the Armistice.

C.R.—Cannot be done at present.

Sctounger.—Truly a pitiable tale. It depicts circumstances which we all have endured for four years and more, but the culprits are your own brother rankers in nearly all cases.

2nd Army D.R.—The record attendance at a football match in England is 110,820, when Tottenham Hotspur and Sheffield met in the final tie for the F.A. Cup, in 1901.

L.B.—This is in progress

PREMIER'S STATEMENT TO PARLIAMENT.

COMPLETE UNDERSTANDING.

TRIUMPH OF THE COUNCIL OF FOUR.

COLOGNE STRIKERS SEEK BRITISH ARBITRATION.

PRIME MINISTER REPORTS PROGRESS.

COMPLETE UNDERSTANDING.

It is no exaggeration to say that the whole world awaited with the most intense interest the speech of the Prime Minister of England in the House of Commons yesterday. Amid all the rumours, recriminations and opinions, the secret of the terms which will be imposed on the originators of the world war has been kept — and still remains — a secret.

Mr. Lloyd George did not reveal it. He only re-affirmed that the pledges he has time and again given to the British Nation have been kept: that amid the shallows and whirlpools of the unprecedented task of uniting the conflicting interests of a dozen different nations into one harmonious whole he has not suffered the infringement of the prerogatives of the British Empire, nor the abatement of its just claims.

The fierce desire of the country for news was reflected in the attendance at the House of Commons. Many members postponed their departure for the Easter recess and there was a remarkable demand for tickets of admission to the various galleries, from prominent leaders of thought and public men keenly desirous of hearing the first complete pronouncement by a leading member of the Peace Conference.

The House was crowded, and the Peers gallery filled immediately it was opened.

The Prince of Wales arrived at 12.30, accompanied by Lord Stamfordham, and was conducted to the seat over the clock which is his by tradition. It was used by its rightful occupant for the first time during the present reign.

The Prime Minister, who on entering looked serious, even stern, rose at 12.45 amidst loud cheers.

He began his speech by admitting the impatience existing throughout the world for Peace, but pointed out the gigantic task of the delegates who are confronted with problems of unprecedented complexity and gravity. He referred to the international arrangements for labour which had never hitherto been attempted, paid glowing tribute to the services of the Rt. Hon. G. N. Barnes and handsomely acknowledged the assistance of labour members and trade unionists whereby the great world scheme was brought into being and adopted.

Of the League of Nations he said that instead of wasting time it actually saved an enormous amount of time by establishing machinery capable of readjusting and correcting possible mistakes.

The Russian situation was one of the most complex problems ever dealt with by anybody, one of the chief difficulties being that there is no Russia. Nobody can affirm that the organisation controlling Central Russia is, even de facto, the Government for the whole of Russia. It is a spectacle of a vast country in a state of chaos, confusion and anarchy. "Russia is just like a volcano which is still making fierce eruptions. The best that can be done is to provide security for those dwelling on its remotest and least accessible slopes and to endeavour to arrest the devastating flow of lava so that it shall not scorch other lands," was the Premier's apt simile. There is no question of recognition. It has never been proposed or discussed, because no Government represented the whole of Russia and because the Bolshevist Government had committed crimes against allied subjects which would make it impossible to recognise it as a Government even under other circumstances. Even at this moment they are attacking our friends in Russia.

Referring to the question of intervention Mr. Lloyd George said the condition of Russia did not justify the British Government in committing the country to a gigantic military enterprise. Russia is very easy to invade but very difficult to conquer. The house would be surprised at the number of men which it is estimated would be required to conquer Russia. Our policy is to prevent the forcible eruption of Bolshevism into allied countries. Therefore we are organizing all the forces in allied countries bordering the territories from the Baltic to the Black Sea. There are unmistakable signs, however, that Russia is emerging from chaos and when she is again sane and normal we shall make peace in Russia.

Referring to the General Peace Terms Mr. Lloyd George said that the great powers have arrived at a complete understanding on all fundamental questions. It is untrue that the United States and Europe have been at variance. All the Allies want a Peace that will be just but not vindictive, although necessarily it must be stern.

Germany would have an army just large enough to police her, and just enough Navy to enable her to protect her commerce.

The Prime Minister sharply criticised certain newspapers for attacks which they have made, and he continued: "When this kind of diseased vanity is carried to the point of sowing dissension between great Allies whose unity is essential for the peace of the world; when attempts are made to make France distrust Britain and hate America and to make America dislike France, not even that kind of disease is justification for so black a crime against humanity. They still believe in France that the Times is a serious organ. They do not know it is only a company edition of the Daily Mail" said Mr. Lloyd George, who declared that he would rather have a good peace than a good Press.

He declared that every pledge which the Government has given has been incorporated in the Allies demands. The Government has never swerved from these demands. They stood by them because they thought them just. Above all, the future must by protected against a repetition of the horrors of this war.

TRIUMPH FOR THE COUNCIL OF FOUR.

GREAT WORK OF JUSTICE.

Mr. Percival Langdon, the Daily Telegraph special correspondent at Paris, in a striking despatch, says "Except in details which are by comparison unimportant, the terms of Peace with Germany are now known and it cannot be said too emphatically that the absence of serious criticism of those terms marks a triumph indeed for the Council of Four. There have been days when no one in Paris dared to anticipate a settlement which should be deemed in the main satisfactory to all the Allies concerned.

The demands of France in particular seemed at one time almost irreconcilable. But the French have seen that her Allies have recognised the special position which her losses and her future position as guardian of the frontier entities her to claim, and the good will which has been manifested toward her in this matter of cardinal importance will have its effect in the weeks to come.

We must not blind our eyes to the fact that the German Government may not have the power to accept, or if it does accept may refuse to carry out the provisions of this settlement in the only manner which the Allies can tolerate—exactly and to the uttermost farthing. Judging by their tardy and incomplete performance of the terms of the Armistice we should be justified in delaying for a little any expression of national rejoicing, but that does not make our gratitude any the less to those who have carried to a conclusion the great work of justice which is contained within the pages of this treaty.

After all, the ultimate aim of the Allies—that of destruction of the military arrogance of Germany—has been for the moment achieved and future prevention has been secured as well as any document can guarantee so difficult an achievement."

The correspondent adds "From the special point of view of the French as Gustav Hervé said yesterday, there is indeed matter for congratultion. The French have had Alsace Lorraine returned to them; they have had the great coalfields the Saar surrendered; for their special benefit Luxembourg has been detached from the German Customs Union; the left bank of the Raine has been militarily neutralised; they have taken the Cameroons; they have had their hands freed in Morocco and they have had allotted to them an indemnity of at least seventy thousands million francs.

From the point of view of England and America gains are less material because material gain was never as necessary for us as for our Ally, but we should remember that sea and land alike have been cleared of the German menace and the threat of German intrusion in Western Asia and South America has been ended for ever. Above all the nightmare of another scientific butchery by German hordes no longer hangs over the head of a nervous and pre-occupied world."

SITUATION AT ARCHANGEL.

CRITICAL PERIOD NOT YET REACHED.

The situation in the Archangel area has been considerably improved by the recent successes against the Bolshevists. It is true the most critical period has not yet been reached but if the main portions of the Relief Force are despatched as soon as open water is available there seems no reason to doubt that they will be able to give their comrades the relief they need after so long a period of most arduous service.

Meanwhile recruiting for the Relief Force is going on in all parts of Great Britain.—Reuter.

BAVARIAN REVOLUTION.

The Communists are not be left for long undisturbed in Munich. Government troops are being rapidly concentrated. The attack will be directed by a well known Bavarian General, who will have at his disposal artillery and other siege devices. It is reported also that Prussian troops are being moved to the scene of action.

For the moment the city is quiet, although it is actually in a state of siege.

The Red Guards dominate affairs and in their ranks are numerous Russian prisoners of war.

The tower of the Frauen Church is being used as an observation post.

The distribution of food is severely controlled. As a reprisal against the food blockade of the city the Communists declare that the middle classes shall suffer most, as the food in the city will le distributed only to the proletariat.

STRIKE OF COLOGNE CLERKS.

The number of clerks on strike at Cologne has risen to seven thousand, representing eighty-three firms. Negotiations with the intermediaries having failed, the clerks have announced their intention to appeal to the British authorities for mediation.

LIEBKNECHT'S MURDER.

AN ARREST.

It is reported from Berlin that a man named Runge pas been arrested for complicity in the murders of Karl Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg.

RIOTS AT CANADIAN CAMP.

COURT MARTIAL OPENS.

The Court-martial for the trial of Canadian soldiers alleged to have been concerned in the rioting at Kimmel-park a month ago opened at Liverpool on Wednesday. An officer experienced in courts-martial, Major E.C. Weymann, was appointed by the Canadian authorities to undertake the men's defence. All the accused men elected to avail themselves of his assistance.

The first case actually proceeded with was that of Gnr. George Lorette. He pleaded not guilty to the charge of mutiny and of having failed to use his utmost endeavour to suppress the mutiny.

R.S.M. Gilbert Smith, of the Canadian Military Police, in decribing the scene in camp said he saw a large crowd behind headquarters. Four or five of the men were very prominent, among them being the prisoner, who was waving a red flag.

The proceedings were adjourned.

SIR DOUGLAS HAIG'S DISPATCH.

Commenting on Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig's dispatch, the Times military correspondent says that in everything he writes there is always such an air of sweet reasonableness that the careless reader may very easily overlook much of its originality and novelty.

To put it bluntly there is in the dispatch a great deal of contentious matter, and despite the great authority of Field Marshal Haig's name and the measured moderation with which his conclusions are expressed, not all of it should be accepted as the last word to be said on the subject.

The dispatch more than once insists that the course of the war proved the general soundness of the tactical ideas and organization of the British Army and the contention, on the whole, is just. After every other war the War-Office or its equivalent has been the object of popular reproach. In this, the greatest of all wars, it had done better than any other Department, and despite many mistakes its positive achievement stands out as the biggest and finest thing any Government department has ever done.

The dispatch insists with perfect justice on the value of the old professional element in the army. It is only the professional soldier who knows how to make the best use of mechanical arms in combination with others. The amateur always needs disciplining by the professional mind.

TERRITORIALS TO MARCH THROUGH LONDON.

The Army Council has approved of the proposal for a march through London of the City and County of London Territorial troops. The march will probably take place in June. A representative Commitee to make the necessary arrangements has been formed by the Lord Mayor, Sir Horace B. Marshall..

EMPIRE'S WOOL PRODUCTION.

The latest Imperial Institute bulletin gives some interesting figures concerning the wool production of the Empire. The total amount produced in the world during the last year is estimated at three thousand million pounds, of which two-fifths was contributed by British countries. Australia alone produced nearly one-fifth.

FIRST CANADIANS LEAVE FOR HOME.

The First Brigade, First Canadian Division, six thousand strong, embarked at Southampton on Tuesday aboard the Olympic, homeward bound. They were accorded an enthusiastic send-off by the towns-people, the quay-side being densely thronged with spectators, including the Mayor and members of the corporation. A military band played inspiring airs.

IMMENSE COST OF OUT OF WORK ALLOWANCES.

Mr. Wardle, Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Labour, stated in the House of Commons that the total amount of out of work donations paid from the conclusion of hostilities to 4th April was approximately fourteen million three hundred thousand pounds.

SWEDISH HOSPITALITY.

The Swedish Red Cross Society has secured permission from the Swedish Government to receive two thousand German children for recuperation.

Five thousand families have signified their willingness to receive the children and two hundred thousand crowns have already been collected. A start will be made in May.

LONDON MORALITY.

The London Council for promoting public morality, in a summary of its work for the year 1918, states that the Commissioner of Police has undertaken to place membres of the newly constituted women police patrols on open spaces where objectionable conduct is complained of.

In cafés and restaurants the action of the council's officers has diminished the number of undesirable characters, while the adoption of a fixed standard of lighting in cinemas has proved exceedingly satisfactory.

An early issue of British war-medal ribbon is anticipated.

RESULT OF MINERS' BALLOT.

RECORD PAY DAY.

The final result of the miners' ballot on the acceptance or rejection of the Sankey report showed 693,084 in favour and 76,992 against, a majority for acceptance of 616,092.

At the conference of the delegates of the Miners Federation held yesterday at Southport, the motion that the Government terms be accepted was carried unanimously.

The Government terms include an increase of pay of two shillings daily, a seven-hour day from July next and a six-hour day from July 1921, this last being subject to the economic condition of the industry at the end of 1920.

While the voting has been in progress in the coalfields new issues have arisen concerning the questions of conscription and intervention in Russia.

At the last Miners Conference held in London, a resolution was passed calling on the Government immediately to withdraw all British troops from Russia and protesting against any attempt to fasten conscription on the country by means of the Military Services Bill.

This resolution was reaffirmed yesterday afternoon and referred to the "triple alliance" meeting at Southport.

One result of the acceptance of the Government terms will be that this week a record pay day in the history of the coal mining or any other industry will be established. The miners will receive not only their week's pay but arrears at the rate of two shillings a day from 9th Jan., this award being retrospective. It is estimated that between seven million and eight million pounds will be paid out.

FIELD MARSHAL'S MESSAGE.

General Francis Lloyd on Tuesday addressed a welcome home celebration and thanksgiving service at Chelsea congregational church.

A message was read from Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig, wishing all a happy home-coming and hoping that in the life before them they would not forget the great cause for which they fought, peace, no less than war, demanding loyalty and devotion for the general good of the country.

RE-HOUSING LONDONERS.

The London County Council has decided to spend 121,625 pounds on the purchase of a site comprising 143 acres for the purpose of erecting dwelling-houses.

The estate is that known as Dover House, Roehampton, and was formerly the residence of Mr. Pierpont Morgan.

LONDON CORONER'S PROPHECY.

Mr. S. J. Oddie, the Coroner for the South-Western district, at an inquest held in London expressed the opinion that the time would come when, under proper safeguards, doctors would be given the power to put incurables out of their misery.

EXHIBITION OF WAR MEMORIALS.

The Royal Academy War Memorials Committee has decided to hold an exhibition of memorials in two sections. The first will be held at the Victoria and Albert Museum in June and the second at the Royal Academy in October.

ABERDEEN BY-ELECTION.

Great interest is being shown in the by-election in Central Aberdeenshire, where Major Wood (Liberal) and Mr. Joseph Duncan (Labour) have several members and ex-members of Parliament speaking for them in various centres. Mr. Davidson, the Unionist candidate, fought single handed until last night, when he had the assistance of Mr. Harry Hope. M.P.

Yesterday Major Wood received the following telegram: "Hammersmith Gladstone Club wishes for you great victory. West Leyton and Central Hull have sounded the "take cover for coalition." Political prophets forecast a win for Davidson, with Major Wood second.

WHISKY FIRMS ALARMED.

BUDGET FEARS.

The prospect of an increased duty on spirits is causing great commotion among whisky firms. Members of the Whisky Distillers' Association are protesting against any unjust harassment, which, they say, the trade will be unable to bear. They intimate that they will have no option but to cease delivering whisky, as if the rumoured increase of duty is imposed they will be unable to supply except at a loss.

GAMBLING INSTEAD OF WORKING.

Ninety policemen in motors, pantechnicons, ambulances and other vehicles surprised seventy-six gamblers in an almost inaccessible quarry after arresting the scouts en route.

The prisoners were fined from two to five pounds each. It was stated in evidence that many of, them, were receiving weekly the out-of work donation.

KING'S THANKS TO AUSTRALIAN NAVY.

An autographed message from the King, expressing his personal and the National appreciation of the part played by the Australian Navy during the war, was delivered by the Prince of Wales when he lunched with the officers of the battle cruiser "Australia" at Portsmouth.

The King has signed a proclamation making Saturday next a Bank Holiday.

DELINQUENT JOURNEYMAN BAKER.

UNPROFITABLE POLITENESS.

For speaking his mind in the Cologne court rather too freely a journeyman baker was yesterday awarded nine days detention, in groups of three.

It appears that this journeyman pursued an amour with the wife of a baker, his employer, during the absence of the latter at the war. When the master-baker discovered the intrigue he assaulted his employé, who returned the blows to such effect that, according to the punishment meted out when each summoned the other, the employé must have added grievous injury to an already irreparable insult.

Anyhow the master-baker was fined five marks but the journeyman baker was sentenced to imprisonment for six months and two weeks.

Far from being repentant he crossed the court and flagrantly kissed the baker's wife, saying "Emmie, Emmie, keep faithful to me, I shall come out again!"

For this "indecent behaviour" in Court he was sentenced to three days detention.

As he was leaving for the cells he said "Good bye, Herr Judge."

He was mistaken; it was only "auf Wiedersehen," for the judge had him restored to the dock and awarded him three more days.

This timely appreciation of politeness displeased the journeyman; indeed it must have annoyed him, for he shouted "We have a proletarian Government and no more Hohenzollern tribunals."

The difference between old style lese majesty and the new must be very great, as all this outburst earned for the journeyman was another three days.

So the wife of the baker, if she remain "faithful" to her paramour, will have to wait six months, two weeks and nine days for him.

And one doubts not that the master baker will seek another journeyman.

EASTER HOLIDAYS IN ENGLAND.

The Easter Holiday rush began on Wednesday, and the exodus promises to be large, mainly to the South coast.

Arrangements have been made to convey people across the Channel but the French and Belgian authorities have not yet seen their way to allow access to the battlefields in those countries.

The continental bookings are chiefly for Paris. A good many people are going to Italy but very few to Switzerland.

PUBLIC HOUSE HOURS OF OPENING.

The Bishop of London is continuing his crusade against the proposed reversion by London licensed victuallers to pre-war hours of opening. In a speech on Wednesday the Bishop said there must be no return to the disgraceful nineteen and a half hours of drink selling every day.

COMPENSATION FOR PHTHISIS.

Mr. Malan, acting Premier in the House of Assembly, Cape Town, moved the second reading of the Miners, Phthisis Bill which provides for an award of the hundred pounds to sufferers in the newly styled ante-primary stage of the disease, 375 pounds in the primary stage and a pension of from ten to fifteen pounds monthly in the secondary stage.

The previous awards were three hundred pounds in the primary stage and a lump sum of seven hundred and fifty pounds in the secondary. The Bill also doubles the existing rates of compensation to natives.

WARSHIPS FOR DEMOBILIZED.

The Admiralty has agreed to place a certain number of warships at the disposal of the authorities for the repatriation of troops. The question of manning is a matter of some difficulty and is at present under discussion between the Admiralty and the Ministry of Shipping. Difficulty is now being experienced in providing sufficient tonnage for the repatriation of Canadians in accordance with the programme of the Canadian military authorities.

NO PROHIBITION FOR NEW ZEALAND.

Christchurch. The soldiers vote has wiped out the prohibition majority in New Zealand. Reuter.

(Until the 16,000 service votes were counted the Prohibitionists had secured a lead of 12,560 votes).

ALIEN IMMIGRATION.

The Aliens Restriction Bill, maintaining for the period of one year after the war the present powers of the authorities, has passed its second reading in the House of Commons.

STOCK EXCHANGE.

On the Stock Exchange yesterday a holiday sentiment prevailed in most sections but there was no slackening of the interest in oils, while industrials were occasionally active, the chief feature being a twenty-five dollar spurt in Otis Steel on the strength of an offer for the purchase of a controlling interest in the company. No great revival of animation is expected until the Government's financial intention are known. Giltedged securities were dull, pending the Budget statement. Indians are recovering from yesterday's set-back, but Russians are weak as the result of Mr. Lloyd George's statement in the House of Commons.

A GREAT MEMORIAL DAY.

This is Good Friday. It is good at times to pay heed to the Christian Calender, and surely it is good to think reverently and hopefully of our first Easter tide since the dark days of war. Good Friday is the anniversary of poignant suffering and supreme sacrifice. To day men of all Christian churches can unite in remembrance and homage, and we notice that in Army announcements this is "a great memorial day." The title is fitting and dignified. Our soldiers who have campaigned during any of these memorable war years know what suffering and sacrifice are — the words must ever have new and sacred meaning to them. Thus we pause for a little, and without advertisement or dramatic bearing we cast our thoughts back to the green hill that is far away, and with new sympathy and fuller knowledge we ponder on the heroism of one who was faithful unto death. We do not love the coss in life, for it brings with it the shadow, but the cross has gained a full-orbed glory in these years that have drearily passed us by. War has been to many the handmaid of religious symbolism.

Tradition and superstition have been busy with Friday. The ancient chroniclers made out that Adam and Eve ate their forbidden repast on a Friday. To the Romans it was nefastus on account of a defeat of their arms that long rankled in their memories. Even in far-off India, Friday has been reckoned a day of evil omen. One does not need to know his Racine to remember the words that "he who laughs on Friday will weep on Sunday."

And we as a nation are not free from superstitious habits. There is no braver service in the world than that of our mercantile marine, and yet we believe that Friday is not the day that mariners choose for setting out on their voyages. Nor is it the day that maids and men select for carrying to their stern and logical conclusions the fancies that lightly arise in Spring. In some curious fashion Christian tradition has lent weight to an ancient superstition that counts Friday as untoward.

But once on a Friday ('tis ever they say),
A day when misfortune is aptest to fall.

But enough of superstition. Good Friday is not a day of sorrow; it is a day of solemn satisfaction, of undying hope and faith. It marks the end of gloom and the dawn of joy; it is the turn in the tide of human affairs. The years of war that have passed slowly, sadly, irrevocably, are years that teach us enduring lessons. Comrades of ours, human in their interests, joys and brotherliness, have given us an uplifting sense of the divinity that lies all around us Who is he that has not a new faith in human nature which men call ordinary and fallible? For us the comrades that are no more have bridged the chasm between human and divine, for they have taught us the nobility of suffering and sacrifice. They bring home to us the truth and symbolism of the Passion. Yes, ours is a great memorial day of obedience and love that were faithful unto the end.

PLAYS FOR THE PEOPLE.

Only a day or two ago we discussed the question of the reform of the theatre. It is somewhat of a coincidence that news of Mr. Romain Rolland's latest book has now reached us. Mr. Barrett Clark has translated not only this dissertation on the theatre of the people, but also two examples of what Mr. Rolland believes is suitable for the people.

The versatile essayist is drastic in his treatment of the subject. The peoples must have their own theatres and dramas, he declares, for it is out of the question that they should content themselves with the time-honoured classics of Shakespeare, Corneille and Racine. Even the comedies of Moliere are brusquely ruled out of court. Why? His answer is that such plays are for the aristocracy and bourgeoisie, and are not fitted for the needs of "the people." But we hold that it is a cardinal mistake to suppose that these three classes must each have its special type of play. In the enjoyment of art there must be and can be no class distinctions. One imagines that most of mankind enjoy some of Shakespeare's plays, and our criticism of the modern stage is that it is too timid in producing the great classic dramas. It is an irony that Mr. Rolland's samples of people's play—we have it on the authority of the translator—were more appreciated by the aristocrats and bourgeoisie than by "the people." That is a lesson that the reformer should bear in mind.

But the people are surely the whole people of every class, and it is as wrong as it is impossible to subdivide them. Some of the proletariate would enjoy dramas meant for aristocrats; and some aristocrats could be easily contented with dramas designed for a humbler rank. Again, no class of mankind relishes anything, however great or suitable, which is thrust upon it. If play-writing is to be propagandist or even dictatic, it is doomed. Art must not be at the mercy of the schoolmaster. A people that has some leisure and some chance of self-education will soon demand the best from art; and no art will long satisfy the people if it does not develop step by step with the evolution of popular ideals.

THE RHINE.

O'er the hilltops castle-crested
Slowly sinks the sun to sleep;
While the watchers, battle-tested,
Silently their vigil keep.
As the last rays touch the river
Blood-red fingers seem to guiver,
And the soldiers faintly shiver
As they think
Of the cost
On the brink
Of the lost:
Deutscher Rhein.

To our foes it formed a barrier
Gainst a score of armed hosts;
For their last man was a warrior,
And the world rang with their boasts,
Now 'tis surely for the nation.
That in depths ofdegnadation
Must work out its own salvation;
Whilst we hold
By the gun
Strong and bold
What we've won:
Freedom's Rhine.

"IN THE MIDST OF LIFE."

I have been reading an article, written by the correspondent of one of our home newspapers, on the almost unbelievable duplicity of the German people; and the base tricks that are practised in the occupied area, to undermine our morale; at the same time leaving us in our insular innocence, to infer that they are actuated by no other motive than a desire to make the best of a bad job; and live on the best possible terms with us.

Thanks to the Providence which placed that article before my eyes, and thanks a thousand times to its gifted author, my rush to destruction is stayed; and in a spirit of gratitude, I feel I can render my humble thanks in no better way, than by quoting my own experiences to prove (if proof were necessary) the truth of his statements. To show indeed, that far from the Author exaggerating, or drawing on his imagination (as some may think) he only skimmed as it were, the surface of the deep, and cunning plans prepared for our ruin.

I set foot in Germany some four months ago, and in due course arrived in Cologne. My first impressions of that city were, I frankly say, pleasant. I admired the streets and shops, and remember, on seeing the Cathedral, saying to a companion, by way of a serious sort of joke, that these people could evidently raise imposing buildings, as well as erase them.

I slept during my stay in Cologne in a real bed, in a real bedroom (with radiator) in a real hotel. What more natural as I retired, tired but happy at night, than that I should recall from the distant past, pleasant memories of my last leave? And associate Blighty with Germany, by the connecting link — real bed. Ah! had I known then, as I know now, that each one of those thoughts of mine had been foreseen by diabolical scientists; and that the whole thing, from Cathedral to radiator, was but a cunning plan to prepare my innocent mind for the awful stamp of cultur which they hoped to imprint on it.

To resume: as may he imagined, I was very reluctant to leave Cologne, but when it became imperative that I should do so, my journey was all that could be desired. I was borne gently but swiftly towards my village destination, amidst scenery beyond compare. Very disturbing questions indeed began to rankle in my mind, concerning the late war, as I sped on my way. (Poor deluded me).

I arrived after dark, and went to my allotted billet. How can I describe the scene which greeted my waking eyes next morning? The Hotel in Cologne dived sheer into sub-conscious depths, without so much as a look; on being confronted with the bedroom, whose splendours now dazzles me. Surely this must be some time honoured Schloss in which I passed the night; and what a view from the window; stately trees just budding into blossom, singing birds, green hills, and alluring valleys. In short, Spring, as gifted poets imagine it; but which I can only sully by description.

I was as surprised as it is possible to be in this land of surprises, to learn later on that this house belonged to the carpenter I saw walking about in a smock, more becoming to his profession than to his abode; but even in my own mind I did not question how a home that a British statesman might be proud of, could exist, even during Germany's most prosperous days on a carpenter's wages. I know now, thank Heaven.

Having a presentiment that I must some day come back to earth, I mean England, again, I try to devote my spare time (of which I have quite a lot between tea and ten), to various branches of study.

Thus employed one evening, and almost on the verge of despair, as two demons fought within me. Pelman on the one hand, urged that the shorthand maze at which I stared, could and must be learnt. The other demon which took various alluring shapes, varying from Mary Pickford to Charlie Chaplin, said that shorthand was not my line at all and could never be any use to me, and besides, the Cinema was far more educational. What the end would be, I cannot tell. The fight was interrupted by a gentle tap at the door, which after my weak "Come in" opened to show me the homely, generous face of my hostess, and to waft to my ears the sweet strains of the Maxima waltz. It must be lonely by myself she said, and would I not come and listen to her little daughter play the piano?

You may talk about fraternizing, will-power, and the rest of it, but even the great Pelman himself, in my positition and circumstances, would have fallen that night. By what devilish means did they know, that associated in my mind with that waltz was the fairest face, that ever adorned the uniform of a W.A.A.C., or the daintiest pair of feet, that ever hesitated their way across a dance room? Heavens! when I look back and think, I wonder I am not even now on my fanatical way to the Peace Conference, to demand a huge indemnity for my adopted land.

How I thanked that motherly soul, as she led me to the drawing room. How I gazed fascinated at her charming daughter (aged about twelve in appearance, but surely centuries in consummate witchcraft) as she transported me into heavens of delight with her music.

Need I say any more? Need I mention the lover and his first kiss, the tiger and his first blood, the dope fiend and his first pipe? Judge of my ultimate state, when I say truly that I cheerfully braved the knowing winks and ill-bred chaff of canteen attendants in my demand for chocolate and toilet soap to offer as humble gifts to that little sorceress. Need I say another word to prove beyond doubt the awful fate from which I have been saved by that gifted article.

How clear it is now, why the village carpenter possesses such a beautiful house and such a kultured daughter. Village carpenter, bah! Berlin professor, no doubt, who, when the British Army comes crawling on its knees to him, for German Naturalisation Papers will turn his attention to the distribution of Bolshevik germs throughout Mars, either by an alliance with Venus, or through the medium of hot air.

Now that the way is shown so clearly, how easy it is to avoid their net. How easy for instance, to see that the Sun which shines with such splendour on this seemingly peaceful village is in reality nothing more or less than Ersatz. That the bird in that tree yonder which would lull us into a sense of false security with its joyful song, is really warbling a Hymn of Hate.

In conclusion I would say that if the experiences I have recounted will help to show to my younger comrades the sinister, inner meaning of the life around them, I shall be glad. If any gratitude is felt for the humble suggestions I have offered I shall also be glad, but I accept no thanks for either, as at most, this can be but a very poor return to him who saved me, and in whose honour it was written.

PHYSICAL FITNESS.

MANLINESS AND HAPPINESS.

BY MAJOR. J. BETTS, D.S.O.

I have been asked several times "What will the soldier miss most after returning to Civil Life?" I unhesitatingly say "The feeling of Physical Fitness." One often wonders how many people realize the tremendous effect Physical Fitness has upon one's happinessi Should you ever have the good fortune to lecture upon this subject to a whole Brigade of men, or even to a smaller number, you will be surprised at the vast amount of interest they take in all that you have to say, especially if you keep to the broad outline. If you have any doubt about their interest, put this qunstion to them, "What happens on the march, no matter how tired you are when you come to a Town or Village?" The answer comes immediately — "We start singing, Sir" — Right — oh: Thats Physikal Fitness in itts best fohm. You can take it from me, and I have studied it very carefully, that there is little wrong with men who answer as they did. If these men were not fit, we should have no singing, there would be nothing but "grousing" from top to bottom of the Column. It is a marvellous feeling, this feeling of Fitness. It breeds a spirit of true comradeship, manliness, and cheerfulness, which will be sadly missed by thousands of good fellows when they discard the khaki for "civies". How many of these same men ever dreamt a few years ago that they would go to war — and such a bloody War. They would have laughed at the idea of being able to rough it as they have done since, wet through day after day, covered with mud from head to foot, sleeping with their clothes on in any old place that they could find. These are only a few of the things that they have done, and above all done with a cheeriness absolutely unbelievable to those who have not seen it. That is the result of "Physical Fitness."

I remember, shortly after the arrival of the British Troops in Italy, seeing a number of Italian Officers watching some of our men on the march. Shortly afterwards, I was introduced to them, and naturally I asked their opinion of the British Soldier, All were unanimous in praising his wonderful physique and bearing and the happy look on his face—Physical Fitness again. How surprised some people would have been when passing some old barn or smaller building, just after sunrise, to hear a lot of fellows singing — and harmonising, too — some dear old song learned at home, and to have been told that only a day before those same vocalists were busy potting or bayonetting Huns, and probably in a horrible state of uncleanliness, and yet there they were "Brushing up" as happy as the proverbial sandboy. Another grand sign of fitness.

You must use all your efforts to keep your Physical Fitness, and to induce others to do the same. When the Ministry of Health is firmly established, I should like to see lecturers sent round the whole of the British Isles, to talk to the people on this subject: not to go deeply into the questions of physiology aed anatomy, but to explain the subject inthesimple way that it has been expoinded to the British Soldier during the War. Physically fit people carry their fitness stamped upon their faces — they have always an alert, cheery, and happy expression, while the Physically unfit are always exactly the opposite. I venture to prophesy that this war, bad though it has been, will have done a lot for future generations. Most men now are fit and in my opinion will continue to keep themselves fit. That must naturally have a benificial effect upon their offspring in more ways than one. We may look forward, therefore, to seeing the children of the next and succeeding generations, with strong healthy bodies, happy smiling faces and cheery dispositions, all the result of Physical Fitness which has been conferred upon their fathers by this War.

OUR FIRE BRIGADE.

ZONS' OWN.

BY L. C. L.

The word had gone round that the local Fire Brigade was about to give a demonstration of its prowess, so at the appointed time, we all trooped off to watch the show, expecting to be amused; we were not disappointed.

The "Brigade" duly arrived complete with engine, pails and hose, not to mention, pomp and splendour.

The "engine" consisted of a hand-cart, fitted (more or less) with a watertank and hand-pump. The pails, most unique in design, were festooned round the engine like so many lanterns and the hose—well, it was only just a hose.

The gallant firemen were dressed in most gorgeous uniforms and helmets of distinctly military pattern, and looked frightfully bucked with life.

The Chief, attired much more charmingly than his co-extinguishers, obviously felt his exalted position most keenly.

Amidst the joyful clamourings of the villagers they dragged the "appliance" a considerable distance to the seene of the "fire," and then, for no apparent reason, performed some kind of amazingly complicated drill, perhaps for luck.

They described circles, figure ights, el ipses and other wondrous figures, finally coming to rest with a great rattling of pails chains etc. The Chief placing himself in a position where he could best superintend, — and be admired, — barked out his ordrers, and the comedians broke up, some fixing up the pumping arrangements one rushing away with the hose, and the remainder dashing about wildly with the pails, which they filled at a neighbouring well, and then emptied into the tank.

More wards of command, and the pumping party which had been standing by, dozing, woke to life and started pumping as though their very lives depended on their efforts, accompanied by most unearthly screeching of iron against iron, suggesting the agonized shrieks of a lost soul. At this juncture, the man with the hose planted his feet firmly on the ground and directed the nozzle towards the fire and waited.

We all waited for some considerable time amid an expectant hush.

He appeared to become uneasy, and turning his head, gazed reproachfully at his comrades and longingly at the nozzle. Still nothing happened, and then, just as we had given up all hope of seeing "real" water issuing from it, it burst forth in a great hissing stream as though jubilant at finding an outlet, whereupon, the chief proudly gazed on the spectators and became if possible more exalted than before.

After that everything was more or less normal, except that the carriers of water were unable to cope with the demand. During these sad moments the stream despairingly fizzled down to a mere trickle, and obviously had a very disheartening effect upon the operator: he looked sad.

Having successfully subdued the outbreak, the pump was dismantled the pails replaced on their hooks, the nozzle unscrewed from the hose, and the hose itself carefully thrown over all.

Final words of command, and the Brigade, omitting their previous wierd evolutions and evidently in a great hurry, marched triumphantly away — minus the nozzle.

Dancing With The Company Cook.

NOTES GRAVE AND GAY FROM A RHINELAND VILLAGE.

Picture in your mind, two little hamlets tucked away in the hills and divided by a pretty little valley and you have a fairly accurate idea of Seelscheid. From an economical point of view it leaves nothing to be desired, the canteen being the only means by which the spendthrift may gratify that reckless feeling of "To—day we live, to—morrow we do Company drill". Nevertheless, the momentous news that we are moving back into reserve causes a certain amount of diversion.

Personally, from the point of view of one who has already visited the Field Cashier thrice this week, the news is rather a blow.

My, battalion, after being "in the line" for six weeks, moves back to Wahn on Wednesday, where, I believe, guard mounting and battalion drill are the order of the day.

Our dancing classes are a great success, and waltzing gently round the room to the soft music of the band, relieves the monotony of the long evenings, even though your partner is one of the Company cooks.

If the Padre reads this, may he realize how the men appreciate his untiring efforts to make life in Seelscheid, even with the extra army pay, worth living for and may the men who relieve us have as good a time as we have had.

TH TWELVE-POUND LOOK.

WOMENS' THEATRE COMPANY AT COLOGNE.

The Womens' Theatre Company, who are this week paying a return vesit to Cologne, gave an extraordinarily good performance of "The Twelve Pound Look" at the Deutsche Theatre the other evening, in which the excellent acting of Miss Shirley King and Mr. Norman Hearn was particularly conspicuous. Miss Inez Bensusan, under whose supervision the Company is performing, did not seem to be quite so forceful as when she appeared at the Apollo Theatre a couple of weeks ago, but perhaps fastidiousness is responsible. Miss Gladys Norcott combined a sweet voice and a very agreable stage presence in presenting several captivating light numbers while Miss Hilda Potts gave evidence of the posession of a pure and well-trained soprano voice.

The Company is this week supported by Pte. Harry Rogers, the well-known comedian, and Corpl. Potter, both of the "Irresponsibles," and their efforts met with warm approval each evening. Black and White, who are very well known as accomplished singers and dancers complete a programme which, for all round excellence and variety, it would be difficult to equal.

A CHANCE FOR THE LADIES.

Y.M.C.A. OFFER TO FEMALE RELATIVES OF SOLDIERS.

New and original ideas for competitions flow with extraordinary fluency from the home of the Cologne Y.M.C.A. The go-as-you-please contests provide weekly a refreshing change from the orthodox musical entertainment as well as supplying acceptable little prizes to the more gifted performers.

The latest announcement indicates that fresh fields are to be explored. We believe the proposal to organise a competition in which the troops and their lady relatives (or friends) share interest, is a happy inspiration of Dr. Francis, albeit there is a distinct feminine atmosphere in the composition of the circular that makes known the conditions of the new competitions suggestive of collaboration with one or more of the ladies who have recently joined the canteen department of the "Y.M."

The printed conditions start off by informing us that the competition is "open to the mothers, wives, sisters, (and other fellows' sisters) of the British Troops in the occupied territory" and then proceeds to state that quite a bunch of attractive prizes will be given to those ladies who send to the Lady Sups. Y.M.C.A., Cologne, the best made petticoat, knitted vest or nightdress suitable for children whose ages are specified.

All the garments received from the competitiors will be sent by the Ladies' Committee to the women and children of our Allies (in those areas that have been over-run by the Germans) as a gift from the competitors.

The competition has all the qualities of great success.

THE RHINE ARMY MUSICAL SOCIETIES.

Owing to the great number of applications which have been received from intending members of the above Societies, it has been found impossible to answer them individually. The names have been enrolled, and it is requested that those applicants who are stationed in Cologne or within train distance should attend the next rehearsal of the Society in which they are interested. It has not, as yet, been found possible to make arrangements whereby men stationed away from Cologne may be enabled to join the Societies, but proposals to this end are under consideration.

Rehearsals take please as follows:—The Choral Society; Male voice: Rehearsels every Monday and Wednesday at 5—45 p.m. in the Lecture Room, on the first floor of the Church Army Soldiers' Club, Antonier Strasse, Cologne. The vocal Society (mixed voice) for all English ladies stationed in Cologne: Rehearsals every Friday at the above time and place. The orchestral Society, rehearsels every Tuesday at the above time and place. The Church Choir: services every Sunday in the Church, 57, Schildergasse Cologne, at 10—30 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Notes on the Sports.

Amongst the Drivers there were some good riders and jumpers.

The potato race caused great amusement. Keeping the crowd back took some time, while this race was going.

The limber gunners' race was "Some stunt." Rumour says one gunner spent about fifty marks at last "eanteen issue" on chocolates for his mount.

In the V.C. Race Mackintosh offered his prize-money to the trumpeter if he would stop the band.

Tea was provided on the field and on the whole a good day's sport was witnessed.

A concert followed during the evening and some good talent came forward. Sergt. Green opened the concert with "Signoria"; Gr. Mackintosh gave "I Don't Work for a Living" and Sig. Fairclough also contributed to the programme.

During the interval the prizes were distributed by Capt. Graham who is at present in command of the 87th Battery. He gave a short speech and said how glad he was to be in command of such a unit second to none in all things. He finished up by calling for three cheers for B.S.M. Blackman and this was heartly given. The evening was concluded by Br. Coombe, who sang "One Touch of Nature."

MATCH AL HERZHEIM.

1st BATTERY M.G.C. v. 2nd FIELD AMBULANCE.

This match was played at Herzheim on Tuesday. Play was keen and fast and a capital run by Molloy enabled Sgt. Tasker to open the scoring for the Gunners. Good work by Cap Edwards for the Ambulance sent Millar to the Gunners' goal but he failed to score with the final effort. Mid-field play followed until Scott and Fisher with fine footwork took the play to the Ambulance goal but could not overcome the fine back play of Tomlinson for the Ambulance.

Prior to the interval a fine dribble by Scott down the wing, finishing with a good centre, enabled Molloy to score the Gunners' second goal.

Half-time:

Gunners . . . 2; Amb. . . . nil.

After the interval the Gunners continued to show superior play and Cpl. Matthias scored from a centre by Scott while Lt. Chandler ran through the opposition and scored with a good solo effort.

After these reverses the Amb. improved and Howarth with a fine drive beat the Gunners' "goalie" and Waite for the Amb. came narrowly near the lowering of the score with a drive that hit the upright. Close on time Lt. Chandler added two more for the Gunners.

Result:

1st Battery M.G.C. . . . 6; 2nd Field Amb. . . . 1

LANCASHIRE DIVISIONAL COMPETITION.

51ST V 52ND KINGS (LIVERPOOL) REGT.

Played at Beuel on the ground of the 51st Kings on Wednesday. The 52nd with a strong wind behind, pressed most of the first half and crossed over leading by 2 goals to nil. In the second half, in spite of the wind and the stubborn defence of Nuttal and Hitchen the 52nd continually attacked and Higgins put the finishing touch to a very pretty run though by the outside left. Lt-Mc Clymont, Capt. Foss, Derbin and Lt. Pritchard were the pick of the winning side.

Result:— 52nd King's 3; 51st King's 0.

LANCASHIRE DIVISION KNOCK-OUT COMPETITION.

A very interesting match was played in the first round of this Competition, at Bonn, on Saturday, betwen the 16th Lancashire Fusiliers and the 168th Brigade R.F.A. For the first 15 minutes, play was good on both sides, both goalkeepers being well tested. The first goal was scored by Cpl. A. Mellor, for the Artillery, after some very clever play. About ten minutes afterwards the efforts of the Artillery were again crowned with success by a goal from Sapper. S. Cowham. This double success by the Artillery did not daunt in any way the players of the Lancashire Team, who attacked many times, only to be defeated by the Artillery goalkeeper.

About ten minutes before half-time the Fusiliers, after some very good play, in which all the forward line combined, were rewarded by a goal scored by their outside left.

The second half of the game was as fast as the first, the ball travelling from one end of the field to the other continually. The goalkeepers of both teams were well tested many times, but these two persons kept a wary eye on the ball, and showed great coolness all through the game. The pace was very fast, and the players were none too sorry when the whistle sounded, bringing a good game to a finish. Result:— 168 Brigade R.F.A. 2; 16th Lancashire Fusiliers 1

STARS AND STRIPES.

"WEIRD & WONDERFUL FOOTBALL AT SCHLEIDEN."

The tranquil little village of Schleiden was the scene of tremendous excitement on Saturday when teams representing the Officers and Sergeants of the 1/5th King's Own Regt. met in an attempt to decide the ever burning question as to who constitutes the real backbone of our army, subalterns or sergeants.

Both teams were well represented although owing to a previous accident at football the Officers were deprived of the services of T. H. Bell their right back. This loss, however, was almost compensated for by the inclusion of H. Shaw the Lancaster Linoleum Eaters' amateur right half.

One outstanding feature of the day's play was the performance of the Officers' goal-keeper, Lieut. R. Forrester. A popular figure in Lancs sporting circles he will always be famous as the only man who ever swallowed three billard balls in rapid succession without the aid of a drink of water. A fine figure of a man standing 6' 2" and weighing 13 stone in his stocking feet, he gave an exhibition of goal keeping that will live for ever in the memory of at least one. This is the inside right of the Sergeant's team, a little C.Q.M.S., I forget his name, but he speaks with a Scotch accent. In a melée in front of the Officers' goal, Forrester in the heat of the moment mistook the C.Q.M.S. for the ball, and allowing the ball to trickle harmlessly past the posts, picked up the luckless inside right and hustled him far into the field. The unfortunate missile was heard to enquire in a pathetic tone two days afterwards "Where did that one go to?"

Smoking Boots.

The forward line of the blues was superb, not so much individually as for splendid combined work. Even when deprived of the ball the yperformed several excellent concerted movements. No doubt the greasy state of the ground accounted for their inability to stop the advance. The signal to halt was usually given by either Irvine or Curry falling down.

The backs, Farrand and Norris, were excellent and though not always kicking the ball they were very conscientious in going through the motions. The outside right was a tremendously fast and determined player. Once indeed, after a lightning run up the wing his boots were seen to smoke for a few moments. This player scored 3 goals and tore his shorts in one ffort to score another.

His brother Tweedie played left half, and succesfully stopped the advances of the opposing right wing.

One feels that this report would not be complete without a mention of the Sergeants' right half C.Q.M.S. Clarkson. He succeded not so much by physical effort as by mental suggestion. That is, he trotted quietly allongside whenever opponent happened to have possession of the ball and instead of tackling him carried on a brilliant and spirited monologue. A very pleasant and enjoyable game ended in a win of 4 goals to nil for the Officers.

Science ever was the master of brute strength. but De Mortius nil nisi bonum. "Look-out."

DAVSON STILL IN FORM.

MAGNIFICENT ALL-ROUND DISPLAY AT QUEEN'S COURT.

Davson beat Ritchie 6—2, 6—3, 8—6 in the Gentlemen's Singles (Challenge Round) in the covered court tennis championship matches at Queen's Club on Tuesday.

Lycett and Heath (Australia) beat H. Portlock and W. A. Ingram 6—2, 6—0, and meet P. M. Davson and Major Marogordato to-morrow.

The winners gave a magnificent allround display not losing a single set. The doubles have now reached the challenge round.

Mixed Doubles (Semi-final) P. M. Davson and Mrs. Lambert Chambers beat J. L. Patterson and Mrs. Satterthwaite 7—5, 7—6, 6—3. It was a great match, a noteworthy feature being Mrs. Chambers' fine diagonal drives, which frequently caught Patterson napping. Patterson served and smashed magnificently, but otherwise was a little erratic. The winners won by allround greater steadiness. They meet Lycett (Australia) and Miss Ryan (California), in the final round.

INTER SERVICES RUGBY.

FRENCH ARMY TEAM'S ARRIVAL IN LONDON.

The Rugby football team to represent the French Army against the winners of the Inter-Services competition—either the Mother Country or New Zealand—at Twickenham to-morrow left Boulogne yesterday morning.

Upon their arrival in London they were received by Major-General Sir C. H. Harington, K.C.B., D.S.O., Deputy Chief of the Imperial General Staff, who is president of the Army Sports Control Board.

HENLEY RACES.

AMERICAN SERVICE CREW TO ENTER ALLIED EIGHTS.

Entries which are now certain for the King's Cup, at Henley, include an American Service crew. The race is for Allied Eights. Sims, the Putney boat-builder, has received an order from Americans training in France for an eight, a four, and a skulling-boat.

5th K.O.Y.L.I FOOTBALL.

Boisterous weather marred what promised to be two interesting meetings in connection with the 5th K.O.Y.L.I inter-platoon football competition on Wednesday. "C" Coy had a disastrous day, No. 10 platoon losing by 6—0 to No. 5 platoon and No. 12 being defeated by 3—0 by No. 15 platoon.

The "B" Company team showed excellent cohesion and played first class football throughout.

INTER-COMPANY TUG OF WAR COMPETITION.

In the first round of the inter-compagny tug-of-war competition of the 5th K.O.Y.L.I., "C" Cy. met "A" Company and carried off the honours rather easily, gaining the first two pulls. The winning team consisted of Staff Sgt. Instr. Smith, Sgt. Houwes A. J., Sgt. F. V. Wood, L/Cpl. A. Robinson, L/Cpl. H. Garforth, Ptes G Fiercher, L. Gouldsborough and W. H. Abbott; Coach, — R.Q.M.S. J. W. Roughton.

Some Cricketing Yarns.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY'S MOST CELEBRATED ELEVEN.

(By Captain H. R. Bromley-Davenport.)

The Editor has asked me to relate some of my cricketing reminiscences and any stories I may remember of celebrated cricketers. I am sorry to say that it is more than 20 years since I played first class cricket, but many still remember the cricketers of those days.

I had the honour of playing in the Cambridge XI of 1893, a side still considered by many to be the finest that ever represented either University. Four members of the side played for a 1st class county, and it contained such celebrated cricketers as Stanley Jackson, who captained the England team in after years in many test matches, Ranjitsinjhi, C.M. Wills, one of the finest Rugby half backs of his day, and A. O. Jones who took a team to Australia and who for many years was Captain of the Notts XI. The two Douglases (R. N. & J.) who both played for Middlesex, also figured in the eleven, along with L. H. Gay a very fine wicket keeper, E. C. Streatfield, a splendid bowler and magnificent hitter, P. H. Latham, who played for Sussex, T. N. Perkins of Kent, and myself.

We won our match against Oxford very easily but an unfortunate incident occurred which was ultimately the cause of the rules of the game being changed. In those days, if a side were 80 or more runs behind on the first innings, a "follow-on" was compulsory. Earlier in the year we had made the Australians follow-on, and in their second innings they ran up a biggish score. The cricket crumbled badly for the fourth innings and we were beaten.

Tacties that were Criticised.

When the tenth Oxford batsman came in, Oxford were still 85 runs behind. I was fielding at short leg at the time and being sharp of hearing, distinctly heard the incoming man give instructions to the other batsman that his Captain wished the side to follow on. I reported this to Jackson, our Captain, and he instructed Wills, then bowling, to frustrate these tactics. This was done by Wills sending up two no-balls on the leg side, both of which went to the boundary. We won the match in the end by 266 runs, but our tactics were severely criticised.

Next year the "follow-on" number of runs was increased to 120; but even this was found unsatisfactory and later it was made optional for the fielding side either to bat again or to put their opponents in.

I was playing in a Yorkshire and Middlesex match at Bradford a year or two later. In this match one of the Yorkshire professionals then at top form, but unfortunately rather fond of whiskies and sodas, played for the last time for the Shire. He had been warned repeatedly by Lord Hawke that if he ever again took too much during a match he would be dismissed. There was no doubt that the player had had more than enough on this occassion, and although he bowled as accurately as usual, he never turned out again for Yorkshire.

Five Shillings a Run.

This reminds me of a once celebrated old Notts player who was brought up before his Committee on a charge of being the worse for liquor during a Country match. He had made over 70 runs out of a total of 120, and when asked for a explanation he replied drily "Well, if I was drunk and made 70 out of 120, what a state the others member of the side must have been in!"

Old "W.G" always used to "do" himself very well. I was playing at Lords for the I. Zingari against the Gentlemen of England the year W.G made 1000 runs during May. He had made 70 at luncheon and was still batting and a bottle of champagne at lunch seem to be catled for.

I started the bowling after luncheon and the first two balls were promptly despatched to the boundary. As the "Evening News" was raising a fund which gave W.G. five shillings for every run he made during the month his bottle of Cham. was very quickly paid for.

Treated like Kings.

In 1895 I was a member of the first English team that had ever visited the West Indies. We were quite an indifferent side, but still managed to win most of our matches. Wherever we went we were treated like kings, the whole population turned out to welcome us and there was a general holiday in each island during our stay.

We had a most exciting match against Barbadoes, winning on the fifth day by 25 runs. Our opponents had made over 500 in the first innings. The last man was given out l.b.w. by our own umpire and when we were walking back to the Pavilion a rush was made for him by the native populace. The poor man imagined he was going to be torn to pieces, but was astonished to find himself carried shoulder high to the pavilion by the cheeing crowd. It transpired later that we had been heavily backed by the natives — we had lost our first match — and they were so overjoyed at winning their bets that they insisted on hoisting the man who, they thought, had won their money for them.

BOXING TOURNAMENT.

3rd BATT. M.G.CORPS: NOVICES WITH THE GLOVES.

Army Forms B256 were normal on Thursday morning, although, as prophesied, blood flowed freely from one or two novices in the successful tournament held overnight. Lt. Col. Cranston, D.S.O. and Major Richardson filled the positions of referee and timekeeper respectively. Lts. Forster and Gray judged. The exponent of physical "jerks" made an excellent M.C. and C.S.M. Ellis did the work behind the scenes. Cpl. Edge and L/Cpl. Carpenter acted as seconds.

Companies scored points as follows:— "C," 10 points; "D" and "A," 8 points; "B," 2 points.

Despite petty damage here and there, all boxers did justice to tea and sandwiches which appeared in the dressing rooms afterwards.

Interspersed with 9 Novice Contests were 3 three-round fights by young veterans. In the first of the latter, due to a misunderstanding, the first round proved a harmless and pretty exhibition, but at a word from the referee, the pair made up for lost time and laid in lustily.

It is difficult with so many new arrivals in the ring to comment upon individual styles and performances but the outstanding round of the night was the last bout between Metcalfe (A) and Eland (D). The latter won after an extra minute's boxing.

Winners: "A" Coy.— Milnes, Collett, Little, Brown.
"B" Coy.— Bicknell.
"C" Coy.— Waller, Cank, Ogden, Brunsden, de Power.
"D" Coy.— Bailey, Perrin, Finch, Eland.

INTER-ALLIED SPORT.

NEW ATHLETIC FIELD AND STADIUM IN PARIS.

A number of Y.M.C.A. physical instructors are co-operating with the military authorities in the organisation of Inter-Allied Sport to be held in Paris in July, probably between the 17th and 30th of that month.

A new athletic field and stadium to seat 20,000 is being prepared. The games will cover a wide variety of events, including all officials track and field events, singee, four, and eight-oared rowing, swimming, soccer, rugby, baseball, fencing, boxing, wrestling, shooting, and horsemanship.—Reuter.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

(With an Occasional Entertainments Note.)

Rowing on the Rhine.

A few days ago, I wrote in this column on the subject of rowing on the Rhine, and pointed out that the condition necessitating that all prospective oarsmen must be capable of swimming 200 yards against the current before a boat would be hired out to him. was much too severe. Anent this paragraph, a correspondent, evidently in facetious mood, writes to suggest that we should emulate the example of a well-known London journal, the proprietors of which have made a habit of giving away huge money prizes in connection with flying, standard bread and other things. He considers that we would be "backing a certain winner" to offer 1000 pounds to the first man to swim 200 yards up-stream in the Rhine. I am half inclined to agree with my correspondent, but I do not think we can adopt his suggestion. There are too many "dark horses" about.

Boating on a lake.

But rowing enthusiasts have no need to despair. There are to be facilities for indulgence in "skimming the wavelets" after all. The people at the amusement office have kept their weather eye open to such good purpose that eight very good rowing boats have been taken over, for the use of the Army, on the lake at Volksgarten, near Eifel Platz. These boats are to be available at once, and for a two seater, 70 Pf. will be charged per hour. The lake provides quite a good sketch of water, toughly, I should think, about 300 yards by 80 yards.

Billiards.

A sergeant, whose name I shall not divulge at the moment, has written to ask if I know of any billiard player in Cologne, other than a professional, who can give him any start in a game of 500 up. Now there's a question to ask! I have not the faintest idea of the capabilities of my correspondent who, for all I know, may be a potential English champion (in which event I would reply in the negative) or he may be a very average novice whom a dozen or so of my acquaintances could dispose of. Still, there is an undercurrent of quiet confidence in the tone of his letter which makes me think that he must be a fairly useful player. Probably somebody would care to answer the sergeant's question in a practical manner by meeting him at the table.

To-Days Entertainments.

The idea of providing free entertainments in Cologne to-day, and of arranging the programmes so that they are in keeping with the season is indeed a happy one. At the Deutsche Theatre, the Rhine Army Choral Society will submit a performance that is bound to meet with general approbation, while the Woman's Theatre Company will be supported at the Apollo by the "Tabs" orchestra, specially augmented. Reference to our advertising columns will show that the cinemas, too, are not to be behind in providing really good shows.

Cologne Opera House.

I hear that there has been an enormous demand for tickets for the Cologne Opera House on Monday, for the performance of "Parsifal". This wonderful music drama of Wagner's was until recent years performed exclusively at Beyreuth — the home of that composer's music — but recently, London and New York have welcomed its performance with great enthusiasm. There is sure to be a packed house on Monday and I have been asked to make a few observations on the subject. My informant says that applause is not really necessary and suggests that perhaps the greatest appreciation of the performance would be shown if the audience refrained from applause altogether. If this form of approval must be indulged in, however, there should be no clapping until the last note of the music has died away; the lowering of the curtain should not be regarded as the signal for those outbursts.

THE RAMBLER.

153rd LABOUR COMPANY WHIST DRIVE.

The third of a series of Whist Drives was held at Nippes (Sechzig) on Wednesday evening. Ten prizes were given which were secured by:— Pte. Shorburn 1st Ladies; Sgt. H. Mitchell, R.A.O.C., 1st Gents; Cpl. Williams, 2nd Ladies; Pte. Callins, 2nd Gents; C.Q.M.S. Ralph, Ladies booby, Sgt. Gragon, R.A.O.C. and L/pl. Cleverly, Ladies Hidden Numbers; and Pte. J. Coleman and Pte. J. Yates, Gents Hidden Numbers. There was a good attendance and the evening was very successful.

ROYAL FUSILIERS DEFEAT PONTOON PARK.

No. 3 Coy, 43rd Garr. R.F. v 9th Pontoon Park.

These teams met on the Volksgarten, on Tuesday. Pontoon Park opened the scoring, Brooks being responsible after 10 minutes. Some very clever play ensued in mid field and William (R.F.) equalised. L/Cpl. Skinner, however, put Pontoon Park once more ahead with a neat goal. Just before half-time, Evens scored a second goal for the R.F.'s through a penalty. The play in the second half was characterized by rough tactics. Five minutes before time, Watson found the net for the N-F's.

Result:— 43rd R.F.'s 3: 9th P.P. 2.

THE SHADOW.

GOOD FRIDAY.

THE CROSS AND THE CHRIST IN THE MODERN WORLD

(By a Correspondent.)

Good Friday brings us back to the foundations; it takes us to the very focus of the faith of Christendom. The central thing in Good Friday is the Cross, and in it Mankind has to do with a fact which can neither be ignored nor modified. It is the symbol of symbols; not a nation but uses it in decorations and titles; they embroider it upen their banners; and when other symbols have lost their meaning the Cross remains. Whenever and wherever men gaze upon it a solemn hush falls upon them, as, in a sudden flash, an historic scene is reconstructed in their imagination. The Central Figure in the scene is suspended on the middle cross and intently gazing upon him they recognize in the act of self-sacrifice the Hero Whom they can worship and try to emulate, the Ideal Man, the Pattern, the Christ, the Saviour. It would be well to take a brief survey of the modern world and observe the position that Central Figure occupies therein. If you travel through Europe and those parts of America into which European influences have penetrated, you will not travel far without seeing a temple, and not infrequently a most costly edifice, erected to the honour of the Central Figure — the Christ. On conversing with men one usually meets in the course of travel, you will find the names of great men of antiquity scarcely known, and the influence which they exert scarcely appreciated whereas the name of the Crucified Christ will be familiar to everybody and his precepts, though imperfectly acted on by his nominal followers, yet universally acknowledged to approve themselves to the conscience, and to have a binding force. There is no greater name known among the civilised races of mankind than the name of Jesus. The Cross of infamy, the scandal of the ancient world, holds the highest place of honour in the noblest monuments of the modern world for no other reason than because He died upon it, and even a large majority of those who deny that He is the incarnate Son of God assign to Him the highest place among great men. Emperors and kings profess to be his subjects. History with no douptful voice declares that the Cross and the Christ have exerted a powerful influence on the legislation and the politics of the past, and at this moment exert a powerful influence on the practical life of man.

Where is the legislative power in Europe or America which does not accept the principle which underlie the teaching of the Cross and the Christ, as the basis on which society ought to rest and at least profess to embody them in practice? What is one of the chief ends to which in this our day both public and individual effort is directed? The elevation of the lower classes of society, and the amelioration of the condition of the wretched. This is due, not to rulers of the ancient world whose business it was to keep the masses quiet, not to philosophers who contemplated their condition with despair and viewed the attempt to elevate them as hopeless, but to the teaching of the Cross and the Christ. This teaching is preeminently opposed to warfare, and we have lived to behold the day when nations have arrived at the conclusion that war is a most illegitimate means of settling differences between nations: hence the League of Nations.

Also on art, literature and history, the Central Figure on Calvary exerts His influence. Walk through some of the greath picture galleries of modern Europe and observe who is glorified therein. Remove from our picture galleries everything relating to the Cross and the Christ and you leave them half empty. Strike out of poetry and history everything which relates to Christ and the Church which He has erected and the influence with which He and it have acted on mankind, and the whole becomes a mass of fragments without meaning or connection.

The world may change, but men will ever see the Cross stand, with the Christ uplifted to influence and bless their efforts.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

Work and food.

In dealing with the question of the increase both in prices of goods and also unemployed, the Frankfurter Zeitung remarks: "From what are we living? On the 7th of April there were 25,494 millions of marks of Reichsbank notes in circulation; on the same day last year the figure was only 11,917 millions, and in 1917 only 8,559 millions. To this must be added 11,051 millions marks in Darlehnscassenscheinen (a sort of loan notes as current money). The press for paper money is working feverishly, but it is neither creating food, nor dwellings nor clothing. It is only creating the technical means whereby higher wages and salaries can be paid. In reality, we are reduced now to our last resort, and merely living on the capital which was made in former years. The less we work, the more we live on the capital, and the poorer we get every day."

"We have no more credit in the foreign countries, because they do not see us ready to work. And so the standard of our exchange is falling deeper and deeper. The mark is only one-third its peace-time value, which means that we have to pay three times the price for everything we want to import. The foreign countries are willing to exchange goods for goods, and if we could export we could certainly import. But to export we must work, for only by these means can the goods be prepared: The foreign countries need coal, and because we do not deliver it the provisions of food from Holland are stopped. There is great opportunity for disposing of the goods we can manufacture, but because they are not prepared we cannot receive the return supplies we mostly need.

"Thus the mark is falling, the prices are rising the claims for higher salaries are increasing, and yet, because we do not work enough, we have nothing to eat."

The Sarre and the Peace Conference.

The Frankfurter Nachrichten reports that "the Government will strongly maintain their point of view with regard to the future of the Sarre district and will not allow itself to be drawn into any discussion on the subject at the Peace Conference. If the Entente propose to tear this district, from Germany, the German delegates will repulse with energy such claims."

From Havas we learn that France will have as perpetual property the coal mines of the Sarre district. If, however, after fifteen years of administration determined by the League of Nations the population of the Sarre want to be again under German domination, Germany will will have to buy the mines from France.

The Vossische Zeitung, Commenting upon this says that "such Peace conditions are inacceptable. A foreign administration of the Sarre district during fifteen years is against the principle of selfdetermination, the Sarre district being a German territory and having a German population."

Economical contracts.

The same newspaper, advocating a new foreign policy, says: "Why does not France make an economical contract with Germany? Because France knows that the German official policy considered always a direct negotiation with France, or every effort to satisfy directly the economical wishes of France, as an offence against Great Britain. The German policy is always staring at England, and does not dare to do anything without England's sanction. If direct economical contracts could be concluded between Germany and France, if an agreement about the rebuilding of North France could be reached between the two nations, all the reasons for conflicts, which might poison the future relations of the France and Germany, would disappear."

They will, or they will not.

The article ends with these words: "Indeed, it is possible that even a German-American separate peace might take place. But would the danger of a durable opposition between Germany and France be cast out? If such is the case, every peace which the government is contracting will bear the germ of new wars. It is impossible to find out how the actual German Government will get out of the dilemma: either they sign the peace conditions, as we are told by Havas they will be—then the Government will not stay a day longer. Not only because they would have brought dishonour on Germany, but above all because they would have helped to create the germ of future wars—or they do not sign such a peace; then we will ask from them why, through continual want of correct appreciation of political necessities, they have foiled the people's peace."

QUESTION OF PRICES.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post

Sir.—Might I draw your attention to a matter which I think, and many others with me, needs investigation by the proper authority and put aright. This is the question of prices for articles demanded by the German shopkeepers from the officers and men of the Army of the Rhine.

One of your correspondents has already drawn your attention, and that of your readers, to the soaring prices the Bosche Stamp Dealers are claiming for their stamps, and I want to draw your attention, not only to this, but to the prices demanded for Cameras and other photographic material and would suggest a remedy.

Being personally interested in photography, I, not unnaturally, have looked at several cameras with a view to purchasing. My idea was a ¼-plate Folding Camera, and I visited a number of shops in quest of a cheap but good ones. I found plenty of good ones but none cheap. Most of them have been those with Goerz Lenses and very excellent, I admit. Still that does not warrant the price they are at present charging for them. The prices, I contend, are far and above what they used to charge their civilian customers before they were banned using them. Now, for instance, 450 Marks was demanded (and prices above that I understand have been asked) for a Goerz ¼-plate folding camera. Now, by a simple arithmetic sum you will find it would cost just about £9 at the present rate of exchange. But, and there is a big but, this 450 Marks is worth more than £9 to them. It is worth close on £23 to them! For you must remember the mark was worth about is in pre-war days. Absolutely a wicked price, for the British and Allied troops are the only customers, civilian photography being restricted.

It is plain to anybody what has happened. The cunning Bosche, who knows the present rate of exchange, is priceing his articles accordingly. This ought not to occur, I argue, and wouldn't if the tables were turned, and the Germans were occupying Great Britain. As at present the exchange is only artificial and has been established for the benefit of the British and the Allied Armies, and commercial relations between Great Britain and Germany have not been yet fully re-established, the rate of exchange ought to have absolutely nothing whatsoever to do with it.

Other prices have risen as well, e. g. Eau de Cologne, souvenirs, etc.

Should the troops be victimised and German profiteers be allowed to exist in a town occupied by us? It wouldn't be allowed at home, and so why should it here?

It is also strongly rumoured that there are two prices being charged for things — one for German Civilians and one for Britishers. Whether it be true or not, it is not at all unlikely.

Your aid is asked in publishing this letter and so attempting to end what appears to be nothing less than a scandal.

S.G.P.

Disabled Austrian soldiers, many of them released prisoners, have held Communist meetings in Vienna, demanding payment forthwith of 800 kronen (nominally £33 6s. 8d.) to buy civilian clothes, and, also, the resumption of hospital treatment.

In Siberia, the American Red Cross has equipped 13 hospitals with several thousand beds, furnished a hospital train of 12 cars for the Czecho-Slovaks, a complete anti-typhus train, and sent five relief trains to Middle-Western Siberia with supplies valued at £90,000.

On her way to West Hartlepool with a cargo of pit props, the steamship Carolus struck a mine, and sank off the Vinga Lighthouse, near Gothenburg, two men being killed and four injured.

From next Tuesday THE COLOGNE POST will appear as usual, that is DAILY EXCEPT ON MONDAYS

MARTIAL LAW IN THE PUNJAUB

FIFTY STEDFAST SEPOYS

BOLSHEVIST OUTBREAK AT VIENNA

FIRST ATTACK ON MUNICH FAILS

MARTIAL LAW IN THE PUNJAUB.

BUSINESS SUSPENDED.

It is officially announced that Amritsar and Lahore are quiet. Twelve important arrests have been made. Between these places, however, a state of rebellion exists. The military are taking the necessary action.

Bombay. Ahmedabed, where the rioters lost heavily, is quiet, but serious disturbances have occurred in Viramgam. Several buildings were destroyed. Business is suspended.

Calcutta, 12th April. The mob became so violent that the military were called out. Rioters stoned a picket, who fired on the crowd, killing six and wounding twelve. Mohammedans and Mawaris fraternised and Hindus were admitted to the Mosque. — Reuter.

Simla, 14th April. It is announced that the Governor General in Council is satisfied that a state of open rebellion exists in the Lahore-Amritsar district Martial law is declared but an ordinance is being issued that trials shall be held by a Commission constituted similarly to those prescribed by the Defence of India Act. — Reuter.

The latest official reports from India show a considerable improvement in the situation. Three agitators have been deported from Lahore.

Shops are re-opening both at Lahore and Amritsar.

During the rioting at Amritsar fifty sepoys faced a mob of at least five thousand and dispersed it by rifle fire.

There has been no further trouble at Bombay.

SAME OLD SPIRIT.

On enquiry at the War Office it was stated that soldiers awaiting embarkation homeward including many details from Mesopotamia, volunteered to remain in India in view of the present situation. Their offer has been accepted, but they will be sent home as soon as circumstances permit.

HOW TURKEY ENTERED THE WAR.

Constantinople. Striking revelations in connection with Turkey's entry into the war transpired at the court-martial on officials implicated in the Armenian atrocities. One of the accused, Yussuf Riza, admitted that prior to Turkey's entry Enver Pasha had signed a convention with Georgia for operations in the Caucasus, which would cut off the lines of retreat of the Russians. The result of this was extensive Turco-German concessions in Georgia. Turkey had always asserted that it did not intend to depart from its neutrality but war was forced upon her owing to an unfortunate encounter with the Russian fleet. — Reuter.

TURKEY'S TERRIBLE CONDITION.

Regarding the present state of affairs in Turkey Admiral Webb reports from Constantinople that the situation at Smyrna, where Turk and Greek are ready to spring at each other's throats on the slightest provocation, is only typical of a similar state of affairs throughout the whole of the Turkish Empire.

Bands of brigands, even within a few miles of Constantinople, are dominating the country.

Most brutal murders are of daily occurrence. Peaceable travellers are waylaid and robbed with violence, many being subject to such atrocities as having their ears cut off and similar outrages. Reuter.

SUICIDE OF HUNGARIAN MINISTER.

Budapesth. Count Festenics, who was Minister for War in the Karolyi Cabinet, has committed suicide. — Reuter.

EUROPE MUST GET BACK TO WORK.

Intervening in a debate in the House of Commons Lord Robert Cecil said that the blockade must be removed at the earliest possible moment although at the present time it is only operating against Germany and Hungary.

Until the blockade is completely removed a certain control over trade to neutrals must be maintained. When all trade channels are fully freed, however, all the nations of the world must make the greatest effort to re-establish industrial conditions. The alternatives were a gradually increasing chaos or making a start on the road to international confidence and co-operation. Therefore if Europe is to be saved it must be by the united efforts of all countries who were associated in war.

He appealed to Anglo-Saxons the world over to respond to the call now made, which is more urgent than ever before, the whole fabric of civilisation being in danger unless Europe gets back to work.

The first attack by Government troops on the Communists at Munich was a failure. Prussian troops will make the next attack.

GERMANS DISARM LETTLAND ARMY.

GOVERNMENT DEPOSED.

Copenhagen. According to official news from Libau, the Baltic German Landwehr has overthrown the Provisional Lett Government, after suprising and disarming the Lett reserve troops.

The surprise was rendered possible owing to the fact that all the trained Lett troops have been sent to the front, while the Baltic German detachaments were recently brought back to Libau.

The Commander in Chief of the German troops in Lettland, von der Goltz, has expressed astonishment at the incident.

The leader of the movement is Baron Manteuffel, a Courland noble, and it is stated that his agent has gone to Reval, where a rising is said to be planned for the 23rd. April. The Premier of Lettland, who is safe in Libau, is collaborating with the British Mission. He says that the Germans are spreading false reports to the effect that the British are supporting a rising against the Provisional Government.

British warships are in the inner harbour at Libau.—Reuter.

FIGHTING IN VIENNA.

Fierce rioting is reported from Vienna, where, on the 17th, 3,000 Communists attacked the Parliament house. They were repulsed by the military guard but the fighting was resumed in the vicinity of the Town Hall. Four policemen were killed and forty wounded.

Count Czernin, the ex-Austrian Foreign Minister, has been arrested at Waldkirch. He was trying to cross into Switzerland without a passport.

General Robertson left London for Cologne on Friday. Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig was at the station to see him off.

OUTBREAK OF RABIES IN ENGLAND.

MUZZLING ORDER.

In consequence of a dog which was killed at Byfleet, Surrey, being found to be suffering from rabies, the muzzling order has been revived in most of the Home counties.

The districts named in the order are London, Middlesex, Hertfordshire, Buckinghamshire, Berkshire, Hampshire and parts of Surrey.

A licence is necessary to take dogs from these areas and if it is desired to move dogs they must go into quarantine for six months.

The quarantine order will not apply to dogs passing through London with travellers, but a licence is necessary to bring an animal to London.

Since the first order was issued additional areas are being proclaimed as affected.

Many holiday arrangements were completely upset by the order. Queues of dog owners leading muzzled dogs besieged Whitehall from a very early hour, beseeching the authorities for travel licences for their pets, but the officials were obdurate. All applicants were told that they must keep the dogs at home.

So great was the demand for muzzles that there was a shortage. Profiteering was rampant, from five to ten shillings being demanded

A second case of rabies in the London area occurred at Acton, where a dog owner and his daughter were bitten and his wife savagely attacked. The third case is reported at Chertsey.

The Local Government Board has made special arrangements for the treatment of the bitten persons either at Paris or Plymouth.

It is generally assumed that the outbreak is connected with the one recently notified in Devonshire and Cornwall, which was caused by an infected dog brought from France in an aeroplane, thus escaping quarantine.

THE KING'S OWN (ROYAL LANCASTER REGIMENT.)

2nd. BN. HOME FROM SALONIKA

When the second battalion of the King's Own (Royal Lancaster Regiment) reached home from Salonika on Thursday night a magnificent reception was accorded the men. They were officially received by the Mayor and Corporation of Lancaster.

In his speech the Mayor recalled the fact that when the Lancasters' Territorial battalion (the 5th) was badly cut up at Ypres four years ago the Second Battalion volunteered en masse to relieve them and suffered heavy casualties in the gas poisoned salient.

Col. Bois returned thanks on behalf of the Regiment, which had a further terrific ovation as it marched from the Town Hall to Bowesham barracks.

MODERN WYCLIFFE PREACHERS.

A religious custom recalling the days of Wycliffe was revived yesterday in England, when a number of pilgrims set out on the old Wycliffe preachers' route from Bath to London. They are travelling by day, with occasional preaching halts. At night they rest in the villages and towns on the route, and they expect to reach London on 27th April.

Young men mounted on bicycles form an escort, and a number of motor cars carry literature for distribution.

HOLIDAY RUSH TO THE SEA.

Scenes recalling pre-war days were witnessed at all the London termini on Thursday, huge crowds leaving town for the seaside and country. Nearly all trains had to be run in duplicate, but even then the railway companies were unable to provide adequate accommodation for all travellers.

Messrs. Cook report that the holiday bookings this Easter constituted an absolute record. The greatest rush was for the East coast. Bookings for aeroplane flights were also very large.

RECRUITING FOR THE R.A.F.

It is officially announced that recruiting for the Royal Air Force will commence on 28th April. Recruits must be between the ages of eighteen and twenty-six. There are four periods of enlistment, namely, four years regular service and eight years on the reserve; five regular and seven reserve; six regular and six reserve; eight regular and four reserve. Pay will remain as at present, plus the war bonus, until the revised scale of pay for the Royal Air Force is introduced. Separation allowances will be as at present, although these are also subject to revision.

NEW WAR MEDALS.

A Paris message says that two interesting decorations are announced in regard to recognition of the services of those who fought in the great war.

Five thousand Australians will march from Hyde Park to the Mansion House on Anzac Day, 25th April.

In a stained glass window in Brampton church, near Huntingdon, dedicated to the memory of firty-five men of the village who fell during the war, Genaral Allenby's entry into Jerusalem is depicted. An aeroplane also appears in one of the panels.

FIERCE RIOT IN THE EAST END.

JEALOUS SEAMEN.

A serious riot occurred in the East end of London on Thursday evening, arising out of a long-standing feud between white and coloured seamen arriving at the Port of London.

The trouble broke out in a number of cafés in Cable-street. Reports of firearms and the sound of breaking glass startled the neighbourhood and very soon a crowd of men, including several soldiers, rushed up the street.

Violent fighting ensued and the police were summoned. So fierce was the struggle that they had to be reinforced. When the street was at length cleared a number of men were lying on the ground. Many of them were wounded, chiefly with broken bottles and knives. These men were sent to hospital.

The trouble is said to be due to jealousy on the part of the white men, who resent the attentions paid by Arab seamen to the waitresses in the cafés.

MAJOR GENERAL'S TWO ROLES.

"Eye-witness," under which name Major General Swinton, in the earlier days of the war, was permitted to lift, by ever so little, the veil of secrecy which shrouded the doings of the Army was a guest at the National Union of Journalists dinner on Thursday.

When he acted as "Eye-witness," he said, he was attacked by two fires. Soldiers called him a blank journalist and journalists called him a blank blackleg.

He paid a generous tribute, however, to the great kindness shown to him by the war correspondents and other journalists with whom he came into contact.

WARNING TO EXCURSION STEAMERS.

The Board of Admiralty has issued a warning pointing out the dangers to which excursion steamers are liable from floating mines.

Life-saving precautions must be adequate and life-belts issued to all persons on board.

WELL KNOWN LIBERAL LEAVES THE PARTY.

At the last General election Col. J. C. Wedgewood, D. S. O., was returned as a Coalition Liberal for Newcastle-under-Lyne (Staffordshire).

FLYING THE ATLANTIC OCEAN.

COMPETITORS ON THE MARK.

Major J. C. Wood, pilot of the Short biplane, who will be the only competitor flying westward, left Eastchurch on Thursday afternoon for Limerick, this being the first stage of his attempt to fly the Atlantic. The weather was ideal, hundreds of soldiers and holiday makers crowding round the machine.

Every head was bared when a Chaplain, standing by the aeroplane, offered the following prayer: "May the blessing of God Almighty rest upon this machine and on those about to fly it. May He protect them safely across the Atlantic."

St. Johns. 17th April. The Martinsyde machine went up at midday and after remaining in the air for forty minutes made a good descent. Rainham stated that everything was working well.

On Friday a series of depressions was moving from the Atlantic towards Europe. Rain was falling on the west coast of Ireland and the wind blowing at thirty miles an hour. These conditions are likely to persist. A storm warning has been issued along the American coast.

Another competitor has been added to the list of Trans-Atlantic Flight aspirants, the Alliance Aeroplane Company having entered a biplane. It will be piloted by Captain W.R. Curtis, R.A.F.

A telegram from New York says that one of the flying boats wherewith the American Navy propose to attempt the Atlantic flight was tested on Thursday for the first time with its full load. It failed however to rise from the water, although all four Liberty motors were going for twenty minutes.

KINMEL CAMP RIOTS.

When the Court-martial which is trying the Canadians alleged to have been concerned in the riots at Kinmel camp was resumed on Thursday, the first prisoner to be tried, Gnr. Lorette, gave evidence on his own behalf.

He said that at the time when he was alleged to have been waving a red flag he was actually eating his dinner. Two other witnesses corroborated this.

Another witness said that on the day of the riots he met the accused, who explained his smart appearance by saying that he had cleaned up overnight in order to attend church service the following morning and make a good start for the Lenten season.

Major Weyman, for the defence, suggested that Lorette had been mistaken for another man. There were obvious reasons why he could not produce for the defence the man who really was carrying the red flag.

The Court adjourned to consider the evidence, but no decision was announced.

DISTRIBUTION OF MAUNDY MONEY.

With the usual elaborate ceremony Maundy money was distributed in Westminster Abbey on Thursday to fifty-four men and fifty-four women.

EASTER SUNDAY.

It has often been a puzzle that several of our Christian festivals are intimately bound up with ceremonies which had an undoubted vogue long before the Christian era. This connexion of Christian rite with pagan custom is wrongly reckoned an unworthy compromise; it is more properly regarded as an example of provident statesmanship. The early Church had in its fold many who were uplifted by the new vision and yet cherished a deep interest in the festivals of an older faith; and their loyalty to the Church was strengthened when they saw these festivals ennobled by the touch of a purer religion and moulded for a long, resplendent future. Thus it is that our Easter ceremonial is manifold in significance. It commemorates for most of us victory over death, the triumph of the Cross; but it also takes up the ancient conception of creation, and it gives new meaning to the re-creation heralded in Spring. Easter eggs are the symbolism of this new creation of the world, for it is an ancient tradition that the world was hatched at Eastertide.

Today we celebrate Easter Sunday, unharassed by the clamour of war. Its traffic and its tragedy are stilled, and we wait with expectancy the coming of Peace. For four long, dread years our Easters have mocked their holy symbolism. Spring came for us, the seeds of the field sprang into lifes, earth took on its garb of beauteous youth, trees and shrubs shed their happy verdure, the birds sang their songs of love and joy; yet there was no new world, and spring crept from us crestfallen and ashamed. Nay more, as each Spring came and went the land of our campaigns grew more and more desolate. In barren devastation there was little place for verdure, for brightly-tinted foliage, for the happy cheer of songsters — even Spring lost its meaning in the cruel and ghastly fields of war. There was no creation; there was nought but death.

But war is over. The sun shines once more and heralds a better day.

But oh, she dances such a way,
No sun upon an Easter day
Is half so fine a sight.

The quaint philosopher, Sir Thomas Browne, may have laid to rest the old legend of Easter's dancing sun, but it is a parable for hopeful hearts. We expect much and we believe much from our Easter of 1919. The cartoon of our artist, reproduced on another page, expresses the glad spirit of hope, that spirit which refuses pessimism and declares that the best is yet to be. In ancient Persian lore Ormuzd and Ahriman were to contend over the mundane egg till the consummation of all things. Are we not nearer that consummation of a new and nobler world creation? Soon we may have a League of Nations which shall banish War, a League which shall give new ideals for the stronger empires, new hope for the smaller nations, and new security for the oppressed peoples of the world. Then, indeed, we would be begotten unto a lively hope, to an inheritance uncorruptible and undefiled and that fadeth not away.

EASTER DAY.

A FACT AND ITS POWER.

(By a Correspondent)

Easter Day is a Victory Day full of joy and gladness, commemorating a fact, and welcoming its power to satisfy the natural desire of men. You know a fact when you know the history the proofs, the law, perhaps the date of its happening. You know the power when you understand the relation of that fact to yourself, to the community, to the country at large. In the case of material things, it is somewhat easy to know the power of the fact. The moon attracts the earth — we all know that — and we can know the power of that fact, by the study of the tides. The sun shines in the heavens, and the power of that fact is felt in every coal mine, and in every cottage home. When we come to historical facts it is less easy. The fact of Trafalgar and the power of that fact, the decision of the Germans to invade Belgium in August 1914; the capture of Jerusalem; we shall not know the power of these facts for many and many a long year.

The resurrection of Christ is distinct from all these facts. There is something so mysterious about it all. We cannot make it a matter of experiment as to what the power is. There are physical forces, but this is not one of them. There are moral forces, but this is greater. This is a new force and a new power which came into existence when a certain event occurred. What was that fact? It was the appearance on Easter Morn of the central Figure — the Christ who had died on the middle cross on Calvary three days before; who with the same body, transfigured, glorified, yet the same, rose from the dead, lives, and dies no more. This is the fact and this is the fact Christians believe. This is the fact that inspires the whole of their lives. This is the fact that turned cowards into heroes, darkness into light, fear into victory. What is the power of this fact? First of all the assurance of immortality. Death is the one great universal fact, throwing its shadow over the young and saddening the aged. No bribes, no money, no tears can stop King Death. No skill can avert it. We mortals go on singing our death song year by year from youth to age. What is the end? Is death? Is it the supreme parting for ever and ever? If so, it will be better not to love at all. Hints of course there are of immortality. Philosophy and reason point in that direction. Men have believed it for thousands of years. The Jews and the Egyptians believed it. Yet men want something more. We want a well founded conviction which we can take for granted, and use for the foundation of our life and our lifework.

At Eastertide men long to be strengthened and convinced. They want to feel that death is not the end. Here then is the power of the fact of the Resurrection. The power of the Resurrection is the assurance of the reality of the next world. They have gone, the flower of our manhood, careers checked, dreams that will never come true, expectations never to be realised, and all the care and love of father and mother as it seems thrown away; such waste. Then Easter comes with its reassuring message that they live, and further it provides the assurance that the world in which they live is not peopled with ghosts, fleeting shapes and spectral forms, but with those we loved and "lost awhile," and whom we shall recognise when we enter there.

The Resurrection of Christ is a fact, the power of which gives to our life a new value, new colour to our present knowledge, new aim, new motives, new meanings, new beauty.

TO THE BOYS WHO TAKE OUR PLACES ON THE RHINE.

You are called away to duty, for a Country brave and free,
And your future is a secret, you alone have got the key;
So many things are ready your life to enter in —
There is nobleness and honour; and there's wickedness and sin.

When you're far from home and loved ones, keeping watch upon the Rhine,
Let their memory be your Watchword, play the Briton every time,
When temptations come upon you, and it's hard to keep from sin,
Pray for strength and you will conquer, look to God and you will win.

And the victory will help you when the trial comes again
For the sin of just one moment, brings misery and shame.
And when your duty's ended, and to England you return,
Joy of home will be the sweeter and the Nations thanks you'll earn.
So fight the fight of honour, help your comrades all you can,
And the world will be the better, and you will be a MAN.

A. Yes, it is for the other fellow.

THORNEY-CROFT Our gramophone spring has broken loose. What is the best way to replace it?

PHILATELIC NOTES.

BY OUR PHILATELIST.

Zecho Slovak Query.

A ludicrous attempt to pass-off Zecho-Slovak stamps as genuine postally-used specimens is to be seen in a Cologne dealers's window. The higher values, 50 to 200 heller, are neatly mounted and plainly post-marked so as not to obliterate too much of the design on an envelope addressed "Herr Muller, Hamburg" the equivalent of "Smith, London," or "Jones, Wales."

Does the German really think that anyone will believe such a missive has passed through the post?

Government issues in Bavaria.

The Bavarian stamps overprinted "Volksstaat Bayern" are a Government issue, if any government exists in that state. At any rate, they are being used as genuine postage labels. An interesting label has reached me bearing a 10pf. stamp with the overprint side by side with a 15pf. stamp minus overprint. The envelope has been re-addressed, and on the reverse are two "Dienstmarken" of 10pf. and 15pf. All these stamps bear a common genuine postmark, and the letter reached its destination. Unfortunately, the postmarks do not show the date clearly enough to enable one to know the time taken in transit.

Commemorative Stamps.

Are we to have a commemorative stamp in Great Britain? Never yet has an adhesive postage stamp been issued at home to commemorate any event, although a Postal Jubilee envelope appeared in 1890. Most of our Colonies have, at some time or other, issued stamps of this nature, and during the war they have issued stamps with various overprints.

Newfoundland has issued a series of twelve stamps, each bearing the head of a caribou, four of which have also the inscription: "Royal Naval Reserve" and the motto "Ubique" whilst the remainder bear the words, "The trail of the caribou." On each is the name of one of the engagements in which the Newfoundland contingent took part. Such names as Suvla Bay, Gueudecourt, Beaumont-Hamel, Monchy, Steenbeeck, Langemark, Cambrai, and Combles are thus recorded.

Sinn Fein Issuss.

In answer to a query, no postage stamp has been separately issued for Ireland. A series of very well-designed and printed revenue stamps was in use in the seventies and these stamps bear the words "Ireland, Petty Sessions," with head of Queen Victoria below in words. The Sinn Fein label has no postal value, although through being placed alonside an ordinary stamp it often receives a post-mark.

ALSACE-LORRAINE.

Mr. Millerand, the Commissary of the French Republic at Strasbourg recently made the following declaration:

"As long as Alsace-Lorraine has not elected representatives, it would be wrong if the Parliament were to settle its affairs.

"There will be difficulties, it would be impossible that there should there be none in provinces where legislation, language, usages are so different from ours, where always the particularist spirit was strong and was even the best wall against German invasion. We must bring Alsace-Lorraine through persuasion, to enter the frame of French legislation.

"We need not treat anything brusquely; we must respect the liberties, the institutions, the customs, and lead progressively these populations to assimilate themselves to their brothers in France.

"Everthing is easy with the heart," he added. "In Alsace-Lorraine especially the sentimental considerations are very important."

In his concluding remarks he said that "the French administration must bear victoriously from every point of view a comparison with the anterior administration. The work will be completed by the Strasbourg University, and from here will emanate a kind of radiation of the French Spirit"

A TRIP UP THE RHINE.

I fancy my luck must have turned as, after a long period of fatigues, guards, and other absorbing duties of a like nature, to my great surprise I was notified the other day that I had been selected to make up one of a party going on an excursion up the Rhine. I think it must have been excitement that kept me from oversleeping, because it is not at all usual for me to be awake, let alone anxious to get up, at the extraordinarily early hour of five oclock. After an early breakfast we entrained at Siegburg, arriving at Beuel, on the east bank of the Rhine, just opposite Bonn, soon after eight oclock, and marched across the fine bridge that spans the Rhine here, to where our boat, "The Schiller", was awaiting us at the quayside.

We cast off at about nine oclock, and from my position on the boat I was only able to see the west bank of the Rhine on the upward journey. A little further on we passed the ruined castle of Godesburg, which stands on the summit of a high hill overlooking the town of the same name which lies on the river bank. There seems to be a fine avenue running along the bank of the river for a good many miles, in fact I was told that it goes all the way from Bonn to Andernach, which is about 40 kilos. Arriving opposite Andernach, we could see quite plainly the towers of the beautiful old thirteenth century church of which this town is justly proud, while nearer the river bank was a large and somewhat ugly, but I have no doubt very useful lighthouse.

We shortly passed a very sharp curve in the river in the bend of which there is a large island named Werth, and from there had a straight run on to Coblenz, which stands at the confluence of the Raine and Mosel. For a long time before we reached the quayside we could see the wonderful statue of Wilhelm I., which is erected in a very commanding position, and when we went ashore, as we were presently allowed to do, I went with some of the other boys to have a nearer view of this work of art. Coblenz is in that part of the occupied territory which is held by the American troops, and on asking some that I met to direct me to a canteen or Y. M. C. A. Hut, they took the party that I was with under their charge and also roped in a lot more of our boys who were wandering about and took us to one of their canteens and gave us a very good tea for which they afterwards refused to let us pay.

We had reached Coblenz about two oclock and about three oclock the bugles recalled us to our boat, and shortly afterwards we commenced our homeward journey. This time it was the east bank that I was able to watch. We soon passed the town of Neuwied. There seen to be a good many factories in this district and also large vineyards and plantations under cultivation, and as we went farther north the hills crept in again to the side of the river, having vineyards in many cases all the way up their sides. We next passed the imposing ruin of the Drachenfels, just before we got to Dollendorf and Oberkassel, two quite important manufacturing towns. From there our run to Bonn only occupied about half an hour. Reluctantly we disembarked, realising that the river part of our trip was over. We marched back to Beuel station, and entrained for Siegburg, where we arrived tired and once again quite hungryabout eight oclock, after having had a very pleasant trip.

An item of interest was the wonderful pontoon bridge at Coblenz. I should very much like to know something more about that bridge, particularly by what ingenious method they can open it in the middle to let river traffic pass through, and then close it again. Perhaps our Education officer will be able to tell us in school, — I wonder?

EXTRACTS FROM THE LETTERS OF A PRODIGAL SON.

ON LANGUAGES

BY "HUSKY."

It is instructive to note how readily the Germans living in the village have absorbed some of the illuminated expressions used by the English soldier. The children, especially, soon pick up the words of command, and other words, used by us as our drills are performed in the presence of crowds of juvenile Jerries.

Only this evening I noticed evidence of this. I was watching a lad guiding a plough, and it was amusing to hear the words he used to encourage his two bullocks. At the end of the furrow he shouted, "About twen!"

The bullocks were slow in carrying out the manoeuvre, being somewhat hampered by the plough behind them, so the lad added some expressions which are familiar to horses of heavy batteries. Indeed, only heavy horses and draft-bullocks could possibly stand such language. I noticed the surprised look on the faces of those long-suffering bullocks as the shower of blows fell upon their ribs of beef and the hurricane of badly-broken English fell upon their ears. Jeal Their sad reproachful eyes seem to say "O that our lips had language!" However, beyond giving vent to a wearied "Moo" they were silent, — though one did put his tongue out as if in speechless defiance.

Who could wonder! The things that boy had called those poor inoffensive quadrupeds were unmentionable; — enough, indeed, to make them kick against it.

Nevertheless! What is in a name? A bullock by any other name would look just as cheerful and, doubtless, through force of circumstances, he would work just as hard and look just as happy.

The Fräulein who administers unto us at the village "Gasworks" possesses a quaintly awful flow of language. This morning I bade her "Guten Morgen, Fräulein," and the answer I received was "Guten Morgen, mein Herr," — but this was followed by such an awful expression that I blushed to my toe-nails with embarrassment.

The school-master in this village told me one day last week that he could speak good English but that he could not understand a lot of the things that my comrades said in their conversation with each other. I hope he never will.

THE TWO VOICES.

In a barrack's not many miles from Halifax the Chaplain was holding a drumhead service. Near by a sergeant was giving a squad of soldiers marching drill, as a punishment for overstaying leave. The morning was very bright and quiet, and the voices got very mixed, the result was something like this:

Chaplain: A certain man had two sons and the younger of them said to his father —"

Sergeant: "Standdat—now wait for the word—wait forthe word—"

Chaplain: "And when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land, and he began to be in want . . and when he came to himself he said—"

Sergeant: "Left, Right, Left, Right, Halt — Standdat—wait for the word, now—wait for the word."

Chaplain: "And he said . . I will arise and go to my father, and will say unto him—"

Sergeant: "Keep your back straight, you with the ginger 'air. What do you think you are—a bloomin' camel?"

ROUND THE SHOWS.

"CAPACITY" CROWDS AT COLOGNE CONCERTS.

There was an unmistakable holiday spirit abroad everywhere on Friday and yesterday. The streets of all the large occupied towns were more densely thronged than they have been since we arrivied in Germany, while even the tiniest village was not without its share of bustle. Naturally the tone of things was subdued on Friday. In the morning, the sports fields claimed most of the troops, walks into the country and sightseeing received attention in the afternoon, while the evening was well provided for by sacred concerts which attracted large audiences to all the Army places of entertainment.

The Zoological Garden at Cologne naturally came in for a generous quota of patronage and here the clicks of hundreds of cameras could be heard during the day.

The liberal sprinkling of gardens and parks at Cologne, Bonn and Duren were transformed into miniature "Amstead Eaths" in point of animation, albeit the absence of the sparkling, joyous laugh of the female — which is always a characteristic of the famous holiday-makers rendezvous in London — was particularly noticeable

The Call of the Hills.

At Siegburg and towards Coblenz the hills were plentifully dotted with the more seriously minded folk who found ample entertainment in the company of their favourite author and "My Lady Nicotine".

In the evening the Deutsches and Apollo theatres and the Army picture houses were filled to overflowing, and at none of these places, could even the most hardened cynic have complained of the merit of the fare provided.

Miss Hilda Potts, of the Women's Theatre Company, worked indefatigably for our entertainment. She performed in three distinct concerts, and to the last of her many songs her charming soprano voice showed no trace of tiredness Items were contributed by her to the programme of the Apollo, No. 2 and No. 3 Cinemas and at each place requests for encores were persistent. Lovers of good music hied them in large numbers to the orchestral concert at the Breitestrasse establishment and displayed the heartist approval throughout the performance.

A Popular Programme.

Of the instrumental items, a most finished rendering of the "Tannhauser" overture was perhaps the most popular contribution although that always fresh and delightful symphonic poem of Liszt "Les Préludes" was deservedly loudly applauded for the admirable treatment accorded it. Other items were Hamlet Ouverture (Bach); Hallelujah Chorus (Handel); Selection from Faust (Gounod); "O Gladsom Light" and "The Lost Chord" (Sullivan).

The programme was judiciously relieved by the introduction of appropriate pictures; by the singing of Miss Pott's, (already referred to), and by thoroughly good contributions from Sergt. E.M.Nightingale, whose vocal prowess proved to be no less finished than his name implies — even if the timbre was not quite the same. His rich and well trained baritone voice delighted everyone and he displayed a happy knack of choosing his numbers with an eye (or ear!) to public popularity, as well as with due regard to the particular quality of his own voice.

Variety at the Apollo.

At the Apollo Theatre, the Rhine Choral Society performed to "capacity" and the unstinted applause bestowed upon each item was sufficient evidence of this talented party's ability to please. The choral numbers provided testimony of careful training, the blending and tone of the voices being very near to perfection while the solos were without exception well and carefully treated.

The "Tabs" orchestra, under the conductorship of Corpl. Potter supplied enjoyable items in this programme, a rendering of "Poet and Peasant," particularly proving the conductor to be able happily to combine a masterful hold over the proceedings with due modesty.

A well written and admirably acted sketch "Gifts from Heaven" by the Women's Theatre Company was by no means the least artistic item in the programme.

CONCERT AT BRAUWEILER.

A most enjoyable evening was spent on Good Friday in the Recreation Room of No I Section Northern D.A.C.: A concert was given by the band of the 2nd Bn. Suffolk Regt. under the leadership of Bandmaster H.E. Adkins, Mus, Bac., A.R.C.M., L.R.A.-M. The programme which was most excellently chosen for the occasion included 3 solos. — a Xylophone solo by Musician S. Crowe, cornet solo by L/cpl. G. Bixley, and piccolo solo by L/Cpl J. Palfreman, the first being loudly applauded and an encore given.

During the evening the Padre of the D.A.C., who by the way was kind enough to arrange the concert, mentioned the fact that he had been travelling about all day in an old bus which had seen service since 1914, and which was entitled to 5 chevrons and a wound stripe.

The O.C. the D.A.C. in passing a vote of thanks to the officers and band of the 2nd Suffolks, also mentioned that, when the Padre returned after his journey in the bus, he remarked that one thing was missing, that being the lady conductor. Naturally this was loudly cheered.

CONCERT AT LEICHLINGEN.

Amongst the recently formed Concert Parties of the Southern Division is that of the 9th Bn., Gloucester Regiment. The members gave their first performance in Leichlingen last week and Lt. Smiles the organizer, as well as all who contributed to the programme, are to be congratulated on the entire success of the entertainment. In a well balanced programme there was very remarkable and promising talent displayed.

Vardon, Braid, Taylor, and Herd will take part in a tournament at the West Kent Golf Club, Bickley, on Saturday, May 17.

RHINELAND SPORTS.

A BRACE OF "HAT TRICKS".

YOUNG GORDON'S WIN THEIR FIRST MATCH AT DUREN.

51st GORDON HIGHLANDERS v ROYAL ARMY SERVICE CORPS.

At Duren, against their R.A.S.C. neighbours, the 21st Gordon Highlanders played their first game on the soil of Germany. The result was a good start for the young Highlanders, a 4—0 victory being achieved.

A stiff wind prevailed and interfered with the game considerably. The Gordon's played in front of it in the first half and their nippy forwards, well led by Cinnamon, were soon seeking the mark. Under pressure of an attack, McCabe, the Corps left back, miskicked, and obliged the Scots by scoring, accidentally, their first point.

Subsequently, McCabe and Walker, his partner, relieved many ominous situations, but they were not able to frustrate Cinnamon in getting through with a shot that counted.

A well-directed centre by Shuttleworth was intercepted by Currie, the cordon's skipper, and a little later Thomson kicked over in taking a penalty that was awarded the Corps.

Russell and Cruickshank were well partnered on the cordon's left wing and they received much useful support from Lieut. Brown at left half.

With the wind in their favour, the transport men were expected to regain lost ground, but the Highlanders attacked immediately after the interval and Cinnamon had Abbot, the keeper beaten for the third time. The game was won when the same player added a fourth goal for his side, incidentally performing the hat trick.

Shuttleworth, for the Corps, was clever on the left and whipped over some difficult shots for Gray to negotiate. Some chances were missed by the other forwards, whose shooting was rather poor. The Corps were unlucky to lose the services of Shepstone, who was injured.

A FOREST OF FACES AND MANY THRILLS.

3rd. M.G.CORPS v. 4th. BATTALION DRAFT

Two attempts were made to take the field for this match before the rain eventually gave over. Then commenced the series of thrills which the game provided. Aids to enthusiasm were plentiful. Bugle calls, whistles, bugle-notes rent the air and the barrack windows showed a forest of faces At one time the Battalion Orderly Room staff watched from their distant window with envious eyes and the sentry's job was even more interesting than usual.

The draft would have been considered the better team in the first half, but there was little to choose at the finish. Connelly was a fine goalkeeper and will stand a good chance for Battalion honours. Corporal Cummings was the premier of a fine bunch of players comprising Buckley, Axon, L/Cpl. Loishman, L/Cpl. Coulter and Hodgson for the Draft. The old hands of the Battalion are already well known.

Soon after the start Farrell gave Cummings a chance, and he converted it into a beautiful shot which beat the goal keeper. Play swung from end to end of the pitch and Connell repeatedly saved in grand style. Alert goalkeeping the other end was equally necessary but seemed more difficult. With the lead the Draft caused the Battalion to go all out and it was not until after the interval that they fully recovered and settled down to their usual game. Then Taylor equalised with an easy shot. Violent efforts were made by both sides to draw ahead, in the course of which Cpl. Cummings dived head first into a pool of water. The game finished, exciting to the last, one goal each.

488th S.B. R.G.A. v. 32nd ARMY BDE.

This match was played on the ground of the former on Tuesday resulting in a win for 488 by 2—0. A strong cross wind was all against good play, but it was soon evident that 488 were by far the better team. The Brigade undoubtedly had the wind to thank for having no goals scored against them in the first half. The second half opened in favour of 488.

Within five minutes Pollick scored from a centre by Frampton. The 48 kept up the pressure and several good centres by the wingers proved fruitless.

About ten minutes from the end a centre by Timms was converted by Mc Gough. The end came with 488 still pressing. Wear the left-back Naylor at centre-half, and Stenton at right half played a fine game.

WEST KENT OFFICERS BEAT THE SAPPERS.

Officers and N.C.O's 207th Field Coy.R.E. . . 0.
Officers 10th Btn.R.W. Kent Regt. 3

This match was played at Hennef on Wednesday — a very interesting and sporting game though the quality of the football was patchy. For the losers Lt. Hicks played an immense game at centre-half and 2nd Cpl. Watson gave a great display of goal-keeping.

The Kents were undoubtedly the stronger side, though they had a man offside while their centre-half shot a very good goal, and twice the Sappers very nearly scored.

25th v. 168th SIEGE BATTERY (R.G.A.)

This match, under the auspices of the 68th Brigade, R.G.A., was played on Tuesday at Mülheim, and resulted in a win for the 25th by 4 goals to 0. The score in no way flatters the winners.

Boisterous weather greatly hampered accurate football, so that frequently shots that were obviously well directed went astray.

Batty performed the hat trick for the 25th, Leigh being responsible for the fourth goal. Undoubtedly, the excellent performance of Southern, the 168th goal-keeper, saved his side from much more ignominious defeat.

Their success in this match places the 25th at the top of the league with this enviable record:

Pld.	Won.	Lost.	Drn.
12	11	1	0
Goals:	For.	Agst.
	62	7

MACHINE GUNNERS FOOTBALL.

2nd BATTALION'S INTERESTING RECORD IN BOTH CODES.

Soccer. Our football may be divided into 3 grades. The inter-section match, in which any would-be player may participate, and in which first class play and serious football are minor considerations, compared with the providing of plenty of fun, sport and healthy exercise.

The Inter-Company Football League which provides for two good matches per week. Rivalry and competition are the keynotes of all these games, which are invariably keenly contested. The sweepstake inaugrated on the totalisator principle promises to be very interesting, and is by no means a foregone conclusion.

The team which has represented the Battalion, has played some good games. and if not always the winner has upheld the honour of the Battalion, and made a keen fight. Of the matches played, the one most worthy of note, is that against a team representing our Allies, the Belgians at Neuss. A very fine, fast and sporting game and the victory of 2 — 0 was hardly earned, the Belgians showing great spirit and determination right to the end of the game.

Rugger. When scope for our energies in this branch of football has not been available in the form of league and friendly matches, teams picked from players in the Battalion have provided us with some interesting contests.

Of the League matches played, the return game with the 2nd H.L.I. is easily the most outstanding.

"AND STILL THEY WIN."

On Wednesday the 565 A.T. Coy, R.E had their reputation challenged by No 1 Coy, 34/Div Train, R.A.S.C. The latter fielded a very strong eleven and the confidence of success by both their players and supporters was very high; but when the interval was called there was no score.

They very quickly took advantage of the wind by forcing a corner from which their inside left piloted the ball out of the goalie's reach with his head. This reverse caused the "Linnets" to chirp and in less than five minutes time they equalized. Except for occasional bursts which were dealt with capably by their full-backs their superiority was not seriously questioned, and before the final whistle blew they added two more goals, the second again coming from the inside left and the last being accomplished thru a fine solo effort of Cole's.

Result:— R.E's 3 goals; R.A.S.C. 1 goal.

4th BN. SUFFOLK REGT. v. 92nd F.A. R.A.M.C.

A football match was played on the latter's ground at Friedr Wilh. Hutte on Wednesday afternoon at 14.30 hours. In the first half the Infantry, having most of the game, scored 3 goals in quick succession.

The second half opened with brisk play on both sides and the home team succeeded in scoring an easy goal. A high cross wind completely spoilt any accurate play. Final score — 4th Bn Suffolk Regt. 3; 92nd F.A., R.A.M.C. 1.

141st FIELD AMB. v. 39th BDE. R.F.A.

A friendly football match was played between the above teams at Reinbach on Wednesday afternoon. The gunners kicked off against a stiff wind and immediately afterwards the Ambulance were around the R.F.A. goal, but the defence cleared. From a scramble in front of goal, Cpl. Kirkby netted for the Ambulance, the ball glancing off one of the defenders and leaving the goalkeeper no chance to save. Some minutes later Cpl. Kirkby was nearly through, but the whistle went for an infringement by one of the Bde. defence. Kirkby took the kick and scored with a terrific shot, the interval being reached with the Ambulance 2 up.

The second half was practically a repetition of the first half, with the R.F.A. attacking and the Ambulance on the defence, with an occasional raid towards the other end. Wilson in goal for the Ambulance brought off some good saves. The end was reached with the Ambulance men still hanging on to their 2 goal lead.

1st M.G.C. v. 52nd WELSH.

The 1st Bn.M.G.C. and the 52nd Welsh played at Flerzheim on Wednesday. Very keen play was witnessed; in fact too keen at times, and had some of the players come under the ban of the referee they would only have had themselves to blame.

The 1st M.G.C. scored the only goal of the match, Lieut. Chandler running three quarters of the field and crowning his effort with a drive that had the Welsh goalkeeper hopelessly beaten. Not until the final whistle blew was the game decided, the backs of both teams playing exceptionally well.

Result:— 1st Bn. M.G.C. 1; 52nd Welsh 0.

FOOTBALL CHALLENGE ACCEPTED.

The Sports Officer of the 185th Siege Battery R.G.A. accepts the challenge of the 57th S. Battery R.G.A. (93rd Bde. R.G.A.) to a game at Kalk. The date will be arranged later.

Lt. Clem Lewis after playing in the Motherland—New Zealand match was found to have a dangerously high temperature. He was admitted to Millbank Hospital and found to be suffering from an inflammation of the shin bone.

Thompson Canadian, Millwall centre-forward, scored a fine shot in the first half, and also from a penalty for handling in the second half. India was represented by the 1st Battalion Yorkshire Regiment who were outplayed after the interval.

Play during the first half was fairly even. The Home Forces defence was excellent, Crashaw the goalkeeper making several good saves.

VICTORY FOR "ALL BLACKS" XV.

MOTHER COUNTRY DEFEATED BY 9—3 AT TWICKENHAM.

The inter-services rugby tournament was won by New-Zealand at Twickenham on Wednesday, the "All Blacks" defeating the Mother Country by a penalty goal and 2 tries (9 points) to a penalty goal (3 points).

When half-time arrived the score stood at 3-3, and the New-Zealand team looked like being beaten. After the interval, however, they played magnificently, never permitting the Mother Country to develop attack. Singe scored towards the end through a blunder by the Mother Country, and Ford added a try.

TENNIS CHAMPIONS.

The Covered Court Lawn-Tennis Championships at Queens Club, West Kensington, concluded on Wednesday, when R. Lycett and Major Heath won the championship round of the Doubles against W. Davson and I. Marrogordato, the holders, 6—4, 7—5, 4—6, 6—4.

TANDEM CYCLE RACE.

At the Good Friday Victory Meeting of the Southern Counties' Cycling Union at Herne Hill, 10,000 spectators were present. In the international tandem race of two laps Mc Kaig, the joint tandem record holder, and Hart, the champion of the Metropolitan Police beat Andre Dupont, champion, Rouen, and Victor Charon, champion D'Hiver, representing France. They won by four lengths, their time being 1 min. 23 4/5 secs. In the second race they won by three lengths in 1 min. 28 3/5 secs.

WATER POLO.

TERRIFIC SHOTS AT 10th CORPS BATHS, BONN.

A very interesting game of Water Polo was played at the 10th Corps Baths, Bonn, on Wednesday between the Corps Headquarters and the Lancashire Signal Coy. A relay race was held first, resulting in the Signals being first by one second.

Both teams were evenly matched and, despite the cold water, played a fast game. Within two minutes of starting Spr. Tait with unerring aim placed the ball in the goal. On resuming Lieut. Parson after much tricky swimming managed to put a swift shot in the goal. After this the Corps pressed very heavily and was rewarded a goal after much shooting, in which Major Michelmore surpassed himself as a goalkeeper.

After half-time Spr. Tait again took possession of the ball and almost broke the goal posts with his terrific shots and was rewarded by a goal. Very soon after, Sgt. Thompson, after much tricky playing, dropped the ball just behind the goal-keeper, thus scoring the fourth goal. So once again the Lancashire Signal Polo Team remains urbeaten.

Result:- Lancashire Signals, 4; Corps Hyrs. 1.

NORTHERN DIVISION COOKING COMPETITION.

In the above competition held on Tuesday and Wednesday, the 3rd Battery M.G.C added another leaf to their laurels, by taking the first prize in the first class. The marks gained were 79 out of a possible 90— the highest number of marks in any class. This achievement carried with it a cash prize of 120 mks., and the Commanding Officer, in congratulating Sergt. Cook Crosby and his Staff considerably augmented this.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

Motor Cycle Racing.

Among the many despatch riders who form an important cog in the machinery of the Army of Occupation, there are, to my knowledge, several expert racers, including at least one T.T. winner. There are others, whose experience during the war has taught them pretty well all there is to know about fast "mo' biking" over difficult country. It is safe to assert that all who may be included in these two categories are as much at ease when tearing about on their trusty mounts as they would be in doing a journey on "Shanks' Pony"

If some enterprising sports promotors would introduce a little 20 or 30 mile spin for motors cyclists — provided, of course, that permission to use army machines for the purpose could be obtained — I am perfectly confident there would be numerous entries for the event and plenty of excitement provided for spectators. There need be no anxiety on anybody's part that the engines would suffer by reason of a short race of this kind. The effect would be the reverse, in fact. So keen would be the competitors on getting the best out of their machines that practically every Army bike would receive an overhauling more through than it has probably ever experienced before. If such an event were inaugurated, I would suggest two classes, one for "heavies" and one for light-weight machines, and I have in mind courses absolutely suited to each.

The Labour Corps Fixture.

Elaborate arrangements are being made by the Labour Corps for the forthcoming summer season. They propose to tackle the question of sports and athletics very seriously and already leagues of various kinds are in process of formation. In this connection, a programme of future events will shortly be available which, in due course, will find a place in this page.

Corpl. Fry's Misfortune.

It was extremely unfortunate that Corpl. Harold Fry, who has established himself a very warm favorite by reason of his pleasing vocal qualities, should have strained his voice in so dramatic a manner at the Apollo Theatre on Friday. I understand he was a little nervous about his voice for some time before the concert, in the programme of which he was announced to appear. He decided to tackle the performance and hope for the best, however. The unfortunate result was that after singing only a few bars of his opening song, his voice broke down completely and he was compelled to leave the platform after a delicate little apology. I join with his many friends in hoping that Corpl. Fry's set-back is purely temporary and that he will soon be delighting us once more with his undoubted vocal ability.

THE RAMBLER.

ALL RECORDS GONE.

"B." Bty. Champions Beaten by "C." Bty. 12th Bde.

This match was played on Wednesday at Neirfeld before a good crowd of spectators. The champions came with full hopes of a win but "C," winning the toss, played with the wind and soon took up the attack. They scored the first goal through Clark. This roused "B" and they went away in grand style.

Subsequently "C" went away with a fine run by their left wing and Mitchel finished up with a great shot that beat "B" Bty. goal-keeper, Fletcher rushing it through. "C" was still pressing when the whistle went for half time with the score: C. Battery 2, B. Battery 0.

In the second half the scote was in increased by Putter who added one more goal, thus making the final score 3—0 for "C".

K.O.Y.L.I. CROSS-COUNTRY RUN.

The second of three cross-country runs which are being conducted at Liblar in connection with the 5th K.O.Y.L.I omnibus sports tournament took place on Wednesday. The course extended over 2½ miles, and the winner's time was 12 Mins. 44 Secs. Sixty-six men finished the run within the next five minutes. The individual placings were:-

1st, Lt. Monks, "B" Coy; 2nd, Pte S. Hughes, "C" Coy; 3rd, Sgt. Charlton "C" Coy; 4th Lt. Taylor M. C., "C" Coy.

"C" Coy's team finished first, "B" second, and "A" third, gaining 12, 9 and 3 points respectively. The winning team — who were among the first 21 home — consisted of:- Lt. Taylor M.C., 2nd Lieut. J. Cummings, 2/Lt. H. E. Bunting, Sgt. Inst. Smith, Sgt. Charlton, Cpl Lyne and Ptes S. Hughes, H. Hughes, H. Buckley and Goldsborough.

HOCKEY AT LINDENTHAL.

2nd Royal Scots beat 6th Corps Headquarters.

A very interesting match took place on Good Friday at the Stadt Wald, Lindenthal, between the 2nd Bn. Royal Scots and the 6th Corps Headquarters.

The play, in the first few minutes, was rather against the 6th Corps, who were playing a three back game, the Royal Scots scoring 2 goals.

The 6th Corps then decided to play a two back game, which made matters more even.

After a very hard and fast game the Royal Scots won, the final score being: — 2nd Brigade Royal Scots, 4; 6th Corps Headquarters, 3.

LONDON'S OWN TROOPS:

PLANS FOR GREAT MARCH IN JUNE.

Arrangements are being made by a committee, under the presidency of the Lord Mayor, for the march through the metropolis of London troops early in June. The march will probably take place on a Saturday, and the King has promised to review the men en route.

Both City and County men will be represented, and the parade will therefore consist of the Royal Fusiliers (both Regulars and New Army) and representatives of both City and County Territorials. It is suggested that the men, assembling in Hyde Park, should march eight abreast through the streets, passing in review before the King and also before the Mansion House. A number of bands will be included in the procession.

A certificate of thanks from the City or County of London will be presented to every man who has served overseas. A permanent memorial will be erected, in order that the heroism, gallantry, and efficiency of these citizen soldiers may be remembered for all time; and, if funds permit, a scheme for the future benefit of the men or their dependents may be added.

PROGRESS OF "THE LEAGUE."

On Thursday, Lord Robert Cecil explained how the League of Nations commission had published to the world a draft of the covenant, with the object of securing consideration and criticism of proposals in detail. He was now in a position to say that the results, on the whole, fully justified the course taken. The criticisms had been quite numerous and very encouraging. Those, he added, who had been friendly had become less unfriendly. He announced that the Labour Convention was to be part and parcel of the organisation of the League. The League of Nations was to be not merely a league of Allies. He had presided at two conferences representing fifteen neutral states, and nothing could have been more friendly than the attitude of representatives of all neutral powers. Since then, Spain had sent a definite statement that she was prepared to join the League as soon as she was permitted to do so. It was his hope that the covenant would contain a provision by which all those neutrals would be invited to join the League immediately after it had been signed.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

The Easter Message and the People.

The German president's Easter message, the context of which appeared in this column on Thursday, has caused much comment amongst the various parties.

After referring to the message of Easter last year which was sent by the Kaiser, the Volkspartei remarks: "The hopes which were inspired in the hearts of all German patriots a year ago are now crushed. The new message may be the means of awakening fresh hopes, the hopes of a resurrection of the German people."

The Kölnische Zeitung and the Kreuzzeitung are not fully pacified by the message. They express the opinion that more energy and enthusiasm might have been shown with regard to the Government and the Peace conditions, whilst the latter paper in additions says that "Ebert ought to have answered with an emphatic 'never' to the threatening violation of the Sarre district. The Press of the Entente fails to recognize the depths of despair, in to which Germany has been thrust deeper and ever deeper against her will by the unexpected continuation of the hunger blockade after her disarmement and by the hard armistic conditons.

On the other hand the Berliner Börsenkurier says that "Ebert, supporting the demonstration of the National Assembly for a Peace of Right and Reconciliation, has clearly shown that Germany would not accept a Peace dictated by hat and vengeance."

In referring to that part of the Easter message dealing with the interior policy, the Kölnische Zeitung asserts that the revolution was not necessary for the organic development of a people's state, and further remarks: "We note with satisfaction that the Government will only comply in the future with justified economical demands of workers, employed and officials. Eberts last words 'open your eyes before the abyss' must above all, be addressed to the Cabinet and to Scheidemann. The future of the German people requires a politician, who will see that the socialist party is not representative of the German people, that the National Assembly is not a socialist Congress, and that the majority of the German peoples is still in the camp of the middle-class parties."

The teaching of history in schools.

The socialist parties have drawn out a plan for the teaching of history in schools, a plan which brings to the fore the social and cultural development, and leaves out the monarchic and dynastic history. Much protest, however, is being raised.

OFFICERS' CLOTHING.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— This is not a squeal — not a grouse — but merely the sad outpourings of a full heart. I write on behalf of many who perhaps remember Old Mother "Officers Clothing" in the dear (?) dead days beyond recall. There was Rouen — a nasty room up alongside the left bank of the Seine, miles away from nowhere into which we were admitted in batches, according to the idiosyncrasies of the Corporal; Pokey St Omer, where one sometimes managed to get attention; High and mighty Boulogne. which was always going to have "it" in stock next week; Calais, 'nuf said; Abbeville, in the old Theatre. before the second place opened, the best in my humble opinion; old Bethune, in early seventeen always well equipped — und so weiter. Good old days they were, when we came miles to get stuff "for personal use only", and made a day of it.

Well, Old Mother "Officers Clothing" has had a son, who is now growing up. He should be a fine healthy youth, full of vim and knowledge after all the experience his mother has had during the past few years. But — I say it with broken voice — the little fellow is degenerate. He was sent to live in Cologne last January, but whether it is the climate or the distance he is from his home, he is getting worse and worse. One of his unfortunate habits is the exhibiting of a long list of what is "Not in Stock". For how long now have we seen the dire words:-

"The following are Not in Stock"
Boots, ankle, officers — All sizes.
Boots, field, — All sizes.
Pyjamas.
Socks.
etc., etc., unto seventy times seven.

It would be simpler, I venture to suggest, if this list were removed, and the few articles — eight or nine, I think it is — that are in stock, exhibited in its place. This might be put on the street door outside, so that those who run can read, and then walk sadly away.

How is it that "Officers Clothing" in the new Rhine Army Centre has become a byword? Why should we be forced to trade with the enemy in socks, pyjamas, etc? They cannot be obtained elsewhere.

And yet we read in the papers from home that recently umteen thousand suits of pyjamas, made for the Army, were being sold to the public, as they were "no longer required" by the Military Authorities. Am here I am — well as a matter of fact, mine I have just got are black silk with purple edging, and — well, Je vous l'invite. —

FREE TRAVELLING FOR M.P.'s.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.—"A.C.," in trying to point out that an M.P. receives less than £400 p.a., defeats his own argument, unless he considers that M.P.'s should do no work prior to the opening of Parliament and during the various recesses.

Your correspondent quotes the case of a Labour Member earning £180 p.a., who had to resign his situation on being elected.

Allowing for the reductions claimed by A. C., that M.P. would now receive about £350 p.a. apart from what the can earn when Parliament does not require his services. Surely your correspondent must admit that the additional income is sufficient to cover his expenses without inflicting hardship.

Of course the day is long past when the membership should be confined to wealthy men.

Does not A.C. know the present constitution of the House, is his memory so short that the has forgotten that when the Payment of Members Bill was passed, the chief argument of its supporters was "to enable the country to enjoy the use of its best men, irrespective of class or wealth?

The lunch fable is rather amusing when one considers that the House of Commons provides the best lunch in London for a modest 1/—, or is it 1/6 now?

ART EXHIBITION.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir.— May I take advantage of your columns to bring to notice an Art and Photographic Exhibition, which it is intended to organize as soon as the necessary sanction is forthcoming. The exhibition will be open to all ranks in the Tenth Corps. Drawings in black and white, watercolour, or oils may be exhibited in the Art Section and photographs of any kind, taken by exhibitors in the occupied area, in the Photographic Section. Prizes will be awarded.

It is hoped that there will be many exhibits. The least observant of us knows that the Rhine Army contains many cameras and their owners, and it is felt that there must be many artists among us. Details regarding the exhibition itself will be published in due course. Meantime, intending exhibitors are advised to set to work and turn out their very best pictures, ready for the contest. No drawings or photographs should be submitted until the publication of details regarding their exhibition.

Thanking you for the valuable space I have taken up.

DEALING WITH SEDITION IN INDIA

SAXONY AND BOLSHEVISM

REPORTED GERMAN-RUSSIAN TREATY

ADVANCE GUARD REACHES NORTH RUSSIA

DEALING WITH INDIAN SEDITION.

LOYAL AFRIDIS.

The Viceroy's report of the 19th April to the state of affairs in the Punjab, states that additional troops are arriving at Lahore and are being distributed throughout the province. Attempted outrages were suppressed at Delhi, where there were fifteen casualties, including one killed.

On the North-West frontier attempted demonstrations proved a fiasco; Peshawar shopkeepers refusing to close their shops.

No further disturbances have occurred at Bombay or Calcutta and the disposition of Sikh villagers appears good.

The Mohammedan trouble shows no signs at present of spreading Northward.

A split is developing on the North-West frontier between Mohammedans and Hindus. The latter are very nervous and the offer of the Afridis at Amritsar to support the Government has had a very depressing effect upon the agitators.—Reuter.

The Viceroy of India, in a telegram dated 20th April, reports all quiet at Lahore. A certain number of people are coming in in a repentant mood. The mob has attacked the railway station at Naroda. Aryan and Mohammedan emissaries are attempting to create trouble in neighbouring districts of the Punjab and it is reported that tension exists in the country between Ferezepore and Multan. Arrests are being made by mobile columns. All is quiet in the rest of India. Reuter.

SENTENCES ON EGYPTIAN TERRORISTS.

VITRIOL AS WEAPON.

Cairo, 16th April. Martial law prevails. Under its provisions an order decrees that vitriol throwers are liable to sentence of death, and unlawful possessors of vitriol to fifteen years penal servitude.

Terrorists have been throwing vitriol at loyal officials, one of whom has been totally blinded. Very few officials have resumed their duties.

Rioters arrested near Cairo have been tried by court-martial and sentenced to between three and fifteen years penal servitude. — Reuter.

Cairo, 17th April. The official communique states that the police of Cairo have verified four further cases of vitriol throwing but no further casualties of any kind have occurred. The four ringleaders in the disturbances at Suez have been arrested. The strike at Cairo and in some parts of the provinces continues, chiefly owing to the intimidation exercised by the political agitators. Elsewhere, as the result of the arrival of troops, schools have reopened and Government offices are working normally. Reuter.

APPREHENSION AT VIENNA

Vienna, via Copenhagen, 19.April. The atmosphere at Vienna is still electrical. Even the national guards, with the exception of very few regiments, are quite unreliable.

Proofs are forthcoming that the disturbances on 17th April were due to Hungarian Communist emissaries. Two of them were arrested and found to be in possession of big sums in gold and notes and a considerable amount of jewels.

Twenty of the demonstrators were killed in the disturbances but it is significant that the casualties among the police were much more numerous. — Reuter.

REPORTED ALLIANCE OF GERMANY AND RUSSIA.

The Warsaw correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, in a telegram to that newspaper dated 17th April, asserts that a treaty was signed last week between Germany and the Russian Bolshevist Government, under which Germany agrees to reorganise the Russian railways, to which end it will send some thousands of military instructors to Russia.

On the other side Russia undertakes to send to Germany an agreed amount of provisions yearly. Russia also undertakes not to enter into negotiations with the Entente and further agrees to assist Germany during the next twenty years by force of arms, if need be.—Reuter.

HERTZOG IN ENGLAND.

OUT FOR SEPARATION.

General Hertzog and members of the Nationalist delegation from South Africa arrived at Plymouth yesterday and proceeded to London. They had traveled via New York, as they refused a passage on the warship Minerva after the crew of the Durham Castle had refused to sail with them.

General Hertzog declined to discuss plans and prospects but admitted that the Nationalist programme involved complete independence and separation from the British Crown.

Marshall Foch has been asked to draw up plans for measures to be taken in case Germany refuses to sign the preliminary peace.

NORTH RUSSIA RELIEF FORCE.

ARCHANGEL ENHEARTENED.

Official. The Russian troops under General Maynard successfully attacked Vojmosalmi at the South-Eastern end of Lake Vigosego on the 17th April. The occupation of this point gives the Allies complete control of the Lake Vigosego end of the main road to the White Sea from the South. — Reuter.

The advance guard of the Relief Force arrived at Murmansk on the 19th.— Reuter.

Within a few days, if the present rate of enlistment continues, the War office expects to be able to stop recruiting for the North Russian Relief Force. Nothing more significant or worthier of the finest national traditions has marked any stage of the war, and the news of the great rush to help has had a splendid effect upon the men at Archangel.

IS SEBASTOPOL EVACUATED?

Reuter learns that the situation with regard to the reported evacuation of Sebastopol is rather obscure. The claim of the Bolshevists to have entered the town is probably correct, but there is no confirmation as yet of the Allied evacuation.

SIEGE OF MUNICH.

Three thousand Würtemberg troops have arrived at Dachau. It is reported that the Government will not engage in a decisive battle until thirty thousand troops have surrounded Munich. This is likely to take some days longer.

At Bamberg the Communists are in occupation of the central railway station, the Royal residence and all barracks.— Reuter.

The Government troops will concentrate at Ingolstadt.

Near Dachau some 1,500 Red Guards attacked 300 troops and defeated them.

Rosenheim was made to furnish 85,000 marks to the Red Guards, who shot ten civilians held as hostages against the approach of Government troops.

The Communists at Munich have liberated and armed the Russian prisoners of war at Puckheim camp. A Russian guard is now patrolling Munich railway station.— Reuter.

LOOTING AT HAMBURG.

At Hamburg gangs of looters have come into collision with the police. One policeman and six looters were wounded and two looters killed. Numerous arrests have been made.—Reuter.

SAXONY SOVIET FEARED.

Owing to the open struggle which has begun between the powerful Workers Council at Leipzig, there is some probability of a general strike at Leipzig, to be extended if possible to the whole of Saxony in order to force the Government to retire.

A report is current that the proclamation of a Soviet republic in Saxony is imminent.

BELGIAN SOCIALIST CONGRESS.

Brussels. During one of the sittings of the Socialist Congress a delegate protested against the idea of maintaining a Belgian force on the Rhine for fifteen years and said "If the Allies think that the left bank must be occupied in order to obtain payment of indemnities, let them mount guard themselves and not place the responsibility on the shoulders of a little anti-militarist country like Belgium." (loud cheers).

Another delegate complained of compulsory saluting of the Colours. The chairman retorted: "It was under the Belgian Flag that the Country was delivered from the Boche."

"Don't say 'Boche' say 'Germans' said a member.

This remark caused a general uproar, followed by loud cries of "Vive La Belgique" and the singing of the "Internationale." It was ten minutes before order was restored.

Finally the Congress adopted a resolution in favour of the general amnesty and urging the Government to take immediate steps to repatriate wounded soldiers and secure for them the moral and material satisfaction which they demand.— Reuter.

ENGLAND'S GREAT MISSION.

Sir Robert Horne, Minister for Labour, speaking at the annual dinner of the National Union of Journalists on Thursday said that the eyes of the Peace Delegates had turned towards England after the terrible events which had stricken Germany, Austria and Poland in their industrial struggle, but Great Britain would win through and would still be able to bear the burden which has been placed upon her of saving civilisation from Bolshevism.

WEST AUSTRALIAN PREMIER RESIGNS.

Perth, (Western Australia.) — Mr. Lefroy, Premier of Western Australia, has resigned. A new cabinet is being formed by Mr. Colebatch, Colonial Secretary. Reuter.

NUMBER OF ENEMY U BOATS SUNK

SUICIDE OF CREWS.

Washington. Admiral Sims, who returned to New York last week, asserts that examination by divers has revealed the fact that many crews of the enemy submarines destroyed by the Allies had either killed each other or committed suicide after the U boat went down.

German tallies discovered after the surrender of the Fleet showed that two hundred and five U boats were sunk by the Allies during the war.— Reuter.

KINMEL CAMP RIOTS.

MUTINY OR SECTION 40.

At the resumed court-martial which is trying Canadian soldiers alleged to have been concerned in the riots at Kinmel Camp, Pte. John Patrick Brennan was charged with joining the mutiny, or alternatively, with conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, in that he was a member of the disorderly crowd of soldiers who damaged the canteens. Accused pleaded not guilty to both charges.

The provost sergeant stated in evidence that the accused was a member of the crowd which took beer from the canteens and pulled down the counter. He was further alleged to have led a number of men into the sergeants mess of No. 6 camp. and taken beer therefrom.

In cross-examination the provost sergeant stated that when the authorities learnt of the contemplated raid he and four men were sent to protect the canteen from the rioters, who were unarmed. The defending forces helped the girls in the canteen to protect the money and themselves.

Accused asserted that until the following morning he had no knowledge of the canteen raid.

After arriving at a decision in this case the Court heard evidence as to accused's service and then adjourned to consider sentence. This will be promulgated.

The next case taken was that of Pte. Ingalls, 12th Reserve battallion, who was charged with endeavouring to persuade Pte. Salesky to join the mutiny.

Pte Smith deposed to receiving a note from accused for Salesky, who read the contents and burnt the letter.

The defending officer urged that in the absence of the note the charge must fail.

After private consideration of the point, the Court acquitted the accused, who was released

BY PERMISSION OF THE STRIKE COMMITTEE.

At Limerick the strike situation remains unchanged. The Strike Committee has assumed all but plenary powers. It issues permits for workmen in exceptional cases and it has drawn up a maximum retail and wholesale list of food prices Local newspapers were allowed to be published yesterday only on condition that they bore the words "By permission of the Limerick Strike Committee."

The production of the new play "The Dawn Mist," dealing with the story of the Irish rebellion, which had been arranged for production at Cork on Easter Sunday, was proclaimed by the military authorities.

Armen raiders rushed the police barracks at Aroglen, County Cork, yesterday, and carried away a few rifles and some ammunition The only occupant of the barracks was an orderly, who was overpowered and thrown into the lock-up. The other constables were attending church.

A National Strike is threatened, starting from to-day, if the military control in the Limerick area is not cancelled. Many Labourites believe however, that such an attempt to paralyse the entire trade of the country will fail. The military authorities have not yet interfered with the Limerick strike commitee regulations affecting business. Be-ribboned pickets strictly control the shopkeepers and street hawkers, and even carthorses bear permits dangling from their collars.

DUBLIN RESTAURANT LOCK-OUT.

Dublin hotel restaurant proprietors closed their establishments on Saturday, thus enforcing their threat to lock out their employes owing to the impossibility of arriving at an agreement in the dispute regarding wages and conditions of employment.

Guests were obliged to leave the hotels and fend for themselves. Even the pageboys are locked out. It is very difficult for the hundreds of visitors to Dublin to find hotel accommodation.

OCEAN LINER LOST.

The Royal Mail steamer "Tyne" went ashore on the rocks of Langland Bay near Swansea, after colliding with and sinking a French schooner, the crew of which were rescued. A dense fog prevailed at the time. Although at first it was thought that the steamer could be re-floated, she has since broken her back.

TRAWLER SUNK BY MINE.

The Filey steam drifter Emulator struck a mine in the North Sea and was blown up. No traces of the crew of seven have been found.

At a fire which occurred at a shale mine at Broxburn, Linlithgowshire, three of the rescue party were suffocated.

The Lyceum Club, Picadilly, the well-known Club for women, has been bought by the trustees of the Royal Air Force Club.

The Pall Mall Gazette says that nurses who have served in France and other theatres of war are wondering whether they are to be given the general service medal.

BOLSHEVIST DEGRADATION IN EXCELSIS.

BLASPHEMIES AND ATROCITIES.

What Bolshevism pretends to be and what it really is are wider apart than the Poles. Reuter's correspondent at Ekaterinodar, writing of Bolshevist horrors perpetrated in the Caucasus, states some of the blasphemous extremes by which the Bolshevists have sought to destroy religion by bringing it into contempt.

In a church in the North Caucasus, they conducted with all ceremonial a mock marriage between an aged priest and a mare, the choir of the church being forced under pain of death to sing psalms and canticles.

Among the official publications of the Moscow Soviet is a versified parody of the church funeral service, supposed to be performed over the body of a dog. Another pamphlet was issued depicting the supposed orgies of priests.

During the existence of the Bolshevist "Black Sea Kuban Federal Republic" a collector was appointed to requisition girls between the ages of 16 and 25, for the use of the first revolutionary Soviet regiment. One unhappy girl, on whom a few cartridges were found when she was searched in a railway train near Armavir, was stripped naked and her hands and feet were cut off.

BIGAMIST'S COMPLETE DISGUISE.

A strange story of a bigamous marriage was told at Sheffield on Saturday when Stanley Marshall Neville was charged with bigamously marrying Sophia Eliza Redford, his own wife being alive. Redford was charged with aiding and abetting him.

Although the parties had known each other for years, Neville so disguised himself that when he went to ask Redford senior for his daughter's hand, none of the family knew him. He had shaved off his moustache, dyed his hair, discarded his glasses and cultivated a limping gait.

EAST END RIOTERS SENTENCED.

Four Arab seamen were charged at Thames police court on Saturday morning in connection with the riot at Cable-street, London. They received various sentences, among the indictments being assault, wounding, and discharging revolvers to the common danger. The fracas started in a restaurant through the attentions paid to the white waitresses by coloured seamen.

One witness, Gnr. James Maxwell, said he was struck on the shoulder with a chopper by one of the accused, whereupon, continued the witness, "I hit him and put him away in the corner. Then I found another man with a revolver and I had a rough and tumble with him."

DOUGLAS-PENNANT INQUIRY.

The group of Members of Parliament who have been pressing for an inquiry into the circumstances surrounding the dismissal of the Hon Violet Douglas-Pennant from the command of the Women's Section of the Royal Air Force has decided not to raise the question on the motion for the adjournment of the House as was at first intended.

It is understood that Mr. Winston Churchill is now prepared to accede to the demand for an inquiry.

NO MORE REMOUNTS FOR SALE

The Director of remounts at the War Office has issued orders for the suspension of sales of army horses and mules after the 25th of April. It is estimated that in England ninety thousand animals will have been disposed of by that date, representing a cost of three million pounds.

These sales have exceeded the highest expectations prices having steadily climbed to an average of forty-five pounds per head.

NO MORE SLIP-MEN.

The appointments department of the Ministry of Labour has notified employers that demobilization has now reached a stage at which no good pursose can be served by applying to that department for release of officers. No release slips are necessary in future. Employers having vacancies for officers or professional and business men are urged to communicate direct with them.

AGRICULTURAL SETTLEMENTS.

Part of the Government scheme for settling ex-service men on the land is to form settlements or colonies administered directly by the Board of Agriculture.

Between 12,000 and 13,000 acres have already been acquired, and it is estimated that over four hundred and fifty men will ultimately settle on these lands.

GERMAN EX-CONSUL DENATURALISED.

Adolf Ahlers, the ex-German Consul of Sunderland, has been denaturalised. At Durham, in December, 1914, Ahlers was sentenced to death for treason but the conviction was quashed on appeal.

SUBALTERNS REQUIRED.

According to an Army Council instruction a limited number of officers is required for the West-African Force as subalterns.

Candidates must be either Regulars, Special Reserve, or Reserve of Officers, over 22 years of age and unmarried.

The Holborn Empire Music hall was burgled on Sunday and the safe containing notes and cash carried off by the thieves.

FLYING THE ATLANTIC OCEAN.

MAJOR WOOD'S BAD START.

Major Wood, the only competitor who is flying Westward, left Eastchurch at 3.15 on Friday afternoon en route for Limerick and simply disappeared. Nothing had been seen or heard of him on Saturday morning but eventualy news came through that he had been forced to descend in the Irish Channel.

He telegraphed from Holyhead that he had dropped into the sea some twelve miles from the Welsh coast but that he and Wylie, his observer, were safe, the machine undamaged, and that he was still a competitor for the Atlantic flight and hoped to start early in May.

The observer, describing the flight which terminated so inauspiciously, says it was made against the wind and many patches of fog were encountered. The engine broke down without warning just before seven o'clock in the evening, and a descent was inevitable. When the machine lay on the water, they both sat on the huge petrol tank and smoked cigarettes during the wait which preceded the arrival of two rowboats from the shore. The aviators returned in a motor boat, which also took the aeroplane in tow, but the attempt was a failure and had to be abandoned. It was lashed alongside the destroyed Paisley until morning, when it was towed into Holyhead.

Weather conditions in the Atlantic warrant the hope that Hawker and Raynham will be able to start to-day.

PROCESSION OF OVERSEAS TROOPS.

The date of the march of overseas troops through London has been provisionally fixed for 3rd May.

His Majesty the King and other members of the Royal Family will stand in the forecourt of Buckingham Palace to inspect the troops and take the salute as they pass through the forecourt.

The military authorities overseas are experencing some little difficulty in arranging adequate representation without delaying the repatriation of men due for demobilization.

ATLANTIC AIRSHIP READY.

The monster airship R 33, which a few weeks ago was sent on its very successful first trial, will be completely ready next week for an Atlantic voyage.

Many more petrol tanks have been added, bringing the number up to eighty-seven.

This will permit of a continuous flight of eighty-eight hours.

DETERMINED SUICIDE.

Mr. Sydney Albert Phillips aged 32, younger son of Mr. Phillip Phillins, head of the great tobacco firm of Godfrey Phillips, has committed suicide in a most determined manner. The artery of his wrist had been severed and a bullet from a revolver had penetrated the heart.

Beside the body was a newspaper cutting, recording the remarks recently made by a London Coroner on "doctors' right to kill."

Deceased was a consumptive.

RUSSIAN NOBLES RESCUED.

It will resume its labours on Tuesday next.

MEMORIALS OF WAR.

The world war of the last four and a half years has brought sorrow into every parish of Great Britain. Few families can claim that during these years they have never walked in the dark valley of mourning. And it has been a war not of puny aims but of ideals, a war in which our all was at stake. It is natural, therefore, that the men and women of our country should be turning their thoughts to memorials of our fallen campaigners.

The matter is of more than passing importance, for not only will a very considerable amount of money be raised, and therefore bring with it a serious responsibility in its use, but there is here the opportunity of affecting advantageously the physical, economic, and spiritual welfare of our nation. We are all agreed that it is good to remember sailors and soldiers who have fought and died for their country's cause; we are all agreed that the remembrance should be planned on a worthy scale. But inevitably there will be disagreement regarding the particular forms which memorials ought to take. Even already there is a wide diversity of proposed schemes, and each of these has its zealous supporters. We have no fear that the nation will be backward in offering such sums of money as could provide throughout the length and breadth of Great Britain memorials that would please the eye, refresh the memory, and inspire the souls of our countrymen; but we confess to some fear as to whether such desirable ambitions will be achieved.

Some general considerations may be laid down. Memorials may roughly be divided into two classes—national and local. There should be no fear of the appropriateness or the worthiness of national memorials. The form and design of these are in the hands of men who are leaders of public affairs and opinion, men who should not easily be led astray by passing whims of fashion or strident clamour of fanatics. We would speak rather of local memorials. It is not for one moment to be assumed that uniformity of memorial is desirable or even possible. The needs of one district are not the needs even of its nearest neighbour. But whatever form of remembrance is adopted it should certainly be one for all time. Memorials ought not to be planned to satisfy ephemeral wants; for there is something eternal in the true memorial. For example, there was a time when the artistic or in inartistic taste of the people demanded in every town the erection of statues. Now most statues are a concession to advertissement and egotism, and there must be few that have escaped the laughter of the gods. Again, many a fine church, even some cathedrals, have had their walls ddfaced by tablets which tell us in approved pulpit style of amazing talents and wondrous virtues possessed by quite ordinary men.

If it is not good to speak evil of the dead it is at least wise not to exaggerate their saintliness. True heroism is not well served by conspicuous sculpture or holy grandiloquence. It should be borne in mind that four and a half years of war have taught us that it is not impossible to fritter away considerable sums of money. The plain duty of responsible public leaders is to give some guidance to local committees, to stimulate them with worthy and fruitful ideas, to furnish them with sound practical advice, and with tactfulness to suggest that there may well be a grouping of smaller districts so that one satisfying memorial may be erected where several small tributes were contemplated.

We would especially select one view of memorials, and respectfully ask for sympathic consideration. War's chief legacy has been sorrow, suffering, and infirmity. The fittest memorials, in our opinion, will be those which will most help in the relief of that baleful legacy. What better monuments could a grateful nation erect than institutes where maimed warriors shall be cared for, where unnerved men shall have succour and be strengthered to resume their daily tasks, where the children of the dead shall be educated and fitted for their life-work? It ought to be possible in the foundation of such institutes to have regard for the aesthetic side of live and to have artistic representation of heroism that passes understanding. We are anxious that it shall never be said of England that she forget her sailors and soldiers when her need of them had passed. War memorials may bring delight to the artistic and complacence to the generous; but they will fail of their high aims, if they do not succour the victims of war. Surely that is their true motive.

ARMY EDUCATION.

The Young Guard coming out here for a greater or less period of settled duty, uninterrupted by the alarums of actual warfare, has an opportunity of "bettering" himself such as has been rarely offered to any large body of British youth before. Be he officer or other rank he will be difficult to please if, outside his purely military duties, he cannot find some study to interest and to benefit him in the comprehensive schemes developing under the Army Education plan.

Already we have the Science College at Bonn where any soldier who anticipates taking up agricultural work for his post-army career may lay a useful foundation in the science of agriculture and the allied sciences. The work of this college was described in a specially contributed article which appeared in The Cologne Post on April 1st.

Should he seek his future in commercial or academic paths, the Second Army College with its home at the Handels Realschule, Hansa Ring, Cologne, offers him a wide scope in his choice of subject. We hope at an early date to have a special article dealing with the excellent aims and possibilities of this branch of the great co-ordinated scheme of Army Education.

Now we hear on good authority that a further development is about to appear, namely, an Army Technical College with its home in a large specially re-equipped factory at Siegburg.

It is too early yet to give details of this newer venture, but they are being worked out and the result promises to be a real technical College which, if properly used by the students, should prove of inestimable benefit to the individual and the nation. The Army work, too, is bound to benefit, for only from the disciplined mind can the best discipline of actions emanate.

Broadly there will be three departments. First a department where the apprentice or "improver" can carry on, so that when he gets back to his own civilian job he will actually know more about it than when he left it, instead of having to begin all over again because his knowledge has rusted. With ability and desire to improve there is no limit, except one of time, to the scope afforded here.

Secondly there will probably be an Arts and Crafts branch, where officers and men with artistic aptitudes may develop that side of their work, obviously to their ultimate benefit when they again become civilians.

The third chief division is to be the collegiate side, where the practically-minded man with a decent education may tread a path which should ultimateely lead him to a degree in, say Engineering, or cognate subjects. The majority of manufacturers have, we fear, hitherto looked with suspicion, at least, upon the "college" man in the factory. But will this be so in the future? We venture to believe, and hope, not. One thing the war has told us, whether it has taught us remains to be seen, is that industry without science is as a rudderless ship. It may blunder on to a good shore, it will probably capsize on the rocks of scientifically organized competition. In any case the venture is speculative; much labour may be spent for little or no result. If the labour is to be expended with any certainty of good result, our industry — as our ship — must be scientifically directed. And the only sure guide is that our workers shall know not only what to do, but why they do it and how to do it most efficiently. It is on these lines that the new college is to be directed.

We understand that all ranks wishing to benefit by attendance at the College will have to produce some evidence that their previous experience will justify their acceptance on any course they ask to take. It would be well to have this evidence immediately available the moment the college begins to function.

These notes would hardly be complete if we failed to point out the multiple benefit accruing to the Young Guards by following a definite, well-organized course of study. Many of us who expect shortly to return to our multifarious occupations in civil life, find that we are not in a position to go straight away and resume our duties just where we left off in 1914. GERMAN SPORT.

The word "sport" comes from the old English word "disport," which means to amuse, to divert, to enjoy oneself and there is an idea of merriment and jest in it, which we must keep in mind if we want to limit the dominion of sport in Germany.

In the beginning we may say that this dominion must first be discovered by us, because Germany was never a sporting nation; it was a studying, a militarist country, but never a sporting one! To play at nine pins in a stuffy hall with great quantities of beer at hand, to fence as the German students used to do it, with the only object of wounding the adversary in the face, that cannot be called sport. The total absence of real sport in Germany until a few years before the war can only be explained by their mode of education which is quite different from ours.

English educationalists generally attached the greatest importance to the education of the body. In addition they always thought that children have a will, which must be trained and developed. Words beginning with the small word "self" like self-command, self-confidence, self-consciousness, self-control, self-possession, self-will, are real British words, and the qualities they represent are characteristic of an education Goethe praised in his conversations with Eckermann.

In showing the predominence of bodily training and education in English education we are reminded of the old English saying, quoted by Robert Hessen in his excellent book on Sport, "every fool can do the instructional part, but it takes a very clever man to manage the sports." This saying fills every German with horror, but the system did not deter us from having great inventors and great poets.

The old German educationalist, starting from an entirely different principle, wanted only to make his pupils sponges for the taking-up of knowledge, without wills of their own and without initiative. The School became a preparation to the barracks and to military discipline.

The war has shown clearly the differences in results. The British Army contained an inestimable capital of stubborness. The German army was a machine, splendidly organised, but which ceased to work as the works were rendered imperfect.

The Germans, however, soon realised the dangers of the lack of physical culture. About one hundred years ago, Jahn, a man whom the Germans named the father of gymnastics, introduced gymnastics in the schools preaching gymnastics throughout the country, creating even for bodily exercise the word "turnen" from "turnier," tournament, which he thought a pure German word. But at this time Prussia was under French occupation, and Jahn's principle aim was to make the young men able to carry arms in order to liberate their country. He was very soon arrested as a demagogue and put under police supervision for many years. The schools continued to have gymnastics in their curricula but very often it became only a preparation to the goose step.

At the end of the late century the example of Great Britain began to be imitated in Germany. The various gymnastic clubs and associations understood more and more the difference between sport and drill, and did their best to develop the first to the disadvantage of the second. Football, rowing hockey even, were cultivated. Lawn tennis especially had a great success and a man like Froitzheim, who had certainly the opportunity to keep fit during his internment in England and his stay in Holland, is now unknown to us.

Now that Germany wants to be a democratic country, now that militarism has been crushed for ever, the young Germans must find something to take the place of the physical exercise their fathers had to have as soldiers without the great drawbacks of drill.

A very important question, the closing hours of the offices will have to be settled.

Robert Hessen in the book previously mentioned shows in a pleasant way the German pre-war business-manager coming at 4 p.m. to his office after a big lunch, only able to smoke a big cigar and to have a look at the papers. Only when it was already late in the day, when his clerks should have been at the recreation field playing football or cricket, did he begin to dictate the heaps of correspondence.

It has been said against sport that there is danger in it, and that it calls many victims. But this danger is only promoting the feeling of self-existence, a sensation more splendid than all the excitement caused by the reading of exciting novels or the brooding in smoky cafés.

The Cologne population was very much shocked when first we came here to see the soldiers jumping in and out of tram cars whilst in full motion. Such a thing was hitherto considered a great crime and offenders were punished with a penalty of 60 Marks. We see it only an innocent result of our sporting spirit.

We heard last week a German expert on sport saying: "If we had been a sporting nation, we should not have lost the war." We have another opinion about the possible results of war, but we will say that had Germany been a sporting nation, there would probably not have been any war, because militarism would not have existed.

The Germans before the war laughed very often at the lazy English who, instead of working, took every opportunity to go to the sport-field. It may be that the German worked more. It has even been said by a French ambassador at Rome that this was just the reason why they were so much hated in the world.

Religious people say they should have prayed more. We may add they should have done more sports. And now that Bolshevism is spreading in Germany, food is recommended as remedy — yes, food — and sport. Sport not for a national aim, but sport for the sake of learning how to "play the game."

After a clean and sane peace, Germany must try to get by means of sport a sane mind in a sane body — mens sana in corpore sano!

H.O.

and a half years of war with little opportunity, and less time, to keep in touch with our various civilian pursuits, have left us exceedingly rusty. In pre-war times it was difficult enough to keep in touch, the hiatus has left us entirely out of it and we have to go back with a much greater loss than that merely conveyed by a break of four and a half years. Further, with more time to spare, the newer comers may be attracted to less desirable pursuits, the easy one of doing nothing being the most dangerous and insidious, and the one from which the most difficulty will be found in recovering. Facilis est decensus averni, sed revocare unum gradum . . . . is just as true to-day as when Virgil wrote, and the hell to which one may easily descend by present idleness is one from which there will be a huge difficulty and competition to escape when all return home.

EXTRACTS FROM THE LETTERS OF A PRODIGAL SON.

ON MARRIAGE.

BY "HUSKY."

To every man upon this earth love cometh soon or late, and one of the salient defects of civilization is that marriage is allowed to butt in and spoil the whole delightful thing. Hence, real love without marriage is an awful thing. Marriage without real love is a tragedy. Marriage with true love on both sides is a beautiful culmination which places the lives of the participants in a conservatory of rose-coloured glass.

I once had a friend who soldiered with me in India before the flood, — no, — I mean before the Great War. He entered my bungalow one monsoon afternoon and handed me an Anglo-Indian newspaper, pointing out the matrimonial advertisement which read as follows:—"Beautiful Eurasian Lady, at present a widow of undeniable charm of no family and a handsome income, desires correspondence with a military gentleman with blue eyes. Write Box 13, Bombay Messenger."

"What do you think of that?" asked my chum as I read the peculiar paragraph. I replied that I didn't think much about it at all, but that I would like to hear his views on the subject. My comrade then informed me that, his eyes being blue, he thought the advertisement had been inserted for his special benefit. In any case, he was going to write to the lady to see what would happen. Well, as one of the drill-books of life hath it, "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread," my friend Spokey was soon involved in an ardent correspondence with the mysterious advertiser.

The lady resided in Bombay and our regiment was then stationed about a thousand miles up country, on the Punjaub plains, not far from Lahore.

I don't know how such things happen, perhaps the book of Fate may explain such coincidence, but the fact remains that during the following cold season our battalion was ordered to Bombay.

We had been stationed in that beautiful city for a few weeks when Spokey came to me one evening and asked me if I would come with him the following day to attend his wedding. I had not thought any more about the advertisement and was painfully surprised to learn that his bride-to-be was the "beautiful Eurasion of no family etc." However, it was my friend's affair, and none of my business to ask questions, so I agreed to be "best man" for him on the next day.

I shall never forget that Eurasian lady. Even as a bride she looked torridly sunburnt, to say the least. Anyhow, Spokey and the smoke-faced widow were duly married, and having carried out my duties as best man in a smart and soldier like manner, I left the bicolo red pair at the church door. My wedding present to Spokey was a tin of "Blanco".

Now, such a marriage as that was doomed to failure from the start. The handsome income mentioned in the advertisement was but a Government pension which the lady had drawn as widow of a deceased Post-Office official, and the pension ceased on her re-marriage.

Shortly afterwards Spokey was missing from the battalion, and I afterwards heard that he had "sneaked" a passage to the Phillipines on an American Transport from Sassoon Dock.

I do not know what happened to Mrs. Spokey but it was rumoured that she was the writer of that pathetic ballad entitled "Won't you come back to Bom- bom- bay!"

Surely it is not too much to affirm that fully half of the world's misery could be avoided if partners in the sacred compact of marriage were more careful in their selection of one another.

So, I would say to the young man of to-day, to morrow, and next week, "Look well around the matrimonial market before you pick your goods. It is not always the fairest fruit that is the sweetest or soundest. Judge well, lest you be diddied." Let not the giggles of flighty flapperosities disturb your equanimity, but coolly and diligently search for that pearl of great price. The girl for whom you are sure you have enough love to make her a life-long chum

NEW LIFE-JACKETS.

As it has been found that, in an emergency, some people put on a life-jacket the wrong way, thus, in many cases, destroying its efficiency, the Board of Trade have now ordered that, before it can be approved, a life-jacket must satisfy the required conditions, even if it is put on the wearer back to front, or upside down. Up to the present five types of life-jacket have been devised which comply with the conditions.

Another new regulation states that samples of the cotton material used for the covers of life-jackets must be submitted to the Board of Trade by manufacturers of the jackets before the orders are executed. Samples will be tested for weight of material, threads per inch, strength, and purity.

THE FACT IS!

With Apologies to Mr. George Robey and his well known song.

I'm considered a wonderfull Airman,
Of my fame the whole Flying Corps's heard;
I take a "grid" out
And throw it about,
Then bring it down just like a bird!
My landings they tell my are splendid,
Well, "Posh," I believe, is the term;
To see me alight.
Is a wonderfull sight!
There is nothing lef. now I can learn.

My landing this morning was perfect!
Well, just to be modest, say, good.
Well, p'r'aps hardly good—s'pose I did bounce a bit
Still my effort the fourth time was really quite "it".
They tell me I stalled her a little,
My man thought the cross-wires were smashed,
Still the damage was slight,
The tailstid's alright,
Well, the fact is—I crashed!

They call me a Daring Ace Pilot!
My shooting is deadly they say,
Whenever I'm out,
The Huns turn about
And dive for their, dromes straight away.
I was "t otling" round at ten thousand,
And the sky was just black with the Huns
I dived at them straight,
They turned, but too late:
I opened with all my ten guns!

May I say that I shot down ten Fokkers?
Well, p'r'aps hardly ten, but, say—two;
Well, p'r'aps hardly two, but certainly one
He was out of control and the poor beggar spun,
Well, when I say spun, p'r'aps he half-rolled,
Maybe he did fire the odd round.
Perhaps I lost height,
Still I'm alright
Well, the fact is—I was shot down!

THE FIRST "JAZZERS" IN GERMANY.

DISTINCTION CLAIMED BY SEVERAL UNITS.

A little while ago, we published a report of a concert given by a party who claimed to be the producers of the first Jazz Band in Germany. Since then, many letters have arrived at this office disputing that claim. So large has been the number of letters, in fact, that there is every indication that Jazz bands are as common in Germany as showers in April.

A New Zealander sends us particulars of a band that made its debut a few weeks ago. From the caste, and the instruments his members played, however, it would seem that the result must have been more boisterous than harmonious. Here is his letter:-

I noticed in your valuable paper a day or two ago that a certain unit claimed the distinction of organising the first "Jazz" band in occupied German territory.

I wish to state that that unit is a little behind the times, as a performance was given by a party of New Zealand "Diggers" a few weeks ago in Mülheim, listened to by a large number of British soldiers.

For the information of your readers I will give you the caste of characters:- "Wine & beer" glasses, Sergt. Wilson; "tin bucket," Pte Kennedy; "haircomb & paper," Cpl. Carseldine "gramaphone," S. M. Richardson; "side drums," Sgt. Wilding; "mouth organ" Cpl. Day; "tin whistle," Sgt. Parker; "18-pdr. shell case," Sgt. Hall; "triangle," Sgt. Doyle; "trumpet," Sgt. Goddard; "violin," Sgt. Munro; "Piano," Sgt. Pound; "bully beef & machonochie tins," Sgt. Chadwick; "cash tray & water bottle," W. O. Green; Conductor, Sgt. Driver.

GEORGE FORMBY THE SECOND.

SPORTS AND AMUSEMENTS OF THE 5th K.O.Y.L.I.

We read with a benign smile, of the possession by the Cheshires of a real working cinematograph machine. But, sad is their fall from their exalted position of starry heights, We, for some considerable time, have had a cinema, which has flickered the life and adventures of famous heroes of romance, before our admiring eyes. "Charlie" waddles across the screen holding the stirup cup of the "Prisoner of Zenda", who chases the forlorn heroine in his 2,000 h.p. Rolls-Ford Biplane.

But that is not all. Our Concert Party trills and bellows in the most approved style. You see we have a genius as organiser. Our genial Quartermaster, Captain H. Barker M.C., strolls through the Battalion seeking whom he may devour. Talent, of any kind, he readily seizes, and in consequence, the amusements of the Battalion are on an extraordinary high level.

On Tuesday night, the Concert Party, performing before a crowded house, presented a show the like of which it would be hard to equal. In Captain "George" England they have a comedian of considerable worth He "murders" people, with the able manner of the highly coloured individuals who are "On the Staff."

Then, too, we have a very popular comedian of the music-halls camouflaged in the Battalion as Lewis Gun Sergeant. He calls himself Sgt. Ward, but we all recognise George Formby!

At least if he really is Sgt. Ward, then George Formby must be dead and his wonderful talent reincarnated in our Sergeant. This melancholy face, his sad and mournful tones, are characteristic. The Concert Party's pianist, Pte. Wolfenden, is clever, both in his accompanying, and in his musical sketches.

The other fields of amusement and recreation, football (soccer and rugby) badminton, tennis, bowls, etc. all are catered for. — E.D.

ITEMS FROM COLOGNE "Y.M."

Mr. E.W. Hornung, the Author of "Raffles" and many other popular novels, will give the first of a series of "Armenair Talks" on short stories and the writers of them in the "Lorely Hall" of the Y.M.C.A."Central," Friesenstrasse 44, on Friday 25th April.

Mr. Arnold F. Jones has arrived from England to join the staff of the Y.M.C.A. Central and to organise its musical activities. He is to deliver lectures of Music and is aready arranging private lessons in pianoforte, violin, etc. for soldiers. On Tuesday, 22nd April, he will commence a series of Talks on "The Language of Music."

The following were the prise winners in the second Music and Recitation Competition at the Y.M.C.A. Central on 17th April.

Pianoforte 1 Pte. Palmer (R.H.A.C.); 2 Bandsman Bushfield; 3 Sgt. Locke R.A.S.C.

Violin:—Pte. Luptom R.A.S.C., Remounts; 2 Pte. Brough 16 West Yorks. Recitation:—1. Gunner King, London Div. R.F.A.; 2. Corp. Meredith 3rd. Field Bakery.

THE "SPORTSMAN."

There's a certain type of "sportsman",
Who never plays a game,
Though every football club he knows,
Its colours and its fame.
He's great on football coupons,
Backs his fancy ev'ry day,
And talks about the "poogilists"
In quite a knowing way.

He's never donned a boxing-glove,
Has never kicked a ball,
Has never faced a "Yorker,"
Ne'er seen his wicket fall.
The scrum has no delight for him,
The running track no call;
He's never cleared a hurdle,
Nor eved tried a "fall".

At every match you'll find him,
Raucous and loud of voice;
To every public boxing hall
He goes — to back his choice.
You'll know him by his yelling,
He'll almost shout you deaf;
You can't mistake him ever, for
He always "boos" the Ref.

BRILLIANT DISPLAY BY IRISH GOALKEEPER.

The association football victory International between Ireland and Scotland was played at Belfast on Saturday, the score being 0—0 Twenty-five thousand spectators were present and the weather fine. Scotland had the better of the opening exchanges, play being then kept in midfield with much short passing. Both goals were attacked and cleverly cleared, after which Scotland was constantly on the offensive.

During the second-half the Irish defence conceded three corners in rapid succession, the Irish goalkeeper playing a great game. Play became fast with Ireland pressing, but the Scottish forwards resumed control, bombarding their opponents' goal which was only saved by sound defence.

TWO PLAYERS RETIRE FROM FIFLD.

LONDON VICTORY CUP SEMI-FINAL.

Before 20,000 spectators the London Victory Cup semi-final was played on Saturday between Chelsea and the Crystal Palace, when the former won by 4 goals to 0. Chelsea pressed early, Lamb of the Palace being injured to such a extent that he was obliged to retire. Twenty minutes from the start Smith scored, Davidson shortly afterwards doing the same.

Hughes of the Palace was then obliged to retire with a twisted knee. Wilding with a hot shot scored the third goal for Chelsea, the score at the interval being 3—0.

After the interval Hughes resumed though lame. The Palace played the pluckiest game. Ten minutes from the end Smith scored.

FRENCHMEN OVERWHELMED.

BEATEN BY NEW ZEALANDERS: SCORE 20—3.

A Reuter's telegram summarising the rugby-game at Twickenham on Saturday says the New Zealanders' first half showed nothing like the determination which characterised the efforts against the Mother Country last Wednesday. They repeatedly threw chances away by forward passing. After 15 minutes, Reece scored for the Frenchmen. Singe replying with a try 20 minutes later. The Frenchmen kicked well and showed good speed. At the interval the score was 3—3.

Afterwards the New Zealanders overwhelmed the Frenchmen. Hasell, West, Kissick, Brown and Ford scored tries, Ryan converting the last.

Final Result:— New Zealand 20 pts. French Army 3 pts.

There were 170,000 spectators present, including the King, the Princes of Wales, Albert, and Henry, and Sir Douglas Haig.

FULHAM v. TOTTENHAM HOTSPUR.

Forty thousand spectators witnessed the game between Fulham and Tottenham Hotspurs which ended in a victory for the former by 2—0. Fulham attacked strongly but their shooting and kicking were wild. The interval arrived without any scoring on either side.

Play then improved, Fulham being the more dashing of the two elevens. Whittingham scored 17 minutes from the end. Tottenham responded vigorously but the defence was too strong. The second goal for Fulham was also shot by Whittingham.

LIST OF FIXTURES.

The Physical and Recreation Training School at Aldershot is at present the scene of much sporting activity in connection with the Army championship fixtures which opened at Aldershot last week and which will be in progress during the next fortnight. Soccer and rugby football, boxing and cross country running will form items in the sports programme, for which the Home Army, France, and Egypt have each sent a representative team.

In all of the events, with the exception of Rugby, contingents from Italy and India will participate: while an Association eleven has come from Salonika, and a boxing team from Mesopotamia.

FAST INTER-THEATRE-OF-WAR GAME.

The inter-theatre-of-war championships association football match between the team representing the B. E. F., France and the Salonika Army team resulted in a victory for the former by 4—2. Kellock of the Salonika army eleven scored after 20 minutes play, and Douglas equalised from a penalty. Before the interval Quinn and Campbell scored for the B. E. F.

Shortly after the restart Morrison (Salonika) and Douglas (B. E. F. France) both scored. The game throughout was fast and exciting.

34th BATTALION V 5th BATTALION MACHINE GUN CORPS.

An interesting game played by the above teams at Troisdorf resulted in a win for the 34th Battalion by two goals to nil. The 5th Battalion's team, drawn recently from four Battalions will improve when they understand each other's play.

After a few minutes play in mid field the 34th Battalion left-wing broke away, the outside left finishing with a long cross shot well out of the goalie's reach. Play was fairly even up to half time without further score.

After changing ends the 34th added another goal by some useful head work. For the 34th the halves played a splendid game, always having the measure of their opponents' forwards. The 5th Battalion's defence was weak at times, and the forwards when they had the chance finished by kicking anywhere but between the sticks.

Altogether it was a very clean game, with the 34th a little superior all round. Result: — 34th Battalion, —2; 5th Battalion — Nil.

1st M.G.C. v. 52nd WELSH.

The 1st Bn. M.G.C. and the 52nd Welsh played at Flerzheim on Wednesday. Very keen play was witnessed, in fact too keen at times and had some of the players come under the ban of the referee they would only have had themselves to blame.

The 1st M.G.C. scored the only goal of the match, Lieut. Chandler running three quarters of the field and crowning his effort with a drive that had the Welsh goalkeeper hopelessly beaten. Not until the final whistle blew was the game decided, the backs of both teams playing exceptionally well.

Result:- 1st Bn. M.G.C. 1; 52nd Welsh 0.

185 S.B. v 175 S.B. R.G.A.

185 S. Battery adde to their record by defeating 175 S. Battery on Tuesday, at Wiedesheim, near Euskirchen by two goals to none. It was a strenuous game, but the rough wind upset the play. Allen and Horten in particular defended well. Andrews after good combination should have scored for the homesters but shot just wide. In the second half 185, with the wind, had nearly all the play, scoring twice trough Trotter and Andrews.

No. 2 v No. 1 FIELD AMBULANCE.

Played at Lengsdorf on Saturday. After five minutes play Holliday scored for 141 from a lovely centre by Munday. Lilley and Tonkinson did heroic things in defence for No. 2. Lce. Cpl. Butler ended a run, half the length of the field with a lightning shot which found the net, and before half time Holliday and Cpl. Kirby (2) each added to the score. In the second half, Cpl. Bishop scored for No. 2. Result: No. 141 Field Amb., 5; No. 2 Field Amb., 1.

185 S.B. v. 175 S.B. R.G.A.

185 S. Battery added to their record by defeating 175 S. Battery on Tuesday, at Wiedeeheim, near Euskirchen by two goals to nond, it was a strenuous game, but the rough wind upset the play. Allen and Horten in particular defended well. Andrews after good combination should have scored for the homesters but shot just wide. In the second half 185, with the wind, had nearly all the play, scoring twice through Trotter and Andrews.

53rd NORTHUMBERLANDS v. 51st DEVONS.

On Saturday a fast and exciting game between these teams at Klettenberg resulted in a win for the Northumberlands by 2—1. The Devons previously had an unbeaten record.

24th v. 185th SIEGE BATTERIES R. G. A.

As the outcome of a challenge, 185th Siege Bty., on Saturday, defeated 24th Siege Bty. at Weidisheim, 4—2. The 24th are anxious to play a return match.

For setting dogs to worry cats at Ewshott camp, Capt. L. H. Jefferson was on Saturday fined ten guineas and five guineas costs at Aldershot.

ARTISTS WITH THE BALL.

93rd BRIGADE, R G A's BRILLIANT SOCCER TEAM.

A BUNCH OF PROFESSIONALS.

Perhaps the 93rd Brigade R.G.A. possess the finest team around Cologne at present. In the humble opinion of the writer they stand comparison with the Army champions, the 1st Cameron Highlanders. In fact I consider the forwards much more likely to get goals. Again the inclusion of several professionals, tried men, gives the side the acquired winning temperment.

Unfortunately the present team has only come together, hence their none-appearance in "The Commander's Cup." As the 10th Brigade, the 33rd Brigade possessed a more than ordinarily good Rugger side, a side good enough to beat a New Zealand Battalion, (possessing four players now in the New Zealand XV playing at home), the Brigade R.A.F. XV, and several noted Battalion XV's. The nucleus of the side were Welsh Territorials of the 113th Siege Battery G. Hooper, the 2nd Army and Cardiff Wanderers back; Gr. Stalker, 2nd Army and Aberdeen University Wing-three, Capt. Brown, 2nd Army and Watsons inside-three; Lt. Green, Clifton School scrum-half; and Br. Jones Penarth stand off; Sergt. Lawdy, 2nd. Army, and Penarth, and Glamorgan County Forward; Cpl. Stamp 2nd Army, Penarth Forward; Gr. Phillips, 2nd Army, Llanelly, and Welsh International Reserve Forward; Gr. Abbott, Cardiff Wanderers; Sergt. Scarrot Penarth Forward.

The 113th Siege Battery were the lucky possessors of all these players, and this with the captaincy of Major MacLeod R.M.A. Forward made the team into just about the warmest combination on the Rhine. And now the Rugger team has gone; gone to play for their pre-war teams, and in its place has sprung the Soccer team, a team that should make its presence felt in the Rhineland the next football season, for most of the team are retainable. The following notes on the team may interest soccerists.

NOTES ON THE TEAM.

Goal: Pte Mead (93rd Brigade R.A.S.C.) Rather on the small side. This failing is compensated by quickness and a sure pair of hands. Played two seasons for Bath City before transferring Welton Rovers. Has played on occasions for Bristol Rovers Reserves.

Right Back: Gr. Yule (57 Siege Battery) Undoubtedly a class back, with a fearless tackle and brilliant kick. Played as a junior for Dundee Violet and Dundee Harp before being spotted by Aberdeen, for whom he understudied Donald Colman for 2 seasons.

Left Back: B.S.M. Rusell (159 Heavy Bty) Was considered good enough for 2nd Army Team. A back with all the off-side tricks on his finger tips. Played Lancashire Combination Football in pre-war days.

Right half: Cpl. Olphert (124 Siege Bty) A dandy half who shone as a junior for Derry Celtic, before joining Belfast Distillery and later Cliftonville. Transferred in 1913 to Clyde, who sold his signature. Capped for Ireland in 1909—10 and 1910—11 against England.

Centre Half: Gr. Kenyon (150 Heavy Bty) Played as a schoolboy for Moss St. and Blackburn Boys. In these days he played inside left, but preferred left half for Rossendale Valley (Lancs. Combination). From there he emigrated to Blackburn, but unfortunately broke his leg in his first season. A brainy player who never wastes a ball.

Left Half: Gr. Hunt (124 Siege Bty) A steady and stylist half who plays real football. Played three seasons for Southampton Cambridge and played also as an amateur on occasions for Southampton Res.

Outside Right: Dr. Gladwill (93rd Bde. R.A.S.C.) Rather on the byside and a most difficult man to tackle. Plays the correct wing game cutting out all fancy tricks. Played for Dickens Aldershot in the Aldershot Senior League.

Inside Right: Gr. Stalker (113 Siege Bty) Undoubtedly a player with a future. A brilliant shot and an excellent idea of going through. Played as, a junior for "Banks o' Dee" and Aberdeen Reserves. An Aberdeen Varsity boy who can play wing-three at Rugger as well as he plays Soccer. Played wing-three for 2nd Army and would prove just about as warm a candidate for an inside forward position in a Soccer XI.

Centre: Gr. Chance (57 Siege Bty) Rather small for centre, in fact he prefers either wing. A tippy player with a sure shot in either foot. Played before the war with Stourbridge and Aston Villa hold his signature. A boy with a football future.

Inside Left: Gr. Tully (124 Siege Bty) An artist with the ball. Getting slow but this is compensated by extreme cleverness. Gives the necessary steadiness to the attack. Played first-class football with Clapton Orient and Rochdale as a half back. Comes from one of the homes of football, Tyne-side his first team being West Stanley.

Outside Left: Gr. Hopson (150 Heavy Bty) A fast and clever winger. Equally at home on either wing. Played for Sheffield Boys before signing for Cammel Lairds, a Sheffield Senior League Club, for which league XI he has played on occasion.

Outside and Inside Left: Gr. Walton (57 Siege Bty) Only the good play of Tully and Hopson keep Walton out, for he plays in either position. A regular Workington North Eastern League Player.

INMAN STEVENSON FINAL.

The final stage of the match of 15,000 up between Inman and Stevenson was reached on Saturday, the former being the winner. The following were the scores:—

Inman . . . . 15,000 Stevenson . . 13,597.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

Billiards.

The scarcity of English billiard tables in Germany is preventing what would undoubtedly prove to be very interesting matches from being played. Whether this deficiency is likely to be remedied in the near future I cannot say definitely but, inquiries made in many parts of the occupied area, have resulted in the assurance of those people in a position to know, that everything possible is to be done to get a few tables over here for the principal clubs of both Officers and other ranks.

It is hoped that the table in the 6th Corps Officers Club — which is idle merely for the want of a new cloth — will be ready for use in a few days.

Rowing On The Rhine.

The amount of discussion that this subject is causing among all ranks is extraordinary, particularly in regard to the condition laid down that a prospective "rowist" must swim 200 yards upstream before a boat will be hired to him. A corporal, who is undoubtedly a very strong swimmer, tried a surreptitious rehearsal on Sunday with deplorably disappointing results. He tells me that it required every ounce of his strength merely to hold his own against the current, and he was unable to make any more headway than two or three yards. As a result of his experiment, he is now prepared to wager a "demob" ticket to a German cigar that not a single individual in the Army of occupation is capable of swimming one hundred yards against the stream.

Challenges and More Challenges.

The publication in this column recently of two or three challenges of various sorts has produced heaps of letters from people anxious to accept them as well as many fresh challenges from other aspirants to championship honours. Pressure on space to-day prevents my reviewing these in detail but in the meantime I am sending the letters to those people concerned so that they can get on with any arrangements for matches they are disposed to make without delay. Wrestling, boxing, billiards and football are among the subjects involved and I hope to-morrow to give particulars of what is being done in this direction.

A Popular "Peddlers" Comedian.

Many hundreds of troops will have no difficulty in recognising, in the caricature above, Sergt. Trimm, who, for some time past, has been delighting large audiences at Bonn with his drollery. During the time he has been with "Pedlers" concert party, "Erb" has maintained an ever fresh budjet of genuinely funny stories and songs. In civil life, Mr. Trimm is no other than the well-known music hall comedian, Fred Weedon.

Amateur Thespians Progress.

Lieut. Percy, in the theatrical department of the amusement office, Cologne, is making great headway with the formation of his amateur dramatic society. Applicants for membership in the society are not lacking numerically and if enthusiasm counts for anything, the party should make rapid and successful progress. It is hoped to give the first performance shortly after the holidays when "Mollusk", a three-act comedy by Hubert Henry Davis will be produced in Cologne.

THE RAMBLER.

SYMPHONY CONCERTS AT BONN.

This evening and on the evenings of the 24th and 29th inst., a series of Symphony concerts will be given in the Stadt theatre, Bonn by an orchestra of 46 performers, under the conductorship of Capt. D.S Godfrey Lancashire Division Amusements Officer.

Excellent programes have been arranged which will appeal to all lovers of good music, a happy inclousion being brief lectures on each work by Mr. Walter Seward.

L Cpl. Sydney Freedman, the soloist, was previously leader of the Queens Hall Orchestra, and for the preceding two years, before joining the army, he was conductor of the Buxton Gardens Orchestra. He studied first at the Royal Academy, London, and afterwards under Professor Sevcik in Prague. He is also the leader of the orchestra during this series of concerts.

A number of Swindon boys, playing on Chisledon camp rifle range, kicked a live trench mortar bomb, which exploded. Three of them were killed and two badly injured.

BRITISH COLONEL IN AMERICAN ARMY.

Colonel Kathleen Burke, the first and only British woman to become an Honorary Colonel in the American Army, is shortly expected in London. It is understood that she will be received by their Majesties the King and Queen at Buckingham Palace.

Miss Burke, who is colonel of the 138th regiment of artillery, was present at the second battle of Ypers, Vimy Ridge, Cambrai and Douai. She was rather seriously wounded at Verdun and, just a year ago, was gassed near Valenciennes.

BABY WEIGHING 66 LBS.

On Saturday at Cologne a baby was born with the phenomenal weight of thirty kilogrammes (about 66 lbs, English weight). Its parents have lived at Cologne since 1903 and a previous infant was born in Decemcer 1915, but unhappily was drowned.

This wonderful infant can be seen and the proud parents interviewed at the Zoological Gardens, in the hippopotamus enclosure.

At the last moment the Bishop of London prohibited Miss Maude Royden from conducting the Good Friday three hours service at St. Botolph's Church, Bishopsgate. At the invitation of the Rector, Miss Royden then took a service in the Parish room.

The Eiffel Tower will probably be open to visitors early in May.

Many mines have been seen floating round Skaw Point, Denmark.

Maoris have contributed £29,000 to funds for Maori soldiers.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

Rebuilding of Belgium.

Gothein, the minister of finances, has declared to the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung that Germany could have accomplished the rebuilding of Belgium and northern France at the end of 1918 had a speedy "Wilson Peace" been granted to her. But during the last half year Germany has been ruined that to do so now will be very difficult. Every atom of the overstraining of Peace conditions merely leads to an additional victory for Bolshevism.

Germany and France.

In a recent issue we commented upon the question of institution of a direct policy between Germany and France. The originator of this new movement appears to be Georg Bernhard representing a small group of politicians whose aim is to make the continental policy. He asserts that the antagonism between England and America on the one side and Germany on the other will always remain, and yet he considers that all the differences between the nations of the Continent are unimportant. He and his followers have a desire to create a continental League of Nations, in which Germany might seon become a leading power.

The Policy of a Free Hand.

The Cologne socialist paper, the Rheinische Zeitung, in remarking on the above says: "In reality, militarist and chauvinist France is now the worst enemy of Germany. England, on the contrary, shows a certain amount of moderation, whilst America can be considered no more as a real enemy of Germany.

This difference of behaviour of our adversaries towards us is not explained only by the difference of feelings. More important is the geographical situation. France is afraid of us as of a densely populated neighbour, and would like to make us as humble as possible. She is speculating, like her allies, the Poles and the Czechs, for the possession of pure German territories. England and America have no ground to be afraid of us and have not the smallest interest whether or not German territories come under a foreign domination.

The continental policy is no policy for a party of influence in Germany. Germany's aim remains the League of Nations, and if this aim cannot be reached there is only one policy left the policy of a free hand".

THE EDITOR'S LETTER BOX.

The Editor, in publishing letters from Correspondents, will use his own discretion, and if necessary, limit the publishing of correspondence on any subject whatever. It must be understood, however that he is not responsible for the views stated.

All communications for this column should be brief and to the point, and preference will be given to those which bear the writers' signatures for publication. No letter will be published unless accompanied by rank name, and unit of sender, which are needed for the purpose of reference.

Many letters of a perverse nature have reached the office, and the Editor wishes to point out that these only cause waste of time both to the writer and the Editor himself. Letters of this nature will not be published.

THE QUESTION OF TONGUES.

A GERMAN VIEW.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

The above subject was mentioned in a former issue of your paper and I would like to add a few words in further reference. As a teacher of languages for more than twenty-five years in English-speaking countries as well as in Germany, and now as instructor at various barracks, I am well able to form an opinion of the capabilities of the English to learn German or French.

Prior to the war a knowledge of foreign languages proved to be lucrative, but it will be doubly so when commercial relations have been restored. All professions and trades profit by the knowledge, for a firm in one county is able to get into direct touch with a firm in another country without having to resort to special interpreters. In addition, if we know a foreign language we are able to improve our profession or trade through the reading of foreign publications. That is how the Germans make progress.

I have had much opportunity to converse with many English people, who have acknowledged my own opinion and that of many of the Germans, that the war would never have commenced had the nations understood and known each other better. Had the Germans studied the national economy and industries of Great Britain and America, they would never have underrated their enemies.

Then again, it is not necessary to employ foreign clerks in London to do the correpondence when our own people can do it. But new methods must be adopted to give everyone a sufficient interest in the study, as most of our language-books are for school use and not for grown people who mostly find the interest and advantage of knowing foreign languages when school days are past.

Trade vocabularies and those referring to every trade must be learned by heart, descriptive lessons should be given and the student must only be taught by a teacher who has a thorough knowledge of English and German and who has gained this knowledge through experience in England or English-speaking countries.

P. SPANDOW,
sometime Master of foreign languages at Several English schools.

OFFICERS' UNDERCLOTHING.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—Without in any way, of course, wishing to make too pertinent enquiries regarding your personal wardrobe, Mr. Editor, we wonder if you possibly have any influence in obtaining anything from Ordnance in the way of underclothing?

We, the joint-undersigned, are but little children of only just under 5 years commissioned service, but in spite of arms resplendent with chevrons, not having served in either the Crimea or the Boxer Rebellion, have little knowledge of the delicate ways and means of working the oracle. To us the obtaining of blood from a stone is simplicity itself compared to getting underwear from Ordnance, Cologne.

Well do we remember a nice kind M.P. (one of those political wallahs, not a military policeman) giving as a reply to a question of clothing for officers in our own "National Palace of Entertainment, Westminster" that officers serving on expeditionary forces could obtain all their requirements at the Officers Clothing Store of the Ordnance. Quel drôle de type! What a dream! What an optimist! Let him try Ordnance, Cologne. A very nice line, thank you very much, in patches, gorget, red, also caps, service, size 6 and boots size 4, sacks-haver (we are sticklers, Sir, for military nomenclature), whistles, lanyards, for etc. etc., but socks, chiefs, anuker, or vests under, or shirts woollen, or pants (how brutally commonplace this word seems in cold print!) or any other personal necessity — nothing doing.

Whilst thoroughly admitting that Ordnance has definite records showing that all these now extinct articles were actually sold at a Base "Somewhere in France" in 1914 and early 1915, could not something be done for those of us whose shirts are now held together by little more than faith.

We are, Sir, more in sorrow than anger,
Lt. R. Capt. T.

BLACK AND WHITE.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—I am not particularly prudish and I think I take a fairly broad-minded view of things in general, but I must admit I received a shock yesterday when I saw a native (a South African Kaffir I judge him to be) as the dancing partner of an English girl at the Deutsches Theater. To put it as mildly as possible, surely it is a pity to spoil an otherwise excellent show by the introduction of an item in such questionable taste, to say nothing of the unfortunate impression such a degrading spectacle must make on the minds of the young soldiers who witness it, some of whom may eventually be going out to settle in one or other of our Colonies where the dividing line between Black and White must be rigidly kept, and certainly where such a public exhibition as the above would not be tolerated.

SOUTH AFRICAN.

QUESTION OF PRICES.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,— Your correspondent S.G.P. evidently does not understand the first principles of economics.

A simple example should enlighten him. In France a Y.M.C.A. charged 50 centimes for a cake of soap. Here the same article in the Y.M.C.A. costs 1 mark.

If your correspondent could buy a Goerz in England now for £9, he would not be paying any more by giving 480 marks for it here.

S.G.P. appears to be looking for bargains resulting from the great fall in the value of the mark.

Good luck to him if he can find them.

His other allegations as to increase in prices are not definite, but for his, and all your readers benefit, it would be well to point out that a Special British Office is in existence for "strafing" any authenticated cases of profiteering.

HUNGARIAN BOLSHEVISTS ANXIOUS

FIGHT FOR MUNICH

RETRIBUTION FOR INDIAN AGITATORS

NEW COMMANDER IN CHIEF ARRIVES

BOLSHEVIST WOMAN JUDGES.

TWO-EDGED REBUKE.

Distinguished Hungarian lawyers attended Budapesth courts yesterday, says the Daily News correspondent, to watch the first woman judge appointed by the Soviet Government. She was until recently a milliner, her two colleagues being a tailor and a carpenter.

One of the cases tried was that of a servant girl charged with stealing two pairs of boots from her mistress. Accused was severely rebuked for addressing the milliner as "worthy lady".

This Bolshevist Portia sentenced the girl to five years imprisonment, saying "You seem to have failed to realise that the old social system is gone Only workers, not capitolists or thieves, have any place in the new social system."

The salary of the judges nominated by trade unions averages about fifty shillings daily.

PUNISHMENTS FOR INDIAN AGITATORS.

Simla. 10th April. The Governor general has promulgated a fresh ordinance providing that any court martial or commission may sentence persons convicted under martial law to transportation for life or for ten year periods; or to rigorous imprisonment for periods of between seven and fourteen years. The Defence of India regulations are also amended to provide that no newspaper can be either printed or published without the sanction of the local Government having been previously obtained.

RESTORING ORDER IN EGYPT.

Cairo. 18th April. The authorities announce that anyone wearing the badges of a society calling itself the Association of National Police, formed under the leadership of a Deputy ostensibly to preserve order, will be arrested, the formation of such corps being forbidden.

19th April. The official communiqé states that a number of arms have been seized in several villages and in the neighbourhood of Derut.

Numerous persons implicated in the disturbances near Cairo on the 17th April have been arrested. Cairo is quiet and no new casualtis have occurred during the last three days.

WILL TURKEY RETAIN CONSTANTINOPLE?

According to the Pall Mall Gazette a strong rumour is current in Paris political circles that the Turks will be allowed to keep Constantinople for fear their expulsion from Europe might lead to a "Holy" war.

VICTORY LIBERTY LOAN.

New York. The Victory-Liberty of 4,500,000,000 dollars opened with a rush. Subscriptions and pledges received in New York alone amounted at noon to one hundred million dollars.

Addresses were delivered and celebrations held in various cities. A striking feature of the celebration at Washington was the reading of President Wilson's loan message from an aeroplane by means of a wireless telephone and sound amplifier.

The crowd of fifteen thousand assembled on the Treasury steps heard the message distinctly. The aeroplane flew at the height of 2,600 feet. — Reuter.

FOOD FOR RUSSIA, BUT FIRST, PEACE.

Mr. Fridtjof Nansen has writen to President Wilson, M. Clemenceau, Mr. Lloyd George and Signor Orlando, suggesting the organisation of a purely humanitarian commission for provisioning Russia. He suggests that the Commission be composed of Norwegians, Swedes and possibly Dutch, Danes and Swiss. It would guarantee a just distribution organised upon the lines followed by the Belgian Relief Commission. He asked upon what conditions the Council of Four would approve such an enterprise.

President Wilson and the other Premiers told Mr. Nansen in their reply that their Governments and people are willing to co-operate without thought of political, military or financial advantage in any movement designed to relieve the shocking suffering in Russia.

If the local Governments in Russia are equally willing there will be no political obstacle, provided the problems of supply and transport to Russia can be solved.

The problems of finance and transport in Russia, however, and the distribution of the food, can be solved only by the Russians themselves, with the assistance and supervision of the suggested commission, but such a course must obviously involve the cessation of all hostilities and transfers of troops in Russia.

Relief to Russia which did not mean an immediate return to a state of Peace would be futile and impossible to consider.

Under these conditions the Premiers are prepared to give the plan their full support.

HUNGARIAN SOVIET ANXIOUS.

WAITING TO BE ATTACKED.

Via Copenhagen. On the 20th April at Buda-Pesth the Central Soviet declared a war of defence against Czech, Rumanian and Jugo-Slav troops. The united Soviets of Buda-Pesth and district met to discuss the defence of the republic.

Commissary of Education Kunff admitted the superiority of the attacking forces and gave serious warning as to the dangers of a white revolution. He urged that the proletariat must ruthlessly use all means at its disposal and regretted that the unity of the proletariat is not so strong as could be desired

Bela Kun, President of the Soviet, asserted that the Entente is undertaking the offensive with all available strength.

The Czechs were not yet attacking, but their advance was momentarily expected. None need despair, but as concerned armament and equipment the revolutionaries were very weak. Consequently it was not a question of being able to develop big military action. —Reuter.

A telegram from Vienna says that the action of the Communist Government at Buda-Pesth was precipitated by the report of an agreement between Rumanians and Szeklovs, the latter being a race akin to the Magyars, inhabiting Transylvania, and hostile to the Communists. —Reuter.

NEW COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF ARRIVES.

General Sir William Robertson, Commander in Chief of the Army of the Rhine, reached Cologne on Saturday evening.

FIGHT FOR MUNICH.

Concentration of the German storming troops proceeds apace. Nothing is to be left to chance.

Meanwhile, Augsburg has been occupied by Government troops after prolonged street fighting. The Wurtemburgers who were engaged complain that many of the soldiers were shot in the back from houses after they had passed.

The conditions of surrender were:— Recognition of the Hoffmann Government, delivery of all arms, surrender of the Spartacist leaders and full possession of the town.

All these conditions were accepted by the Communists.

A proclamation posted at Munich says that the entire garrison declares for the socialist Government against "swelled headed foreign agitators."

AFGHAN WAR HERO DEAD.

The death is announced of Col. Sir Arthur George Hammond K.C.B, D.S.O. one of the oldest wearers of the Victoria Cross. The deceased warrior was formerly in the Indian Army. He won the Victoria Cross in the Afghan war of 1877—1880 and the D.S.O. in the Hazara expedition of 1888. He also served with the relief force in the Chitral campaign and commanded the Peshawar column in the Tirah expedition in 1897—98.

REMOVING NORTH SEA MINES.

Admiral Strauss, Comander of the Mine force of the American Navy, has arrived at Liverpool. The object of his visit is to remove the minefield he laid across the North Sea from Bergen in Norway to the Orkneys. This minefield comprises fifty-seven thousand mines manufactured in America and conveyed to the North Sea in fifty-six cargo steamers, only one of which was torpedoed. The Admiral calculates that it will take four months to clear the mined area.

CZERNIN DENIES HIS FLIGHT.

Copenhagen. According to a telegram from Vienna dated the 20th April Count Czernin, ex Foreign Minister, has telegraphed from Feldkirch on the Swiss frontier, denying the report of his flight and subsequent arrest.

NEW ZEALAND PROHIBITION.

A message from Wellington, New Zealand, states that the majority for prohibition in the referendum is now only twenty six.

ARMY COUNCIL AND O.T.C.'s

The Army Council has sent a letter to Harrow School O.T.C. expressing appreciation of the great work carried out by O.T.C. contingents during the war.

The letter says that the number of vacancies in the army filled by ex-cadets in the early months of the war afforded ample testimony to the standard of training and power of leadership which O.T.C.'s have inculcated.

EPIDEMIC OF EASTER CONFERENCES.

CRACK-BRAINED RESOLUTIONS

As is usual about Easter time all the reactionary societies which delude themselves with vain words confer and pass resolutions which happily evaporate into thin air. The measure of Herr Philip Snowden's utterances can be gauged by the emphatic opinion of him recorded by his erst while constituents. Blackburn, the Lancashire cotton town, rejected him in December last by a majority of 43,160 votes!

We therefore only print the subjoined two reports as samples of the crack-brained nonsense which these reactionaries talk.

INDEPENDENT LABOUR PARTY.

When the annual conference of the Independent Labour Party was resumed at Huddersfield on Monday the chairman, Mr. Philip Snowden said "We are no party of violence. An intelligent, and unselfish democracy need not, in a country like ours, resort to methods of violence to attain its aims. If a revolution had to be achieved in Great Britain by violence it would come that way because of the resistance of the old order to the new birth."

Resolutions were carried demanding immediate raising of the blockade and the removal of the embargoes on trade with enemy and neutral countries; also that the worlds stock of food stuffs and raw materials be organised with the view to supplying the peoples of Europe in proportion to their needs.

Mrs. Snowden, who proposed this wholesale resolution, said that the starving state of men women and children was the cause of the terrorism "which is falsely called Bolshevism."

BRITISH SOCIALIST PARTY.

At the opening of the eighth annual Conference of the British Socialist Party at Sheffield on Monday a resolution was submitted expressing admiration for the revolutionary courage of the workers in Hungary in following the example of their Russian brothers and hoping that British workmen would follow their methods. This resolution, also one opposing conscription, was carried.

At the resumed Conference a resolution embracing the questions of land and food production was adopted, condemning the "peddling" proposals of the Government in regard to the settlement of demobilized soldiers. Another motion was carried that the British Socialist Party, the Independent Labour Party and the Socialist Labour Party should unite.

GENERAL MUZZLING ORDER

EXTENSIVE "DOG-RUNNING."

Despite the extreme dificulties of obtaining muzzles it is announced that the muzzling order will be strictly enforced from to-morrow. The prohibition against moving dogs is present ng many problems. Aready "dog running" has been extensively attempted and police patrols stationed on the main roads to the South coast have been kept busy during the week-end. Numerous motorcars were stopped near the borders of the prohibited areas and many cases of dogs being carried were discovered. The owners were advised to return home with them.

Seven fresh cases of suspected rabies have been reported to the Board of Agriculture, but in none has the disease been confirmed.

At the entrance to the Grand Picture Palace at Fulham on Sunday night an Irish terrier which snapped and foamed at the mouth was killed by a policman with his truncheon.

The muzzling order will be made general on 1st May.

NATIONAL MEMORIAL TO SPORTSMEN.

At the general Committee meeting of the National Cyclists Union, the suggestion was made that a Central Hall should be erected as a memorial to sportsmen who have fallen during the war. This hall would be devoted to offices of the governing bodies of various sports and would contain suitable rooms for meetings. The suggestion also included the laying out of a national sports ground. Expressions of opinion of other sports associations will be invited with a view to joint action.

TO OBSERVE ECLIPSE OF SUN.

The joint permanent eclipse committee of the Royal Society and the Royal Astronomical Society has arranged to send two expeditions abroad to observe the total eclipse of the sun on 29th May. One expedition will go to Brazil and the other to the island of Principe, off the West African coast. These will be the first solar eclipse expeditions since before the war.

MILITARY NONAGENARIANS.

Among the deaths which were announced yesterday were those of Col. John Wilson, aged 93, formerly Professor of Fortifications at Woolwich Academy, and Col. Albert Seagrim, aged 91, who fought at the siege of Sebastopol in 1854.

LINK WITH WATERLOO.

Wiss Anna Wyndham died yesterday in her apartments at Hampton Court Palace, where she had lived for fifty years. She was the daughter of Colonel Charles Wyndham of the Scots Greys, who was wounded at the battle of Waterloo.

Herr Durnburg has been appointed Minister of Finance. He will also act as Vice President of the Council.

BRITISH SAILORS IN FRANCE.

BRILLIANT PROGRAMME.

In connection with the visit of a British squadron to Cherbourg and Brest and attendant festivities in Paris, Admiral Sir David Beatty has sent a message to the French people in which he says that he wants the people of France to know how proud he is of the opportunity of visiting them with his men.

"I hope to visit your battlefields in company with Marshal Pelain" says Beatty "and to see your glorious army at close quarters while my men fraternize with yours in your fortresses and in Paris. I am glad to think of these foregatherings as proof of the confraternity of our forces on land and sea and send my thanks to the people of France who so kindly invited us to these celebrations, which my men and myself shall appreciate from the bottom of our hearts."

The British Naval Squadron, consists of two contingents, one for Cherbourg being under Vice Admiral Sir Arthur Leveson and that for Brest under Rear Admiral Sir Reginald Tyrwhitt. The ships selected have played their part in some of the hottest fighting of the war, and include the Barham, Malaya and Warspite, which took part in the Jutland battle. Festivities include a visit to Paris in which four Admirals, one hundred and six officers, two hundred Petty officers, and eight hundred and fifty sailors, in addition to Admiral Beatty, will take part; a reception by the military Government of Paris; a gala performance at the Opera; a great meeting at the Sorbonne under the chairmanship of M. Pichon, Foreign Minister and M. Leygues, Minister of Marine; a reception at the Hotel de Ville, etc., as well as visits to Versailles and Rheims.

LONDON TERRITORIAL MARCH.

CERTIFICATES OF THANKS.

The War Office announces that it is prepared to assist Civic authorities in welcoming cadres of units from overseas.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the triumphal march of London troops through the City in June next. The route will be between Hyde Park and the Tower and the pageant promises to be one of the most imposing military spectacles seen in the Metropolis for many years. The men will march eight abreast.

Each man will be given a certificate of thanks from the City or County of London. This document will be received by every man of a London unit who has served overseas, whether he is on parade or not.

N.U.T. ANNUAL CONFERENCE.

The annual Conference of the National Union of Teachers opened at Cheltenham on Monday.

Earl Beauchamp, who as Lord Lieutenant of the County of Gloucester welcomed the conference, asked the delegates to support a movement to foster British-American fellowship in a scheme by which school children of Great Britain would enter into personal correspondence with children of American schools.

Among the items on the agenda are draft resolutions opposing the teaching of military drill and other forms of military training in schools and declaring that before being entered for training as teachers disabled soldiers and sailors should show an aptitude for teaching.

LIMERICK STRIKERS.

TANK PREPARED FOR ACTION.

At Limerick on Monday a large crowd of people attended a hurling match at Cahirdavin, which is a mile outside the city. Returning was quite another matter, however, as those not possessing a permit were prohibited from re-entering the city. The crowd showed signs of an intention to force Sarsfield bridge but the military guard lined up on the bridge and fixed bayonets. A tank was also prepared for action, a blank cardridge being fired as a warning. There was no disturbance of the peace. The shortage of food in Limerick is increasing the difficulties of the strikers. The commission to feed the people has prohibited food hoarding and applied pickets to watch all purchases of food. The strike committee is issuing notes ranging from one shilling to ten shillings in value, inscribed "general strike against British militarism. The workers of Limerick promise to pay bearer — shillings."

LORD SHOLTO DOUGLAS BANKRUPT.

In the bankruptcy court the discharge was suspended of Lord Sholto Douglas. Proofs of debt amounting to 279 pounds were made but no assets were disclosed and nothing was realised by the creditors. Lord Sholto Douglas has acted as traveller to firms in America until 1894 when he returned to England. He attributed his insolvency to the war.

DRY DAY AT SWANSEA.

Swansea experienced a record Bank Holiday from the point of view of the number of visitors and traffic returns. Practically all the public houses closed very early as no ales, stouts, spirits or wines were obtainable, chiefly owing to the dock strike.

LABOUR PEER'S HOPES.

Lord Kimberley, who recently joined the Labour Party, when formally opening a new Labour Institute at Wymondham, Norfolk, said that he could not help being a peer but was nevertheless a democrat and hoped yet to see the Labour Party governing the country.

FLYING THE ATLANTIC OCEAN.

LAYING THE ODDS.

A telegram from St. John's, Newfoundland, states that a head wind over the Atlantic prevented Hawker and Raynham from starting the trans-Atlantic flight yesterday. The weather forecast indicates the probability of a break up of the weather, which has been wonderfully fine during the last two days. Reuter.

St. Johns Newfoundland. The betting is five to one against any aviator's chance of success. Reuter.

In London there is much private speculation over the trans-Atlantic flight; a member of the Royal Aero Club says that the betting prior to the accident to Major Wood and his Short biplane, was 7 to 2 agains. Hawker and Raynham; 10 to 1 against the Short; 10 to 1 the Handley-Page; 15 to 1 the Fairey and 20 to 1 Boulton and Paul.

These odds, it should be understood, are not offered against the flight being accomplished but against the winner of the prize.

Yesterday's British Air Ministry air bulletin indicated a distinct improvement in Atlantic weather conditions.

New York. — Thirty-six mechanics and repairmen of the Naval air station at Rockaway Beach reported at Brooklyn Navy Yard on Monday. They will be stationed at various landing places selected by the American trans-Atlantic airmen. The probable date of departure of the American airmen is not yet announced.

NEW CHINESE GAMBLING GAME.

"PUKKA POO."

Evidence given in a prosecution at Thames police court as a sequel to a gambling raid, led to the description of a new Chinese gambling game called "pukka poo." The game has almost entirely superseded fan tan. Players are supplied with papers on which are printed eighty Chinese symbols, of which they cross out ten. Every hour one of the principals also crosses out ten while chanting some weird Chinese song. The competitor who is fortunate enough to cross out the same ten symbols receives 170 pounds in return for the shilling paid for his card.

Forty-two pounds is paid for getting eight right.

"WOODBINE WILLIES" REHOUSING SCHEME.

Speaking at a meeting held at Worcester theatre the Missioner who earned at the front the soubriquet of "Woodbine Willie" said "The only way to deal with my parish would be to put fourteen batteries of five inch guns on the Malvern hills, clear the people out of their houses and blow the parish to pieces; then rebuild it fit for man to live in."

WOOLWICH MEMORIAL REPLACED.

At Woolwich Garrison Church on Easter Day General Horne unveiled a new rose window, replacing the window erected in 1863 as a memorial to Lord Herbert, which was destroyed by a German aeroplane bomb in February 1918.

The new window was dedicated by Bishop Taylor-Smith who, preaching from the text "He that sitteth in the Heavens shall laugh them to scorn," compared the downfall of the Kaiser with that of two other monarchs who defied God—Pharaoh and Belshazzar.

SECOND DEVONS WELCOMED.

Although they arrived at 3 o'clock in the morning, the cadre of the Second Devons was frantically cheered by large crowds at Exeter which had waited up all night to receive them. The Mayor welcomed the men, who were entertained at the barracks.

St. GEORGE'S DAY.

To-day we celebrate the patron saint of England. Tradition has firmly woven the story of St. George into the web of our national annals. In Spenser's Faerie Queene St. George, the Red Cross Knight, represents Piety who after wondrous martial adventures is united to Una, the damsel who symbolizes Truth. In Percy's Reliques we have a ballad which pictures the patron saint in a different guise of heroism. But legend and history combine to carry us further back in our world story. St. George is claimed as a victim of the Diocletian persecution, who was martyred on the 23rd of April in the year 303. The usual account of the time-honoured connexion between St. George and England is that on the establishment of the Order of the Garter by Edward III the legendary hero was adopted as our patron saint. His exploits are typified in his valorous conquest of a fearsome dragon which daunted the hearts of many till St. George's prowess laid it low. It is an old allegory of brave and chivalrous victory over the power of evil and oppression, an allegory that Bunyan revived in his tale of Apollyon's discomfiture.

"St. George he was for England" — it was a gallant war-cry of our forbears in many a bloody battle on the soil of France, our ancient enemy and now our honoured ally. Even in these days when St. George and St. Denis have fought side by side, the old inspiration has been renewed. It was on the eve of St. George's day 1918 that under the guiding command of Sir Roger Keyes the British navy set out to achieve one of its most gallant and glorious exploits. Zeebrügge and Ostend were robbed of their menace, and these are names that will be written in gold when the future historians of the Grand Fleet narrate its deeds of daring.

We have often been rated a practical nation, a people that is impatient of enthusiam, that is concerned chiefly with material matters of industry and trade. But deep down in our hearts we have a genuine sentimentalism. Historical tradition means much to us, we are proud of our past, and we linger on ancient stories that are founded on the renown of heroic ancestors. It is our boast that the England of St. George stands for chivalry and courage and fair-dealing. Once again our patron saint has led us in the fight against a dragon, the dragon of unbridled militarism; and our fight has been victorious.

With the help of our allies we have slain an evil thing, and we breath more freely now that the world is being made safe for democracy. Peace will come more surely since a trial of arms has proved the futility of a proud bid for dominion. But has the last dragon of unholiness been slain? Is it wise to assume that all is well since war has ceased? We do not speak of martial campaigns, for such things are hidden from our eyes; we speak of a campaign against the dragon of unworthy standards of human life. The symbolism of St George most certainly teaches the ideal of purity and chivalry. It is not fair to prate about "our ancient word of courage, 'fair St. George'," if we are not prepared to emulate the spirit of our patron saint.

THE QUESTION OF TONGUES.

HOW TO LEARN GERMAN.

WILLIAM R. PATTERSON, F.R.G.S., ETC.

My first article, treating of the language question, induced a few readers of the "Cologne Post" to respond with equal enthusiasm.

I am grateful to those who have agreed with me on the significant importance to the British race of foreign language study. We must learn for our own sakes and for the sake of British interests. If we, as many of us as possible of all trades and professions, do not settle down to study earnestly at least one modern foreign language we shall not succeed nearly as well in business as we might. In these days of big money and big demands, and in those future days of bigger money and bigger demands, there will arise a need for French, Spanish and German speaking agents and business men.

It is our greatest wish to see the Briton first in the field. At one period the study of German nearly ceased; that was wrong. If a mad velent fly bites you, so much more reason have you to study its actions. As in war, so in peace; study the language both of friend and foe and, through that, learn as much as possible of each. You young men who are here now with the Army of the Rhine have an excellent opportunity for acquiring a good knowledge of one of the most forceful languages of the world; therefore, instead of wasting time, study the German tongue seriously, earnestly, and prepare for the future. If you have already some trade or profession, so much the more profitable will such knowledge prove when you are older. But you must not go about the matter half-heartedly; that would produce a very poor linguist. It means that you will have to spend at least an hour daily in pronouncing aloud to yourself, not merely words but whole sentences. Order your Grammars from England at once; ask your friends to post them on to you. Try to obtain a Grammar that is rich in exercises, for practice, continual practice is essential to fluency. Now, fluency does not, by any means, signify rapidity of utterance. A fluent speaker suggests to us one who is able to converse, and to continue to converse, correctly; I should not call fluent a man who rattled off a string of ungrammatically constructed sentences at great speed.

No, you may be a fluent conversationalist and yet a slow and deliberate speaker. For the beginner, the latter is the best aim to achieve; You must endeavour to sense the idea of the expression or phrase you are practising and to forget the English equivalent for it.

The best of all methods to adopt in learning a new tongue is that of continual repetition. You may not force yourself to learn more than your capacity will allow; you must assimilate knowledge by degrees, steadily.

Let me illustrate this last remark.

Day after day, week after week, year after year, on your walks and on your journeys, you read dozens and dozens of advertisements; they are ever before you; you do not intend to memorize them but you do so nevertheless, unconsciously. Follow the same process with language-study, but read your work aloud. Read hundreds and hundreds of phrases and sentences. Read aloud to yourself every day as much as you can. Avail yourself of those odd minutes which crop up between-whiles, and persevere. Another point! Do not mumble, but pronounce clearly and distinctly, allowing perfect mobility to the organs of speech. When your are some way advanced, take up a good modern play, not necessarily a classic one, and act it to yourself. Imitate the utterances of each character, be he angry, proud, sarcastic, arrogant, humble, humourous or anything else. The text will usually assist you in this matter.

Think of your own future and that of Great Britain and learn languages!

"PARSIFAL" AT THE COLOGNE OPERA.

BY MAJOR ARTHUR BLES.

When at Roubaix I received a wire from the then 2nd Army to come at once with all my staff in three cattle trucks, to Cologne, there to undertake the duties of Town Major, I little thought that within 5 months of that date I should be listening to "Parsifal" at the Cologne Opera, on behalf of a British paper published by the British Army of the Rhine. And even if I had thought of it, it would never have entered my head that the performance would be so remarkable that an audience composed to the extent of at least 75% of British Officers and Men would listen throughout 5½ hours of highly intricate music, in the same spirit of religious "receuillement" as was always believed to be the special feature of the Bayreuth production of Wagner's wonderful work.

It is said that comparisons are odious, but like all its kindred, especially its twin brother. Boileau's much-quoted "Criticism is easy, Art is difficult," the old saw is entirely false, for comparison simply infers the existence of a certain standard as a basis for judgment. Where comparisons are odious — and if we knew the true origin of the phrase we should probably find it was applied to some particular case — is where the person who makes the comparison, the critic in fact, is himself insufficiently educated on the particular subject to establish a true standard. The musical comedy fanatic, who says that he does not like "Siegfried" because there are not so many tunes as in the "Merry Widow" is a bad critic because his judgment is warped.

He has no sense of music, intellectually speaking, and cannot perceive the melody which appeals to the brain of the cultivated lover of music. Melody, sensual, rythmic, superficial, is only one tiny branch of the tree of music, the trunk itself and the greater branches help the small one to live its life. The student of music counts tunefulness a small thing beside harmony and form, based on a knowledge of the acoustic laws of music. Someone has said that "Music Master has descended from Heaven," meaning that this sound knowledge is essential to the production of really great works of art. Mendelssohn writing the "Midsummer Night Dream" overture at 18 years of age only provides the exception that proves the rule, and besides, he was what Heine on his "Mattress Grave" called the most tragic being on earth, at once a Jew and a Genius.

Now for many years, since the Eighties in fact, since Parsifal was written, we have all lived under the spell of Bayreuth, with its atmosphere of Wagnerian tradition and its comparative isolation from the rest of the world. When some years ago Munich broke away, in music, from Bayreuth, just as before she had created a Secessionist movement in painting, we adherents of the tradition predicted disaster for the world's greatest operatic masterpiece and cried "Shame" on the perpetrators of the misdeed. Unfortunately the performances given in Munich, London and New York more than justified the fears of the true followers of the Wagner tradition, for the sudden, transition from the routine of every day life to the atmosphere of semi-religious repose was too much to expect from the ultra-worldly people that we have all become. This was the state of mind in which I went to the performance of "Parsifal" given at the Cologne Opera House on Easter Monday, a state of undescribable fear that any lover of art experiences when he comes within the radius of some great vandalism.

But the fear was absolutely unnecessary, for the whole performance both from the point of view of the stage and the audience was as near perfection as we mortals can hope to attain, at the same time it proved the falsity of "mathematical" tradition, for in numerous details, the Cologne "Parsifal" is immeasurably finer than the Bayreuth representation. It is simpler, thereby gaining in grandeur, and it is far less stagey and theatrical. Even the elimination of the famous moving scenery of the first act, where Gurnemanz leads Parsifal to the Hall of the Knights of the Grail on Monsalvat, added to the dignity of the scene, for instinctively the mind dwelt on the cleverness of the mechanical contrivance by means of which the whole journey of the two men passed before the spectators' eyes.

In the first scene in the Knights' Hall, the awestruck stillness of the "Reiner Tor," the Pure Simpleton, which Gurnemanz mistakes for stupidity unworthy of the expected Messiah, is infinitely more impressive than the more excited movements of the Bayreuth protagonist Eric Schmedes, and Gurnemanz himself, though his role is long and wearisome at times, was more interesting in every way than even the great Dr. Felix Krauss.

In the second act, the changes made in the scenery have taken away much of the stilted nature of the dance of the Flower Maidens. The rows of hollyhocks growing on hop-poles that always shocked the Bayreuth pilgrim, have given way to a flower-bedecked, but clear, stage in the back-ground of which Klingsor's fatal castle stands in silhouette against the morning sky There is no longer any necessity for the marching and countermarching, obviously regulated by a dancing mistress, in and out of the hop-poles, and the Flower Maidens are free to dance about and around Parsifal as their young hearts desire.

But it is in the last act, that Herr Remond's interpretation is immeasurably finer than at Bayreuth, and where in spite of the fact that the small Bavarian village has inherited the true tradition, I believe it comes nearer to Wagner's own conception. The booklet sold at the Opera house tells us that Parsifal must be considered as Wagner's Profession of Faith, but this is wrong, for Wagner's only true faith was his love of art. If the booklet meant this, it is right, for if the whole last act is obviously an adaption of the life of Christ, it was taken only because, apart from all question of religion, the Christ story is the most beautiful romance the world has ever produced.

Again from the fact that in "Parsifal" it is an adaption, not a complete record, and pieced on to the other great romance of the Holy Grail we see that with Wagner, Art was his one and only God.

But if at Bayreuth we sometimes felt that the performance touched on the sacrilegious, through an undefinable feeling that Cosima Wagner was always there regulating every movement, the third act, as given last night, could not have shocked the most touchy of purists in religious matters. Even the delicate scene of the repentant Kundry, become the Magdalen, washing the feet of Christ and drying them with her hair, while old Gurnemanz fervidly returns thanks that a Saviour has been sent to cleanse the Hall of the Holy Grail and its ruler, Amfortas, of the result of his youthful sin, is given in a spirit of devotion which astounded all those who saw it.

Nothing could have been simpler, more perfectly represented than the disrobing of the young Knight in Black armour, with uncrested helm, and shield, virgin of all heraldic device, and when it was completed and Our Lord appeared clad in a long white robe and sandals the atmosphere of the whole theatre was such that no shock came to any one.

Even the descent of the Holy Ghost over the flaming Grail held aloft by the Saviour Parsival above the kneeling Knights of the Brotherhood was in no way sacrilegious. In fact this was true to such an extent that the curtain fell in a silence almost deep as that which follows a religious ceremony in a great Catholic Cathedral. Yet how many people present yesterday knew that it has always been the custom, in deference to a wish expressed by Wagner himself, that no applause should be given at the end of Parsifal.

The fact that the audience filed out as quietly as ever it did at Bayreuth was a finer testimony to the beauty of Herr Remond's production than the most tumultuous applause would have been

YOUR PAPER

AND ITS GERMAN ADVERTISEMENTS.

Several correspondents — to many too reply to individually — have criticised the selling of our advertising space to German firms. We want therefore to state our policy in the matter.

It is this. First the paper is intended for the use of the troops sojourning in an enemy country, yet needing still the ordinary goods and services of every day life. A man needs his clothes cleaned and repaired, he wants to send his photograph Home, he wants to send home to his people some souvenir of the Occupation. While there are many goods and services for which he can and should write home, there are many, such as these, which it is impossible to get in that way, and he wants to know where and how to get them here. Naturally he looks in his daily paper for this information, and we look upon it as one of our functions to provide it. Secondly, one of the great and very real dangers indicated as the sure result of any sort of gain on Germany's part was that our Home market would be flooded with "made in Germany" goods. That is the selling of goods would have been to the victor had Germany been victorious. Now Britain with her Allies is the Victor. Thousands of manufactories at Home, textile and otherwise, have large stocks of goods to sell and we know that many German houses in the Occupied Territory want them badly and have the money waiting to pay for them. We do not wish to force our goods upon unwilling purchasers, but we should be both foolish and dogs in the manger if we refused to further a trade on very favourable terms in goods which are greatly needed, when express permission for trade between the Allies and the occupied Territory has been given by our Government. Why should British manufacturers be left uninformed of this splendid opportunity of disposing profitably of their goods, while allied countries are already doing so? It would be a very short-sighted policy not to spread the good news by every means possible. We have helped to do this and should, we believe, continue to do so. In the German papers one can find many advertisements by English firms offering to sell goods.

Thirdly, on one or two occasions we have inadvertently, allowed another class of advertisement to slip in, e.g. one offering drills etc. to English firms; some dozen cuttings of this have been sent back to us with comments grave and gay — all of them really serious in intent. These particular advertisements were as a matter of fact slips, regrettable slips, but we must plead overwork and understaff defects which we hope to remedy shortly. Producing a daily paper wherein every piece of type is handset by men knowing not a word of English and organizing the distribution etc. of a new venture, this advertisement slipped our thoroughly British eye.

Starting a daily paper is no joy ride, starting one under the conditions under which we have had to labour, without making a slip, would be almost superhuman. There have been some defects more or less inherent to infants, but they should be treated as teething rash not as congenital malformations, and critics should understand this before they rush into words on the subject. If the labour and ink spent on these criticisms were expended in contributing articles to the paper articles of general interest, articles to amuse and elevate, the paper would be greatly helped and, possibly, improved. As we have said before, in a venture like ours, criticism is valuable only when constructive. Active help is by far the best medicine with which to cure the blemishes of our infancy.

In one or two cases aspersions have been quite unnecessarily cast on our all-British character, aspersions which it is unnecessary to refute. The Cologne Post is produced by Britishers who have been in the line against the German Power and its companions in crime on many fronts; it is produced for Britishers, and its policy first and last is the British clinching of the argument which began in 1914 and has cost Britain so heavily in lives and money, but it is not a policy of mere sterile revenge. To sum up our advertising policy, our objects are (1) Convenience of the troops, (2) Profit to our country in permitted trade, (3) Selling by the enemy only in so far as it renders them better enabled without prejudice to British producers to pay for their necessities and our products.

WIRELESS TELEPHONY ON THE AIR MAIL SERVICE.

According to Nature our aerial mail service from Folkestone is being fitted with apparatus for wireless telephony. Each plane is fitted with both sending and receiving sets, and by manipulating a simple switch the operator may send or receive. Each operator is equipped with a specially fitted helmet having ear receivers, and has to have special voice training in order that his 'note' may not be drowned by the drone of the engines. A chain of call-stations is being erected along the route and in practice it has been found that clear voice signals could be transmitted from plane to ground, and vice versa, over a distance of 30 miles.

"THE SCROUNGERS."

SUCCESSFUL ENTERTAINMENT AT TROISDORF.

The 31th Battalion M.G.C. Concert Party ("The Scroungers") gave their first performance in the Cinema Hall, Troisdorf, on Saturday before a crowded house. The entertainment was both witty and amusing, and altogether of a very high standard. The Organizer (2nd Lt. Yeatman) as well as the other members of the Party, are to be congratulated on the splendid success of their opening night. A feature of this Party is the excellent Orchestra, which rendered enjoyable and up-to-date music throughout the performance, under the able conductorship of 2nd Lt. Algar. A very successful season is predicted for "The Scroungers."

'MUSEMENTS AT MULHEIM.

An Amusements Office has been opened here for the purpose of centralizing every type of sport and entertainment, from diabolo to Opera, that can be indulged in in the vicinity. Though late in the season, a football league has been formed, and keen competition should ensue amongst the units stationed here. A fairly — level- so the experts say — piece of sward has been unearthed whereon to wield the willow (it would not be wise to say how many fatigue parties are required to roll it), and hopes are entertained for a good cricket pitch.

Tennis will shortly be going strong and the swimming baths are small but good. It is also proposed to form a garrison concert party complete with orchestra, which should hold its own with any; the district being well equipped with theatres as well as facilities for a fresco entertainments. In the meantime, all concert parties are invited to come and show here. Good houses guaranteed! (Is this meant for a free advert? Ed.)

EASTERN DIVISIONAL SIGNAL COY. 10-ROUND CONTEST.

A splendid contest was held at the Signals Gymnasium on Thursday when the contestants were Driver Mullock versus Spr. Tim Franklin. Franklin persevered pluckily for five rounds but was no match for that brilliant flyweight Mullock, who knocked his man out in the fifth round. This man has a great future in front of him.

34th v. 5th BATTALION MACHINE GUNNERS.

Played on the 34th Battalion's ground, at Troisdorf, on Good Friday. Play at the beginning of the game was even and open, but the home halves soon got a grip of the opposing forwards and matters swung into the 5th Battalion territory. The 34th's outside left completed fine forward play and scored with an angular shot from the touch line. The home halves were playing splendidly and fed their forwards judiciously.

In the second half, the home team were too good for the visitors and kept the play in their half of the field. Strong play by the 34th's forwards ended in Lt. Ryle finding the net with a clever header. There was no further scoring. A good clean game ended in favour of the 34th Battalion by 2 goals to none.

MERRY MOMENTS AT MECKENHEIM.

Some Doings of the 51st Battalion, Welsh Regiment.

MUSIC, FOOTBALL AND WRESTLING.

Although the 51st Battalion of the Welsh Regiment has only been settled in Meckenheim for a few days, the Officers and men have already made a good start with sports and entertainments.

"The Oo-Jahs."

The first perfomance of the Battalion troupe "The Oo-Jahs" was given a day or two ago and proved a first rate succes in every way. The Commanding Officer (Lt-Col. H.A.S. Prior. D.S.O.) made an amusing introductory speech which put everyone in a good humour. The funnosities of C.Q.M.S. Lawson as "Johnny" caused roars of laughter and he was ably seconded by Lt. Careful as "Billy". C.S.M. "Dago" Russell, C.S.M. "Kid" Davies and Sergeants "Spud" Conway and "Enrico" Jones all contributed items that were warmly appreciated, whilst the harmonious trios of "Enrico, Spud and Kid," brought down the house. The audience joined in all the concerted items and choruses with great gusto.

The "Jazz Band" which played an overture during the interval, also scored heavily, the gesticulations of the conductor only being equalled by the strenuous behaviour of the instrumentalists. Altogether a most enjoyable and amusing show. To save further enquiries — the words "oo-Jah" are Welsh for "tres bon".

Football.

Although the Battalion soccer team has been beaten in its two attempts against other units it contains some good material, especially the defence, and will soon get into its stride. The Inter-Company and platoon matches both in rugger and soccer have produced some exciting games, the boys displaying great keenness. Although "D" company seem to be well away at rugger, all the companies are very equally matched at Soccer. A most strenuous game of Rugby took place between the Officers and N.C.O's of the battalion on Wednesday last and after an exciting struggle the N.C.O's were beaten by 11 points to nil. Casualties:—

Officers . . . nil. N.C.O's . . . 5.

Wrestling.

Our champion wrestler C.S.M. J. Jenkins has already received a reply to his challenge to wrestle anyone in the Army of Occupation at 9st. 10lbs. and everyone is looking forward, to the contest which is being arranged.

NO. 1. SECTION D.A.C. EASTERN DIVISION.

A football match was played at Lülsdorf on Saturday between the Subsections from Lungel and the Subsections from Lulsdorf. Play was fast and exciting throughout. The home team early besieged their opponents' goal, but Lungel had a good defence and managed to avert scoring. Early, however ultimately beat the custodian with a pretty punt. Some roughness was noticeable in the second half and it was seen that Lungel were making desperate efforts to equalise. Their reward came through clever passing by the forwards, and at the finish of a hard game the score stood one goal each.

76th BRIGADE R.F.A. v. 1/5th SOUTH STAFFORDS.

A fast and interesting game of football played on the Gunners ground resulted in a win for the Staffords by 5—0. The winners took advantage of every opportunity. The Gunners played with spirit right to the end. Their forward line, good as it was, never really got going as the visitors defence constantly broke up their combination.

9th PONTOON PARK v. No. 3 COMPANY 43rd ROYAL FUSILIERS.

The above teams met at Volksgarten in a return match on Saturday Watson scored for R.F after 3 minutes play. Although play continued to be lively, no further goals were scored before half time. A few minutes after the game was resumed, Brooks scored for Pontoon Park. Despite the wind the play was really good Sgt. Stoffe added a second for Pontoon.

Result:- 9th Pontoon Park 2; 43rd R.F. 1.

52nd V. 53rd RIFLE BRIGADE.

Played on Wednesday at Königshoven, in a drizzling rain, before a large number of spectators, the game was very fast throughout, the result being a win in favour of the 52nd R.B. by five goals to 3. The winners proved to be a good all-round team.

The visitors put up a good fight, their goal keeper showing excellent form and making numerous "saves." For the winners Capt. Harrison, centre forward, put in some fine play, and deserved his two goals, whilst Lieut. Shercroft (two goals) and Lieut. Galbraith (one goal) were successful in the forward line. Lieut. Beattie, Sgt. Barnes and Sgt. Pulsey had each a goal to their credit, and between them put up quite a good show for the 53rd. In the second half, playing against a strong wind, the 52nd were really at their best. Atkinson (left back) played a great game, and with Sgt. Rowen the 52nd proved the possession of a brace of good backs. At the close of the game the visitors team were entertained to tea.

WIN FOR HIGHLAND DIV. SIGNALS.

At Düren, on Monday, the Highland Division Signal Company defeated the 2.2nd Field Ambulance by 1—0.

A large crowd witnessed the game which was keen and fast. Driver Mitchell was the scorer.

63rd BRIGADE R.G.A. v. 68th BRIGADE R.G.A.

Played at Mülheim, before an enthusiastic crowd. The game was keenly contested all round. During the first half, after a great effort by the 68th forwards, the only goal of the match was scored. Every man deserved his place in the teams and in consequence the game was thoroughly enjoyed by players and spectators alike.

1/4th ROYAL SCOTS FUSILIERS v. 2/1st EAST LANCS FIELD AMBULANCE.

This return match was played at Hildon on Monday. Fifteen minutes from the start the Fusiliers forwards made good work and also the R. A. M. C. custodian was lucky to stop a terrific drive from Capt. Corrigan's foot. He was not successful when Goldie scored from a cross by Bell shortly afterwards. The R. A. M. C. forwards then came to the fore, and their efforts were rewarded by the equaliser from the foot of Lce. Cpl. Nicholson. On the restart the game settled down. A pretty piece of combination and trickery on the part of Bell. McLaren and Goldie enabled the latter to walk the ball through and put the Fusiliers ahead. The game terminated amidst great excitement leaving the Fusiliers winners of the double fixture.

IN THE RING.

INTERESTING SPORT AT LIBLAR.

On Sunday, at Liblar, the second series of bouts in the 5th K. O. Y. L. I. boxing tournament were decided.

The "star turn" was provided by the meeting of Sgt. Wood ("C") with Sgt. Faulkiner ("D") in the final of the middle weight competition. Both had a severe gruelling, but Wood stood the punishment better, and when the referee ordered an extra round, the judges having disagreed, Faulkiner would not contest the issue further. The points therefore went to his opponents.

In the semi-final of the welter weights competition Sgt. Wood, who appeared to be considerably more than a stone heavier than his opponent, beat Cpl. Dimmock ("B") who was so much outclassed that the referee stopped the fight.

The other semi-final was between Pte. Lovesay ("B") and Pte. Smith ("B"). Lovesay retired in the second round with an injured thumb and the points went to Smith.

Lce. Cpl. Garforth ("C") made a very hard fight for the points in his three rounds with Sgt. Wood in the light heavy weight contest. He led cleverly and frequently, but the bout went to Sgt. Wood, although his margin in this case could not have been large. Sgt. Wood figured once more in the final of the light heavy weights, where he again faced Sgt. Faulkiner. By this time he was obviously very tired, but was always ready to lead and found his opponent's weak spots frequently. Faulkiner, however, did effective, if not particularly clever work, with both right and left, and the decision went to him.

The officials were Lt. Col. H. E. Trevor C. M. G., D. S. O. referee; Lts. Laudeutscher and Hadfield, judges; Lt. S. H. Garside, timekeeper.

THE RUGBY GAME.

2nd, Bn. M.G. CORPS v 12th, Bn. R.I.R.

The 2nd Battalion M.G.C. met the 12th Battalion, R.I.R. at Widdeshoven on Friday. The ground was in excellent condition and the weather favourable.

From the kick off the Machine Gunners assumed the aggressive and kept the play in their opponents' half. The hard attempts of the R.I.R. to carry the play to the other end of the field were unsuccessful.

Although a bit one-sided, it was a good sporting game, and the win for the Machine Gunners by 29 points to nil was in no small measure due to the good combination of the three-quarter line and the fine play of Major Todd, Major Wood, Lieut. MacManon, and Lieut. Mason.

1/6th WELSH v 17th CHESHIRES.

After having successfully overcome the "Welshmen" on the Soccer field, the "Cheshires" paid a visit to the Welsh stronghold at Sechtem on Thursday to try conclusions at Rugger. They were unfortunate in having to field with fourteen players. From start to finish they were outclassed and had the heavy score of 4 converted goals, 1 dropped goal and three tries scored against them. Scorers for the Welsh were Capt. Brabazon 3 tries; Lt. W. H. Griffith 2 tries; Sgt. Morgan 1 try and Sgt. Lloyd 1 try. Capt. Brabuzon converted 3 tries, Lt. Lake one and Lieut. D. Morgan dropped a goal.

RUGGER AT LIBLAR.

At Liblar on Good Friday the semi-final of the 5th K.O.Y.L.I. Rugger Competition was played between "A" & "C" Companies, resulting in a win for the latter by two tries to nil. In neither side was the play at any time brilliant, but, nevertheless, the game was interesting to watch and was keenly contested throughout.

For the winners Lt. G. H. Taylor M. C. was the mainstay of the defence and Ptes. Andrews, Gouldsborough, and L/Cpl. Robinson had their share in the victory. Sec. Lt. Needham and C.S.M. Rutler were easily the pick of the losers. Capt. P. F. Farnish was the referee. In the final "B & C" Companies meet.

DEVONS v. DEVONS.

It was a disappointment both to officers and men of the 5th Devons that the match arranged between the Bn. and the "old comtemptibles" of the Bn. who left for demobilization about a fortnight ago, should have fallen through at the last moment.

Practically the whole of the old Bn. team were included in the draft bound for Blighty and mufti. Unfortunately they left Mülheim on Good Friday morning and the match was to have been played in the afternoon.

However, thanks to the energy of one of the "early" subs, also en route for demobilization, who collected the remains of the team and some keen "outsiders" from Mülheim, a really good game resulted. The only score of the first half came from a "skyer" by the home centre-half, Weaver, who has a reputation for direct hits at long range. The home side improved considerably in the second half, more especially the forwards led by Lt. Puddicombe, who found the net on three occasions. Owing to the soundness of the home backs, Lieut. Baigent, in goal, had little to do—a little that he did well. He kept his goal intact and a pleasant game ended in a win for the Bn. by 5—0.

10th u. 24th "QUEENS" R.W.S. REGT.

This match was played on the ground of the former at Ehresoven on Saturday. Play in the opening half went all in favour of the 10th Battn. who scored at the end of three minutes, Sgt. Coulson heading through from a fine centre from L/Cpl. Frost. Following on this there were some exciting scrimmages in front of the 24 goal, but their goalie managed to keep his charge intact. L/Cpl. Dickens, at right half was proving an obstacle to the visitors attack, who were rarely allowed to cross into their opponents territory. Capt. Evans for the 10th repeatedly put across perfect centres from outside right, one of which Sgt. Coulson converted into a goal.

Upon resuming, the 2/4th rallied somewhat, and several times looked likely to penetrate the home defence, but they lacked finish in front of goal. Lieut. Baylis, their centre forward, was very persistent, but gained little support from his partners. Play then ruled in favour of the 10th Battalion, who added two more goals through Sgt. Coulson and Lieut. Harwood, the latter finishing a fine run with a drive typical of his Brighton and Hove days. Time arrived with the score showing 4—0 in favour of the 10th Battalion.

Lieuts. Cadmann and Gunn proved very sound for the home defence, as also did Pte Watts, the home goalie. He is certainly one of the safest goalkeepers in the Rhine Army. For the visitors, Sgt. Peters, at left back, was very useful in upsetting the combination of the home forwards.

Jimmy Wilde, fly weight champion added yet another to his long list of victims, at Liverpool, yesterday, when he defeated Jimmy Buck, of Costleford, who was regarded as being a promising candiate for championship honours.

So severely did Wilde treat his opponent, that the referee stopped the fight in the fifth round.

THEATRE OF WAR CHAMPIONSHIP.

FOOTBALL AT AIX LA CHAPELLE.

A friendly football match took place on Good Friday afternoon between the Transport and Balloon Crew, which resulted in a win by 3 goals to 1 for the latter team. The transport team entered the field with colours of all descriptions amidst the ringing cheers from their numerous (?) supporters.

Them odest Balloon Crew team took the field more or less in doubt as to how many goals they were going to be beaten by.

Really, I am not a position to criticise, but the Transport defence was decidedly weak, whilst the Blister's defence and forwards combined quite excellently sometimes. In the first half hour, things were fairly evenly balanced, the transport team pressing the most.

I fancy the Transport were over confident of winning, as one of their players kindly scored the Blisters first goal. Things went from bad to worse, the Lifeboat crew (beg pardon, I mean the Balloon crew) were all over the Leyland-Crossleys, not mentioning the wind, which had broken down as per usual. By the time the final whistle blew, the whole lot of the Transport was out of commission, and the Cylinder Humpers won by 3 goals to 1. — S.E.

VET. HOSPITAL v 52nd SHERWOODS.

On Saturday No. 8 played the 52nd Sherwood Foresters and after a hard game won by 1 goal to nil.

SPORTS REFLECTIONS.

(With an Occasional Entertainments Note).

Cricket.

The Easter holidays are usually the signal for the production of bats, balls and stumps—to say nothing of flannels—from their winter resting places. In England, there is no reason to suppose that the cycle of events did not bring about the appearance of these things during the week-end as in the days of yore, but here, in Germany, such articles were conspicuous by their absence. Now that playing grounds have been allotted to the various units round about, however, the production of the necessary requisites for the great summer game should not now be long delayed.

While on of the subject of cricket, I will take the opportunity of asking all lovers of the game to keep a weather-eye open for this page next Saturday, when an announcement of great importance will be made.

Army Entertainments.

There are likely to be enormous developements in the provision of entertainments in Germany in the very near future about which I am unable to give details at present. However, this hint will probably be the means of saving much paper and ink for those people who write so many letters on the subject. In the meantime the Apollo Theatre will offer something fresh next week, when an English concert party composed of four ladies and one gentleman (lucky fellow!), who have made a big reputation in Namur and Brussels recently will make its appearance. In addition, there will be Hassan the famous illusionist on the same bill.

To Boxers, Wrestlers and Others.

Will those people who are challenging everyone else to boxing, wrestling and other matches please have a little patience. Endeavours are afloat to secure one of the local places of intertainment to "put on" all the matches during the same evening. The result promises to be very successfull, and there is little doubt that so varied and unportant a programme will meet with plenty of support in the way of a large audience.

A Popular "Ringite."

Our picture depicts Sergt. C. Nichol, light-heavy weight champion of the Northern Division in characteristic attitude. He was a competitor in the recent 2nd Army Boxing Tournament at Cologne.

Multum in Parvo.

Many contributors of sports items are no doubt feeling rather sore on account of the apparently ruthless condensation to which their efforts have been subjected. This is absolutely unavoidable in view of the very limited space available and the huge quantity of matter that reaches this office every morning. Readers will, I think, agree that it is preferable that the Cologne Post shuld publish a little of everything rather then that a column report should be given of one event at the expense of crowding out several others. Contributions are never unappreciated, but if the writers of them would kindly remember the immense amount of ground we cover they would, I am sure, realise that every item must, of necessity, be succinct and to the point.

Black and White.

The nationality of the well-known entertainers "Black and White", who performed at the Deutsche Theatre last week, appears to be causing quite a lot of discussion in Cologne. It will probably interest a number of people if I point out that these artists are of British nationality. The male member of the bruce — who is the coloured one — is a British-American. One sunny day, he decided to take unto himself a wife, and in due course, the bells rang for he and his "gal" — who was non other than the popular "White", by birth a Spaniard. — Hence the Pyramids!

VICTORY FETE IN PARIS.

At a recent meeting in Paris, the general scheme for the great Victory Fête was adopted. The whole length of the route from the Porte Maillot to the Place de la Concorde will be decked with floral emblems, shields, and flags hanging from arches and standards, the colour scheme being in gold and silver. The triumphal route will be divided into three parts, representing the stages of the war. From the Porte Maillot, where the Municipal Council of Paris will welcome the troops, who will be in service kit, the men will march towards the Etoile, guns taken from the enemy forming part of the procession. Seats will be arranged for the public from the Porte Maillot to the Etoile. In the immense space around the Arc de Triomphe, in front of which will be displayed the torn but glorious flags of the French Army, the official seats will be arranged in a huge amphitheatre. Thence the troops will proceed by way of the gaily-decked Champs Elysées towards the Tuileries, on the terrace of which will be a symbolical representation of Peace, and great pylons bearing shields with the arms of the Allied nations. At the Rond Point of the Champs Elysées will be an artistic memorial to the valiant dead, and in the neighbourhood the towns of France which suffered a glorious martyrdom will be similarly honoured. Special places will be reserved along the route for school children so as to give them an imperishable memory of the great deeds commemorated.

AMIR OF AFGHANISTAN.

DETAILS OF HIS MURDER.

Details of the murder of the late Amir of Afghanistan, Habibullah Khan, are given in a recent issue of "The Englishman" of Calcutta. As cabled reports of the outrage stated at the time, he was assassinated in his sleep while on a shooting expedition, and so far, apparently, the murderer is at large.

Habibullah was a lover of sport, and was on a grouse shoot when his ill-fate overtook him. He had left his winter palace at Jellalabad by motor, and proceeded sixty miles out of that city. The party accompanying him on the shoot included his eldest son and Nazurulla Khan, his brother. The Amir travelled with his eldest son and others in one motor; the rest of the party were to meet him at the shoot.

About two days before his death the Amir was seen at Ghalai-ul-Seraj, a palace about 25½ miles from Jellalabad, by a European engineer who was engaged in work there. His majesty alighted from his motor and entered the apartments of the fort in search of lunch. No lunch had been prepared, because, as the Amir had given out that he would be following a different route, his Majesty's visit was a surprise to everybody. Habibullah Khan, however, wanted lunch, notice or no notice, and he asked the two European engineers there if they had any lunch to give him. One of the Europeans recited to the private secretary the courses that the cook had prepared for them, and stated his Majesty was fully welcome to what there was. The irate Amir sent for the lunch, got through it all, and then presented the fortunate cook with two sovereigns. The European engineer was, on the other hand, offered his Majesty's thanks and a cigarette, which the Amir selected and handed him from his case. "Good bye," he said, as he took his departure. "I shall see you again in three days on my way back."

SHOT IN HIS SLEEP.

When the motor-car returned two days later it contained the dead body of the Amir. It appears that his Majesty had proceded twenty-seven miles beyond Khalat-ul-Seraj, and was from the 17th-20th camping at a little place known as Kollagosh. He slept in a large tent well guarded by soldiers drawn from a number of regiments, and within were just his Majesty in one section, while in the other were four or five pagesboys, who took it in turns to watch. At about three in the morning a pistol shot was heard to ring out into the stillness of the night, and on the Amir's brother and eldest son rushing into the tent they found Habibullah Khan lying dead in his bed, shot through the ear, the bullet having passed out of the side of his head.

No account is given of any arrest. The body was conveyed to Jellalabad and buried in a grave on the Royal golf course, but it is assumed that the remains will be exhumed and re-interred in one of the palaces at Kabul. Meanwhile, as has been reported, there have been rival claimants to the succession. The new Amir is Amanullah Khan, third son of Habibullah, a young man of 26, who has never been out of his own country, but is described as having "an active brain and a keen intelligence."

DEMOBILIZATION.

The War Office has ruled that the statement "In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thought of love" which recently appeared in The Cologne Post, is not to be taken as an authority for release on passionate grounds.

FRATERNIZATION.

The tri-linguist. "I can't say as 'ow she an' me gets on very well together in English or German, but she talks a bit of French; she's called me "Mewseer" several times."

A. I. F. EDUCATION.

TALENTED RANKERS.

Speaking at the War Chest Club on Saturday upon the work of the A.I.F. Education Service, Lieut. J. H. Vaughan gave some interesting examples of educational talent which has been discovered in the ranks of the Australian Army since the armistice.

There were numerous instances of professional men, architects, clergymen, and lawyers who had been fighting as private soldiers. In the rank and file of a gun team in France there were no fewer than three Bachelors of Science, whilst some medical men had enlisted as ordinary soldiers in order to carry a rifle rather than a stethoscope. A graduate in civil engineering with a valuable and varied experience, holding the rank of a sapper in the Australian Engineers, was entrusted with the difficult task of determining the safe-bearing loads of soils for new foundations in France.

But perhaps the most striking example was disclosed when at the request of the French Government applications were called for throughout the A.I.F. for appointment to a Commission proceeding to Morocco to report upon the suitability of that country for the breeding of merino sheep. The rank of the applicants ranged from colonels to privates. One of the latter had, prior to the war, managed a station comprising a quarter of a million sheep, and was a highly skilled stock breeder and wool-classer. The successful applicant, however, an infantryman, possessed even higher qualifications. He owned a million acres of land, had organised and conducted droving-tours from the Kimberleys in Western Australia to the Queensland Coast, a distance of nearly two thousand miles, and from the northern territory to the Southern Ocean, had sunk artesian bores and was a recognised expert in water finding. Moreover, he could speak French fluently, and had other brilliant educational qualifications.

THE FUTURE CIVILISATION.

"THE RIGHT TO KILL."

Keen discussion has been aroused in scientific circles over the dictum of Mr. Ingelby Oddie, coroner for Westminster, that in certain eventualities a medical man should have the power to "put incurables out of their misery." In effect, the suggestion is that one who is hopelessly ill has the right to die. Interest in the problem has been accentuated by the case of a consumptive named Sydney Albert Phillips, aged 32, who was found shot through the heart at Hanover-gate-mansions, Regent's Park.

Phillips had, it is understood, discussed with members of his family Mr. Oddie's remarks on the doctors' "right to kill" and a doomed man's "right to die." Mr. Oddie's observations, made at the inquest on a Mr. Feesey, were to the effect that he had been informed that Mr. Feesey had remarked that it was a pity doctors had not the power to put incurables out of their misery. He (Mr. Oddie) thought the time might come when, with proper safeguards, that might be done, for it seemed a good thing when life became unbearable. We had not yet got to that period of civilisation, however, but he had no doubt the time would come when painless anaesthesia would be brought about. Mr. Feesey had come to the conclusion that life was not worth living, and that was the motive for his committing suicide. Hopelessness and the prospect of no recovery preyed on his mind so much that it became unsound.

PRIMROSE DAY AT HOME.

Primrose Day was celebrated on Saturday under conditions far more favourable than have obtained during many years past. Glorious weather had brought an abundant supply of primroses to market, and it may be asserted with confidence that the flower was never more generally worn during any other day of the thirty-eight years since Lord Beaconsfield's death. Colonial soldiers were amongst the best costumers of street vendors, and scarcely an "Anzac" was seen in the City or West-end without his little bunch, neatly tucked in his belt. The emblem, was also freely worn by the "W.A.A.C.'s," no doubt partly in recognition of the war work done on their behalf by the ladies of the Primrose League.

The Beaconsfield statue in Parliament-square was, as usual, profusely decorated with flowers. Prominently displayed on the plinth was a magnificent wreath from the Grand Council of the Primrose League, bearing the league's motto, "Imperium et Libertas." Another beautiful token came from Mr. R. E. Bellios, and a third from Hughenden, the Buckinghamshire village where Lord Beaconsfield lies buried. Bunches of primroses were also deposited at the foot of the statue by the general public. The windows of the Primrose League offices in Victoria-street were decorated with primroses, and opposite the building was placed a life-size bust of Lord Beaconsfield with the inscription, "The honour and best interests of the country require that men be returned to Parliament with definite principles."

Many people made a pilgrimage to the grave at Hughenden, which was hidden by primroses. Wreaths were placed on the tomb, and a floral device was deposited on the seat formerly occupied by the Earl in the chancel.

TRESPASSING ON RIFLE RANGE.

THREE BOYS KILLED.

A shocking accident occured on Good Friday at the rifle range at the military camp at Chiseldon, four miles from Swindon, by which three boys, each 14 years old, were killed and three others injured. Twenty boys left Swindon in the morning for a day's outing. Seven of them left the others our reaching the downs and went to the rifle range, where one picked up what proved to be a live shell and which shortly exyloded.

A PUBLIC FLYING SERVICE.

A public flying service was inaugurated last Saturday from Hamble, on the shores of Southampton Water, by the Mayor and Mayoress of Southampton (Aldermann and Mrs. Kimber), who were the first pair of passengers. They ascended to a height of 2,000ft, and on returning from the trip the Mayor declared that flying was much more exhilarating than motoring. Many other flights followed. The machines used were of the Avro type.

MARSHAL FOCH AND NEWCASTLE.

The Lord Mayor of Newcastle has recived a letter from Marshal Foch expressing his willingness to accept the honorary freedom of Newcastle, and stating he has often had occasion to appreciate the happy results of the maritime efforts of the industrious city of Newcastle. Marshal Foch, however, says he cannot pledge himself to be in Newcastle on July 7, the suggested date of the ceremony.

GERMAN IMPRESSIONS.

THE RAISING OF THE BLOCKADE.

One might expect to find the Germans heartily glad that our authorities have consented to raise the blockade. In any case they have reason to be, for though they have felt its bitter grip, the blockade could still prove that its capacity and resources for strengthening its hold are not yet exhausted. Commenting upon this important and pleasing news, the Leipziger Neueste Nachrichten staties: The sea is open again for us; once more it is at the disposal of Germany, but after all her commercial navy has been crushed, after hunger has curbed the power of resistance of the people, and after Bolshevik strikes, promoted by hunger, have been, and are still, raging, through the country; so that Germany, the richest coal owner of the world, cannot even scrape enough of that commodity to secure her own railway traffic.

"Almost with indifference do we hear the news which, had it come five months ago, would have saved Germany from ruin. We will hope, however, that this measure is not adopted too late."

Germany and Her Peace Delegation.

The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, in dealing with the question of sending delegates to Versailles, states that the first part of the German delegation will not proceed to Versailles before Clemenceau gives a sign that he has received the answer sent by Germany. "In this case," it says, the delegation will not be able to leave before the 28th which means that at the earliest they will not be able to receive the text of Preliminary peace before May 1. It would then be impossible to know the conditions in Berlin before May 2. If, during the first conversations, signs are shown that the adversaries have the intention of entering into serious negotiations on all the points, then the second part of the delegation will be summoned, and this will include forty experts on German economical life and the Press representatives.

The Paris Conference.

"The Conference in Paris, with all its work has only brought into effect disappointment; neither the victorious nor the vanquished are satisfied, the least so, perhaps, being the leaders and members themselves." That is what we find in a recent issue of the Frankfurter Zeitung. It further goes on to say that "what have been accomplished are merely compromises. The noble thoughts which have been preached by the Entente throughout the war have hot yet materialised."

Acknowledgement of guilt.

"Apparently, in the preface of the preliminary peace, which is shortly to be presented to the German delegates, the responsibility of Germany for the war will be stated. We assume from this that the German plenipotentiaries must, by their signature, make an acknowledgement of guilt. Thus it will be the first peace convenant in the history of the world in which the equality of right to the contracting parties has been abolished in such a humilicting manner. To accept such a preface would have for us enormous legal results, for then we should not be able to find a basis for discussion with regard to details. The German people will not allow themselves to be led along such a violent course."

STORKS IN STRASSBOURG.

According to the Journal, no storks have visited Strassbourg during the whole period of war, the last being seen in 1914. With the advent of this year's Spring, however, a pair of storks have returned to occupy their old nests.

The people ask "is it luck, or merely a mysterious concatenation of fact?" The house whereon they have taken up their abode is one used as the Banque de France, whilst next to it is the house in which Rouget de Lisle sang in 1792 for the first time "La Marseilluise."

FIRST JAZZ BAND IN RHINELAND.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,— In reading The Cologne Post of Wednesday, April 16th, I came across an article entitled "A Rhineland Jazz Band," and on reading further see that it is claimed that the first Jazz Band in Rhineland gave its maiden performance on Saturday, April 12th at A.Co.'s Billet, 2nd Battery M.G.C. at Evinghaven.

I beg to point out, however, that their claim to be the first Jazz Band in Rhineland is incorrect, as I myself witnessed a performance of the "Five-Ems" Concert Party at Hangelar Hall, Hangelar, on Wednesday, April 9th, in which the principal item of an excellent programme was a Jazz Band.

The Band was composed of seven members of the party, who between them played the following instruments: 1 Piano, 2 violins, 1 banjo, 1 drum, 1 trumpet and motor-horn, and last, but by no means least, a set of bells, composed of 18 Pdr. shell cases of varying sizes.

The item was introduced by their connection, "Sherry" who, whilst endeavouring to sing a song, is interrupted by the Stage-manager who earnestly tells him that he cannot sing; can he do anything else? "Yes, Jazz" is the prompt reply. The back cloth is then drawn aside, disclosing the Band. "Sherry" then assumes the conductorship, and proceeds to wield the bator with great energy. Not only does he conduct this clever party, but also plays the bells mentioned above.

Among the various items rendered, perhaps "All aboard for Dixie" was the best, being very suitable for Jazz. As I understand that noise, mirth, and melody are the main necessities for a successful Jazz Band, I can see a bright future for the "Five-ems."

I think I have proved that the distinction of having "the first Jazz Band in Rhineland" therefore goes to the "Five-ems" Concert Party, and I trust you will find space in The Cologne Post to publish this claim for them. R. MCHUGO.

PUBLIC OPINION AND THE PRESS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir,—The castigation recently inflicted by the Prime Minister on a section of the Press should act as a timely warning to the community in general. It has become the habit for people to take their opinions from their own particular paper and what that paper says "goes" with them. The papers profess to voice public opinion and to lead thought. As a matter of fact each journal expresses the opinions of its own leader-writer and tries to make public opinion fall in with its own; and the public, with its usual gullibility, unwilling to think for itself, falls into the trap. The "reliable source," that never-failing purveyer of tittle tattle, is a constant fount of incorrect information and needless trouble. It was the "absolutely reliable source" that not many years ago plunged numerous families into premature mourning by murdering all the ambassadors and their staffs in Pekin. The attempt to sow dissension amongst the various Allied Powers during the present Congress is by no means confined to only one section of the Press, and what may be the evil results of this stirring up of trouble we have yet to learn. The moral is "Take the trouble to think for yourselves" for with the papers "You pays yer money and you takes yer choice.

VERAX.

ENGLISH BEER WANTED.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir. — Let me beg a few lines, on behalf of the Canteen Committee of this unit, to air a grievance which must be pretty general throughout the Army of "C.O." — the shortage of English beer and stout. There must be quite a large percentage of the "other ranks" who have not tasted these heaven-sent beverages since they were on leave. Everybody knows that the German substitutes are very poor stuff, and I am sure that even the most rigid teetotal crank will admit that a better supply of the real thing would conduce to the greater contentment of the troops. C.B.

LODGE OF FREEMASONS.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post.

Sir. — Reference your correspondent H.E.S's letter in to-day's Post re "Lodge of Freemasons" I think it would be a mighty fine idea if a Military Lodge of Freemasons could be instituted at some central point for members of the Craft who of necessity are precluded from attending their Mother-Lodge or from visiting Sister Lodges. No doubt such a Lodge could quite easily be formed by obtaining a Special Dispensation and it would be one of the finest means of uniting Masons from different parts of the Empire.

Hoping that such a Lodge of A.F. and A.M. will be instituted soon. N.M.

CARROLL AND THE CATHEDRAL.

To the Editor of The Cologne Post

Sir. — It will interest many readers, I am sure, to read what Lewis Carroll wrote in his diary about Cologne Cathedral when he visited it in 1857.

"We spent an hour in the Cathedral, which I will not attempt to describe further than by saying it was the most beautiful of all churches I have ever seen, or can imagine. If one could imagine the spirit of devotion embodied in any material form, it would be in such a building."

When we remember the artistic temperament of "Lewis Carroll" and reflect upon the influence of John Ruskin, who was always "Willing to assist him with his valuable advice on any point of artistic criticism" we shall see, I think, that his testimony is not without its worth. O.O.

RUSSIAN BOLSHEVISTS' HEAVY DEFEAT.

VICTORIOUS POLISH ARMY.

HEROIC WARRANT OFFICERS IN INDIA.

GERMAN PEACE DELEGATES FOR VERSAILLES.

LESS ANXIETY IN INDIA.

WARRANT OFFICERS' DEVOTION.

Simla. The latest official news from the Punjab indicates that Lahore has submitted quietly to martial law and the shops are re-opening. A flying column arrested twenty-three persons in adjacent villages.

A signaller on the North-West Railway at Kasur, named Sherborne, and his family, owe their lives to the bravery and devotion of two British Warrant Officers who lost their own lives in trying to protect them. — Reuter.

Latest telegrams from India indicate that the moderates are rallying to the support of law and order against the extremists.—Reuter.

Bombay. 18th April. — Gandhi has issued a statement advising the temporary suspension of passive resistance and urging his supporters to assist the Government by every possible means in the restoration of order. Reuter.

Calcutta. Leaders of the Moderates have issued a manifest deploring the recent disturbances and declaring that passive resistance is unsound. They are calling upon the natives to eliminate the elements of disorder.

Lahore. Mohommedan leaders in the Punjab have also issued a manifesto earnestly appealing to their countrymen, especially Moslems, to abandon passive resistance and obey authority and take effective steps to restore law and order.—Reuter.

Simla. — 20th April. Martial law has been proclaimed in the Gujrat district.—Reuter.

GERMAN PEACE DELEGATES.

Hastening to cover the blunder made by the nomination of nonentities to receive the Peace terms at Versailles, the German Government, in reply to a peremptory telegram, has notified Marshal Foch that the German delegation will comprise six high personages at the head of which will be Count Brockdorff-Rantzau the German Foreign Minister. The delegation cannot arrive before 28th April.

The effect of the German Government's attempt to send representatives who were nothing more than messengers for the conveyance of the terms of peace to Weimar has thus resolved itself into nothing more than a delay of a few more days.

It is regarded as an eleventh hour attempt to force the Allied Powers to accept the principles of discussion as applied to the Peace terms.

With their usual rather clumsy diplomacy the Germans argued that if they were debarred from discussing terms at Versailles they might as wel refrain from sending anyone capable of discussing them. This idea they have now abandoned, in response to the prompt rejoinder from the Council of Four.

BRITISH OFFICER ARRESTED BY BOLSHEVISTS.

Calcutta. 15th April.- It is understood that Major F. Bailey, of the Indian political department, who a year ago was sent to Turkestan on a special mission and was arrested by Bolshevists at Tashkent, has escaped. There is however, reliable news as to his whereabouts.-Reuter.

(Tashkent, or Tashkand, is the capital of Russian Turkestan.)

AMERICAN GENERAL STRIKE AVERTED.

New York. A Boston message states that the telephone strike has ended after a conference between the company and operators. The latter will get an increase of three dollars weekly and the men an increase of fifty cents daily.—Reuter.

FIGHTING AT SEBASTOPOL.

There was severe fighting on the 19th April outside Sebastopol. The French retook Hemelon Vert at the point of the bayonet, heavy losses being inflicted on the enemy.

The Bolshevist proposal for a seven days armistice was agreed to by the French, who also permitted the formation of a local Soviet for the municipal Government of Sebastopol. — Reuter.

JAPAN, KIAO-CHOW, CHINA.

Japan is insisting on an immediate settlement of the future of Kiao-Chow, which it captured from the Germans at the outset of the war.

China claims the right to occupy the base and the port of Tsing-tao as an act of restitution, without compensating Japan, while Japan claims them as "prizes of war" and promises to hand them over to China later on.

CONSTANTINOPLE TROUBLE.

According to information received from Greece, disturbances have taken place at Constantinople, where the members of the ex-Committee "Union and Progress" have revolted against the Turkish Government and proclaimed a Republic of Soviets.

SUCCESSES AGAINST RUSSIAN BOLSHEVISTS.

RELIEVING THE PRESSURE.

Admiral Koltchak's Siberian army, which launched an offensive in the Urals in the middle of March against the Bolshevists, has achieved striking successes on a front of over four hundred miles.

News of fresh successes on the river Kama in the centre of the front, about five hundred miles due East of Moscow, were reported yesterday. The Bolshevist position East of the Volga seems to have become untenable.

Koltchak's Siberian Army has advanced one hundred and ninety miles in five weeks and it is now within one hundred miles of the Volga. The enemy had clung obstinately to Serapul and the capture of that place, together with much booty and a number of the Bolshevist leaders, is an important success. Both banks of the river Kama have now been recovered from the Bolshevists for a distance of over two thousand miles.

These striking successes have very important bearings on the Bolshevist forces. Those opposed to the Allies in North Russia and to General Denekan in South Russia are seriously affected by the advance.

POLISH ARMY VICTORIOUS

DESPERATE BOLSHEVIST RESISTANCE.

A battle crowned with complete success has been fought by the Polish Army. The operations were well planned and adhered to, with the result that on Saturday last Vilna was taken. Almost simultaneously the town of Baranoviczi, the most important railway centre in that region, was occupied. The town of Nowogrodik was captured on Friday.

The entire railway between Lida and Vilna has fallen intact into Polish hands with a large number of locomotives and much rolling stock. The Bolshevists offered a desperate resistance. The battle for the possession of Baranoviczi lasted five days and nights and repeated bayonet charges were made at the entrance to the village during the two nights preceding its capture.

WRITING ON THE WALL.

BUDA-PESTH THREATENED.

Vienna, via Berlin. 22nd April. — The Rumanian advance is making the position of the Hungarian Soviet very difficult. The Rumanian troops have advanced a long way and it is declared possible that Czecho-Slovak and South Slav troops will finally march on Buda Pesth to establish a new Karolyi Government.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

WILSON INSISTENT.

An Associated Press telegram from Washington dated the 22nd April states with regard to President Wilson's attitude to the projected defensive alliance between Great Britain, France and America, that the American Government officials have received a cable stating that President Wilson would not take any action jeopardising in the slightest degree the League of Nations or conflicting with the fundamental principles of the League.

SOCIALIST ON BOLSHEVISM.

At a sitting of the National Congress of the Socialist party now being held in Paris Mr. Branting, the well-known Swedish Socialist, who had just arrived from Stockholm, warned his hearers of the dangers of Bolshevism.

He said that Sweden has been in a better position to judge the Bolshevist experiment than any of her neighbours, for she has been able to see its results in Finland and in great towns like Petrograd.

Under Bolshevist regime production is interrupted; it means death to all, commercial activity. It is absolute economic decomposition with its frightful consequences of misery and famine. Bolshevism is not an image of Socialism and still less is it a triumph of Socialism. It is the absolute negation. Dictatorship of the proletariat is nothing but a caricature of Socialism, which above all is organisation and in point of fact a continuation of democracy.

PLAUSIBLE BUT BOLSHEVIST.
